If the court should conclude that the contract is illegal, it being one that can be performed in a lawful manner, and nothing having been shown to have been done under it in violation of law, they should recover, if not on the contract, on a quantum valebat.

Drake v. Siebold, 81 Hun. 178; Tyler v. Carrille, 79 Me. 210; Jaques v. Golightly, 2 W. Bl. 1078; Gregg v. Loomis, 22 Neb. 174; Imhoff v. House, 36 Neb. 29.

Messrs. Eastabrook & Davis and C. E. Clapp, for defendants in error:

No action can be maintained in either of these cases: (1) if the contract provides that the goods are to be used for an illegal purpose; (2) if, in addition to knowledge on the part of the vendor of illegal purpose of the vendee, the vendor does any act, however slight, to aid, assist, or further the illegal purpose.

Spurgeon v. McElwain, 6 Ohio, 443, 27 Am. Dec. 266; Lightfoot v. Tenant, 1 Bos. & P. 551; Hubbell v. Flint, 13 Gray, 277; Hull v. Ruggles, 56 N. Y. 424; Skiff v. Johnson, 57 N. H. 475; Aiken v. Blaisdell, 41 Vt. 655; Postler v. Thurston, 11 Cush. 322; Hooker v. De Paolos, 28 Ohio St. 251; Ruckman v. Bryan, 3 Denio, 343; McKinell v. Robinson, 3 Mees. & W. 434; Mosher v. Griffin, 51 Ill. 184, 99 Am. Dec. 541; Raymond v. Leavitt, 46 Mich. 447, 41 Am. Rep. 170.

*Headnotes by RYAN, C.

NOTE.—As to right to recover price of property sold for unlawful use, see Graves v. Johnson (Mass.) 15 L. R. A. 834, and note.

80 L. R. A.

Ryan, O., filed the following opinion:

This action was brought by the plaintiffs in error, a partnership firm, engaged in the manufacture of beer, to recover of defendant the sum of $707.06, the price of certain beer alleged to have been furnished by plaintiffs to defendant in the month of June, 1889. By way of counterclaim the defendant alleged that the beer was furnished him by plaintiffs under a written agreement, which required that the plaintiffs should furnish the license necessary under the laws of Nebraska, that plaintiffs had neglected to provide this license, and that, in consequence of such neglect, the defendant had been required to pay the sum of $1,000 for such license. By reply, the plaintiffs averred that, if the defendant had taken out a license, it was to enable him to sell vinous and spirituous liquors, and not to enable him to perform his contract with the plaintiffs. There was also in the reply this language: "The plaintiffs further allege that there is, and has been since long before September 1, 1888 [the date of a written contract between plaintiffs and defendant], a usage and custom existing and prevailing among brewing companies generally, and particularly in the state of Nebraska, and in the city of Omaha, for each of said brewing companies to operate, in connection with its brewery, a bottling department for the purpose of bottling beer of its own manufacture exclusively; that, under said usage and custom, said bottling department had been conducted under the liquor license issued to the brewery, and through an agent who receives beer from the brewery, at a fixed price, and who operates the bottling department as a part of and in the interest of the said brewery; that the contract referred to in the defendant's answer was entered into by the plaintiffs and the said defendant with knowledge of and with reference to said usage and custom; and that said usage and custom thereby became and are a part of said contract." Upon the trial defendant admitted that he owed plaintiffs the amount claimed, and a verdict was accordingly returned. Thereupon defendant moved for a dismissal of the plaintiffs' action, and for a judgment for costs, for the reason that "the pleadings, upon their face, show that the sales for which plaintiffs sought to recover were made in pursuance of an unlawful contract between the plaintiffs and the defendant, and for the further reason that the contract under which the sales were made contemplated the resale of said beer by the defendant, with the intent and for the purpose, on the part of the said plaintiffs, of enabling the defendant to resell contrary to law." This motion was sustained, and judgment was accordingly rendered against the plaintiffs for costs.

From the fact that the plaintiffs brought suit for the price of the beer agreed upon between themselves and the defendant, it is clear that the defendant was not a mere agent for the sale of the plaintiffs' beer. The petition was framed upon the theory that plaintiffs had sold the defendant the beer for which suit was brought, though the use of the word

"sale" or any equivalent term was avoided. It is equally clear that, as a retail vendor of liquor, the defendant was, by section 25, chap. 50, Comp. Stat., required to pay a license of $1,000; his place of business being, as it was, in the city of Omaha. By the reply there was alleged a custom, with reference to which the parties litigant had contracted, whereby the obligation to pay the required license was avoided, which arrangement was clearly in violation of the statute above referred to. The plaintiffs, however, insist that, since the defendant had admitted that he had obtained the beer from plaintiffs, and was owing that amount, judgment should have been accordingly rendered. This admission did not amount to a confession of judgment, neither did the verdict thereon returned, restricted, as the jury was, by the instruction of the court that the counterclaim was not by them to be considered. The question whether or not a recovery should be had by one of the two parties to a contract for the violation of a statute still remained open for determination by the court upon the pleadings. Whether or not this question was correctly decided by the court is the only one with which we are concerned. The plaintiffs have cited only one adjudged case which is directly in point, and, as the principle upon which that case proceeds must be far-reaching in its effects, the extent of its recognition, as well as its soundness, will now be considered at some length.

The case referred to is Manchester & L. R. Co. v. Concord R. Co. 66 N. H. 100, 9 L. R. A. 689, 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 819, in which there is quoted with approval the following language, found in 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 731: "If an agreement is legally void and unenforceable by reason of some statutory or common-law prohibition, either party to the agreement who has received anything from the other party and has failed to perform the agreement on his part must account to the latter for what has been so received. Under these circumstances, the courts will grant relief irrespective of the invalid agreement unless it involves some positive immorality, or there are other reasons of public policy why the courts should refuse to grant any relief in the case. . . . These doctrines have been applied repeatedly in suits arising out of contracts entered into by corporations although prohibited by statute or by the common law; and although the contracts were held illegal and unenforceable in these cases, a recovery was allowed to the extent of the consideration received." A review of the authorities cited in support of these propositions does not tend to establish the doctrine announced. It was held, in White v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick. 181, that a suit could be maintained upon an entry in a deposit book made by the defendant's cashier, by which, in effect, the bank became bound to pay at a future time the amount of plaintiff's deposit, because the statute of Massachusetts prohibited banks from assuming such liability. In the opinion we find the following language: "The second objection, and that on which the defendant's counsel principally rely, proceeds on the admission that the contract is illegal; and they insist that where money has been paid by one of two parties to the other, on an illegal contract, both being particeps criminis, no action can be maintained to recover it back. The rule of law is laid down by Lord Kenyon in Howson v. Hancock, 8 T. R. 577, and in other cases. This rule may be correctly stated in respect to contracts involving any moral turpitude, but when the contract is merely malum prohibitum, the rule must be taken with some qualifications and exceptions, without which it cannot be reconciled with many decided cases. The rule as stated by Comyns, in his treatise on Contracts, will reconcile most of the cases which are apparently conflicting: 'When money has been paid upon an illegal contract, it is a general rule that, if the contract be executed, and both parties are in pari delicto, neither of them can recover from the other the money so paid; but if the contract continues executory, and the party paying the money be desirous of rescinding it, he may do so, and recover back his deposit by action of indebitatus assumpsit for money had and received. And this distinction is taken in the books, namely, where the action is in affirmance of an illegal contract, the object of which is to enforce the performance of an engagement prohibited by law, clearly such an action can in no case be maintained; but where the action proceeds in disaffirmance of such a contract, and, instead of endeavoring to enforce it, presumes it to be void and seeks to prevent the defendant from retaining the benefit which he derived from an unlawful act, there it is consonant to the spirit and policy of the law that the plaintiff should recover.' 2 Comyns, Contr. 109." The inhibition of the statute was with reference to the incurring by the bank of an indebtedness payable at a future day certain. The entry in the deposit book was as follows:

Dr. Franklin Bank Cr.
In account with B. F. White,
1887, Feb. 10th, to cash deposited, $2,000.
The above deposit to remain until the 10th day of August. E. F. Bunnell, Cashier.

This entry was held to be within the inhibition of the statute. The party forbidden was the one which violated the provisions of the statute. The depositor was by no means in pari delicto. Therefore, he was held entitled to recover the amount of his deposit. This distinction in principle was recognized in Sacketts Harbor Bank v. Codd, 18 N. Y. 240, and the liability of the defendant was accordingly adjudged to exist.

The action in Dill v. Wareham, 7 Met. 438, was to recover back the sum of $500, paid by the plaintiff to the town of Wareham for the privilege of taking oysters within the limits. The power of the town to grant the privilege was denied by the statute, and, upon the refusal of the town to allow the privilege paid for, the suit was brought, as indicated. Chief Justice Shaw, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "In regard to the 30 L. R. A.

sum of $500, as it appears that it was received by the treasurer and went to the use of the town, and was so received in advance, upon a consideration which has failed, it must be regarded as money had and received by the town to the plaintiff's use; and therefore the action for that sum will lie." In Episcopal Charitable Soc. v. Episcopal Church, 1 Pick. 872, a note had been given by the rector and wardens of the church, upon request of the church society, which money had been not only borrowed for, but had been used by, the church society, and it was held that such society was bound to pay the amount so borrowed, even though there existed no direct legal authority in the rector and wardens to bind the church. As will be seen by the title of this case, it was an action by the lender of the money to recover the amount loaned. Hence, the principle laid down by Mr. Morawetz, even if abstractly correct, was not applicable, as it might have been if the rector and wardens, after having paid the note, had sued the church society to recover the amount so paid. The syllabus in Whitney v. Peay, 24 Ark. 23, begins with the statement: "The state issued bonds for the use of the Real Estate Bank, the bonds being prohibited by law from being sold for less than the par value thereof." But this proposition cuts no special figure in the case; for, these bonds having been pledged as security for a loan, the sole questions determined were as to the rights and liabilities of the original pledgee and his assignee of the pledge, and of assignee of such assignee, among themselves, as to the respective loans on the property pledged. The court held that the bonds must be returned to the original pledgee upon payment of the amount to secure which, originally, such pledge was made, notwithstanding the fact that, by subsequent pledges of the bonds, a loan of a larger sum had been effected. The recovery of judgment in Philadelphia Loan Co. v. Towner, 13 Conn. 249, was for an amount loaned in Pennsylvania. It was held, in this case, that the laws of Pennsylvania should govern, and that, as the charter of plaintiff had provided that "nothing therein contained should be construed to authorize the company to discount notes," the loan of money upon which the interest was reserved in advance constituted a discount, and that therefore no recovery could be had upon the note. The right of the loan company to recover judgment upon another theory, which was recognized by the supreme court of errors of Connecticut, is thus fairly stated in one paragraph of the syllabus: "Where a corporation, having power to sue and be sued, and to loan money under certain restrictions, made a loan, and afterwards took a note as security, in contravention of the provisions of its charter, it was held, in a suit on such note with the money counts, that, although there could be no recovery on the note, the money loaned, with the legal interest, might be recovered on the money counts." This principle was the only one involved in Vanatta v. State Bank of Ohio, 9 Ohio St. 27. In Foulke v. San Diego & G. S. P. R. Co. 51 Cal. 385, the opinion was very brief, and was correctly summarized in this language of the syllabus: "The provision in the act concerning railroad corporations, that 'no contract shall be binding on the company unless made in writing,' refers only to contracts wholly executory; but the action against the corporation on such verbal executory contract must be brought upon an implied promise, and the recovery must be limited to the value of the benefit received by the corporation."

The lease of a certain part of a line of railroad was not authorized by the stockholders of the company by which said line was owned, as required by statute, and said lease was therefore held void. Inasmuch as the transaction was not tainted with any immorality, a recovery of just compensation for the use of the road was allowed without reference to the unauthorized lease. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. 1 McCrary, 247, 2 Fed. Rep. 117. In Madison Ave. Baptist Church v. Baptist Church, 73 N. Y. 83, there had been an attempted union of the two church societies, under an agreement that one should be merged in the other, which should be bound for and pay the debts of both. This was ultra vires, but, while the arrangement existed, and was supposed by all parties to be binding, debts were paid by the church supposed to be the sole survivor for the church supposed to have been merged in it. The court of appeals held that, for money so paid, the church whose debt had been thus paid was liable. In Tracy v. Talmage, 14 N. Y. 163, 67 Am. Dec. 182, it was held that, although the vendor was a party to the illegal contract, he was not in pari delicto, within the rule which forbids the court to grant one party to an illegal contract or transaction relief against the other, and that, where parties to a contract or transaction, not malum in se, but prohibited by a statute, are not equally guilty, courts may afford relief to the less guilty party. In United States Exp. Co. v. Lucas, 86 Ind. 861, it was held that an agent who had received money for which the company was liable could not, as a defense to an action of the company, his principal, set up that his said principal had failed to file in the proper recorder's office a statement of the capital employed in its business, as required by statute.

From this review of the principal authorities cited to sustain the rules quoted from 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 721, it is shown to be extremely probable that no court, except such, perhaps, as may have been misled by his statements, has ever enforced the aforesaid principle, laid down by Mr. Morawetz, "that, if an agreement is legally void and unenforceable by reason of some statutory or common-law prohibition, either party to the agreement who has received anything from the other party and has failed to perform the agreement on his part must account to the latter for what has been so received." Equally without judicial sanction is his next proposition, that, "under these circumstances, the courts will grant relief irrespective of the invalid agreement, unless it involves some positive immorality, or there are other reasons of public policy why the courts should refuse to grant any relief in the case." The correct rule was quoted from the language of Lord Mansfield, in Holman v. Johnson, 1 Cowp. 848, by Eyre, Ch. J., in Lightfoot v. Tenant, 1 Bos. & P. 551. This language is as follows: "The objection that a contract is immoral or illegal sounds at all times very ill in the mouth of a defendant. It is not for his sake, however, that the objection is ever allowed; but it is founded in general principles of policy, which the defendant has the advantage of, contrary to the real justice as between him and the plaintiff,—by accident, if I may so say. The principle of public policy is this, ex dolo malo non oritur actio. No court will lend its aid to a man who founds his cause of action upon an immoral or an illegal act. If, from the plaintiff's own stating, or otherwise, the cause of action appears to arise ex turpi causa, or the transgression of a positive law of this country, there the court says, he has no right to be assisted." After this introduction Lord Mansfield stated the question to be "whether the plaintiff's demand is founded upon the ground of any immoral act or contract; or upon the ground of his being guilty of anything which is prohibited by a positive law of this country." These clearly stated principles were recognized and enforced in Spurgeon v. McElwain, 6 Ohio, 442, 27 Am. Dec. 266; Anchor v. Mansel, 47 Me. 58; Hubbell v. Flint, 18 Gray, 277; Hull v. Ruggles, 56 N. Y. 424; Skiff v. Johnson, 57 N. H. 475; Aiken v. Blaisdell, 41 Vt. 655; Foster v. Thurston, 11 Cush. 823; Hooker v. De Palos, 28 Ohio St. 251; Ruckman v. Bryan, 8 Denio, 840; McKinnell v. Robinson, 8 Mees. & W. 484; Mosher v. Griffin, 51 Ill. 184, 90 Am. Dec. 541; Raymond v. Leavitt, 46 Mich. 447, 41 Am. Rep. 170. In Wilde v. Wilde, 87 Neb. 891, an action for divorce, the rule was applied that the courts will refuse to enforce contracts which are manifestly contrary to public policy or sound morals. The following language is quoted from Luce v. Foster, 42 Neb. 818: "When any portion of the consideration is illegal the promise cannot be enforced unless there are several promises, and that which relates to the bad consideration can be distinguished and separated from the others. In other cases the promise is unenforceable. All the text-writers so state the rule. See, for instance, Wharton, Contr. 839; Anson, Contr. 191; Pollock, Contr. 888. The rule is so well settled that a reference to the adjudications is unnecessary."

The first paragraph of the syllabus of Gould v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 549, is as follows: "No court of law or equity will lend its assistance in any way towards carrying out an illegal contract, therefore such a contract cannot be enforced by one party against the other, either directly, by asking the court to carry it into effect, or indirectly, by claiming damages or compensation for a breach of it." In the body of the opinion of the case last cited there is an analysis of the case of Brooks v. Martin, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 70, 17 L. ed. 782, which, by the supreme court of New Hampshire, in Manchester & L. R. Co. v. Concord R. Co., supra, was cited as a leading case in support of the erroneous doctrine stated in section 721 of Morawetz on Private Corporations. By this analysis it was clearly shown by Judge Cobb that in the case of Brooks v. Martin a recovery was sanctioned, chiefly because, between the parties litigant, there had existed a partnership, and the property of the partnership had been the product of the money furnished by the party who had brought the suit. The discussion of this proposition may be fittingly closed by quoting from the above-mentioned opinion, delivered by Judge Cobb, his quotation from the language of Chief Justice Marshall, in Armstrong v. Toler, 24 U. S. 11 Wheat. 268, 6 L. ed. 471, as follows: "Questions upon illegal contracts have arisen very often, both in England and in this country; and no principle is better settled than that no action can be maintained on a contract the consideration of which is either wicked in itself or prohibited by law." No argument is necessary to illustrate the applicability of the rule just quoted to the facts of this case.

The judgment of the District Court is affirmed.

Irvine, C., did not take part in the determination of this case.

LOUISIANA SUPREME COURT.

Re John D. BELTON

(47 La. Ann. 1614.)

- *1. Though the shares of a corporation, after its creation, may be held by a less number of shareholders than that which the law would have required as a condition precedent to the organization of the same corporation, the corporation continues to exist.
2. Neither the want of officers by reason of failure to elect or by death, nor the burning of the mill which it was the object of a corporation to carry on, will, of itself, work a dissolution of the corporation.
3. The connection of an officer of a corporation with it is one of personal trust, and terminates at his death. The property of the corporation which he had in his possession or custody as such officer does not pass, at his death, into the possession of and under the control and administration of his administrator. The stockholders have the right to insist that corporate property should be placed in the hands and under the control of corporate agencies.
4. Where, the necessary offices of a corporation having all become vacated by the centering of its stock in the hands of two owners and the death of the owner of the majority of the stock, who, at the time of his death, held the principal office of the company, the administrator of this stockholder as such takes possession of all the corporate property, and takes no step looking to a replacement of officers, the remaining stockholder has the right to take judicial action looking to the appointment of a receiver by the court. If upon the trial of a demand for such an appointment it should be shown that corporate officers could not be replaced through corporate agencies, either by reason of the unwillingness or inability of the stockholders to do so, the court would be authorized itself to appoint a receiver. It would not follow that a third person should be selected as such receiver, nor that the representatives of the deceased stockholder would be deprived of the legitimate influence which they should have in the selection as holders of stock.

*Headnotes by NICHOLLS, Ch. J.

NOTE.—As to sole ownership of stock of corporation, see also Louisville Bkg. Co. v. Eisenman (Ky.) 19 L. R. A. 684
30 L. R. A.

(November 18, 1895.)

APPEAL by petitioner from a judgment of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans in favor of defendant in a proceeding to obtain the appointment of a receiver of the Edna Rice Mill Company. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Fenner, Henderson, & Fenner for appellant.

Mr. Henry Denis, for appellee:

The principal grounds upon which courts of equity grant their extraordinary aid by the appointment of receivers pendente lite are that the person seeking the relief has shown at least a probable interest in the property, and that there is danger of its being lost unless a receiver is allowed, the element of danger being an important consideration in the case. And a remote or past danger will not suffice as a ground for the relief, but there must be a well-grounded apprehension of immediate injury.

High, Receivers, § 11.

And, secondly, it must appear that possession of the property was obtained by defendant through fraud; or that the property itself, or the income from it, is in danger of loss from the neglect, waste, misconduct, or insolvency of the defendant.

Courts have no power to appoint a receiver ex parte without notice or hearing of the party in interest, and unless a basis for the appointment is alleged and proved.

State v. New Orleans, 43 La. Ann. 829; High, Receivers, §§ 17, 111, 115; Frazier v. Wilcox, 4 Rob. (La.) 517; Martin v. Blanchin, 16 La. Ann. 287; Malady v. Malady, 26 La. Ann. 488; Baker v. Louisiana Portable R. Co. 84 La. Ann. 754; French v. Gifford, 80 Iowa, 148; Hedges v. Paquet, 8 Or. 77; Stark v. Burke, 5 La. Ann. 740; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Bennett, 6 La. Ann. 456; Brown v. Union Ins. Co. 8 La. Ann. 182.

Plaintiff is not entitled to the appointment of a receiver in case of his own laches.

At the extinction of a corporation, its property vests in the stockholders, who thereby become joint owners of the same.

Citizens' Bank v. Levee Steam Cotton Press Co. 7 La. Ann. 287; Stark v. Burke, 5 La. Ann. 741.

Nicholls, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In his petition in this case plaintiff alleged that he was a stockholder and creditor of the Edna Rice Mill Company, a corporation organized under the laws of this state; that it was organized about the 5th of January, 1890, by act before Raymond S. Clark, clerk of court and ex officio notary of the parish of Acadia; that in pursuance of the objects expressed in its charter the corporation erected an improved rice mill at Mermentau station, in the parish of Acadia, which it successfully operated for a period of about two years, when, on or about the 15th of January, the rice mill and plant were totally destroyed by fire; that at the time of the said fire the only stockholders of the corporation were Joseph Menge, who was the secretary and treasurer, William A. Reese, who was chairman of the finance committee, and petitioner, who was superintendent; that on or about the 24th of January, 1894, the said Joseph Menge died, and that the said William A. Reese has disposed of his stock to the succession of the said Menge; that after the destruction of the mill and plant as aforesaid various suits were instituted by the corporation against various insurance companies upon policies of fire insurance upon their property held by the corporation, which were pending and undetermined at the time of the death of the said Menge; that, after his death, his wife, Mrs. Ada Menge, as tutrix of her minor children and administratrix of his succession, assumed the administration of the affairs of the corporation generally, and the direction of the said suits in particular; that since that time she has continued and is continuing her administration of the affairs of said corporation generally, and the direction of the said suits in particular, has compromised the suits against the insurance companies, and has received from them sums aggregating more than $15,000 in settlement of their indebtedness to the said corporation; that he is informed and alleges that she has collected other assets belonging to the said corporation, all of which she has and retains in her possession and under her control; that in all these matters the said Mrs. Menge has acted entirely without legal right, and in her administration of the corporation's affairs is and has been a mere negotiorum gestor; that her assumption of the administration of the affairs of the said corporation and her appropriation of all its assets was and is a flagrant trespass upon the rights of the petitioner, who is a stockholder and creditor of the same, and who, as such, is entitled to require that its affairs shall be properly administered; that the said corporation is now hopelessly derelict, the only stockholders being petitioner and the succession of the late Joseph Menge, represented by Mrs. Ida Menge, as aforesaid; that, besides being a stockholder, petitioner is also a creditor in a large amount; that there are various other creditors unpaid; that to the end that he may be enabled to assert his rights as a stockholder and creditor he desires that a receiver should be appointed by the court in accordance with law and the rights of all interested parties; and that he suggests as a disinterested and suitable person for appointment as receiver George W. Nott, of the city of New Orleans. In view of the premises, he prayed that Mrs. Ida Menge, personally and as tutrix of her minor children and administratrix of her husband's succession, be cited; that after due proceedings there be judgment in his favor, appointing George W. Nott receiver and liquidator of the Edna Rice Mill Company, upon such condition as the court might fix, with power and authority as such to reduce to possession all of its assets, to pay its debts, and generally to do everything which may be necessary to properly wind up its affairs; and for general relief. Defendant, in her capacity as widow in community of the late Joseph Menge and natural tutrix of the minor children, issue of her marriage with said deceased, excepted to the demand upon the ground that the petition disclosed no legal cause of action, and she prayed that the demand be dismissed, but, in the event the exception be overruled, then she averred that plaintiff's petition was too vague and indefinite for her to answer the same, and she prayed that he be ordered to amend it, and aver how many shares of the capital stock of the Edna Rice Mill Company he claimed to own, and how and from whom and for what consideration he became the owner of the same; and also that he should aver for what amount he claimed to be a creditor of said company, and for what causes he claimed to be such; and that, in default of his filing his amended petition within a time to be fixed by the court, the suit be dismissed. The court, considering the exception of no cause of action well taken, sustained the same, dismissed the suit, and plaintiff appealed.

In the brief filed in this court plaintiff declares that, having been unable to effect any satisfactory settlement of his rights with Mrs. Menge, who has arrogated to herself all the rights and powers of the corporate body, he has brought this suit for the appointment of a disinterested third person as receiver and for a judicial settlement of the affairs of the corporation, which is hopelessly derelict, with no officers or duly-qualified representatives. He calls our attention to the form of the proceeding as not being an application for the appointment of a receiver on ex parte affidavits, but a demand contemplating a trial upon the merits, and a full opportunity for both parties to be heard. He declares that the power of the state courts to appoint receivers in proper cases has been clearly recognized, and that the only question before the court is whether the petition sets out a proper case for the exercise of its power or jurisdiction. He says it is the case of a corporation utterly derelict, with no officers or representatives authorized to take charge of its affairs; that there is no attempt here to divest the properly and legally constituted officers of a corporation of the control of its property and affairs; that it is a corporation without officers; that the administratrix of a deceased stockholder has assumed the administration of its affairs without any further right or authorization than may be implied from the fact that she represents the heirs of her deceased husband, who was a stockholder; that he objects to the exclusive administration assumed by the defendant, and demands a judicial settlement of the corporate affairs, to the end that his rights as a stockholder and creditor, which are denied by the defendant, and those of other interested parties, may be regularly ascertained and protected. He claims that the appointment of a receiver is a matter which rests largely in the discretion of the court, and that this discretion can be intelligently exercised only after a trial upon the merits, when the court will have been put in possession of all the facts. The defendant resists the application. In her brief she calls our attention to the fact that, while plaintiff avers that there are various other creditors unpaid, plaintiff does not say who they are, nor what is due them, nor that they have made any complaint in the premises, nor that they join him in his application, or approve of his action; that he does not aver that the property or assets of the company are abandoned, and exposed thereby to loss or damage, but, on the contrary, says that they are under the administration and in the possession of the defendant; that he does not aver that her administration is bad or negligent or fraudulent; that he does not aver that he is exposed to any danger, immediate or remote, of loss or injury from her administration; that he does not aver that she has excluded him from a participation in such possession and administration, nor that he has made a demand upon her for such participation, nor that he has objected to or remonstrated against her administration and possession; that he does not aver that he has made a demand upon her for payment of his debt, or that she refuses to acknowledge it or pay it; that he does not aver that the corporation is insolvent; that the averment that the company is derelict is nullified by the averment that defendant administers its affairs as a negotiorum gestor; that defendant, in the interest of all parties concerned, took charge of the affairs of the company, as plaintiff (from his own showing an officer and director of the corporation), abandoned the care and management of it, having taken no care to protect its assets, from Joseph Menge's death, on the 26th of April, 1894, to the institution of this suit on the 12th of October, 1894; that plaintiff has been guilty of laches, and brought about the condition complained of, and has no legal right to apply for a receiver under such circumstances. She further asserts that plaintiff's petition discloses the fact that the corporation of the Edna Rice Mill Company is extinct, inasmuch as the number of its incorporators is reduced to two, and a corporation cannot be composed of less than three persons; that at the extinction of a corporation its property vests in the stockholders, who thereby become joint owners of the same; that therefore, on the face of the petition, plaintiff and defendant are simply joint owners of undivided property, each one having a right to hold and possess it until a partition takes place; that the right of the parties in such cases is to demand the partition of the common property, and, if necessary, the sequestration of it pendente lite, but not the delivering of it into the hands of a receiver; that it is doubtful whether a receiver may be appointed in Louisiana as an incident to a partition suit, but that, in the absence of a partition suit, as a mode of dividing the property and settling the rights and interests of the joint owners between themselves, there being no creditors demanding it, no such appointment can be made. The plaintiff replies that the question of laches vel non cannot be raised on the trial of an exception of no cause of action; that such an issue could only be raised and determined on a trial upon the merits and evidence adduced; that it is true that the act under which the corporation was organized requires that there be originally at least three stockholders, and he is not prepared to say what might be the effect in such a case of the subsequent reduction of the number of stockholders to two, in so far as the right to continue business as a corporation is concerned, but that quoad its liquidation and the rights of stockholders and creditors the corporation does still exist; that the defendant, by purchasing the interest of the third stockholder, could not have affected the rights of the plaintiff as a stockholder; that the relations between the parties are exactly what they were constituted in the charter to which both subscribed; they are both stockholders in a corporation, and the assets are corporate assets, and are to be distributed as such.

The contention of the defendant that the Edna Rice Mill Company has been dissolved that by reason of that fact the property of the corporation has resolved itself into property held in joint ownership between the stockholders; that the present situation is that of certain joint property in the custody and possession of one of the joint owners, who is entitled to hold possession of the same as joint owner under the rules applicable to that kind of property, and subject alone to an action of partition,—is not tenable. If his premise that the corporation is dissolved were true, it might be that his conclusions would be correct. Possibly article 474 of the Civil Code may countenance that pretension; and true it is, in an obiter in the case of Stark v. Burke, 5 La. Ann. 741, the organ of this court declared that "by the civil law, on the dissolution of corporations of the class therein the subject of litigation, the property of the corporation belonged to its members, and must be divided among them;" but his premise is not true, and the result which he sets up as following therefrom has not arisen in this case. If it be true that by the mere centering of the stock of a corporation in the hands of two stockholders—a less number than the number of stockholders required as a condition precedent to the creation of the corporation—the corporation is dissolved ipso facto, and the property at once changes from corporate property to individual property held in joint ownership between the two, then the purchase by a single person of all the stock of a corporation would also dissolve it, and convert its property into the individual property of the single stockholder, subject to be disposed of by him at will as such. That is not true. After a corporation has been formed our law in express terms declares that it is "an intellectual being, different and distinct from all the persons who compose it (Civ. Code, art. 485); that the estate and rights of a corporation belong to completely to the body that none of the individuals who compose it can dispose of any part of them. In this respect the thing belonging to a body is very different from a thing which is common to several individuals as respects the share which every one has in the partnership which exists between them." Article 486. "What is due to a corporation is not due to any of the individuals who compose it, and vice versa." Article 487. The rights and obligations of parties would be confounded and thrown into confusion by adopting the rule which defendant contends for. In Green's second edition of Brice's Ultra Vires (page 795), in a note, it is said: "A private corporation does not become dormant, or forfeit its franchises, because a single individual becomes, by purchase of the stock, sole owner of the corporate property and franchises, and if such sole owner continues the business under the corporate name, without notice to the public, he may be sued as such corporation. Newton Mfg. Co. v. White, 42 Ga. 148; Cook v. Kent, 105 Mass. 246." In Morawetz on Private Corporations (sec. 1009) the author says: "The decease of all the shareholders in such a corporation therefore does not terminate its existence; and it is well settled that all the shares in a corporation may be held by a single person, and yet the corporation continue to exist; and if the charter or by-laws should require certain acts to be done by more than one shareholder, the sole owner may transfer a portion of his shares to other persons, so as to conform to the letter of the rule." In support of this proposition he cites the aforementioned case of Newton Mfg. Co. v. White, supra; Russell v. M' Lellan, 14 Pick. 69, 70; and Baldwin v. Canfield, 26 Minn. 43. See Fitzgerald v. Missouri P. R. Co. 45 Fed. Rep. 819. It has been held that the owner of all the stock of a corporation is not authorized to pledge the property of the corporation to the prejudice of its creditors. Stewart v. Gould, 8 Wash. 367. In a note on the same page of Brice's Ultra Vires it is stated that the want of the proper officers by reason of failure to elect or by death does not cause dissolution, though the exercise of the powers of the corporation may be thereby suspended, and that mere insolvency, proceedings in insolvency, the appointment of a receiver, or nonuser of the powers granted, does not of itself work dissolution. The authorities cited in support of these propositions are too numerous to be specially referred to. We are of the opinion that the Edna Rice Mill Company has not been dissolved, and that we must deal with its affairs as an existing company.

When Menge, the secretary and treasurer of that company, died, the position which he held, being a personal trust, did not pass to or devolve upon his administratrix, but became vacant, subject to replacement. The corporate property at his death did not pass under the control of the administratrix of the succession of Menge as such. The plaintiff has the undoubted right to insist that it be placed in the hands of some corporate agency. The situation either admits of this being done extrajudicially by the stockholders, and through methods provided for by the charter, or it does not. If it be possible to place corporate matters in the hands of corporate agencies selected by the stockholders themselves, and defendant has the means of bringing this about legally outside of any action by the court, she ought to avail herself of that power, and bring that result about; but, should she be either unable or unwilling to do so, she cannot insist that matters should remain as they are forever. We think plaintiff has made a sufficient showing to entitle himself to a hearing upon the merits. We cannot tell whether, when the case goes to trial, the situation at that time will be of such a character as to call for the exercise of the court's action in appointing a receiver. If the court should be called on to make such an appointment, it by no means follows that a third person will be appointed, or that the succession of Menge will be deprived of exercising the legitimate influence to which it will be entitled as a stockholder in the corporation. The allegations of the petition might have been in some respects more specific than they are, but they are sufficiently so to throw the whole case open to inquiry.

The judgment appealed from is hereby annulled, avoided, and reversed, and the cause is remanded for further proceedings according to law; costs to await the decision of the lower court.

Rehearing refused.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

Richard W. EVANS et al., Repts.,

KEYSTONE GAS COMPANY, Appt.

(148 N. Y. 112.)

1. The coincidence of the decay and death of vegetation with the existence of the leakage of a large amount of gas after the laying of a new main and until its recalking, and the fact of the healthy growth after the recalking, will sustain a conclusion by the jury that the escape of the gas was the cause of the injury.

NOTE.—For liability for escape and explosion of gas, see Ohio Gas Fuel Co. v. Andrews (Ohio) 29 L. R. A. 337.
30 L. R. A.

2. The injury to shade trees by the escape of natural gas carelessly suffered to escape from a gas main in an adjoining street renders the gas company liable to the owner for the damage.

3. Damages to shade trees are measured by the difference between the value of the land before and after the injury.

4. Testimony as to the value of shade trees is not admissible on the question of damages for their destruction, as the damages are measured by the depreciation of the value of the land.

5. An objection that evidence was incompetent on the question of damages cannot be made for the first time on appeal, where the objections in the court below were merely to the competency of the witnesses and as to the materiality of the evidence at that stage of the case.

(December 12, 1885.)

APPPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Fifth Department, affirming a judgment of the Cattaraugus County Circuit in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover the value of shade trees alleged to have been destroyed by gas which defendant had negligently allowed to escape from its mains. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.
Messrs. Carey, Rumsey, & Hastings, for appellant:

Defendant's main line was properly constructed. It was repaired whenever found necessary. It was carefully watched. Defendant had employees whose special duty it was to watch and repair. In other words, the defendant was guilty of no negligence in connection with the operation of this line.

Hunt v. Lowell Gaslight Co. 1 Allen, 843.

Defendant's lines extended through nearly all the streets in Olean, and were constructed through First street in 1831. It had a right so to do.

Milhou v. Sharp, 15 Barb. 210; People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 202.

Evans was permitted to state, under objection, the condition of trees between his place and Sullivan street, which extended a distance of 800 feet.

Sixth Avenue R. Co. v. Metropolitan Elec. R. Co. 56 Hun, 182.

Mr. Fred L. Eaton, for respondents:

The new trees that were reset were not involved in the general and total value of the real estate, as would be the case with trees of a number of years' growth, and to replace which would be practically impossible and their value would not be the measure of damages.

Whitbeck v. New York C. R. Co. 36 Barb. 644; Dwight v. Elmira, C. & N. R. Co. 132 N. Y. 199, 15 L. R. A. 612.

Gray, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought to recover damages of the defendant for the injury caused to shade trees belonging to the plaintiff, by the escape of natural gas from a main or pipe laid along the street bounding his premises. The negligence charged is that the gas main was so carelessly laid, constructed, and maintained as to permit the escape of the gas in large quantities and to cause the death of the trees. Upon the trial it appeared that there were three large maple trees in front of the premises, of a diameter 30 L. R. A.

ranging from 12 to 16 inches, which shaded the west end of the plaintiff's house and plot.

Plaintiff testified that after he commenced to reside upon the premises in question, the defendant constructed this new line for the purpose of conveying natural gas, and that, thereafter, there was a perceptible and constant escape of gas in large quantities, until the pipes were taken up and calked. He described the decay and death of his grass and trees in successive years, during the time, and how, after the calking of the gas line, he reset trees, which lived and grew.

He also testified to the effect of natural gas upon the surrounding earth in depriving it of moisture. Other witnesses corroborated him with respect to the leakage of gas, the death of trees and vegetation during the time, and the dry condition of the soil near the places where the leakages were perceptible. As against this evidence the defendant sought to show that the leaks were insignificant; that the dryness of the earth about them was confined to a small area and that the plaintiff's branch pipe and lamp post were out of repair and permitted the escape of gas. The defendant gave evidence that its line was properly constructed and kept in repair and that it had not been negligent in connection with the operation of its business. Without commenting at length upon the evidence, we feel constrained to hold that whatever the doubt which arises in the mind, as to the certainty of the loss of the shade trees being due to the leakage of gas from the defendant's main, there was enough in the facts and circumstances of the case to support the verdict which the jury rendered. It may not be altogether satisfactory; but we cannot say, as matter of law, that the injury to the plaintiff's place was not due to the causes described. The evidence was conflicting upon that question, as it was upon the condition of defendant's pipes, and permitted of opposing inferences by the jury. Their verdict cannot be said to rest upon mere surmise; for they had facts testified to, which, if they believed, would account for plaintiff's loss of his trees as he charged it to be. If we could see that the verdict could only have been reached by conjecture, we should not hesitate to reverse the judgment, upon the exception of defendant to the refusal to direct a verdict in its favor. The evidence rises to a higher level than that of speculation. The coincidence of the decay and death of vegetation with the existence of the leakage of a large amount of gas, after the laying of the new main and until its recalking, and the fact of a healthful growth after the recalking, could be regarded by the jury, in view of all the evidence, as leading to the conclusion that the effect of the natural gas escaping in the earth and in the atmosphere was to cause the occurrences complained of.

Doubtless the defendant was lawfully in the street; but it was bound to use its rights and to conduct its operations so as not to inflict injury upon neighboring property. If we admit the possibility of an inference from the evidence that the injury to plaintiff's property was from the causes alleged, there is no difficulty in sustaining the recovery upon the principle of law above alluded to.

The appellant says that errors were committed upon the trial, for which the judgment should be reversed. The plaintiff was permitted to testify as to the condition of trees upon the street beyond his place, after the construction of the defendant's gas line. The objection, now insisted upon, was after the answer of the witness and went to the materiality of the evidence; but, overlooking the question of practice, we have no doubt of the admissibility of the evidence. The issue turned upon the question of whether the escaping gas would account for the injury to plaintiff's trees, and any evidence showing or tending to show that trees in the immediate vicinity were similarly and simultaneously affected was competent. The two points for the jury to be convinced upon were: Was natural gas carelessly suffered to escape from the gas main? and, Was it the procuring cause of the destruction of vitality in vegetation? Whatever testimony bore upon these questions was admissible and tended to elucidate the matter for consideration.

The witness was asked to state the value of the trees in question. The objection was as to the competency of the witness to testify on that subject and as to the materiality of the evidence "at this stage of the case." The argument now is that the evidence was incompetent on the question of the damage. That is true, and the rule in such a case as this is the difference between the value of the land before and after the injury. This rule was lately examined in the light of the authorities by the second division of this court, in Dwight v. Elmira, C. & N. R. Co. 182 N. Y. 199, 15 L. R. A. 612, and was there approved of. The court in that case held it applicable to the case of a loss of shade or of fruit trees, and held the principle of recovery to be the damage to the realty, if any, occasioned by the removal of the trees. But the objection argued was not based upon that ground; nor was it in the slightest degree suggested. The witness, with a remarkable appreciation of the rule which governed his case, did not, at first, answer as interrogated; but responded that he would consider his place worth $1,500 more than it is; obviously having in mind its value with the trees as they were. When again requested to give the value of the trees, no objection was made, and then he answered responsively to the question. Subsequently, witnesses competent to speak upon the subject gave evidence as to the value of the plaintiff's lands before the decay or death of the trees and as to its value upon the assumption of the trees being decayed or dead; thus conforming the case to the proper rule, and the trial judge also so charged.

We see no justification for interfering with the recovery, and the judgment of the General Term should be affirmed, with costs.

All concur, except Haight, J., not sitting.

30 L. R. A.

Daniel SCHMEER, Admr., etc., of Daniel Schmeer, Jr., Deceased, Appt.,
v.

GASLIGHT COMPANY of Syracuse, Impleaded, etc., Resp't

(147 N. Y. 529.)

1. A gas company before turning on, or permitting to be turned on, gas for the benefit of tenants in an apartment house who have applied for it, must use reasonable precautions to ascertain that the pipes in the building are in such condition that the gas will not flow out into the apartments of tenants who have not applied for it, to their injury.

2. The question is for the jury whether or not a gas company, before permitting gas to be turned on for the benefit of some of the tenants of an apartment house, used reasonable precautions to ascertain that no harm would thereby result to other tenants who had not applied for it by the gas escaping into their rooms.

3. Notice of intention to turn on the gas, and request to inspect the condition of the pipes in an apartment house, cannot be insisted upon by a gas company as a prerequisite to its duty to make such inspection if it has adopted the custom of permitting any one to turn the gas into a building after plans of the piping have been furnished to it, and has provided a meter.

4. A gas company cannot deny its liability for injuries resulting from failure to use reasonable precautions before turning gas into an apartment building to see that injury should not result from the escape of gas into the rooms of tenants not applying for it, on the ground that it had no right to enter upon the premises for the purpose of making an inspection.

5. The duty imposed on a gas company, of supplying gas to applicants, includes the duty, when the proper connections have been made and a meter furnished, of turning on the gas when applied to for that purpose.

6. A gas company cannot be held liable for the act of a stranger in turning gas into the pipes of a building without its knowledge or request.

7. Whether or not it is negligence for a boy eighteen years old to take a lighted candle to search for a leak in gas pipes is a question for the jury, to be considered in the light of all the circumstances of the case.

(November 23, 1895.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Fourth Department, affirming a judgment of the Onondaga County Circuit dismissing the complaint in an action brought to recover for the alleged negligent killing of plaintiff's intestate. Reversed.

Statement by Peckham, J.:

This action is brought to recover damages for the death of plaintiff's son from an explosion of gas in the building in which the plaintiff had an apartment, such explosion having occurred, as is alleged, by reason of the negligence of the defendants in permitting the gas to flow into the building without first properly testing the pipes. The answer denied any negligence on the part of the company, and set up as a further defense the contributory negligence of the deceased. The plaintiff was nonsuited at the trial, and the general term affirmed the nonsuit, and the plaintiff appeals here. The defendant is a manufacturer of gas in the city of Syracuse, and furnishes the same to all inhabitants of the city desirous of using it. The gas is supplied in the usual way, by means of mains laid underground in the streets, and connecting by means of service pipes with the different structures in which the gas is consumed. The company lays and owns the street mains and the service pipe therefrom to the inside of the cellar or basement of the buildings to be supplied. The service pipe is left by the company unconnected with the piping in a building, and the gas is prevented from flowing into it by means of a stopcock placed in the service pipe a short distance inside the curb at the side of the street. It has been the custom of this company to permit this service pipe to be connected with the piping in a building by the owner thereof as soon as he has made application to the company to become a consumer of the gas and after it has supplied him with a meter, and such connection has been customarily made by a gas fitter employed for that purpose by the owner, and without giving any notice thereof to the company. In the spring of 1889 one George Young had completed the erection of a three-story brick building on the west side of North Salina street, in the city of Syracuse. The building was divided into stores on the ground floor, and into separate and independent apartments or flats above. There was one double and one single store, and there were three flats upon each of the floors above the stores. The double store had been rented by the owner to a firm named Vinney & Krause, while the single store had been rented to the plaintiff for a confectionery shop, and the plaintiff had also rented one of the flats in the second story for his family. Two of the flats on the third floor, and immediately above the flat occupied by the plaintiff, were occupied by the families of two women, — Mrs. Ripple and Mrs. Bordner. The plaintiff moved into the building April 19, 1889, and the other tenants were moving in about the same time. The accident occurred that same evening. The whole building was equipped with gas pipes, but so arranged that each store and flat could be supplied with gas through a separate and independent meter.

NOTE.—For note as to the liability for negligence in the escape and explosion of gas, see Ohio Gas Fuel Co. v. Andrews (Ohio) 29 L. R. A. 337.

Upon the application of the owner, made about the 29th of March, 1889, the company put in the service pipe, extending into the cellar of the building through the cellar wall. The gas was excluded by means of the stopcock near the curb at the sidewalk. On the 10th of April one Steingriebe, who occupied one of the three flats on the third story, applied for a meter for his flat by signing an order book at the office of the company. Vinney & Krause, the tenants of the double store, had also, and about the same time, applied for a meter. The meters had in both cases been refused by the company until proper plans of the piping were furnished. These plans were subsequently furnished and the meters were then delivered. The gas was subsequently turned on by one of the gas fitters or his employee and without notice to, or knowledge on the part of, the gas company. It had been the practice of the company for many years in Syracuse to accept and rely upon these plans, when furnished, the same as if they were a certificate by the gas fitter or plumber putting in the piping that such piping was then complete, tested, and ready to receive gas, the company itself not making any examination. It did not itself connect the meters with the piping in a house, nor itself, and directly through its own agents and employees, see to the turning on of the gas from the street mains, through the service pipe, into the building. Those who applied for the meters engaged such persons as they chose to do this work. After the meters had been supplied to this building, they were connected with the service pipe by the employees of the owner or tenants, who engaged them for the purpose. There was customarily no objection made by defendant to the turning on of the gas from the street main after the person wishing to use the gas had applied for the same to defendant and been furnished by it with a meter. The defendant, by furnishing the meter, thereby consented to the turning on of the gas by any one. In this case the defendant relied on the certificate spoken of as to the condition of the pipes. In truth, the piping in the upper hallways had not been properly attended to before the gas was let into the building by one of the employees of the plumber or gas fitter who was engaged to attach the meter to the service pipe by one of the tenants. The ends of the pipes in the third-story hallway had not been plugged, and hence the moment the gas was turned on in the street it went, in addition to the store where it was wanted, up through the other pipes into the hallway of the third story, and escaped therefrom into that hall. The only opening at which the gas could escape was in the hallway. The hallway was also the only means of access which the tenants had to their respective flats from the street entrance. The two women tenants had not applied to the company to be furnished with gas, and did not intend to use the same in their apartments. They were using oil for illuminating purposes. After the gas had been turned on from the street on the evening in question by some one not in any way connected with the company, and some time between half after 8 and 9 o'clock, the smell of gas became noticeable in the hallway mentioned. The plaintiff's son, a young man about eighteen years of age, was in the apartment hired by his father, reading, when he heard the voices of the women, and, going out into the second-story hallway, asked them what was the matter. There was then no smell of gas in the plaintiff's apartment.

The boy was told of the escaping gas somewhere, and so he went upstairs to the third story, and said he would try and discover the location of the leak, and stop it until morning, and proposed to take a lamp. Mrs. Bordner, one of the tenants, said she thought a lamp would be dangerous, to which the boy assented, and then said he would take a candle, as he had seen plumbers use a candle to find a leak. He therefore procured one, and had it lighted, and went to a pipe in the side wall in the third story, and applied the flame to the cap of the pipe and around it, and said: "That is all right." Walking to the end of the hall, he had partly got upon a barrel lying there, when an explosion occurred, which injured the boy so that he soon thereafter died. Gas fitters do in fact use torches and candles upon some occasions in testing or searching for leaks in gas pipes. Believing that the gas company had been guilty of negligence in causing the death of plaintiff's intestate under the circumstances herein stated, the plaintiff brought this action to recover damages on account thereof.

Mr. Louis Marshall, for appellant:

The court should have submitted to the jury the question as to whether the defendant was negligent in suffering gas to be turned into a new building, which, as it was aware, was divided into different dwellings, occupied by different tenants, part of whom only desired to use such gas, without satisfying itself, by an inspection of the premises, or otherwise, that its gas could be safely admitted into the building, or without adopting and insisting upon obedience to rules with respect thereto which would have properly regulated the introduction of gas under such circumstances.

The defendant had the power to make prudent regulations relative to the business conducted by it.

8 Rev. Stat. 8th ed. pp. 2080, 2081, §§ 6-8; Ferguson v. Metropolitan Gaslight Co. 87 How. Pr. 189.

The gas which caused the explosion was the defendant's property at the time of the explosion.

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, title, Gas Companies, p. 1287; Reg. v. White, 20 Eng. L. & Eq. 585; Queen v. Firth, L. R. 10 C. C. 173.

The invasion of defendant's gas into the premises of Mrs. Ripple and Mrs. Bordner constituted a trespass.

Van Loven v. Lyke, 1 N. Y. 515, 49 Am. Dec. 846; Hoy v. Cohoes Co. 2 N. Y. 159, 51 Am. Dec. 279; Marsh v. Hand, 120 N. Y. 819; Bohan v. Port Jervis Gaslight Co. 122 N. Y. 18, 9 L. R. A. 711; Ellis v. Loftus Iron Co. L. R. 10 C. P. Div. 10.

If a person brings or accumulates on his land anything which, if it should escape, may cause damage to his neighbors, he does so at his peril; and if it does escape and causes damage he is responsible, however careful he may have been, and whatever precautions he may have taken to prevent the damage.

Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R. 8 H. L. Cas. 330.

It is not necessary to support the plaintiff's right to recover, to impose upon the defendant any obligation other than that of exercising 30 L. R. A.

reasonable care in the management of its dangerous property.

Dixon v. Belle, 5 Maule & S. 198; Thomas v. Winchester, 6 N. Y. 397, 57 Am. Dec. 455; Crownhurst v. Amersham Burial Board, L. R. 4 Exch. Div. 5; Firth v. Bowling Iron Co. L. R. 8 C. P. Div. 254; Henry v. Dennis, 98 Ind. 452; Smith, Neg. p. 109.

Gas companies are bound to exercise the very greatest care, for they are using a material difficult to manage, and of a very dangerous character in many ways, for it is at once explosive and poisonous, and, not unreasonably, these companies are bound in heavy penalties by their acts to exercise the greatest care, and even to become in some sense insurers.

Hipkins v. Birmingham & S. Gaslight Co. 6 Hurlst. & N. 250; Blenkiron v. Great Central Gas Consumers Co. 2 Fost. & F. 440; Moss v. Hastings & St. L. Gas Co. 4 Fost. & F. 324; Burrows v. March Gas & O. Co. L. R. 5 Exch. 67, L. R. 7 Exch. 96, 41 L. J. Exch. 46; Lannen v. Albany Gas Light Co. 46 Barb. 264, affirmed, 44 N. Y. 459; Parry v. Smith, L. R. 4 C. P. Div. 325, 48 L. J. C. P. 781; Butcher v. Providence Gas Co. 12 R. I. 149, 84 Am. Rep. 626; Pollock, Torts, *411, 413; Chisholm v. Atlanta Gaslight Co. 57 Ga. 28; Kinnaird v. Standard Oil Co. 89 Ky. 468, 7 L. R. A. 451; Kennedy v. Ryall, 67 N. Y. 379.

The failure to promulgate and enforce rules calculated to avoid the occurrence of accidents like that now considered, presented a state of facts which warranted a finding of negligence.

Abel v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 108 N. Y. 681, 128 N. Y. 662; Sheehan v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 882; Berrigan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 131 N. Y. 582; Warn v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 80 Hun, 71; Coppins v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 122 N. Y. 557; Whittaker v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 126 N. Y. 544.

Whether the deceased was, under all the circumstances, guilty of contributory negligence, was also a question for the jury.

Ribels v. Philadelphia, 105 Pa. 41; Nichols v. Brush & D. Mfg. Co. 58 Hun, 137, affirmed, 117 N. Y. 646; Lee v. Troy Citizens' Gaslight Co. 98 N. Y. 117; Lanigan v. New York Gaslight Co. 71 N. Y. 80; Bartlett v. Boston Gaslight Co. 122 Mass. 209.

Mr. Edwin Nottingham, for respondent:

The mere implied permission to plumbers and gas fitters acting under the direction and control of owners and occupants of buildings, to turn on respondent's gas to the same, cannot possibly create the relation of agency between the respondent and the plumber or gas fitter, or owner or occupant.

Flint v. Gloucester Gaslight Co. 3 Allen, 343; Fisher v. Schiller Lodge, 50 Iowa, 459.

The respondent discharged its full duty when it confined its gas to its own receptacles, and prevented its escape therefrom to the injury of others, at the same time allowing consumers to take the gas from its receptacles into their own as they had occasion to use it.

The statute required the respondent to put in the service pipe and supply gas to this building.

Laws 1859, chap. 811, § 6; Meters v. Metropolitan Gaslight Co. 14 N. Y. Week. Dig. 522.

The intestate was guilty of negligence which contributed to his death, and it must be so held as a matter of law.

Langan v. New York Gaslight Co. 71 N. Y. 29; Cummins v. Syracuse, 100 N. Y. 687; Wendell v. New York O. & H. R. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 421; Hins v. Starin, 46 Hun. 527; Pruell v. New York O. & H. R. R. Co. 109 N. Y. 613; Young v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 107 N. Y. 501; Williams v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 116 N. Y. 629; Splitter v. State, 108 N. Y. 206; Donnelly v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 109 N. Y. 17; Smith v. New York O. & H. R. R. Co. 88 Hun. 38; Beck v. East River Ferry Co. 6 Robt. 88; Davenport v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 100 N. Y. 632; Flood v. Buffalo, N. Y. & P. R. Co. 23 N. Y. Week. Dig. 501; Motel v. Sixth Ave. R. Co. 2 How. Pr. N. S. 30; Robertson v. New York, 7 Misc. 645; Wisniewski v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 124 N. Y. 420.

Peckham, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

We think it was error to nonsuit the plaintiff upon this proof. There was, in our judgment, a question for the jury to determine; the question being whether, upon all the evidence, the defendant company had been guilty of negligence which caused the death of the deceased youth. A portion of the gas which escaped through the pipes in the third-story hall found its way into the premises of the women tenants, and occasioned them annoyance from its odor. The deceased, upon hearing of the difficulty, and in order to aid the two women in its removal, endeavored to find the location of the leak; for the purpose of stopping it with some temporary means until the next day. He was acting in their behalf, and for their benefit, although the means he used were his own. The women were not consumers of the gas, and had made no application to the company to be supplied with it, and its presence in the hall and in their apartments was most obnoxious to them, and, if continued, might, of course, soon have become very dangerous. The question which should have been left to the jury was whether the company had failed to use such reasonable precautions as might properly be exacted of it before turning on the gas, or permitting it to be turned on by some third person. The company, in some respects, occupied the position of a public corporation. It was by statute bound to furnish gas upon the written application of the owner or occupant of any building or premises within 100 feet of any main laid down by it, subject to such just and proper regulations as it might adopt as a means of securing payment for its gas and safety in its supply. It manufactured and furnished an agent for illuminating purposes which might become a most dangerous one, liable to explode, and to injure human beings and property. While this gas remained on the premises of the manufacturer, or while it was being conducted through its own pipes to different parts of the city, there can be no doubt that the company was bound to exercise vigilance to prevent injury to third parties from the dangerous qualities of the gas. The question is where its responsibility ended. The claim is made on its behalf here that such responsibility had certainly determined before this explosion occurred. It is urged that it had no responsibility for putting the piping in the house, as it was done by third parties, under the employment of the owner; that it had no charge of such piping after it was fitted in the building; that the gas was turned on by third parties, without consultation with, or knowledge on the part of, the officers of the company, which simply was accustomed to, and in this case did, permit any one to turn on the gas after plans had been submitted to it, and a meter had been provided by it upon application.

These circumstances might furnish a good answer to the company as against any claim of the owner of the building who had applied for a meter, or any tenant who had so applied. The case of Flint v. Gloucester Gaslight Co. 8 Allen, 843, does not go far enough to save the defendant from any possible liability in this case. There the plaintiff was himself the owner of the building, and had employed and paid one Thomas to put gas pipes therein, connected with the service pipe laid by the defendant, and to put up and arrange the fixtures and burners necessary for using gas in some of the rooms. This man, having put the fixtures in the building, himself turned on the gas, and the explosion soon thereafter took place. The plaintiff claimed that Thomas in turning on the gas was the agent of the defendant, while the defendant claimed that it had simply been cognizant of a custom on the part of Thomas or other gas fitters to turn on the gas when they had completed their piping, and that defendant had simply permitted it, but had in no sense employed Thomas, or any one else, to do it. The defendant requested the court to charge that this mere permission was not sufficient to make Thomas its agent, if it had never assumed to furnish or interfere with the pipes or fixtures inside the building. The court declined to give such instruction, and it was held error. It was a case of an application for gas by the owner of the building. We are here not dealing with the case of an owner or of a tenant who had made application for a meter, and who might be said to have asserted by that act the proper condition of the piping, and to have thereby waived any further examination. Here is the case of an injury to a third person, arising from an explosion in the third-story hall, caused by the escape of the gas from pipes situated in that story, and not properly capped, by reason of which the escaping gas penetrated into the apartments of nonconsumers, and who had made no application for such gas.

Was there any negligent failure on the part of the defendant company to do what was reasonably prudent for the purpose of insuring safety to those women, and to those who were roused by them to make efforts to discover the source of the leak? The company surely had no right to intentionally pour out its manufactured gas upon the tenants who had not applied for it. Some care was due from it when supplying those who did apply, to see that those who did not should be protected from the undesired element. The defendant urges that it would be most unreasonable to impose upon it the duty of knowing when gas was to be turned on in every building in the city, where it was to be used, and to inspect the piping immediately prior to the turning on of the gas. It is asserted such a duty would be almost impossible of performance, and that every reasonable requirement is met by the obligation to inspect upon notice and request. But the company, by the adoption of the custom already spoken of in regard to the delivery of the plans of the piping to it, entirely did away with the necessity of notifying it, and left it to the discretion of the owner or applicant at what time or by whom the gas might be turned on. It has by its own act relieved itself, so far as it could, of any obligation to make inspection before the gas shall be turned on. We do not see the impracticability of inspection, as is alleged by defendant, or its great expense. If when a meter should be applied for in an apartment house like this, in order to take the defendant's gas, the defendant should, at the time of sending it, send a proper inspector to inspect the piping, there would not be much difficulty in that case. The inspection here spoken of would not include the examination of pipes under floors, or covered by plastering. No ripping up of work already done in the way of flooring and of lath and plastering could reasonably be required. A fair examination of the piping which was disclosed, and the ends of tubes coming out into the open spaces, through which the gas might penetrate into other quarters than where it was applied for, would certainly be all that could ever be reasonably called for. We do not say that even this must be done as a legal proposition. It is a question for the jury upon the issue of negligence.

The suggestion that the company had no right to enter upon the premises for that purpose we do not regard as well founded. It might properly refuse to permit the gas to be turned on in a case of separate stores and flats like that here presented, until some reasonable examination of the piping had been made in the other portions of the building, where gas had not been applied for, such as would lead to the belief that the piping in that other portion was in proper condition. We do not say that the company was bound, as matter of law, to make this examination by its own agents, or that a failure to make it, and a reliance on the certificate implied from the delivery of plans, was negligence; but we say that, whether such reliance was or was not negligent was, under the circumstances of this case, a matter for the jury to decide. Having adopted the practice of relying upon the plans when delivered as equivalent to a certificate that the piping was in good condition, and thereafter permitting any one to turn on the gas, the propriety of that custom must go to the jury upon the question of negligence.

The defendant, after the delivery of the plans, and having thus obtained a general knowledge of the character of the building, must have known of the separate stores and apartments, and that separate meters were required. The agents of the defendant saw that by the plans the pipes were placed so as to distribute the gas to other portions of the building than those from which application had been so far made. Was it or not a reasonable matter to ask of the defendant that, before permitting its gas to be turned into the building for the purpose of supplying those who had applied for it the company should, through its own servants, make some examination of the state of the piping leading to the other quarters, to the end that it might say, with reasonable certainty, such piping was in proper condition to hold the gas, and not to let it escape upon the premises of those who had not applied for and did not want it? Or had the company done all that could reasonably have been required of it by entering into the understanding as to the plans, and that their delivery should be regarded as equivalent to a certificate? This presents, we think, a fair question of fact, and not one of law.

The defendant also urges that it was not its duty to turn on the gas, but it was only obliged to allow it to be turned on, and therefore it ought not to be held liable for the act of a stranger. In this we think it entirely misapprehends its duty. It is obliged to supply the gas to applicants. When they have done what is necessary to make a connection, with its consent, with the mains of the defendant, and have applied for and obtained the meter to measure their supply, we are clearly of the opinion that, in order to fulfil its duty to supply gas, the defendant is under the obligation, when applied to, of turning it on so that the supply may be given. Certainly it ought not to be held liable for the act of a stranger in turning on the gas without its knowledge or request. We do not permit any liability to be founded upon that fact. If liable at all, it must be for its own neglect (if the jury shall so find) in failing to make any inspection, and in adopting a custom which, when carried out, permitted the turning on of the gas by any one at any time after the delivery of a meter by the company. This is the extent of defendant's liability. We do not think the principle of the case of Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R. 8 H. L. 330, applies here. The defendant is not an insurer. In the English case the defendant was held liable, at all events, for the damage done to his neighbor's mines by reason of an overflow from water which the defendant had accumulated on his own land.

Here the defendant is engaged in manufacturing and selling an article which has become so universally used for illuminating purposes as to be regarded almost as an essential of city life. Having manufactured it, the law compels the company to furnish it to an owner or occupant on certain terms. It is bound, not only in the fulfilment of the purpose of its existence, but by affirmative provisions of law, to deliver the gas into the buildings of others. In making that delivery it is not an insurer, but is simply bound (in such a case as this), to that degree of care which the nature of the article it deals in, and the consequences to be apprehended from an accident, reasonably call for. Nor do we assume to say that when once the piping, in cases similar to this, has been fairly and properly examined previous to turning on the gas (if such examination by defendant's servants is called for at all), that thereafter there is a continuing liability on the part of the company to see to it that such piping is kept in proper condition. As the company has no control over the piping, does not put it in, and is not consulted about it, the principle upon which it might be held liable, in cases of this character, at the time of the first delivery of gas, if no precaution were taken at all, is simply that it would have the right to refuse to turn on, or permit others to turn on, the gas for the supply of the applicants until properly assured of the condition of the piping in other portions of the building. Having become assured of it, and the gas being on, it would not seem that the company ought further to be regarded as liable for the continuous good condition of the piping. Here we may justly say that to impose such a liability upon the defendant would clearly be unreasonable. It would render necessary the examination, at frequent intervals, of all the buildings in the city in which gas was used. This would be so onerous as to be practically impossible of execution, because of the expense to the company. The law ought not to, and does not, exact an unreasonable amount of care from any one. Under the restrictions, however, as above stated, we think the question of defendant's negligence was for the jury.

The other ground of defense, as to the contributory negligence of the plaintiff's intestate, we do not think should be taken from the jury. Sometimes it is extremely dangerous to take a light to discover the location of a gas leak, and sometimes it is not, depending upon various circumstances; among others, upon the extent of the leak, the size of the inclosure where located, and the length of time the leak has existed. The plaintiff's intestate, a boy of eighteen, took the candle, with the statement that he had seen gas men take a candle to find a leak, and it is a fact that they do so upon some occasions. The whole case as to the contributory negligence of the plaintiff's intestate should be submitted to the proper judges of fact.

The judgment must be reversed, and a new trial granted, costs to abide the event.

O'Brien, Bartlett, and Haight, JJ., concur. Finch and Gray, JJ., dissent. Andrews, Ch. J., did not sit.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Lydia W. HARMON

v.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD COMPANY.

(.....Mass.....)

The impairment of the capacity of a married woman to perform labor can be considered as an element of the damages recoverable in an action by her for a personal injury where the statutes entitle her to make contracts on her own account and give her the right to her own earnings.

(January 2, 1896.)

EXCEPTIONS by plaintiff to rulings of the Superior Court for Suffolk County made during trial of an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence which resulted in disallowance of damages for her loss of earning capacity. Sustained.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. A. A. Strout and George E. Smith, for plaintiff:

The wife may sue and recover for such work and labor.

Burke v. Cole, 97 Mass. 118.

Therefore it seems to follow that the husband cannot.

The married woman is prohibited from suing her husband. Every other person is exposed to her legal attack. For every cause against any other person she stands as well as her unmarried sister.

She may recover for loss of earning capacity.

Jordan v. Middlesex R. Co. 138 Mass. 425.

Messrs. Benton & Choate, for defendant:

Upon marriage, the obligation to support the wife is imposed upon the husband so long as they shall live together. The legal presumption is that her services, and the comfort of her society, are of a worth to him equal to all the obligations which the law imposes upon him because of the marital relation. The obligation to support is coextensive with the wife's obligation to render service.

Randall v. Randall, 87 Mich. 563.

The statute is in derogation of the common law, and its effect is not to be extended by implication.

Lord v. Parker, 8 Allen, 127; Edwards v. Stevens, 8 Allen, 815; Brookings v. White, 49 Me. 479; 2 Bishop, Married Women, § 23.

By the statutes of 1855 a married woman was authorized to make contracts with reference to her real and personal property. Under this authority she could give a note for land purchased by her.

Chapman v. Foster, 6 Allen, 186.

NOTE.—In connection with the above case as to recovery for loss of earnings of a married woman, see Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Twiname (Ind.) 7 L. 80 L. R. A.

R. A. 352; Blaechinska v. Howard Mission & Home for Little Wanderers (N. Y.) 15 L. R. A. 215—the latter of which is opposed to the present case.

But she could not give a note for a debt of her husband to a third person.

Athol Mach. Co. v. Fuller, 107 Mass. 487.

This statute would not seem to make her earnings while living with her husband her property.

See Seits v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 24 L. ed. 179.

A suit by a husband for loss of service, to be maintainable, must be founded upon the loss and deprivation of a legal right; but, if the plaintiff's contention be correct, a complete defense has been furnished by the legislature to all such actions, because, by making the wife a free agent to contract, it has taken from the husband utterly the right to interfere with the right to perform her contracts and require her services at home. But the courts have recently recognized the right to maintain such actions.

Sullivan v. Lowell & D. Street R. Co. 163 Mass. 536.

No legislation has relieved the husband of any of the obligation of support which was placed upon him by the common law. He is still bound to furnish his wife with food, clothing, nursing, and medicine, and the other necessities and comforts of life.

Livingston v. Hammond, 162 Mass. 375.

Some of the results which might follow from the construction which must be placed upon this section if the plaintiff's contention is correct are suggested in Schindel v. Schindel, 12 Md. 108, and in Cole v. Van Riper, 44 Ill. 58.

No suit by a husband could be maintained for enticement away or harboring his wife, and possibly none for her seduction. Certainly no damages could be recovered for loss of services or companionship consequent on such seduction. It would make services rendered to husband or children proper subject for compensation, though no suit could be maintained.

Grant v. Green, 41 Iowa, 88; Douglas v. Gausman, 68 Ill. 170; Pub. Stat. chap. 147, § 7.

Statutes of very similar purport in other states have been passed upon, and it has been held that the husband has not been deprived of his rights.

Mewhirter v. Hatten, 42 Iowa, 288, 20 Am. Rep. 618; Tuttle v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 42 Iowa, 518; Filer v. New York C. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 47, 10 Am. Rep. 327; Beau v. Kiah, 6 Thomp. & C. 464; Seits v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 580, 24 L. ed. 179.

If no statute has operated to transfer to the wife an independent right to her own services when executory, then it must be true that no arrangement between the parties can effect that result.

Woodbeck v. Havens, 42 Barb. 66; Elliott v. Bentley, 17 Wis. 592.

No such gift could be made in futuro by the husband to the wife.

Glenn v. Johnson, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 477, 21 L. ed. 856; Pub. Stat. chap. 147, § 8.

Allen, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The general question arising in this case is whether, in an action brought by a married woman to recover damages for a personal injury, the impairment of her capacity to perform labor can be considered as an element of the damages. By Stat. 1846, chap. 209, § 1, it was enacted that "in all cases where married women shall hereafter by their own labor earn wages, payment may be made to them for the same." This was followed by Stat. 1855, chap. 804, § 7: "Any married woman may carry on any trade or business and perform any labor or services on her sole and separate account; and the earnings of any married woman from her trade, business, labor, or services shall be her sole and separate property, and may be used and invested by her in her own name; and she may sue and be sued as if sole in regard to her trade, business, labor, services, and earnings; and her property acquired by her trade, business, and service, and the proceeds thereof, may be taken on any execution against her."

By Stat. 1857, chap. 249, § 6, it was provided that a husband should not be bound by his wife's contracts in respect to her separate property or to her trade.

The rights of married women in respect to their labor are thus defined in Gen. Stat. chap. 109:

Sec. 1: "The property, both real and personal, which any married woman now owns as her sole and separate property, that which comes to her by descent, devise, bequest, gift, or grant, that which she acquires by her trade, business, labor, or services carried on or performed on her sole and separate account, . . . shall, notwithstanding her marriage, be and remain her sole and separate property, and may be used, collected, and invested by her in her own name, and shall not be subject to the interference or control of her husband, or liable for his debts."

Sec. 8: "A married woman may bargain, sell, and convey her separate real and personal property, enter into any contracts in reference to the same, carry on any trade or business, and perform any labor or services, on her sole and separate account, and sue and be sued in all matters having relation to her separate property, business, trade, services, labor and earnings, in the same manner as if she were sole."

Sec. 5: "The contracts made by a married woman in respect to her separate property, trade, business, labor, or services shall not be binding on her husband, nor render him or his property liable therefor; but she and her separate property shall be liable for such contracts in the same manner as if she were sole."

Sec. 6: "Payment may be made to a married woman for wages earned by her labor," etc.

By Stat. 1862, chap. 198, amended by Stat. 1881, chap. 64, § 1, a married woman doing business on her separate account must record a certificate in the town or city clerk's office setting forth various particulars, or her husband may file such certificate. In case of failure to do so, her property will not be protected against his creditors, and he will be liable on her contracts.

By Stat. 1874, chap. 184, § 1, "a married woman may . . . make contracts, oral and written, sealed and unsealed, in the same manner as if she were sole, and all work and labor performed by her for others than her husband and children shall, unless there is an express agreement on her part to the contrary, be presumed to be on her separate account." And by section 8 "a married woman may sue and be sued in the same manner and to the same extent as if she were sole, but nothing herein contained shall authorize suits between husband and wife."

This enumeration of statutes shows the growth of the legislation on this particular subject, and the foregoing provisions are now embodied in a somewhat compressed form in Pub. Stat. chap. 147.

By virtue of this legislation, a married woman becomes, in the view of the law, a distinct and independent person from her husband, not only in respect to her right to own property, but also in respect to her right to use her time for the purpose of earning money on her sole and separate account. She may perform labor, and is entitled to her wages or earnings. If she complies with the statutory requirements as to recording a certificate, she may carry on any trade or business on her sole and separate account, and take the profits, if profits there are, as her separate property. Her right to enter into contracts, to earn money, to engage in performing labor or service, to enter into trade on her own account, is inconsistent with the view that her capacity to labor belongs exclusively to her husband. He can appropriate neither her earnings nor her time. Her right to employ her time for the earning of money on her own account is as complete as his, subject to the requirement of recording a certificate in case she enters into trade. This may interfere with his right to and enjoyment of her society, companionship and services. But this is a consequence which the legislature must be deemed to have foreseen and intended. His right, in these respects, is now made subordinate to her right to employ her time in the care and management of her property, and in the earning of money by performing labor or by carrying on a trade or business. So far as the statutes have given to her a right to act independently of him, so far his rights and control in respect to her are necessarily abridged. He can no longer compel her to work for him during such time as she may choose to perform labor on her sole and separate account. By the common law the husband was bound to support his wife, and therefore was entitled to her services. By the statutes, which modify the common law, his right to her services is abridged, though his obligation to support her remains.

It is urged in argument that she may contract to devote her whole time to work which is to be performed away from his home, and which, perhaps, may require her absence for ten years, thus amounting to a desertion which would be in violation of her matrimonial duty. But the possibility of extreme cases should not conclusively determine the construction of statutes, nor do we now decide whether the statutes would permit such action on her part against his consent. To a certain limited extent—as, for example, in fixing the domicile, and in being responsible, under ordinary circumstances, for its orderly management—the husband is still the head of the family. But in some particulars a married woman is now independent of her husband's control. In the case now before us the impairment of the plaintiff's capacity to labor was an element which might be considered by the jury in the estimate of her damages. In respect to this, as with other elements of damages, no close approximation to mathematical accuracy can in all cases be reached. In some instances the right of a married woman to perform labor for others may have no money value. How much, if anything, should be allowed on this ground, must be left to the jury to determine, under the circumstances of each particular case. The radical nature of the change effected by the legislation of this state in the legal condition of married women is illustrated in numerous decisions, of which Jordan v. Middlesex R. Co. 138 Mass. 425, most nearly resembles the present case. But see also Parker v. Simonds, 1 Allen, 258; Ames v. Foster, 8 Allen, 541; Plumer v. Lord, 5 Allen, 480; Chapman v. Foster, 6 Allen, 136; Stewart v. Jenkins, Id. 300; Chapman v. Briggs, 11 Allen, 546; Burke v. Cole, 97 Mass. 118; Snow v. Sheldon, 126 Mass. 332, 80 Am. Rep. 684; Read v. Stewart, 129 Mass. 407; Pacific Nat. Bank v. Windram, 133 Mass. 173; Butler v. Ives, 139 Mass. 202; Pinney v. Globe Nat. Bank, 150 Mass. 574, 6 L. R. A. 379.

Exceptions sustained.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

SPRINGFIELD FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY, Respl.,

v.

Village of KEESEVILLE, Appt.

(143 N. Y. 46.)

1. A municipal corporation is not liable for damages caused by fire in consequence of its negligent failure to maintain sufficient waterworks.

NOTE.—For liability for loss of property by fire because of failure of water supply, see note to Howsmon v. Trenton Water Co. (Mo.) 23 L. R. A. 146.

For water rates as taxes, see note to Wagner v. Rock Island (Ill.) 21 L. R. A. 519.

80 L. R. A.

quence of its negligent failure to maintain sufficient waterworks.

2. The maintenance of municipal waterworks is in no sense a private business for negligence in which the corporation will be held liable, but is an exercise of governmental power for the public good appertaining to the corporation in its political character.

3. The imposition of water rents by a municipal corporation for the use of water does not show that the waterworks system is operated by the corporation in its private corporate character, but is only a mode of taxation and part of the general scheme of raising revenue to carry on the work of government.

(December 19, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant from an interlocutory judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Third Department, reversing a judgment of a Special Term for Essex County which sustained a demurrer to the complaint in an action brought to hold defendant liable for the amount which plaintiff had been compelled to pay by reason of the destruction of a house by fire in consequence of defendant's alleged negligence. Reversed.

Statement by Gray, J. :

The complaint sets forth that the plaintiff is a Massachusetts corporation, and that the defendant is a village organized under the provisions of chapter 291 of the Laws of the state of New York, passed in 1870, and the amendments thereto; that the plaintiff carried on the business of fire insurance within the limits of the defendant, and for the privilege of so doing, and of having the protection of the waterworks and fire department and appliances of defendant, had paid an annual tax to the defendant; that the defendant had a system of waterworks and fire appliances which were maintained by taxes levied upon all its taxable inhabitants, including plaintiff and other insurance companies, and by water rents paid by such inhabitants. The complaint then proceeds to set forth the insurance by the plaintiff of property of one Emily E. Brewer, for a percentage less than for like property outside the limits of the water and fire protection, and the destruction by fire thereof, in consequence whereof the plaintiff had paid to her, under its contract of insurance, $4,450. The complaint then sets forth the assignment to plaintiff by Emily E. Brewer of all claims and damages against the defendant, by reason of said fire and damages, and alleges that "at the time of the aforesaid fire, the defendant had wrongfully and negligently allowed and caused its said waterworks, pumps, pipes, and fire appliances to become and be out of repair, broken and weakened, stopped with mud and other foreign objects, and unfit for use, to such extent that water could not be thrown or put upon said dwelling house to extinguish the fire therein; that when the hose was laid and opened, and ready to throw water upon the fire in said house, said fire was very slight, and had done very little damage; that if said fire appliances and waterworks had been in proper working order, said fire would and could have been extinguished without damaging said house to exceed $300; that at the time of said fire, and for several years previous thereto, the defendant, under and in pursuance of the powers granted it by the laws of the state of New York, had assumed to maintain waterworks and fire appliances and a fire department for the purpose, among other things, of protecting the property of the inhabitants of defendant against loss by fire, of all which plaintiff and its assignor had notice, and in reliance thereon said assignor paid taxes to defendant to maintain the same, and plaintiff paid taxes to defendant for said purpose, and insured property at reduced rates as aforesaid; . . . that plaintiff's aforesaid loss of $4,450, to the extent of at least $4,150 was caused solely by the negligence and wrongful and unlawful acts of defendant in failing to keep its waterworks and fire appliances in proper working order, and in failing to employ competent men to manage and care for the same." The complaint then demanded judgment for the said sum of $4,150. The defendant demurred to the complaint, on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. At special term the demurrer was sustained and judgment went for the defendant, dismissing the complaint; but, upon appeal to the general term, that court reversed the judgment, and overruled the defendant's demurrer. From the general term judgment the defendant has appealed to this court; the general term having certified the question as one of sufficient importance to render the decision of this court desirable before proceeding further.

Messrs. McLaughlin & Rowe, for appellant:

A municipal corporation cannot be made liable (in the absence of a statute giving the remedy) for an injury arising from the negligent use of its property from which it receives, in its corporate capacity, no special benefit; or from a negligent use of its property by its officers not acting as agents or servants of the corporation but as public officers whose duties are defined by law.

Edgerly v. Concord, 62 N. H. 8; Thayer v. Boston, 19 Pick. 511, 81 Am. Dec. 157; Hafford v. New Bedford, 16 Gray, 297; Hill v. Boston, 123 Mass. 844, 28 Am. Rep. 882; Barbour v. Ellsworth, 67 Me. 294; Jewett v. New Haven, 88 Conn. 868, 9 Am. Rep. 882; Grant v. Erie, 69 Pa. 420, 8 Am. Rep. 272; Davis v. Montgomery, 51 Ala. 189, 28 Am. Rep. 545; Cooley, Torts, 620, 621; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 949-951, 953-955; Woolbridge v. New York, 49 How. Pr. 67; Smith v. Rochester, 76 N. Y. 506; Maximilian v. New York, 62 N. Y. 160, 20 Am. Rep. 468; O'Meara v. New York, 1 Daly, 425; Hayes v. Oshkosh, 38 Wis. 814, 14 Am. Rep. 760.

It was discretionary with the defendant whether it would construct a system of waterworks, and having constructed it, whether it would maintain it or allow it to fall into disuse.

Wainwright v. Queens County Water Co. 78 Hun, 152; Mendel v. Wheeling, 28 W. Va. 238; Wheeler v. Cincinnati, 19 Ohio St. 19, 2 Am. Rep. 168; Vanhorn v. Des Moines, 68 Iowa, 447, 50 Am. Rep. 750; Fisher v. Boston, 104 Mass. 87, 6 Am. Rep. 196; Tainter v. Worcester, 123 Mass. 811, 25 Am. Rep. 90; Edgerly v. Concord, 62 N. H. 8; Jewett v. New Haven, 88 Conn. 868, 9 Am. Rep. 882; Torbush v. Norwich, 88 Conn. 225, 9 Am. Rep. 895; Grant v. Erie, 69 Pa. 420, 8 Am. Rep. 272; Black v. Columbia, 19 S. C. 412, 45 Am. Rep. 785; Heller v. Sedalia, 58 Mo. 159, 14 Am. Rep. 444; Hayes v. Oshkosh, 38 Wis. 814, 14 Am. Rep. 760; Kelley v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 88; Davis v. Montgomery, 51 Ala. 139, 28 Am. Rep. 545; Faulkner v. Aurora, 85 Ind. 180; Howard v. San Francisco, 51 Cal. 52; Wilcox v. Chicago, 107 Ill. 334, 47 Am. Rep. 434; Smith v. Roch- enter, 76 N. Y. 513; Welsh v. Rutland, 58 Vt. 228, 48 Am. Rep. 762; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. 976; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 4th ed. § 265.

Water companies which contract with the public authorities to furnish water sufficient in quantity and pressure to extinguish fires are not liable to property owners for damages resulting from failure to keep their contract.

22 Alb. L. J. 124; House v. Houston Waterworks Co. (Tex.) 22 S. W. 277; Davis v. Clinton Waterworks Co. 54 Iowa, 59, 37 Am. Rep. 185; Becker v. Keokuk Waterworks, 79 Iowa, 419; Fowler v. Athens City Waterworks Co. 83 Ga. 219; Fonten v. Lookout Waterworks Co. 3 Lea, 42; Ferris v. Carson Water Co. 16 Nev. 44, 40 Am. Rep. 485; Nickerson v. Bridgeport Hydraulic Co. 46 Conn. 24, 38 Am. Rep. 1; Eaton v. Fairbury Waterworks Co. 87 Neb. 546, 21 L. R. A. 653; Housmon v. Trenton Water Co. 119 Mo. 304, 28 L. R. A. 146.

Mr. A. W. Boynton, for respondent:

To establish a defense based on exemption from liability for damages resulting from its own wrong, defendant must invoke and show law that is irresistibly clear to that end.

United States v. Fisher, 6 U. S. 2 Cranch, 353, 2 L. ed. 304; Cogswell v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 103 N. Y. 10; Bohan v. Port Jervis Gaslight Co. 123 N. Y. 18, 9 L. R. A. 711.

If the defendant was a private person or corporation there would be no question of its liability under the facts admitted by the demurrer.

Connecticut F. Ins. Co. v. Erie R. Co. 73 N. Y. 399, 29 Am. Rep. 171; Home Ins. Co. v. Western Transp. Co. 38 How. Pr. 102.

No good reason exists for not applying the rule laid down in New York v. Bailey, 2 Denio, 444, holding the municipality liable on the same grounds as an individual or other corporation.

The defendant had authority of law to maintain waterworks for protection against fire, and to sell water from them, etc.

Laws 1875, chap. 181, § 4; Laws 1879, chap. 129, as amended by Laws 1881, chap. 175, and Laws 1883, chap. 225; Laws 1885, chap. 211.

It cannot justly be held that defendant was exercising its sovereign, or judicial, or discretionary powers, wherein it escapes all liability through deference to the ancient fiction that, "the King can do no wrong."

Lloyd v. New York, 5 N. Y. 374, 55 Am. Dec. 347; Beach, Pub. Corp. § 1140.

The powers granted to defendant imply the duty on the part of defendant to execute the powers; because the interests of the public and third persons are at stake.

Hutson v. New York, 9 N. Y. 163, 59 Am. Dec. 526; Requa v. Rochester, 45 N. Y. 129, 6 Am. Rep. 62; New York v. Furze, 8 Hill, 612; People v. Meakim, 133 N. Y. 214; People v. Otsego County Supra, 51 N. Y. 401; People v. Livingston County Supra, 68 N. Y. 114; Hagadorn v. Raux, 72 N. Y. 583; People v. Niagara County Supra, 49 Hun, 32; Gilmore v. Utica, 131 N. Y. 568; Res v. Barlow, 2 Salk. 609; Cooley, Const. Lim. pp. 248, 249; Nelson v. New York, 63 N. Y. 544; Kramrath v. Albany, 127 N. Y. 581; Hill v. New York, 139 N. Y. 505.

Even if we grant that the defendant was under no obligation, originally, to provide waterworks for the protection of its inhabitants and others against fire, yet, having assumed to exercise its legal right so to do, it became bound not to act negligently in the care and maintenance of the same, and not to employ incompetent servants.
30 L. R. A.

McCarthy v. Syracuse, 46 N. Y. 196; Danaher v. Brooklyn, 119 N. Y. 253, 7 L. R. A. 592; Rochester White Lead Co. v. Rochester, 3 N. Y. 463, 53 Am. Dec. 316; Hutson v. New York, 9 N. Y. 163, 59 Am. Dec. 526; Conrad v. Ithaca, 16 N. Y. 158; Burton v. Syracuse, 37 Barb. 292; Hitchins v. Frostburg, 68 Md. 100; Seifert v. Brooklyn, 101 N. Y. 136, 54 Am. Rep. 664; Wilson v. New Bedford, 108 Mass. 261, 11 Am. Rep. 352. See opinion of Finch, J., in Chia v. Syracuse, 95 N. Y. 87; Jenney v. Brooklyn, 120 N. Y. 167.

The courts have held municipal corporations liable for neglect to maintain public works in good repair.

Moody v. New York, 43 Barb. 282; Hyatt v. Rondout, 44 Barb. 385; Barton v. Syracuse, 36 N. Y. 54; Davenport v. Ruckman, 37 N. Y. 568; Weesman v. Brooklyn, 40 N. Y. S. R. 700.

Employment of incompetent servants to care for public works is negligence.

Lloyd v. New York, 5 N. Y. 371, 55 Am. Dec. 347.

The defendant, by accepting its organization and powers from the state, thereby becomes bound to the state to exercise those powers and the duties arising therefrom without negligence.

Conrad v. Ithaca, 16 N. Y. 158; Nelson v. Canisteo, 100 N. Y. 89; Cain v. Syracuse, 95 N. Y. 83.

And third parties may have their action for damages arising from neglect of defendant to perform those duties.

Robinson v. Chamberlain, 84 N. Y. 389, 90 Am. Dec. 718; Fulton Fire Ins. Co. v. Baldwin, 37 N. Y. 648; Johnson v. Belden, 47 N. Y. 130; Little v. Banks, 85 N. Y. 263.

The true rule for the government of this case is, that the wrongdoer is liable in every instance for the damages that he causes by his negligence.

Stock v. Boston, 149 Mass. 410; Ehrgott v. New York, 96 N. Y. 231, 43 Am. Rep. 622; Ring v. Cohoes, 77 N. Y. 83, 33 Am. Rep. 574.

The contention of the defendant that to hold a municipal corporation liable in a case like this might be disastrous financially, cannot be considered serious argument or entitled to have weight.

Belts v. Yonkers, 74 Hun, 75.

Gray, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The learned justice who spoke for the general term, in a very elaborate and interesting opinion, proceeded, very correctly, as I think, upon the assumption that the negligence charged against the defendant in the complaint related entirely to its waterworks system. In the view which we take of the matter, it is of comparatively little consequence whether the plaintiff bases its right of action upon negligence with respect to the fire department as such, or to the water department as such. But the fair reading of the complaint undoubtedly warrants the assumption of the learned justice at general term. If I correctly apprehend the reasoning which led the general term to the conclusion that there was a municipal liability upon an admission of the facts set forth in the complaint, it rests, in the main, upon two theories. In the first place, it is held that, by the voluntary assumption on the part of the defendant of the power conferred by statute to construct and maintain waterworks, it became responsible for the proper exercise of such power, and that such responsibility is necessarily demanded in the interest of an efficient public service, and the inhabitants, who have contributed to the maintenance of such a public work, have a right to hold the defendant to the exercise of reasonable care and diligence and to a liability for a failure to do so. In the next place it is held, while not deeming that the defendant had engaged in a private corporate business, conducted for its own benefit, and not for the general public, nevertheless that the defendant having agreed to erect and take charge of the public work and enterprise for the public within its boundaries, if there is a failure to exercise reasonable care and diligence in maintaining it, there has been a breach of an implied contract, for which, if injury results, an action will lie. Holding these views, the learned general term felt compelled, because of the admission by the defendant, through its demurrer, of the allegations of wrongful and neglectful conduct in relation to the maintenance of its waterworks, to hold that the plaintiff made out a good cause of action.

The proposition that such a liability rests upon a municipal corporation, as is asserted here, is somewhat startling, and I think the learned general term justices have misapprehended the nature of the responsibility which devolved upon the defendant in connection with its maintenance of a waterworks system, as well as the character of the power which it was authorized to exercise in relation thereto. I might remark, in the same spirit of criticism which was assumed by the learned justice at general term, that while the efficiency of the public service would be promoted by holding municipal corporations to the exercise of reasonable care and diligence in the performance of municipal duties, and to a liability for injury resulting from a failure in such exercise, the application of that doctrine to such a case as this might, and probably would, be highly disastrous to municipal governments. A little reflection will show that a multitude of actions would be encouraged, by fire insurance companies, as by individuals, and that cases have arisen, and may still arise, where an extensive conflagration might bankrupt the municipality, if it could be rendered liable for the damages or losses sustained. The distinction between the public and private powers conferred upon municipal corporations, although the line of demarcation at times may be difficult to ascertain, is generally clear enough. It has been frequently the subject of judicial discussion, and, among the numerous cases, it is sufficient to refer to

Bailey v. New York, 8 Hill, 581; Lloyd v. New York, 5 N. Y. 369, 55 Am. Dec. 347; and Maximilian v. New York, 62 N. Y. 160, 20 Am. Rep. 468. The opinion in Darlington v. New York, 81 N. Y. 164, 88 Am. Dec. 248, is also instructive upon the subject. When we find that the power conferred has relation to public purposes and is for the public good, it is to be classified as governmental in its nature, and it appertains to the corporation in its political character. But when it relates to the accomplishment of private corporate purposes, in which the public is only indirectly concerned, it is private in its nature and the municipal corporation, in respect to its exercise, is regarded as a legal individual. In the former case, the corporation is exempt from all liability, whether for nonuser or misuser; while in the latter case, it may be held to that degree of responsibility which would attach to an ordinary private corporation. Then the investiture of municipal corporations by the legislature with administrative powers may be of two kinds. It may confer powers, and enjoin their performance upon the corporation as a duty; or it may create new powers, to be exercised as governmental adjuncts, and make their assumption optional with the corporation. Where a duty specifically enjoined upon the corporation, as such, has been wholly neglected by its agents, and an injury to an individual arises in consequence of the neglect, the corporation will be held responsible. New York v. Purze, 8 Hill, 612, 619. So, in McCarthy v. Syracuse, 46 N. Y. 194, it was held that, where a duty of a ministerial character is imposed by law upon the corporation, a negligent omission to perform that duty creates a liability for damages sustained. Such responsibility, however, would not attach to the corporation where it has voluntarily assumed powers authorized by the legislature under some general provision respecting municipalities throughout the state, and permissive in their nature; and at this point I touch one of the theories upon which the general term decision seems to rest. In such a case—and I speak, of course, of legislative acts which are general in their nature and scope—the assumption by the municipal corporation is of a further function of self, or local, government, and such a power is discretionary in its exercise and carries with it no consequent liability for nonuser or misuser. In the legislature reside the power and force of government, confided to it by the people under constitutional restrictions. In the creation of municipal corporations, subordinate commonwealths are made, upon which certain limited and prescribed political powers are conferred and which enjoy the benefits of local self-government. People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 202. When, in addition to those general powers which are prescribed upon the creation of a municipal corporation, general statutes permit the assumption of further powers as a means of benefiting the portion of the public in the particular locality, they invest the corporation availing itself of the permission with just so much more governmental power. Just as the general powers deposited with the various municipalities are exercised by them in a quasi sovereign capacity, so would any added powers designed for the general public good, though optional with the corporation as to their assumption, and in their exercise and performance local, be exercised. They are not special, as being designed for and granted to a particular municipality; for they are applicable to every part of the body politic where municipal government exists. Such powers, in legal contemplation, appertain to the municipal corporation as such, and may be adopted as a part of the governmental system.

The acts under which the defendant was authorized to construct and maintain a system of waterworks constitute a general law applicable to all incorporated villages in the state. They impose no duty, and, when availed of, the task undertaken is discretionary in its character. The grant of power must be regarded as exclusively for public purposes, and as belonging to the municipal corporation, when assumed, in its public, political, or municipal character. In Bailey v. New York, 3 Hill, 531, to which reference is made in the opinion below, the city of New York, at a very early day, was authorized by special legislation to engage in the work of supplying its citizens with water and to acquire lands and water rights for the purpose, and as it is clear from the reading of the opinion of Chief Justice Nelson, the city was regarded in the light of any other private company, because of the special franchises conferred. Assuming that we could regard the doctrine of that case as authoritative at the present day, as to which there has been and might be some question (see Darlington v. New York, supra), the decision is inapplicable to the present case. In Hunt v. New York, 109 N. Y. 134, the case turned upon the performance by the city of the duty cast upon it to keep its streets in a safe condition for travel. In Cain v. Syracuse, 95 N. Y. 83, the discussion was as to the nature of the duty imposed upon the defendant by the power in its charter to pass ordinances, among other things, for the razing of buildings which had become dangerous by reason of fire. The failure of the common council to pass a resolution in respect to the building in question was not deemed to be a neglect of a duty. It was a discretionary matter. Nothing was decided in that case, which controls the decision of the present case, or which affects the discussion materially.

Nor can we assent to the view that the defendant sustains such an implied contractual relation to the public within its boundaries, with respect to the construction of this public work, as to be responsible for a failure to exercise reasonable care and diligence in respect to its maintenance. If the views which I have somewhat briefly expressed are correct, the defendant exercised a function which, like all governmental functions, was purely discretionary. What it undertook to do, when availing itself of the privilege of the general act, was to provide for the local convenience of its inhabitants.

The industry of the defendant's counsel has collated a great number of decisions, by the courts of other states, which indicate a very general view that the powers conferred by the law of the state upon its municipal corporations to establish waterworks and fire departments are, in their nature, legislative and governmental. From them I may select one or two. In Edgerty v. Concord, 63 N. H. 8, it was said by the court: "As a part of the governmental machinery of the state, municipal corporations legislate and provide for the customary local conveniences of the people, and in exercising these discretionary functions the corporations are not called upon to respond in damages to individuals either for omissions to act or for the mode of exercising powers conferred on them for public purposes and to be exercised at discretion for the public good. For injuries arising from the corporation's failure to exercise its public, legislative, and police powers, and for the manner of executing those powers, there is no remedy against the municipality, nor can an action be maintained for damages resulting from the failure of its officers to discharge properly and effectually their official duties." In Thintor v. Worcester, 123 Mass. 311, 25 Am. Rep. 90, it was said by the court: "The protection of all the buildings in a city or town from destruction or injury by fire is for the benefit of all the inhabitants and for their relief from a common danger; and cities and towns are therefore authorized by general laws to provide and maintain fire engines, etc., to supply water for the extinguishment of fires. . . . The city did not, by accepting the statute, and building its works under it, enter into any contract with, or assume any liability to, the owners of property to furnish means or water for the extinguishment of fires upon which an action can be maintained." In Mazmilian v. New York, 62 N. Y. 160, 20 Am. Rep. 468, the reasoning of the opinion permits a clear inference that this defendant did not, by accepting the provisions of the statutes, assume a duty of the kind which arises from the grant of a special power. Judge Folger uses this language, in his discussion of the two kinds of duties which are imposed upon a municipal corporation: "The former" (referring to the case of a grant of a special power) "is not held by the municipality as one of the political divisions of the state." Again he says: "Where the power is intrusted to it as one of the political divisions of the state, and is conferred, not for the immediate benefit of the municipality, but as a means to the exercise of the sovereign power for the benefit of all citizens, the corporation is not liable for nonuser nor for misuser by the public agents;" citing Eastman v. Meredith, 36 N. H. 284, 72 Am. Dec. 302.

This defendant, precisely, is intrusted with the power to maintain its waterworks, because it is one of the political subdivisions of the state to which the general act has reference in its general grant of power or privilege.

Nor does the fact that water rents are paid by the inhabitants of the defendant affect the question. This fact is made use of to show the private corporate character of the waterworks system, and the suggestion is that profit or benefits accrue to the defendant whereby the corporate undertaking is affected with a private interest. But that is an incorrect notion. The imposition of waterrents is but a mode of taxation, and a part of the general scheme for the purpose of raising revenue with which to carry on the work of government. If profits accrue over the expense of the maintenance of the system, they go to benefit the public by lessening the general burden of taxation.

The fallacy, as it seems to me, which affects the argument that the municipal corporation can be made liable for the nonuser or misuser of its power, consists in that it fails to appreciate the true nature of the function which the corporation performs. It adds to its political machinery for the purpose of benefitting and of protecting its inhabitants. There is nothing connected with the work which is not of a governmental and public nature. It is in no sense a private business, and the authority to construct the works was given to it by the legislature, not at its own particular instance or application, but because it was one of the political subdivisions of the state, and, as such, was entitled to exercise it. How could it justly be said that the maintenance of the waterworks system, any more than of a fire department, was a matter of private corporate interest? Is it not for all the inhabitants and for their good and protection? No interest was designed to be subserved other than that of adding to the powers of a community carrying on a local government. If that is true, the alternative is that, being for public purposes, and for the general welfare and protection, the defendant assumed a governmental function, and comes under the sanction of the rule which exempts government from suits by citizens. Further elaboration of the subject is quite possible, but the views expressed seem sufficient to justify the conclusion that the determination reached by the general term was erroneous.

The order and judgment appealed from should be reversed, and the judgment entered at the special term should be affirmed, with costs.

All concur; Bartlett, J., upon grounds stated in the opinion, and also upon the further ground that this court decided the principle here involved in Hughes v. Monroe County, 147 N. Y. 49.

WASHINGTON SUPREME COURT.

Henry P. ISAACS, Resp't.,
v.

George H. BARBER, App'l.

(10 Wash. 124.)

1. Judicial notice will be taken by the supreme court of Washington that at least that portion of the state east of the Cascade mountains was included within the territory where the customary law of miners was in force.

2. The right of prior appropriation of waters existed as part of the laws and customs of that portion of the state of Washington east of the Cascade mountains, prior to the act of Congress on that subject.

3. The right of prior appropriation of waters according to the customary law of NOTE.—Right of prior appropriation of water.

- I. Right at common law.
- II. Right under special statutes or customs.
 - a. Mill acts.
 - b. Customs.
 1. General doctrine in mining states.
 2. Source of right of appropriation.
 3. Against whom available.
 4. Extent and limitation of right.
 5. For what purpose appropriation permissible.
 6. Who may be an appropriator.
 7. What is an appropriation and when complete.
 8. Determination of priority.
 9. Interference with and protection of right.
 10. Second appropriation.
 11. Riparian rights.
 12. Statutes affecting.
 13. Transmission of right.
 - c. Act of Congress of 1886.
 - d. Statutes abolishing riparian rights.

I. Right at common law.

There was a strong tendency on the part of some of the judges in earlier times to recognize a right to obtain title to water by prior appropriation or occupancy, and at one time it seemed as though that doctrine would be established, but the later cases have all, with possibly one exception, been the other way, so that now no such right is recognized. In the earlier cases the following decisions and dicta appear:

Where the owner of a mill gave the proprietor above a license to draw water from the stream, and subsequently directed him to cease doing so, and brought an action for his refusal to cease, the court held that the action could not be maintained because the right to the water had been abandoned, but in the course of the opinion the court says, by the law of England the person who first appropriates any part of the water flowing through his land to his own use has the right to the use of so much as he appropriates against any other. Liggins v. Inge, 7 Bing. 682, 5 Moore & P. 712.

In Williams v. Morland, 3 Barn. & C. 913, 4 Dowl. & R. 583, the action was for injuring plaintiff's banks by the manner in which the water was caused to flow past them, but the jury found that the banks were not injured and the court held that therefore the action was not sustained. But Bayley, J., said: "Flowing water is originally publici juris. So soon as it is appropriated by an individual, his right is coextensive with the beneficial use to which he appropriates it. Subject to that right all the rest of the water remains publici juris. The party who obtains a right to the exclusive enjoyment of the water does so in derogation of the primitive right of the public. Now if this be the mining regions was not created but merely recognized by the act of Congress of 1866.

4. A grant of government lands is subject to a prior appropriation of waters made according to the customary law of the locality, although the act of Congress on the subject had not then been passed.

5. The operation of a flouring mill is one of the purposes for which water can be appropriated under the customary law of mining regions, adopted by the act of Congress of 1866.

(Stiles, J., dissents from proposition 5.)

(November 17, 1894.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Walla Walla County in favor of plaintiff in an action true character of the right to water, a party complaining of the breach of such a right ought to show that he is prevented from having water which he has acquired a right to use for some beneficial purpose."

In Canham v. Fisk, 2 Crompt. & J. 126, 2 Tyrw. 155, it was held that if land with water running through it is granted, the grantee acquires a right to the water which the grantor holding the upper tenement cannot cut off. But Bayley, J., said, if a man find water running through his land, he may appropriate it and thus acquire a title to the water.

In an action for injury caused by backing water onto plaintiff's mill-wheel Holroyd, J., discussed the question as though it was governed by the rule of prior appropriation, saying the defendant had no right to use the water after the erection of plaintiff's mill in a different manner than it had been accustomed to be used before; for at all events by that act the plaintiff appropriated to himself the water flowing in that particular way. Saunders v. Newman, 1 Barn. & Ald. 258.

But in some of those early cases rulings which are apparently in favor of the doctrine of appropriation are in fact merely in favor of protecting what is now known as riparian rights.

Thus, in Rutland v. Bowler, Palmer, 230, it was held that the owner of a mill could sue for diverting the stream from its ancient course although his mill in connection with which he used the water was new.

So, in Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 208, 2 Smith, 321, where, after a lower proprietor had appropriated the surplus of the water left by prior mill owners, the latter undertook to enlarge their works so as to take more of the water to the detriment of the lower proprietor, Le Blanc, J., said: "The true rule is that after the erection of works and the appropriation by the owner of the land of a certain quantity of the water flowing over it, if a proprietor of other land afterward takes what remains of the water before unappropriated, the first-mentioned owner, however he might before such second appropriation have taken to himself so much more, cannot do it afterwards." And at the argument the case of Prescott v. Phillips (1798) was cited to the effect that nothing short of twenty years' undisturbed possession of water diverted from the natural channel or raised by a weir would give a person an adverse right against those whose land lay lower down the stream and to whom it was injurious.

So, if a riparian proprietor has appropriated the water to a beneficial use, he may recover damages for injuries inflicted upon him in respect to such use. Holker v. Porritt, L. R. 10 Exch. 50, 44 L. J. Exch. 52, 33 L. T. N. S. 125, 23 Week. Rep. 400, 30 L. R. A.

brought to enjoin defendant from interfering with a dam which raised a water power for the propelling of complainant's mill. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas H. Brents, Wallington Clark, and M. M. Godman, for appellant.

From the very nature of the right derivable from prior appropriation it is limited to such portion or quantity as may have been actually taken while the riparian lands were public lands of the United States and before the rights of others had attached to them, and appropriated to a useful purpose, and exists no longer than while this water is needfully, unwastefully and beneficially applied.

Perego v. McKinnick, 79 Cal. 573; Atchison v. Peterson, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 514, 22 L. ed.

In Frankum v. Earl Falmouth, 6 Car. & P. 523, in which the plaintiff claimed the water right as the owner of the mill, the court said if water has been accustomed to flow along a channel from time immemorial, and it has been unappropriated, the first owner of land on both sides of it who appropriates it without doing injury to any one either above or below him acquires such a right by his appropriation that while he may not have enjoyed his appropriation for twenty years he may maintain an action against any owner of the lands above him who wrongfully diverts the water from its ancient channel. But in that case it was held that the plaintiff should have claimed the right in respect of the land, and not in respect of his mill. It will be observed that the doctrine is merely that of riparian rights.

The present English doctrine.

When the question came squarely before the court for decision, however, the doctrine of prior appropriation was repudiated.

In Mason v. Hill, 5 Barn. & Ad. 1, 2 Nev. & M. 747 (1838), defendant contended that the right to flowing water was publici juris, and that the first person who can get possession of the stream and apply it to a useful purpose has a good title to it against all the world including the proprietor of the land below; there is no right of action against him unless such proprietor has already applied the stream to some useful purpose also with which the diversion interferes; and in the default of his having done so, may altogether deprive him of the benefit of the water. The court said the position that the first occupant of running water for a beneficial purpose has a good title to it is perfectly true in this sense, that neither the owner of the land below can pen back the water, nor the owner of the land above divert it to his prejudice. But it is a very different question whether he can take away from the owner of the land below one of its natural advantages which is capable of being applied to profitable purposes, and deprive him of it altogether by intercepting him in its application to a useful purpose. The Roman law considered running water, not as a bonum vacans in which any one might acquire a property, but as public or common in this sense only that all might drink it or apply it to the necessary purposes of supporting life, and that no one has any property in the water itself except in that portion which he might have abstracted from the stream and of which he had the possession; and during the time of such possession only. The court adds: "We think no other interpretation ought to be put upon the passage in Blackstone, and that the dicta in which water is said to be publici juris are not to be understood in any other sense." And the conclusion is 416; Huston v. Bybee, 17 Or. 140, 2 L. R. A. 568; Barrous v. Fox, 98 Cal. 63; Davis v. Gale, 32 Cal. 26, 91 Am. Dec. 554.

After the rights of others have attached, the appropriator cannot enlarge his ditch or dam and thus increase his original appropriation.

Nevada Water Co. v. Powell, 34 Cal. 118, 91 Am. Dec. 686; Loddell v. Simpson, 2 Nev. 278, 90 Am. Dec. 587; Higgins v. Barker, 42 Cal. 285; Kelly v. Natoma Water Co. 6 Cal. 108.

No pretense is made in the case at bar of the existence, at any time, of any such local law or custom as is recognized by the act of 1866. None is pleaded; none is proved; none is found by either referee or court; and in the absence of such pleading and proof the court must apply the common law, which had been expressly adopted by our legislature and which gave no such right, as the only rule of decision governing the case.

Luz v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 387; Esmond v. Chew, 15 Cal. 137; Lewis v. McClure, 8 Or. 273; Titchcomb v. Kirk, 51 Cal. 238; Atchison v. Peterson, 87 U. S. 20 Wall 511, 23 L. ed. 415; Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 458, 25 L. ed. 241; Broder v. Natoma Water & M. Co. 101 U. S. 274, 25 L. ed. 790; Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 552, 33 L. ed. 765; Heath v. Williams, 25 Me. 209, 43 Am. Dec. 265.

The issuance of the government's patent to Artemus Dodge on April 1, 1865, and before the passage of the act for the recognition and preservation of these dormant rights, carried the title to the land, with the riparian right to that the plaintiff is entitled to recover in respect of the abstraction of the water by the defendant for the use of the mill for which it had been appropriated before it had been put to use by plaintiff. And the same result had been reached upon the motion for a new trial in the same case. Mason v. Hill, 8 Barn. & Ad. 304.

In Wood v. Waud, 3 Exch. 748, 18 L. J. Exch. 306, 13 Jur. 472, the court says that the principles which regulate the law as to natural streams were placed on their right footing in Mason v. Hill, supra.

Flowing water is publici juris, not in the sense that it is bonum vacans to which the first occupant can acquire an exclusive right, but that it is public and common in this sense only that all may reasonably use it who have a right of access to it; that none can have any property in the water itself except in the particular portion which he may choose to abstract from the stream and take into his possession; and that during the time of his possession only. Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 355, 30 L. J. Exch. 412, 15 Jur. 633. And the same statement is repeated in Chasemere v. Richards, 2 Hurist. & N. 106.

In Sampson v. Hoddinott, 1 C. B. N. S. 611, 26 L. J. C. P. 148, 8 Jur. N. S. 243 (1837), it is said, all persons on the margin of a flowing stream have by nature certain rights to use the water of the stream whether they exercise these rights or not, and they may begin to exercise them whenever they will. By usage they may acquire the right to use the water in a manner not justified by their natural rights; but such acquired right has no operation against the natural rights of the land owner higher up the stream unless the usage by which it was acquired affected the use which he himself made of the stream, or his power to use it so as to raise the presumption of a grant and to render the tenements above a servient tenement.

No proprietor can have a right to use the water to the prejudice of other proprietors. Wright v. Howard, 1 Sim. & Stu. 190.

The American doctrine.

The doctrine finally adopted in England has been generally adhered to in this country.

Priority of occupancy of the flowing water of the river creates no right unless the appropriation be for a period which the law deems a presumption of right. Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 397.

The mere erection of a dam and mill does not, apart from the length of the occupation, give exclusive right which will enable the owner to maintain an action against a person erecting a mill higher up, which results in diverting the water in part from his mill. Platt v. Johnson, 15 Johns. 213, 8 Am. Dec. 223.

And the principle of that case was followed in Merritt v. Brinkerhoff, 17 Johns. 319, 8 Am. Dec. 30 L. R. A.

404; Palmer v. Mulligan, 3 Cal. 307, 2 Am. Dec. 270; Thomas v. Brackney, 17 Barb. 654.

One who erects a mill or dam upon a stream does not by mere priority of occupation acquire such exclusive right to the stream as to enable him to maintain an action against a person erecting a mill and dam above, by which the water is partly diverted and he is thereby injured. Hoy v. Sterrett, 2 Watts, 327, 27 Am. Dec. 313; Hartsall v. Sill, 12 Pa. 243; Whaler v. Ahl, 29 Pa. 98.

An upper riparian proprietor cannot divert water from a stream for manufacturing purposes without restoring it to the stream if the result is to damage a lower proprietor. Weiss v. Oregon Iron & S. Co. 13 Or. 496.

The priority of a particular new application or artificial use of water does not create a right to that use. Pugh v. Wheeler, 2 Dev. & B. L. 55.

Twenty years' adverse possession of a diverted watercourse is indispensably necessary to defeat the rights of the owner of the ancient channel. Campbell v. Smith, 8 N. J. L. 172, 14 Am. Dec. 400.

In the absence of the statute no right will be acquired by the erection of a dam. Bearse v. Perry, 117 Mass. 211.

As between riparian proprietors, priority of appropriation of the water of a running stream which is common to all for the driving of machinery gives one no superior right unless it has been continued for such a length of time and under such circumstances as would be required to establish rights by prescription. Dumont v. Kellogg, 29 Mich. 420, 18 Am. Rep. 102.

Priority of use of the water of a stream by a riparian proprietor gives him no exclusive right. Bliss v. Kennedy, 43 Ill. 67.

A settler on public land by erecting a mill thereon acquires no right to flow water back on other public land without an express grant of the right from the government. Wilcoxon v. McGhee, 13 Ill. 381.

In Evans v. Merriweather, 4 Ill. 492, 38 Am. Dec. 107, the court quotes with approval the doctrine of Tyler v. Wilkinson, supra, that mere priority of appropriation of running water without consent or grant confers no exclusive right.

The first appropriation of a mill site gives no right to flow the land of a neighbor, whether he has a mill or not. Stout v. McAdams, 3 Ill. 67, 38 Am. Dec. 441.

One riparian owner cannot appropriate a specific portion of the water of a stream to his own use to the exclusion of those below him. Plumleigh v. Dawson, 6 Ill. 544, 41 Am. Dec. 190.

Priority of appropriation of the water of a stream confers no exclusive right to the use of it. Heath v. Williams, 25 Me. 209, 43 Am. Dec. 265.

If two persons own land where there is but one mill privilege neither can acquire an absolute right the water as an incident thereto, and effectually cut off all supposed counter rights.

Union Mill & M. Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. 176; Union Mill & M. Co. v. Dangberg, Id. 450; Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249; Luz v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 389; Sturr v. Beck, 188 U. S. 551, 33 L. ed. 765; Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 460, 25 L. ed. 243.

Messrs. B. L. Sharpstein, J. L. Sharpstein, and D. J. Crowley, for respondent:

The right of appropriation existed before the passage of the act of Congress of 1866, and was a valid subsisting right recognized by the courts and customs, and respondent's appropriation having been had before the issuance of the patent, it could not be thereby cut off. The act of Congress was a recognition of a pre-existing right.

to the water by the prior erection of a mill. Bailey v. Rust, 15 Me. 440.

Running water is not susceptible of an appropriation which will justify the diversion or unreasonable detention of it. Blanchard v. Baker, 8 Me. 253, 23 Am. Dec. 504.

Prior appropriation for a mill will not give the proprietor a right to throw the water back on an upper proprietor. Hendrick v. Cook, 4 Ga. 241.

Prior appropriation of the water in a stream for the use of the mill will not give the owner a right to have the water of the stream flow in a particular way. Keeney & Wood Mfg. Co. v. Union Mfg. Co. 39 Conn. 578; Parker v. Hotchkiss, 25 Conn. 321.

No riparian proprietor has a right to use the water to the prejudice of other proprietors above or below him, unless he has acquired the right to use the water in some peculiar manner and differently from what he would be entitled to do as a mere riparian owner, which he may do by an uninterrupted enjoyment for such a length of time as would afford a conclusive presumption of a grant. Wadsworth v. Tillotson, 15 Conn. 366, 36 Am. Dec. 391.

But the right may be acquired by a use long enough to raise the presumption of a grant. Williams v. Wadsworth, 51 Conn. 277.

To gain a right to the use of water in a stream which shall discommode a riparian owner the use must be continued long enough to presume a grant. Buddington v. Bradley, 10 Conn. 213, 26 Am. Dec. 386.

Prior occupation of water for a period less than that required to presume a grant does not affect the rights of other proprietors on the same stream. King v. Tiffany, 9 Conn. 102.

A right to the special use of the water, as to run a mill, may be acquired by enjoyment of it for a period long enough to presume a grant so that the right cannot be interfered with by other proprietors on the stream either above or below. Ingraham v. Hutchinson, 2 Conn. 592.

In Webb v. Portland Mfg. Co. 3 Sumn. 189, the court quotes with apparent approval language from another case that running water is not susceptible to any appropriation which will justify the diversion or unreasonable detention of it.

No riparian proprietor has any property in the water, for, like the air, it cannot be appropriated as the exclusive property of any one; but each of them may simply use it while it passes along. Rhodes v. Whitehead, 27 Tex. 310, 84 Am. Dec. 631; Fleming v. Davis, 37 Tex. 173.

The prior occupancy of a mill site does not give the owner a right to control the flow of water to his mill as against one afterwards erecting a mill higher up the stream. Martin v. Bigelow, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 184, 16 Am. Dec. 606; Davis v. Fuller, 12 Vt. 178, 36 Am. Dec. 324.

30 L. R. A.

Basey v. Gallagher, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 670, 22 L. ed. 452; Broder v. Natoma Water & M. Co. 101 U. S. 276, 25 L. ed. 791; Aitchison v. Peterson, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 507, 22 L. ed. 414; Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 313; Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 453, 25 L. ed. 240; Hindman v. Risor, 21 Or. 112; Olmsted v. Loomis, 9 N. Y. 423; Barnes v. Sabron, 10 Nev. 217; Kirk v. Bartholomew, 3 Idaho, 1085; Jones v. Adams, 19 Nev. 78; Pom. Riparian Rights, §§ 107-109; Coffin v. Left Hand Ditch Co. 6 Colo. 443.

Hoyt, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought by respondent to restrain the defendant from interfering with a dam which had been erected for the purpose of diverting water from Mill creek into a race

In Merrifield v. Lombard, 13 Allen, 16, 90 Am. Dec. 172, it appeared that the upper proprietor on a stream was making such use of the stream as to foul the water and make it corrode plaintiff's machinery when he attempted to use it in his mill; the court said: "We know of no rule or principle of law by which such a mode of appropriation of a running stream, in the absence of any proof, of a paramount right or title, can be justified or excused as against a riparian owner of land on the same stream below."

Prior occupation gives no right. Gilman v. Tilton, 5 N. H. 231; Odioune v. Lyford, 9 N. H. 502, 33 Am. Dec. 397; Cowles v. Kidder, 24 N. H. 374, 57 Am. Dec. 287; Norway Plains Co. v. Bradley, 62 N. H. 84. But so long as there is no larger appropriation of water running through the land than a just and reasonable use, it cannot be said to be wrongful or injurious to a proprietor lower down. Elliot v. Fitchburg R. Co. 10 Cush. 191, 57 Am. Dec. 85.

As to the right of prior appropriation, that has regard to the quantum of water withdrawn from the stream common to all parties, and not to the quantum of flow. McAlmont v. Whitaker, 3 Hawle, 84, 23 Am. Dec. 102.

In Strickler v. Todd, 10 Serg. & R. 63, 13 Am. Dec. 649, the judge writing the opinion states that the doctrine of prior appropriation ought to be adopted in favor of the owners of mills.

And in a Kentucky case that doctrine seems to have been adopted contrary to all the other modern authority on the subject.

In Tye v. Catching, 78 Ky. 463, it seems to be decided without any discussion of the question that the right to use a stream for mill purposes can be acquired by occupancy, and that when once acquired a subsequent locator of a mill must take the stream as he finds it. For this doctrine, Angell, Watercourses, sections 180 and 360 are cited; but section 360 treats of special grants and reservations, and section 180 states the old doctrine of the common law, while the author goes on in the subsequent sections to state the doctrine of the later English and American cases to the contrary.

II. Right under special statutes or customs.

a. Mill acts.

There are some cases from Maine and Massachusetts which have sometimes been regarded as favoring the right of prior appropriation. But they were decided under mill acts and have no force except as interpreting the language of and rights acquired under such acts.

Thus, by statute in Maine no dam shall be erected to the injury of any mill lawfully existing either above or below it on the same stream. Thomas v. Hill, 81 Me. 252; Wentworth v. Poor, 86 Me. 243; Lincoln v. Chadbourne, 56 Me. 197.

And by appropriating the water of a stream to or flume which led to his flouring mill. Defendant justified his action under a claim of the right to have the waters flow past his place, situated on said creek, between the point where the water was diverted and respondent's mill. Respondent claimed the right to divert the water, and founded such claim upon several distinct grounds. The cause was tried before a referee, who reported the testimony, with his findings of fact and law. Such findings were set aside by the superior court, and new ones made as the foundation for the decree which was entered. Defendant, not being satisfied with such decree, prosecutes this appeal, and asks for a reversal, for the reason that the findings of fact were not warranted by the proofs, and also because the facts found did not warrant the conclusions of law founded thereon. We have carefully examined all the proofs, and although upon some points they are not as full as they should have been, we are not satisfied that they were insufficient to warrant every finding of fact made by the lower court. It follows that such findings must stand, and that, in the light thereof, the rights of the parties must be here determined.

It appears from such findings that the waters of Mill creek were, in the year 1861, diverted by plaintiff into his mill race, and conducted to his mill for use as a propelling power, to substantially the same extent as they are now diverted, conducted, and used. It, however, appears therefrom that there had been a slight increase in the amount of water diverted at certain seasons of the year and upon the fact of such increase that portion of the decree in the use of a mill by constructing a milldam the owner may acquire a right to be protected although the water is not actually used for that purpose but merely held for that use when it suits the owner's convenience to so apply it. Butman v. Hussey, 12 Me. 407.

So, the Massachusetts statute provides that no dam shall be erected to the injury of another mill lawfully existing either above or below it on the same stream. Smith v. Agawam Canal Co. 2 Allen, 355.

The owner of a mill site who first occupies it by erecting a dam and mill will have a right to water sufficient to work his wheels if the privilege will afford it, notwithstanding he may by his occupation render useless the privilege of any one above or below him upon the same stream. Hatch v. Dwight, 17 Mass. 296, 9 Am. Dec. 146; Cary v. Daniels, 8 Met. 476, 41 Am. Dec. 532; Whitney v. Eames, 11 Met. 519; Fuller v. Chicopee Mfg. Co. 16 Gray, 44; Pratt v. Lamsom, 2 Allen, 286; Lowell v. Boston, 111 Mass. 465, 15 Am. Rep. 99.

When one proprietor upon the banks of a river has in fact appropriated the water the proprietor below is in so far restricted in his right to appropriate that he cannot erect a mill on his own land to flow back the water to the destruction of the mill already erected by authority of law. This priority of possession necessarily arises from the nature of the appropriation. When two men have equal right to appropriate, and where the actual appropriation of one necessarily excludes all others, the first in time is the first in right. But the mere erection of a mill will not prevent other persons from erecting their mills above on the stream and running them in the natural way, although the result will be that the water does not come down the stream in its ancient manner and cannot be so successfully utilized by the lower owner as it was before. Gould v. Boston Duck Co. 18 Gray, 442.

In Storm v. Manchaug Co. 18 Allen, 10, the court in considering the right of an upper proprietor to dig a ditch on his own land to prevent the flooding of it by a dam of a lower proprietor in process of erection said the priority of right secured by a priority of occupation has always been determined by the express language of the statute. Before the Revised statutes, if an upper proprietor was building a mill he was held to have so far appropriated the water privilege that the lower proprietors could not erect a new dam or raise an old one to his injury. Bigelow v. Newell, 10 Pick. 348. By a slight and perhaps unintentional change of phraseology introduced into those statutes, it was held that the law was changed and nothing but an existing mill could prevent a lower proprietor from putting a milldam upon his own land, although the effect of it might be to destroy an upper privilege which its owner had previously begun to occupy. Baird v. Wells, 22 Pick. 312.

The erection of a milldam will not prevent the upper owner from erecting a dam on his own land for the purpose of a fish pond although the effect will be to prevent the milldam from flowing the water onto the land of the upper proprietor. Wood v. Edea, 2 Allen, 573.

b. Customs.

1. General doctrine in mining states.

In the western section of the United States, where search for precious metals was one of the chief industries of the early settlers, the common-law abandonment of the doctrine of appropriation of water was not followed.

In Atchison v. Peterson, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 507, 22 L. ed. 414, it is said that by the custom which has obtained among miners in the Pacific states and territories where mining for the precious metals is done on the public lands of the United States, the first appropriator of waters in the streams on such lands for mining purposes is held to have a better right than others to use the waters. The first appropriator who subjects the property to use or takes the necessary steps for that purpose is regarded, except as against the government, as the source of title in all controversies relating to the property. As respects the use of water for mining purposes, the doctrines of the common law declaratory of the rights of riparian owners were, at an early day after the discovery of gold, found to be inapplicable or applicable in a very limited extent to the necessities of miners, and inadequate to their protection. The government being the sole proprietor of all the public lands whether bordering on streams or otherwise, there was no occasion for the application of the common-law doctrine of riparian proprietorship with respect to the waters of those streams. The doctrine of right of prior appropriation was recognized by legislation of Congress in 1866.

And the general rule there has been to recognize and protect rights in water acquired by prior appropriation. Stein Canal Co. v. Kern Island Irrigation Canal Co. 59 Cal. 583; Frey v. Lowden, 70 Cal. 550; Wixson v. Devine, 67 Cal. 841, 80 Cal. 385; Watterson v. Raldunbehere, 101 Cal. 107; Wells v. Mantes, 99 Cal. 583; Nephi Irrigation Co. v. Jenkins, 8 Utah, 369; Farmers' Independent Ditch Co. v. Agricultural Ditch Co. 3 Colo. App. 255; People v. Downer, 19 Colo. 585; Geertson v. Barraok, 2 Idaho, 1066; Kirk v. Bartholomew, Id. 1067; Fabian v. Collins, 2 Mont. 510; Wold v. May, 10 Wash. 157.

2. Source of right of appropriation.

The only source of this right of appropriation seems to be in the fact that the settlers themselves who went into those states asserted and acquiesced favor of the appellant is largely based. We are not satisfied that the fact of such increase was established by the proofs, but, the plaintiff not having appealed, we are not called upon to investigate as to that portion of the decree adverse to him. It further appears from the findings that, at the time the water was so diverted by the plaintiff, all of the land, on both sides of the creek, from the place of its diversion to a point below the land owned by the defendant, was a part of the public domain, and that it so remained until 1863, at which time the tract of which defendant's land is a portion was entered and purchased at private cash sale by one Artemus Dodge, who, in 1865, received a patent therefor. It further appears that said Dodge, prior to such entry, gave the plaintiff oral permission to conduct the water across the tract of land, and that George J. Dodge, to whom he deeded it, executed to plaintiff a written instrument, in the shape of a lease, formally conferring the right to so conduct the water by means of the race and flume as then constructed for the period of ninety-nine years; that the operation of the mill, and the source of its power, and the means by which it was diverted from and conducted to the mill were open and notorious, and known to every one in the vicinity, including said Artemus Dodge and those holding under him, including the defendant; and that no complaint was ever made in reference thereto until the year 1895. Upon these material facts, among others, found by the court, respondent contends that, as between himself and the defendant, he is entitled to the use of the water for the purpose of propelling his mill to the extent to which he had used it from the time of its original diversion. He makes this contention for the reasons: First, in it so that from the custom which began in that way it came to be recognized as law.

The fact early manifested itself that the mines could not be successfully worked without a proprietorship in waters, and it was recognized and maintained. To protect those who by their enterprise, industry, and capital had constructed canals and races, carried water for miles into parts of the country which must have otherwise remained unfruitful and undeveloped it was held that the first appropriator acquired a special property in the waters thus appropriated and as a necessary consequence of such property might invoke all local remedies for its enjoyment or defense. Hoffman v. Stone, 7 Cal. 46.

By a universal sense of propriety and necessity there is a right of miners to be protected in the possession of their selected localities, and of those who by prior appropriation have taken the waters from their natural beds and by creating artificial works have conducted them for miles over mountains and ravines to supply the necessities of gold diggers and without which the most important interests of the mineral region would remain without development. Irwin v. Phillips, 5 Cal. 140, 63 Am. Dec. 118.

For eighteen years from 1848 to 1866, the regulations and customs of miners as enforced and molded by the courts and sanctioned by the legislation of the states, constituted the law governing property in mines and the water on the public mineral lands. Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 453, 25 L. ed. 240.

In determining controversies between claimants the court proceeds upon the presumption of a grant from the government to the first appropriator. Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 567.

In Hill v. Newman, 5 Cal. 445, 63 Am. Dec. 140, it is stated that the right to water existed upon the ground of prior location upon the land or prior appropriation and use of the water.

In Conner v. Weaver, 8 Cal. 543, 65 Am. Dec. 528, the court says that in the decisions that it had made upon the subject of private rights in the public domain it had applied simply to principles of the common law. It states that it has recognized the right of individuals to appropriate water, to divert it from its natural channel where no riparian rights intervened, and to be protected in its use against all subsequent efforts to divert or injure it.

In Schilling v. Rominger, 4 Colo. 100, the court said: "That the first appropriator of the water of a natural stream has a prior right to such water to the extent of the appropriation is a doctrine that we must hold applicable in all cases respecting the diversion of water for the purpose of irrigation."

80 L. R. A.

Statutes recognizing right.

In most of the states in which the custom obtained, statutes were passed recognizing and regulating the right.

The Texas statute provides for the appropriation of unappropriated water in streams in the arid portions of the state for irrigation purposes. McGhee Irrigating Ditch Co. v. Hudson (Tex.) 21 S. W. 175.

But this law cannot operate on the right of riparian proprietors then existing but is intended to operate only on land of which the state had the title. McGhee Irrigating Ditch Co. v. Hudson, 85 Tex. 587.

2. Against whom available.

The doctrine of riparian rights is founded upon the individual rights of landed proprietors upon the stream. Irwin v. Phillips, 5 Cal. 140, 63 Am. Dec. 118.

So, where the title to all the land was in the government, and there were no individual proprietors, there was no reason to prevent the adoption of some other system if the government agreed to permit it. But when the government granted rights to individuals in land formerly belonging to it, the question immediately arose whether such grantees obtained all the common-law riparian rights in streams flowing through the property or whether they took subject to the rights of those whom the government had permitted to appropriate water rights upon its domain. This question has led to some difference of opinion and cannot be regarded as fully settled yet in all its branches, except in states where the doctrine of riparian rights is not recognized it is settled that an appropriation of water is not good against prior riparian rights.

The right to mine cannot override the right of one who has previously appropriated the water to a stated individual use. Tartar v. Spring Creek Water & M. Co. 5 Cal. 397.

There was a subsequent decision holding that the rights of one who has taken up public land for agricultural purposes must give way, under the California statutes, to the rights of miners. Clark v. Duval, 15 Cal. 86.

But this was not applied to water rights.

In Wixon v. Bear River & A. Water Co. 24 Cal. 367, 85 Am. Dec. 69, the controversy was between the owner of an orchard which had been planted on the banks of a stream and one claiming the water for mining purposes, and the court held that the miner must use the water so as not to injure the orchard, saying the requested instructions are founded upon the theory that in the mineral districts of the state the rights of miners and persons that he is the owner of the water for the purpose of running his mill by reason of his prior appropriation thereof; second, that the grantors of the land, by the giving of the permission to construct the flume, and the making of the lease, as above stated, and by standing by and seeing money expended by virtue of such permission and lease, estopped themselves, and those holding under them, from interfering with such flume, or the diversion of the water to effect which it was constructed; and, third, that there had been such open, continuous, and adverse user as to give title by prescription. The first claim is met by the appellant by two principal propositions: One, that it was not shown that any right to prior appropriation existed as a part of the law or local customs of the locality; the other, that if the court could take judicial notice of the existence of such customs, or so find from the facts proved, they had no force as against the defendant, for the reason that the grantor through whom he claims by mesne conveyance acquired title to the land by grant from the government prior to the passage of the act of Congress of July 26, 1866.

If the first proposition is determined adversely to appellant, he substantially concedes that the plaintiff would have been entitled to the use of the water appropriated in 1861 if the grant of the land of which his was a part had not been made by the government until after the passage of said act. Each of these propositions raises questions of the utmost importance, and we have given them such careful consideration as our opportunities would allow, and have come to the conclusion that this state, or at least that portion of it east of the Cascade mountains, was included within the territory where the right to prior appro-owning ditches constructed for mining purposes are paramount to all other rights and interests of a different character regardless of the time or modes of other acquisitions; thus annihilating the doctrine of priority in all cases where the controversy is between the miner or ditch owner and one who claims the exercise of any other kind of right or the ownership of any other kind of industry. To such a doctrine we are unable to subscribe.

And in Rupley v. Welch, 23 Cal. 458, where a person had constructed a reservoir to hold the water flowing down a ravine for the purpose of procuring water to irrigate his garden, the court held that this water could not be subsequently taken for mining purposes.

An appropriator cannot acquire a right to any use of the waters of a stream to the prejudice of a riparian owner except under the statute of limitations. Vernon Irrigation Co. v. Los Angeles, 108 Cal. 237.

Where no riparian rights have attached, it is equally well settled that an appropriator of water acquires a good title which he can defend against riparian rights which are subsequently acquired.

Where the stream is subject only to the rights of the government the first appropriator acquires a title to all the water he appropriates and uses as against all even subsequent grantees from the government. Kaler v. Campbell, 18 Or. 598.

The right to running water on the public lands of the United States can be acquired by prior appropriation as against persons not having the title of the government. Bassey v. Gallagher, 37 U. S. 20 Wall. 678, 22 L. ed. 452.

The appropriator acquires a right against all persons excepting previous appropriators. Himes v. Johnson, 61 Cal. 259.

The owner of a canal in the mineral region on the public domain constructed for the purpose of supplying water to miners has the right to divert the water of a stream from its natural channel as against the claims of those who, subsequent to the diversion, take up land upon the banks of the stream for mining purposes. Irwin v. Phillips, 5 Cal. 140, 63 Am. Dec. 118.

The person first appropriating water on the public land is deemed to have the title as against all the world except the United States and persons claiming under them, to the extent that he thus appropriates it before the rights of others attach. Yankee Jim's Union Water Co. v. Crary, 25 Cal. 504, 85 Am. Dec. 145 (1864); American Co. v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 280.

The right of the appropriator is entitled to protection as well after the patent has issued to a third person for the land over which the natural stream flows as when such land is a part of the public domain; and it is immaterial whether or not it is mentioned in the patent and expressly excluded from the grant. Coffin v. Left Hand Ditch Co. 6 Colo. 448.

A prior appropriator of the water of a stream all of which he claims, uses, and needs for irrigation, has a right to the whole as against a patentee of land through which the stream flows, though no custom to that effect is shown. Drake v. Earhart, 2 Idaho, 716.

One who obtains title from the government cannot insist on his riparian rights as against the title of one who acquired a right to appropriate the water under a custom to which he agreed. Thorpe v. Tenem Ditch Co. 1 Wash. 566.

In Pope v. Kinman, 54 Cal. 3, plaintiffs were owners of a Mexican grant patented in 1872. Defendants and their predecessors appropriated all the water of a creek flowing through it in 1856, and had used the water exclusively ever since and claimed the right to exclusive use to the water; the action was to quiet plaintiff's title against this claim. The court says the patent issued in June, 1872, and the action was commenced in May, 1877, and therefore the defendants can claim nothing as against the owners of the ranch by reason of the lapse of time since their alleged appropriation of the water. Of course the presumption is that plaintiffs had been in possession of the ranch since the grant from the Mexican government, and therefore in order to obtain title by appropriation it must have been under such circumstances that the title would be protected by the statute of limitations.

If the right to appropriate water on the public land is claimed and exercised until the statutory period of limitations has run, the right cannot be disturbed by one succeeding to the rights of the government. Tolman v. Casey, 15 Or. 83.

The effect of a government patent upon the rights of a prior appropriator has been a question of some difficulty, but since the passage of the acts of Congress of 1866 and 1870, that question must be considered as settled by legislation the construction of which will be found infra, c. Act of Congress of 1866.

In Thorp v. Freed, 1 Mont. 651, the court was divided in opinion as to the right to gain title to water by appropriation for irrigation purposes as against persons who subsequently become riparian owners of the land under grant from the government.

In Nevada it was first held that the right of an appropriator is subordinate to that of a subsequent patentee from the government in cases where the patent was issued prior to the act of 1866. Van Sickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249.

priation of water for mining and other beneficial purposes was recognized by the courts and the lawmaking power, and that such right was established by a custom so universal that courts must take judicial notice thereof. We therefore hold that the right to prior appropriation, as recognized by said act of Congress, existed as a part of the laws and customs of the locality. Such holding compels a consideration of the second proposition above suggested.

It is argued by appellant that, by absolute grant of the land before the passage of said act of Congress, the title passed with such riparian rights as were recognized by the common law of England, and that such rights, having become vested before its passage, could not be affected thereby. If the right to appropriate water from streams upon the public domain is derived from the passage of the act in question, and if, before that time, such acts of appropriation were, as against the government of the United States, trespasses upon the public domain, it is clear that this contention must be sustained. But, in our opinion, such was not the fact. The United States, as the owner of nearly all the lands in the locality where such use of the water was required, had the power to establish such rights in relation to its appropriation and use as it saw fit; and to the extent that it recognized such rights the common law in relation thereto was modified or abrogated. That this could be done by direct act of Congress is not disputed by appellant, and we think it could also be done by such action on the part of the government as clearly disclosed its intention, though not evidenced by act of

But that case was subsequently overruled. See infra, c. Act of Congress of 1886.

The rights of one who settled upon the public land prior to the appropriation, but did not receive his patent until after that event, have been the subject of much discussion. And the courts have been very evenly divided in opinion.

In an early California case, Crandall v. Woods, 8 Cal. 136, the court says: "The only question involved in this case is whether a party who locates upon and appropriates public lands belonging to the government is entitled to the use of streams naturally flowing through such lands as against persons subsequently appropriating and using the waters of said streams. If the rule laid down in Irwin v. Phillips is correct as to the location of water ditches for mining purposes, and priority is to determine the rights of respective parties, it is difficult to see why the rule should not apply to all other cases where land or water has been appropriated. An appropriation of land carries with it all water on the land or the usufruct in the water, and one who appropriates the land will be held to have appropriated the water of the stream flowing over it as an incident to the soil as against those who subsequently attempt to divert it from its natural channel for their own purposes.

But afterwards it was held that until a pre-emptor has proved up his claim and paid for his land a water right may be acquired against him by a prior appropriator. Farley v. Spring Valley Min. & I. Co. 58 Cal. 142.

So, the rights of a pre-emptor on the public land date from the issuance of a patent, and if a notice of an appropriation of water has been given prior to that time it will be superior to that of the patentee. Osgood v. El Dorado Water & D. G. Min. Co. 56 Cal. 571.

So, in Ellis v. Pomeroy Imp. Co. 1 Wash. 572, although there are other grounds of decision, such as estoppel and a question of contemporaneous appropriation, the court holds that a settler on the public land is subject to the rights acquired by third persons by appropriation of water at any time before he makes final proof and acquires the government title, unless in the mean time he has made an actual appropriation of water himself. And the doctrine of that case was followed in Geddis v. Parrish, 1 Wash. 587.

But that question has been settled the other way by the Supreme Court of the United States.

A homestead entry on a tract of land through which runs a stream of water is an appropriation of the riparian rights belonging thereto which cannot be displaced by a subsequent entry of a water right upon the same stream. Sturr v. Beck, 138 U. S. 541, 33 L. ed. 761.

And the same doctrine had been held in the lower court. Sturr v. Beck, 6 Dak. 71.

30 L. R. A.

Sturr v. Beck, was followed in Faul v. Cooke, 19 Or. 455, and Cole v. Logan, 24 Or. 304.

Appropriation of water by one who has settled on the public land with the intention of acquiring title to the land is effective from its date, although he does not acquire the title for some time afterwards. Elliot v. Whitmore, 8 Utah, 253.

4. Extent and Limitation of right.

The interest acquired by the prior location of water is not a property in the water as such. McDonald v. Askew, 29 Cal. 200; Eddy v. Simpson, 3 Cal. 249 (1853); Kidd v. Laird, 15 Cal. 161, 76 Am. Dec. 472.

But the right to the use of water for irrigating purposes is a right of property. Cash v. Thornton, 8 Colo. App. 475.

Prior appropriators of water are entitled to have the same flow uninterruptedly in quantity and without permanent or unreasonable deterioration in quality. Cushman v. Highland Ditch Co. 3 Colo. App. 487.

A subsequent appropriator cannot diminish the quantity or deteriorate the quality of water to which the prior appropriator is entitled. Junkans v. Bergin, 67 Cal. 267.

A prior appropriator for mining purposes has a right to have the water flow down above the point of his appropriation without interruption or diminution in quantity. Phoenix Water Co. v. Fletcher, 28 Cal. 481; Natoma Water & M. Co. v. McCoy, Id. 490.

The first appropriator is entitled to all the water to the extent of his appropriation. Hillman v. Hardwick, 2 Idaho, 993.

While the title of the public or the state to the unappropriated waters of the streams can only be divested as to the portions thereof segregated and appropriated to beneficial uses, when this has been legally done the appropriator becomes the proprietor of the water appropriated and diverted, or of the use thereof, which is the same thing; and so long as the beneficial use is continued the water remains the subject of exclusive ownership and control and is the property of the appropriator in every legal aspect. Wyatt v. Larimer & W. Irrigation Co. 1 Colo. App. 480.

The first appropriator of water has the right to insist that the water shall be subject to his use and enjoyment to the extent of his original appropriation, and that its quality shall not be impaired so as to defeat the purpose of his appropriation. Butte Canal & D. Co. v. Vaughn, 11 Cal. 143, 79 Am. Dec. 769.

If the owner of a ditch is entitled to all the water flowing in the stream where his ditch starts, claimants lower down cannot complain of his action in enlarging his ditch. James v. Williams, 31 Cal. 211.

The first appropriator is entitled to use enough

Congress, and that such modification or abrogation would have force as against the grant of the government, though not expressly embodied in the instrument or legislation by which the grant was made. If the action of the government was of such a nature as to evidence its intent to inaugurate such a modified system as to rights to waters upon the public domain, it was of such a nature as to convey notice to all persons interested of that fact. If from such action such intent could be presumed, it must be because it had substantially the same effect as direct legislation by Congress; and, since every one must take notice of such legislation, they must likewise take notice of a practice having the force thereof.

The material question, therefore, is as to whether or not, prior to the act of 1866, the practice in the locality referred to of appropriating the waters of running streams by means of their diversion for mining and other beneficial uses had been so sanctioned by the practice of the government that it had become lawful. It is not necessary for us to enter into any extended discussion as to this question, nor to enlarge upon the situation of the localities in which the custom of so diverting waters prevailed, nor to speak of the absolute necessity of such customs, for the reason that the Supreme Court of the United States has ably discussed and fully decided the question. And such question is a Federal one, upon which such decision is controlling in the courts of the states, as well as in those of the United States. A reference to a few cases will establish the above-stated conclusions as to the position of

of the water to protect his flume from injury during the process of construction. Weaver v. Conger, 10 Cal. 223.

The first appropriator of water on public land has the prior right to its use to the extent in amount and time of his first appropriation, and possibly to the extent to which he was at that time preparing to appropriate it. Lehi Irrigation Co. v. Moyle, 4 Utah, 327.

A sale of the upper section of the ditch under a mechanic's lien will give the purchaser a right to use and consume all the water flowing into the ditch at its head. Reynolds v. Hosmer, 51 Cal. 305.

The first appropriator is entitled to the amount of water which his ditch indicates that he intended to take, and is not limited to what he actually did take, unless he continues to take the smaller quantity so long as to indicate that he only intends to take that amount. White v. Todd's Valley Water Co., 8 Cal. 443, 68 Am. Dec. 385.

An appropriation from a stream includes the water when it is flowing in its tributaries. Low v. Schaffer, 24 Or. 232; Low v. Risor, 25 Or. 551 (1894).

In the absence of legislation to the contrary, the right to water acquired by the priority of the appropriation thereof is not in any way dependent upon the location of its application to the beneficial use designed. The water may be carried over a water shed and used in the valley of another stream. Coffin v. Left Hand Ditch Co., 6 Colo. 442.

In California there has been some fluctuation of opinion upon the question as to the right of the appropriator to protection against deterioration in the quality of the water.

It was at first held that the first appropriator of water for mining purposes is entitled to have the water flow so undiminished in quantity as to leave sufficient to fill his canal or ditch as it existed at the time of subsequent appropriations of the stream above him. But he cannot insist that the water shall reach him without deteriorating in quality. Bear River & A. Water & M. Co. v. New York Min. Co., 8 Cal. 327, 68 Am. Dec. 325; Hill v. King, 8 Cal. 336; Mokelumne Hill Canal & M. Co. v. Woodbury, 10 Cal. 185.

But the court refused to extend the doctrine of the Bear River Case further in Pilot Rock Creek Canal Co. v. Chapman, 11 Cal. 162.

And in Hill v. Smith, 27 Cal. 430, the right was claimed to dig in the bed of the stream above the head of plaintiff's ditch, and the result was that the water flowing in the ditch was fouled with sediment. The court says that the charge of the trial court which was favorable to defendant was based on the notion, which had become quite prevalent, that the rules of the common law touching water rights had been materially modified in the state upon the theory that they were inapplicable to the conditions found to exist there. But the court says: "This notion is without any substantial foundation. Neither the miner nor the riparian proprietor can so use the water as to prejudice or injure the prior right to a like use by another. The question between miners is the same as between riparian proprietors. 'Is the plaintiff's use and enjoyment of the water for the purpose for which he claims it impaired by the acts of defendant?' " And that doctrine was adhered to upon a subsequent appeal in the same case. Hill v. Smith, 32 Cal. 160.

Limitation of right.

The right to water by prior appropriation is limited in every case in quantity and quality by the uses for which the appropriation is made. The appropriation does not confer such absolute right to the body of the water diverted that the owner can allow it after its diversion to run to waste and prevent others from using it for mining or other legitimate purposes; nor does it confer such a right that he can insist upon the flow of the water without deterioration in quality where such deterioration does not defeat or impair the uses to which the water is applied. Atchison v. Peterson, 27 U. S. 30 Wall. 507, 22 L. ed. 414.

The amount of water to which a party is entitled is limited to the amount actually applied to purposes of irrigation. Simpson v. Williams, 13 Nev. 432.

The quantity to which an appropriator is entitled is determined by the capacity of the headgate and ditches and the quantity of water required for the uses to which it is to be appropriated. Carron v. Wood, 10 Mont. 600.

In Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Carpenter, 6 Nev. 393, it was agreed that the quantity of water appropriated was to be determined by the capacity of the ditch at its smallest point; that is at the point where the least water would flow through it.

The use is to be a reasonable one and so far as possible consistent with a use by others. Last Chance Min. Co. v. Bunker Hill & S. Min. & C. Co., 49 Fed. Rep. 430.

As against a subsequent appropriator a prior one is limited to the amount of his appropriation made prior to the time the second one was made. Salina Creek Irrigation Co. v. Salina Stock Co., 7 Utah, 455.

An appropriator cannot appropriate more water than is necessary to irrigate his land or hold it by possessory right or title to the exclusion of a subsequent bona fide appropriator. Thomas v. Guiraud, 6 Colo. 530.

The first appropriator is only entitled to as much water as is necessary to irrigate his land, and is bound to make a reasonable use of it. Barnes v. Sabron, 10 Nev. 217.

said supreme court upon this question. In Atchison v. Peterson, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 507, 22 L. ed. 414, Mr. Justice Field, speaking for the court, made use of the following language: "By the custom which has obtained among miners in the Pacific states and territories, where mining for the precious metals is had on the public lands of the United States, the first appropriator of mines, whether in placers, veins, or lodes, or of waters in the streams on such lands, for mining purposes, is held to have a better right than others to work the mines or use the waters. The first appropriator who subjects the property to use, or takes the necessary steps for that purpose, is regarded, except as against the government, as the source of title in all controversies relating to the property. As respects the use of water for mining purposes, the doctrines of the common law declaratory of the rights of riparian owners were, at an early day, after the discovery of gold, found to be inapplicable, or applicable only in a very limited extent, to the necessities of miners, and inadequate to their protection. . . . This doctrine of right by prior appropriation was recognized by the legislation of Congress in 1866." And in Bassey v. Gallagher, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 670, 22 L. ed. 452, the court,

A prior appropriator may insist that the water remain in the stream from which he has a right of appropriation only so long as any useful quantity would reach his point of diversion, and, where it is shown that water used by a junior appropriator for a beneficial purpose would, if not so used by him, sink before reaching the point of diversion of the prior appropriator, the latter is not merely by reason of his prior claim entitled to an injunction to compel the junior appropriator to allow the water to remain in the stream. Raymond v. Wimssette, 12 Mont. 551.

An appropriator cannot after he has used sufficient of the water of the creek to supply his needs take the remaining water and instead of letting it pass down the creek for the benefit of subsequent appropriators sell it to other persons to be conveyed away from the creek and consumed. Creek v. Roseman Waterworks Co., 15 Mont. 121.

One who has constructed a ditch without filing a map or plat of the area of intended use as required by statute will not be permitted to increase the scope of the ditch to the detriment of intervening appropriators, although the enlarged ditch is necessary to give him all the water which will be required to properly cultivate the land for which the appropriation was made. Taughenbaugh v. Clark (Colo.) 40 Pac. 153.

He who attempts to appropriate water does so at his peril. He must see to it that no legal right of prior appropriators or other persons is in any way interfered with by his acts. He cannot lessen the quantity of water, seriously impair its quality, or impede its natural flow, to the detriment of others who have acquired legal rights therein superior to his. Larimer County Reservoir Co. v. People, 8 Colo. 614.

The appropriator may be compelled to repair leaks in his ditch and flumes so that he will not divert more water than he adapts to a beneficial use. Barrows v. Fox (Cal.) 30 Pac. 768.

But the appropriator cannot be compelled to transport his water in pipes so as to prevent waste. If he appropriated the water by means of open ditches he may continue to do so although by such means a portion of the water is wasted. Barrows v. Fox, 38 Cal. 53.

Locators and appropriators of the waters of a stream have no rights antecedent to the date of their location, and if others have prior to that time decreased the quantity or quality of the water flowing in the stream the locator cannot complain. Conrad v. Arrowhead Hot Springs Hotel Co., 108 Cal. 399.

The water does not become the personal property of the appropriator until it reaches his ditch, and he cannot maintain an action for the value of the water in case it is diverted before it reaches his ditch. Parks Canal & M. Co. v. Hoyt, 57 Cal. 44.

If the first appropriator only takes a part of the water flowing in the stream another may afterwards appropriate the remainder, and if the first appropriates the water only during certain hours of the day or certain days of the week another may take it during the remaining time. Smith v. O'Hara, 43 Cal. 871; Barnes v. Sabron, 10 Nev. 217.

The difference in the policy adopted in California and Colorado is the cause for some difference in opinion as to the rights of the appropriator above the head of his ditch.

In California it is held that an appropriator's rights begin at the head of his ditch, and he cannot enter upon the land of a riparian proprietor to tap streams to increase his supply. It is only when the riparian proprietor prevents the water from flowing to the head of his ditch by an interference with the course of nature that the appropriator can complain. Last Chance Water Ditch Co. v. Heilbron, 88 Cal. 1.

Although in a prior case it had been held that an appropriator has a right as against a subsequent purchaser from the United States to go upon the latter's land and remove obstructions in the bed of the stream so as to cause its waters to flow in their natural channel to the point of diversion. Ware v. Walker, 70 Cal. 591.

While in Colorado it is held that the appropriator has the right to enter the bed of the stream above his ditch and remove sediment or obstruction which may have changed or obstructed the course of the current so as to prevent it from entering his ditch. But the most reasonable mode of effecting the object must be adopted, and it must be done in such a manner as to occasion as little damage as possible to the owner of the adjoining premises. Crisman v. Heiderer, 5 Colo. 582.

5. For what purpose appropriation permissible.

In Bassey v. Gallagher, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 670, 22 L. ed. 452, the court says it has been held generally that the right to water by prior appropriation for any beneficial purpose is entitled to protection. Water is diverted to propel machinery in flour and saw mills and to irrigate lands for cultivation, as well as to enable miners to work their mining claims; and in all such cases the right of the first appropriator, exercised within reasonable limits, is respected and enforced. This right to water, like the right to prior occupancy of mining grounds or agricultural land, is not unrestricted. It must be exercised with reference to the general condition of the country and the necessities of the people, and not so as to deprive the whole neighborhood or community of its use, and vest an absolute monopoly in a single individual.

Water may be appropriated on the public land for mining, milling, or agricultural purposes, and the rights of riparian owners when they attach are subject to rights thus acquired. Speake v. Hamilton, 21 Or. 3.

Water may be acquired for irrigation purposes. Barnes v. Sabron, 10 Nev. 217.

Water may be appropriated for agricultural purposes. Ison v. Nelson Min. Co. 47 Fed. Rep. 199.

Water may be appropriated for mill purposes. Ortman v. Dixon, 13 Cal. 33; McKinney v. Smith, 23 Cal. 374.

speaking by the same learned jurist, referring to the case of Ashtion v. Peterson, supra, stated that, among other things, it was held in that case "that the doctrines of the common law declaratory of the rights of riparian proprietors were inapplicable, or applicable only to a limited extent, to the necessities of miners, and were inadequate to their protection." And further on in the same case, after having reviewed several other decisions of the supreme court, and speaking of the act of Congress in question, the following language was used: "It is very evident that Congress intended, although the language used is not happy, to recognize as valid the customary law with respect to the use of water which had grown up among the occupants of the public land under the peculiar necessities of their condition." And in Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 818, and in Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 458, 25 L. ed. 240, the doctrine that said act did not create the rights therein referred to, but was simply in affirmation thereof, is distinctly recognized. And in Broder v. Natoma Water & M. Co., 101 U. S. 274, 25 L. ed. 790, the court, speaking by that distinguished judge, Mr. Justice Miller, Water cannot be diverted for the purposes of speculation. Combs v. Agricultural Ditch Co. 17 Colo. 146.

The owner of land has no right to construct a reservoir on it for the storage of water which he puts to no beneficial use merely in the hope of having it used by a ditch company in the future. Beaver Brook Reservoir & C. Co. v. St. Vrain Reservoir & F. Co. (Colo.) 40 Pac. 1066.

6. Who may be an appropriator.

An alien may acquire and hold a water right as against all except the state. Quigley v. Birdseye, 11 Mont. 439.

An Indian may gain a title to water by appropriation. Lobdell v. Hall, 8 Nev. 507.

One who has no possessory right or interest in land for which he is to use water cannot make a valid appropriation of it for that land. Tucker v. Jones, 8 Mont. 225.

One of several tenants in common who own a water right, upon the abandonment of it for mining purposes and the turning of the water into the original channel may recapture and use the same water for other beneficial and lawful purposes of his own as against all except persons claiming rights as his cotenants. Meagher v. Hardenbrook, 11 Mont. 385.

The fact that the appropriator is also a riparian owner does not prevent him from claiming his rights as an appropriator. Healy v. Woodruff, 97 Cal. 464.

7. What is an appropriation and when complete.

The method of procedure under local statutes for the perfecting of a right of appropriation will not be stated here. This note will deal merely with the general principles applicable to the right, and the local methods of procedure will be reserved for a future note.

One who in California desires to appropriate the waters of a stream upon the vacant and unappropriated lands of the United States for a useful purpose may do so by the construction of a ditch or other medium of conduit and actually appropriating the water and conducting it to some point where it can be utilized in fulfillment of such useful purpose; and by so doing he acquires as against the subsequent appropriators and riparian proprietors acquiring title from the United States subsequent to such appropriation the right to the quantity of the water thus appropriated and an easement or right of way into and over the public land traversed by his ditch or conduit as constructed and used for such purposes. If one animated by a like desire to appropriate water under like circumstances finds a ditch already constructed to hand, takes peaceable possession thereof, and appropriates the water for a like or similar useful purpose, he thereby acquires a like right as against all the world except the true owner or those holding through or under him. Utt v. Frey, 106 Cal. 592.

To effect the appropriation, any gulch, dry ravine, or depression in the land, may be used as a part of the ditch for conducting the water, and so make the lower portion of the same channel from which the water is taken. Simmons v. Winters, 21 Or. 35.

In McPhail v. Forney (Wyo.) 35 Pac. 773, it is said it is just as necessary to the creation and preservation of a water right to provide means for the continual diversion of the water from its natural channel and for conducting it to the place where it is applied to some beneficial purpose as it is to apply it to the beneficial purpose.

A mere appropriation of a mill site is not an appropriation of water enough to run the mill. Robinson v. Imperial Silver Min. Co. 5 Nev. 44.

Turning water out of the stream does not give a title to it if it is not used for a beneficial purpose. Dick v. Caldwell, 14 Nev. 167.

To establish a right under a custom as provided by the act of 1866 the claimant must allege and prove the existence of such custom. Lewis v. McClure, 8 Or. 273.

Mere declaration of intention to appropriate water is not sufficient to give a title to it. Columbia Min. Co. v. Holter, 1 Mont. 293.

The true test of the appropriation of water is the successful application thereof to the beneficial use designed. Cash v. Thornton, 3 Colo. App. 475.

The water must be applied within a reasonable time to some beneficial use. Colorado Land & W. Co. v. Rocky Ford Canal, R. L. Loan & T. Co. 3 Colo. App. 545.

The construction of a ditch for drainage purposes gives no right to the water. Thomas v. Guiraud, 6 Colo. 580; Maeris v. Bicknell, 7 Cal. 281, 68 Am. Dec. 257; McKinney v. Smith, 21 Cal. 374.

But if the ditch is constructed to convey water for mining purposes it seems that it will not defeat the right if it was also used as a drain. Marius v. Bicknell, 10 Cal. 217.

The depression formed in part by the bed of a stream may be utilized as a reservoir to hold the water and prevent it from going to waste. Larimer County Reservoir Co. v. People, 3 Colo. 614.

A mere diversion of water is not an appropriation. Combs v. Agricultural Ditch Co. 17 Colo. 146.

An excessive appropriation of water cannot be regarded as a diversion to a beneficial use. Ibid.

A diversion under promise of use in the future is not sufficient to sustain the right. Fort Morgan Land & C. Co. v. South Platte Ditch Co. 13 Colo. 1.

A valid appropriation of water may be made from a canyon, notwithstanding it is not a running stream and the water comes entirely from the rain fall of the surrounding hills. Denver, T. & Ft. W. R. Co. v. Dotson, 20 Colo. 304.

The Colorado Constitution does not apply to the use made by an owner of one estate upon the different parts thereof so as to give, after division of the estate, the priority of the right to use to one portion over another. Bloom v. West, 3 Colo. App. 212.

A municipal corporation may acquire the right to all the waters of a river by claiming them and having its claim recognized by persons owning seems to have put this question fully to rest. He made use of the following pertinent language: "It is the established doctrine of this court that rights of miners who had taken possession of mines, and worked and developed them, and the rights of persons who had constructed canals and ditches to be used in mining operations, and for purposes of agricultural irrigation, in the region where such artificial use of the water was an absolute necessity, are rights which the government had, by its conduct, recognized and encouraged, and was bound to protect, before the passage of the act of 1866, and that the section of the act which we have quoted was rather a voluntary recognition of a pre-existing right of possession, constituting a valid claim to its continued use, than the establishment of a new one. This subject has so recently received our attention, and the grounds on which this construction rests are so well set forth in the following cases, that they will be relied on without further argument." Then follows a citation of the cases to which we have referred. This language and that of the other cases would seem to make it unnecessary that anything land along the river, although for a considerable time it does not consume nearly all of the water. Fellz v. Los Angeles, 58 Cal. 73; Elms v. Los Angeles, Id. 80.

The claim must be for some useful or beneficial purpose or in contemplation of a future appropriation for such purpose by the parties claiming it. A claim for mere speculation will not answer. Weaver v. Bureka Lake Co. 15 Cal. 371.

Appropriation is the intent to take accompanied by some open physical manifestation of the intent and for some valuable use. McDonald v. Bear River & A. Water & M. Co. 18 Cal. 232.

The appropriation may be made by two or more acting together. Kimbell v. Gearhart, 12 Cal. 27.

Possession of mining claims on a running stream carries the right to the use of the water flowing in the natural channel of the stream as against all except claims which were antecedently acquired. Lehigh Co. v. Independent Ditch Co. 8 Cal. 323.

The true test of appropriation of water is the successful application thereof to the beneficial use designed, and the method of diverting or carrying the same or making such application is immaterial, the construction of ditches is not necessary. It will be sufficient to merely construct a dam if by that means the water can be made to flow where it is needed. Thomas v. Guiraud, 6 Colo. 530.

Application to some beneficial use is necessary to complete an appropriation. Farmers' High Line Canal & R. Co. v. Southworth, 18 Colo. 111, 4 L. R. A. 767; Simmons v. Winters, 21 Or. 35.

Construction of ditch.

The right to take the water relates back to the beginning of work upon the ditch. Woolman v. Garringer, 1 Mont. 535.

The time when the appropriator's right begins is when he begins work on his dam and ditch if the work is prosecuted to completion and utilization of the water for beneficial use with reasonable diligence. Irwin v. Strait, 18 Nev. 498.

Reasonable time is allowed to complete an appropriation of water, and whether or not reasonable diligence has been used depends upon all the circumstances of the case, but, matters which will excuse delay must be incident to the enterprise and not to the person, such as lack of capital or illness of the appropriator. Ophir Silver Min. Co. v. Carpenter, 4 Nev. 534, 97 Am. Dec. 550.

That all the water which was appropriated cannot be used at that time by the appropriator will not put his right down to what he actually uses in favor of a subsequent appropriator if the amount appropriated was not greater than could be profitably used on his land and he intends as rapidly as possible to make use of the whole of it. Kleinschmidt v. Greiser, 14 Mont. 484.

If after doing part of the work necessary to make a water supply available for use operations are suspended for an unreasonable time, the rights of the appropriator will be abandoned, although the work is stopped because of lack of money and time. Keeney v. Carillo, 2 N. M. 430.

30 L. R. A.

The suspending of work on a ditch for a year and a month is not an abandonment if there was no intention of abandoning the claim. Atchison v. Peterson, 1 Mont. 561.

A delay of two years in completing a ditch, accompanied by the fact that the appropriator does not need the water or intend to utilize it at present, is a virtual abandonment of the right. Bell v. Lamborn, 18 Colo. 345, 20 L. R. A. 241.

Water appropriated for future needs must be utilized within a reasonable time in order to maintain the claim to it. Hindman v. Rizer, 21 Or. 112.

Lack of means is not a sufficient excuse for delay in prosecuting work upon a ditch to its completion. Cole v. Logan, 24 Or. 304.

Appropriators of water for irrigation purposes after conducting water to the point of intended use have a reasonable time in which to apply it to the use intended. They may add to the acreage of land cultivated from year to year, and make application of the water thereto for irrigation as their necessities demand until they have put to a beneficial use the entire amount originally diverted by them. Conant v. Jones (Idaho) 32 Pac. 250.

So long as the settler does not abandon, but continues in good faith to prosecute the construction of a ditch and the application of water to his land as rapidly as his demands and circumstances will permit, he should be held to be within the limit of a reasonable time. Taugenbaugh v. Clark (Colo.) 40 Pac. 153.

Loss of right.

The general right of abandonment of a water right is treated in a note to Hewitt v. Story, ante, 355.

If a person appropriating water fails to make a beneficial use of it within a reasonable time, whereby he forfeits his rights, he may afterwards regain them by another appropriation if intervening rights have not been acquired. Beaver Brook Reservoir & C. Co. v. St. Vrain Reservoir & F. Co. (Colo.) 40 Pac. 1066.

Upon abandonment of the construction of a proposed canal without intention of resuming, all incipient rights lapse and revert to the public and are not thereafter capable of being sold or transferred. Colorado Land & W. Co. v. Rocky Ford Canal, H. L. Loan & T. Co. 8 Colo. App. 543.

A prior appropriator is estopped from asserting a claim to water after it has been abandoned by him and recaptured by another. Barkley v. Tieleke, 3 Mont. 59.

If water from an artificial channel has been discharged into a natural channel and abandoned it cannot be afterwards diverted from the natural channel so as to prevent a lower riparian owner from enjoying its use. Schulz v. Sweeny, 19 Nev. 359.

If one who assisted in constructing a ditch abandons his lands before using any of the water, a third person who takes up the same land and uses water from the ditch five or six years afterwards will not gain the right which he abandoned. Burham v. Freeman, 11 Colo. 602.

If a particular owner of a water right abandons further should be said to show that, in the opinion of the said supreme court, the government had, by its acquiescence or consent, so recognized acts of this nature on the public domain as to make them lawful, and a basis of right which the government and its grantees must respect. It is true, as suggested by the supreme court of California in Lux v. Hagglin, 69 Cal. 235, that the exact question involved in the case at bar was not involved in any of the cases above cited; but the positive language used therein, and the emphasis of the proposition that the right was not created by the act of 1866, but simply recognized and continued, is sufficient to clearly show that such rights would have been protected as well before the passage of that act as after. If it was a right which it was worth while for the court to talk about, it was a vested right; and if a vested right and of such a nature that every one must take notice thereof, it would not be taken away by any grant made thereafter, for the reason that the courts would construe such grant as though the right had been in express terms excepted from its force.

It has been held by all of the courts that it but returns and occupies it before it is appropriated by any other person, he regains the right which he lost by his abandonment. Tucker v. Jones, 8 Mont. 325.

8. Determination of priority.

Possession or actual appropriation must be the test of priority in all claims to the use of water whenever such claims are not dependent on ownership of the land through which the water flows. Kelly v. Natoma Water Co. 6 Cal. 105.

As between appropriators of water on the public land the first in time is the first in right. Keeney v. Carillo, 2 N. M. 480.

The quantity of water actually appropriated by a person at the date claimed therefor, and not the carrying capacity of his ditch ten or twelve years afterwards, should be the basis of the decree adjudging his priority. Greer v. Heiser, 16 Colo. 303.

9. Interference with and protection of right.

The rights of a prior appropriator from a stream cannot be impaired by a subsequent appropriation of water from the tributaries. Strickler v. Colorado Springs, 16 Colo. 31.

The rights of prior appropriators cannot be impaired for the purpose of supplying water for domestic purposes to later comers. Armstrong v. Larimer County Ditch Co. 1 Colo. App. 49.

When a person has acquired a prior right to the water of a natural stream by valid appropriation thereof to a beneficial use, another person cannot justify an interference with such prior right by merely showing that he is wholly dependent upon the same water supply. Roberts v. Arthur, 15 Colo. 455.

The corrupting of water flowing in a private ditch of an appropriator is a nuisance. Crane v. Winsor; 2 Utah, 243.

Proof of prior appropriation establishes the better right to the water. Humphreys v. McCall, 9 Cal. 50, 70 Am. Dec. 681.

An appropriator is entitled to damages if another ditch is subsequently constructed further up the stream in such a way as to interfere with the flow of water to his ditch. Coker v. Simpson, 7 Cal. 340.

Interference with the prior right may be enjoined. Tuolumne Water Co. v. Chapman, 8 Cal. 302.

To entitle a subsequent appropriator to enjoin use by the prior appropriator for a purpose for which the appropriation was not made the diversion must be continuing; a temporary diversion is not sufficient. Ball v. Kehl, 37 Cal. 545.

A prior appropriator cannot enjoin a riparian owner from interfering with his dam and using the water of the stream unless he is actually damaged by such action. Perego v. McKissick, 79 Cal. 572.

Where different persons separately appropriate the waters of a stream and are severally using the same under certain regulations as to the time and manner of such use, they are tenants in common, and each of them may maintain an action to enjoin a trespasser from diverting any portion of the 30 L. R. A.

water thus appropriated. Lytle Creek Water Co. v. Perdew, 65 Cal. 447.

So long as a prior appropriator can obtain all the water to which he is entitled, he cannot complain of the use which other persons are making of the stream. Saint v. Guerrero, 17 Colo. 448.

During the process of constructing the dam and before it is in condition to make use of the water the owner cannot maintain an action against a third person for diversion of the water. Nevada County & S. Canal Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 312.

While the appropriator's ditch is so far out of repair that it will not carry water, he cannot enjoin the construction of a reservoir upon the stream above the head of the ditch the effect of which will be to interrupt the flow of water to his ditch. Bear River & A. Water & M. Co. v. Bolea, 24 Cal. 350.

10. Second appropriation.

A lower appropriator on the stream is entitled to have the water flow to him subject only to a reasonable diminution and deterioration by its necessary use upon the upper claims. The prior appropriator being compelled to use it in a reasonable manner and then return it to the stream. Alder Gulch Consol. Min. Co. v. Hayes, 6 Mont. 31. See also supra, b, 4. Extent and limitation of right.

II. Riparian rights.

In most of the states in which the doctrine of prior appropriation has been applied, the common-law doctrine of riparian rights has also been enforced.

In Oregon the right to water by prior appropriation for mining and irrigating lands has not been adopted or applied except as the parties have acquired their rights under the United States act of 1866. Simmons v. Winters, 21 Or. 35.

In Lux v. Hagglin, 69 Cal. 450, the court devotes many pages to the discussion of the question of rights of appropriators, and holds that in California, at least since the passage of the act of 1860, the common-law rule of riparian rights, and not that of prior appropriation, is the law as to all rights that have vested, and that it applies also to persons who have settled upon and made their first payments for state lands.

A riparian proprietor may restrain the diversion of water from the stream by one who has turned water from a foreign source into the stream, unless the latter shows that he has not taken from the stream more water than he turned in. Wilcox v. Hauch, 64 Cal. 451.

That a riparian proprietor is also an appropriator does not deprive him of his riparian rights, but he may use the water as such in addition to his rights as an appropriator. Van Bibber v. Hilton, 84 Cal. 535.

A prior appropriator cannot insist on claiming his right as an appropriator to all water which his needs require, and also to have the natural amount of water flow in the bed of the stream under his right as a riparian proprietor. Low v. Schaffer, 24 Or. 239.

have considered this question that, after the passage of said act, all grants must be construed in connection with the rights therein provided for, and such rights protected as above stated. There is no provision in the act for the protection of the rights therein recognized; and, if they existed before as well as after its passage, they were excepted from grants made after their inception before such passage the same as after. It is only because of their existence as rights of which every one must take notice that they are held to modify grants thereafter made. And, if rights under the statute thus modify grants, rights of the same nature established by acquiescence should also be held to modify such grants made after their acquisition. There are decisions by the courts of some of the states which directly sustain the contention of the appellant, and go to the full extent of holding that, where the grant took effect before the passage of the act in question, the rights acquired by the custom of the locality were lost, unless expressly reserved by the terms of the grant. The princi-

In Nevada it is held that a mere possessor of public land has no riparian rights in the streams running through it. Lake v. Tolles, 8 Nev. 286.

So, a settler on public land as such can claim no riparian rights in the streams running through the land. Covington v. Becker, 5 Nev. 281.

12. Statutes affecting.

The Montana statutes requiring the recording of claims do not forfeit claims acquired before its passage which are not recorded according to its provisions. Salazar v. Smart, 12 Mont. 305.

13. Transmission of right.

See also note on change of use appended to case of McGuire v. Brown (Cal.) ante, 384.

The right to the water may be sold verbally and transferred with the possessory right to the land. Hindman v. Risor, 21 Or. 112.

Where a person having no title to land appropriates water for its cultivation his appropriation does not become appurtenant to the land so as to inure to the benefit of one who subsequently purchases the land from the true owner. Smith v. Logan, 18 Nev. 149.

If one in possession of land fails to connect his interest with that of the original appropriators of the water, his own appropriation must be considered as the inception of his right. Chiatovich v. Davis, 17 Nev. 183.

c. Act of Congress of 1866.

In 1866 Congress passed an act recognizing and confirming rights acquired by appropriation of water under local customs, and this act was extended by another passed in 1870. Those acts have settled some questions which were before unsettled but there has been considerable conflict in opinion as to the proper construction of those acts.

The object of the act of 1866 was to give the sanction of the United States, the proprietor of the lands, to possessory rights which had previously rested solely on the local customs, laws, and decisions of the courts, and to prevent such rights from being lost by a sale of the lands. Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 453, 25 L. ed. 240.

Grantees of the United States subsequent to the passage of the act of 1866 will take subject to an existing right of a third person to have a water ditch run through the land. Broder v. Natoma Water Co. 50 Cal. 621.

A patent acquired from the government after the act of 1870 is subject to water rights previously acquired. Barnes v. Sabron, 10 Nev. 217.

One who made a homestead settlement on land subsequent to the passage of the act of 1866 takes subject to the water rights of another person who appropriated the water prior to his settlement. South Yuba Water & M. Co. v. Rosa, 80 Cal. 333.

As against a pre-emptioner who settled on the land after the passage of the act of 1866 the sole question is whether a right to divert and use the water had vested and accrued before the right to purchase the land became a vested right. DeNeocoebe v. Curtis, 80 Cal. 397; Burrows v. Burrows, 82 Cal. 564.

80 L. R. A.

The rights of a patentee from the government under a patent issued subsequent to the passage of the act of 1866 are subordinate to those of an appropriator whose rights had been perfected before the patentee had located on the land. Ramell v. Irish, 98 Cal. 214.

An appropriator of water acquires a right superior to that of one who subsequently acquires title to the land from the government. Judkins v. Elliott (Cal.) 12 Pac. 116.

An appropriation of water on open, unsurveyed, and unappropriated government land will give a right which will be superior to that of one who subsequently acquires title to the lands from the government. Faulkner v. Rondoni, 104 Cal. 140.

The act of 1866 applies to rights acquired after as well as before its passage. Jacob v. Lorenz, 98 Cal. 332.

The act of 1866 conferred rights to waters appropriated for agricultural purposes. Cave v. Crafts, 58 Cal. 135.

If before a person obtains his title from the government a third person has appropriated the right to take water from a stream flowing through the land at points both above and below the land of the patentee at his convenience, the latter cannot compel him to desist from diverting the water at the upper point and compel him to confine his appropriation to the lower one. Hobart v. Wicks, 15 Nev. 413.

The act of 1866 applied only to public lands of the United States and had no application to lands of individual owners as against them. An appropriation under that act conferred no right to divert water of streams flowing through their lands. Curtis v. La Grande Hydraulic Water Co. 20 Or. 34, 10 L. R. A. 494.

The right of an appropriator is superior to that of a subsequent purchaser of land on both sides of the stream. Hill v. Lenormand (Ariz.) 16 Pac. 293.

Rights acquired subsequent to a notice of appropriation are subject thereto. Dyke v. Caldwell (Ariz.) 18 Pac. 276.

The question which remains unsettled is as to the rights of one who had obtained a patent from the government prior to the passage of the act of 1866. If his settlement antedated the appropriation of the water the question is probably ruled by Starr v. Beck, 138 U. S. 541, 33 L. ed. 761.

So it has been held that an appropriator of water upon the public domain acquires, under the confirmatory acts of Congress, no rights superior to the riparian rights which have attached to land held at the time of the appropriation in private ownership. Hargrave v. Cook, 106 Cal. 72, ante, 390.

But if he settled after the appropriation and received his patent prior to the act of 1866, there is no finally authoritative decision upon his rights. In states which have wholly repudiated the doctrine of riparian rights the tendency is to subordinate him to the appropriator, while in jurisdictions where the doctrine of riparian rights obtains the tendency seems equally strong in his favor. The first case upon the question arose in Nevada, pal case of this kind is that of Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249, in which it was directly held as above stated, after careful consideration; and nearly or quite all the other cases upon the subject refer to this one, and found their decision largely upon its authority. It follows that, when this case was overruled by the court in which it was decided, the authority of all of the cases upon that side of the question was greatly lessened. In the case of Jones v. Adams, 19 Nev. 78, in which the case above referred to was overruled, the court carefully reviews the whole question, and founds its holding to the effect that the rights should be given effect against grants before the date of the act of 1866 as well as after, not only upon a well-considered course of reasoning, but also upon the fact that such was their understanding of the inevitable conclusion to be drawn from the language of the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases hereinbefore cited. Some of these decisions were founded upon the conditions which existed in a mining country, and related to the acqui-

-and the patentee's rights were held to be superior. Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249.

But in a subsequent case it was held that the act of 1866 confirmed the rights of prior appropriators even as against persons who had prior to its passage obtained patents to lands over which the waters flowed. Jones v. Adams, 19 Nev. 78; Jerrett v. Mahan, 20 Nev. 89. Those cases expressly overruled that of Vansickle v. Haines, supra.

An appropriator can acquire no right as against the United States or its subsequent grantees unless there is a reservation in the grant, and the act of 1866 did not affect the rights of persons whose patents had been issued prior to its passage, but cut off all claims of persons whose patents issued after that time if no right had vested in the patentee before that time. Union Mill & M. Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. 176.

But in Union Mill & M. Co. v. Dangberg, 2 Sawy. 460, the same court on considering the question directly held that one who had entered land under the homestead act prior to the passage of the act of 1866 was not affected by that act although he did not receive his patent until after its passage.

A claim to prior appropriation of water is not protected by the act of 1866 as against the owner of land which had previously been sold by a state under the pre-emption law of 1841. Isou v. Nelson Min. Co. 47 Fed. Rep. 199.

d. Statutes abolishing riparian rights.

In some of the states the doctrine of riparian rights has been completely overthrown and that of right by prior appropriation adopted in its stead.

In Colorado the right of prior appropriation has been the rule from the day of the earliest appropriation of water within the boundaries of the state, and is recognized and provided for by the Constitution. Coffin v. Left Hand Ditch Co. 6 Colo. 443.

The Colorado Constitution has to a large extent obliterated the doctrine of riparian rights and substituted in lieu thereof the doctrine of appropriation. Oppenlander v. Left Hand Ditch Co. 18 Colo. 142.

In Wheeler v. Northern Colo. Irrigation Co. 10 Colo. 582, it is said our Constitution dedicates all unappropriated water in the natural streams of the state "to the use of the people," the ownership thereof being vested in "the public." The same instrument guarantees in the strongest terms the right of diversion and appropriation for beneficial uses. With certain qualifications it recognizes and protects a prior right of user, acquired through priority of appropriation. After appropriation the title to this water, save, perhaps, as to the limited quantity that may actually be flowing in the consumer's ditch or lateral, remains in the general public, while the paramount right to its use, unless forfeited, continues in the appropriator. But to constitute a legal appropriation, the water diverted must be applied within a reasonable time to a beneficial use. That is to say, the diversion ripens into a valid appropriation only when the water is utilized by the consumer.

A valid appropriation of water of a stream may be 30 L. R. A.

made for irrigation purposes to the exclusion of a riparian owner, though the lands to be irrigated are not located on the banks or in the neighborhood of the stream. Hammond v. Rose, 11 Colo. 624.

One who has made an appropriation of water for irrigation acquires a prior right thereto as against a riparian owner who obtained a patent from the United States after such appropriation, even before the act of 1870 amending the act of 1866, so as to provide that patents thereafter issued should be subject to vested or accrued water rights. Ibid.

A territorial grant of the right to use water from a stream is of no effect as against one who has actually appropriated the water to a beneficial use. Platte Water Co. v. Northern Colo. Irrigation Co. 12 Colo. 529.

The right of prior appropriation was the general well-regulated custom; hence the law prior to and at the time of the organization of the territory which was protected by the section of the organic act which said: "Nor shall any law be passed impairing the rights to private property." Armstrong v. Larimer County Ditch Co. 1 Colo. App. 49.

The water of natural streams in Colorado is the property of the public. Fort Morgan Land & C. Co. v. South Platte Ditch Co. 18 Colo. 1.

In Clough v. Wing (Ariz.) 17 Pac. 453, the court says that the right of appropriation for irrigation purposes is more ancient and universal than that of the riparian owner, and that in Arizona the riparian owner has no rights except so far as he has actually appropriated the water to a beneficial use, but must give way to the rights acquired by a prior appropriator.

In Utah the appropriation of water is open to all, and the legislature cannot pass an act which will put the waters of a part of the territory under the control of an irrigation company. Munroe v. Ivie, 2 Utah, 536.

In Utah the doctrine of riparian rights has never been recognized, and the statute ignoring the right of riparian proprietors at common law to have the water in a stream flow in quantity and quality as it was wont to do when he acquired title is valid. Stowell v. Johnson, 7 Utah, 215.

The doctrine of prior appropriation, and not the common-law doctrine of riparian rights, is in force in Nevada. And this will be the rule even as against persons who have acquired a private right of ownership to land on the banks of the river. Reno Smelting, Mill, & R. Works v. Stevenson, 20 Nev. 290, 4 L. R. A. 60.

In Idaho the first appropriator of water for a beneficial use acquires the prior right thereto. And when the right is once vested unless abandoned it must be protected and upheld. Malad Valley Irrigating Co. v. Campbell, 2 Idaho, 378.

In Montana the statute establishes the doctrine of prior appropriation of water for irrigation limiting the right to appropriate to persons owning land on the banks of the stream from which the same is taken, and also limiting the quantity of water he can appropriate to what is necessary to irrigate his land. Thorp v. Woolman, 1 Mont. 163.

H. P. F.

tion of mining interests, and the necessary water for the prosecution of the mining business, but enough appears to show that the same rule would apply as to the diversion of water for any other necessary and beneficial use. It does not follow, as has been well observed by Mr. Pomeroy, in his treatise on Riparian Rights, that the common law of England as to riparian rights has been abrogated in the localities affected by the cases above referred to, but only that it has been so far modified as to give the rights acquired by virtue of the customs of the country force.

The United States, as owner of all of the domain, including the waters in its running streams, could by its legislation as applied thereto, or such acquiescence and practice as should be given the force of legislation, change the rule of the common law so far as it thought necessary; but it would not follow therefrom that, if no rights had been acquired by virtue of the modification of the common-law rule until after the land had passed from the government, the common-law rule would be at all affected thereby. On the contrary, so soon as the government had parted with its title, its right to change the rule in reference to the rights and incidents growing out of the ownership of the land would be entirely determined, and its grantees would take his title burdened with all rights conferred by such action or consent on the part of the government. The government, while the owner of the land, allowed the streams to be changed by the diversion of a portion of their waters. This had the effect of modifying the right to have the water flow in its natural channel, except as to the portion not diverted at the time the title passed from the government, and it was only upon this portion that the common-law rule could apply. The government had changed the streams, as it had the right to do by virtue of its ownership of all the land through which they flowed, and while they were so changed, conveyed the land. It must follow that its grantees took title subject to the changed condition of the streams and to the rights growing out of such change. In the case at bar the right to the use of the water had been fully acquired while the land now owned by the defendant was held by the government, and its grant of the same thereafter was subject to such right. It follows that plaintiff is entitled, as against the defendant, to have such right protected by the courts.

The conclusion to which we have come as to this question makes it unnecessary for us to discuss the other grounds upon which plaintiff seeks to found his right to divert the water. Some criticism is made as to the form of the decree, but we think it sufficient to substantially protect the rights of both parties to the action. There is not as exact a measurement of the water to which the plaintiff is entitled as there might have been, but the substance of the decree in that regard is to establish and protect him in the use of the water necessary to run his mill as at present constructed, and for that reason we think it sufficient.

The decree of the Superior Court will be in all things affirmed. The respondent will recover his costs on appeal.

Dunbar, Ch. J., and Scott, J., concur; Anders, J., not sitting, by reason of disqualification.

Stiles, J., concurring:

It will be found upon examination that all of the cases cited to sustain the doctrine of appropriation, upon which the foregoing decision is based, were either mining or irrigation cases, such as arose out of the necessities of the surroundings. Mines could not be worked or lands cultivated in the arid regions without diverting the waters of the streams; and, as the government's interest was that such enterprises be fostered while large areas of the public lands were still unsurveyed and not disposed of, the right to make permanent diversion of water was conceded prior to the act of 1866, as is held by the Federal Supreme Court. But this was the case of an ordinary flour mill, such as has been erected in every country over which the common law of England prevails. Every portion of the United States contains them, whether the country surrounding them be arid or not. West of the Cascade mountains they are as necessary and frequent as they are east of them, and there is no greater reason for conceding to them this right of permanent appropriation in one locality than in another. Cessat ratio, cessat lex. The peculiar circumstances demanding the concession made by the government not having existed for the support of this case of diversion, I hold that for it the concession cannot be admitted to have been made, and that the common-law rule should prevail. But in the case under consideration a sufficient reason existed for the judgment rendered in favor of the respondent, for the tract of land owned by appellant, at a point lower down on the stream than respondent's dam, is a part of the tract conveyed by the government to respondent's grantor; and when appellant received his conveyance the common grantor had for more than twenty years acquiesced in the appropriation made by respondent at a point upon his land. I therefore concur in the result.

RHODE ISLAND SUPREME COURT.

Charles F. BROWN and Wife

v.

William C. SMITH, Admr., etc., of Daniel Bosworth, Deceased.

(..... R. I.)

A woman who has been given the custody of minor children on obtaining a divorce cannot maintain an action at law against the estate of her deceased husband for their board.

NOTE.—See, in connection with the above case, that of Fulton v. Fulton (Ohio) 20 L. R. A. 678.
30 L. R. A.

(December 23, 1895.)

CERTIFICATION by the Common Pleas Division for the opinion of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of an action brought to recover the value of their board from the father of minor children the custody of which had been awarded to the mother in a proceeding by her for a divorce. Judgment for defendant.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mearns, Page & Owen for plaintiffs.

Mr. B. M. Bosworth, for defendant:

In the absence of statutory enactment, a father is not required to remunerate one who may have furnished necessities or afforded relief to his minor children, unless an express promise to pay, or circumstances from which a promise may be implied, can be shown.

Gotts v. Clark, 78 Ill. 229; Freeman v. Robinson, 88 N. J. L. 888, 20 Am. Rep. 899; Gordon v. Potter, 17 Vt. 848; French v. Benton, 44 N. H. 28; Raymond v. Loyl, 10 Barb. 488.

A husband is not liable for support of a child, the custody of which is awarded to the mother, and which lives with her.

Hancock v. Merrick, 10 Cush. 41; Brow v. Brightman, 186 Mass. 187; Johnson v. Onsted, 74 Mich. 487; Husband v. Husband, 67 Ind. 588, 83 Am. Rep. 107; Harris v. Harris, 5 Kan. 46; Finch v. Finch, 23 Conn. 411; Holt v. Holt, 42 Ark. 495. See also Plaster v. Plaster, 68 Ill. 445.

Tillinghast, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The agreed statement of facts in this case shows that Rebecca M. Brown, the real plaintiff, was formerly the wife of Daniel Bosworth, late of Warren, deceased, and by him had three children; that, prior to the death of said Bosworth, Mrs. Brown (then Mrs. Bosworth), upon her petition to the supreme court of this state, was divorced from said Daniel Bosworth, and the custody of the said three children of the marriage (they being minors) was awarded to her; that upon the death of said Daniel Bosworth, which occurred about three years after the divorce, the defendant was appointed administrator on his estate, and that after said appointment Mrs. Brown presented to him a claim for the board of said children, against the estate of Daniel Bosworth; that said administrator represented said estate insolvent, and thereupon, pursuant to law, commissioners were duly appointed to receive and examine the claims against said estate, and that said commissioners allowed the claim of Mrs. Brown for the board of said children; that, upon the filing of the report of said commissioners in the court of probate, the administrator, being dissatisfied with the allowance of said claim by the commissioners, gave notice thereof in the office of the clerk of the court of probate, and also to the plaintiffs, as provided by law, whereupon said claim was stricken out of said report by the court of probate; and that the plaintiffs thereupon, in accordance with the provisions of R. I. Pub. Stat. chap. 186, § 15, brought this suit to determine the validity of the claim of Mrs. Brown against said estate.

The only question presented for our decision, under this state of facts, is: Can a married woman, who has been granted a divorce and the custody of minor children, maintain an action at law against the estate of her deceased husband, for the board of said children? We think this question must be answered in the negative. At the time when said divorce was granted, the supreme court had the authority, under R. I. Pub. Stat. chap. 167, § 28, as the appellate division now has (Judiciary Act, chap. 2, § 4), to regulate the custody, and provide for the education, maintenance, and support of the children of all persons by them divorced; to make all necessary orders and decrees concerning the same, and the same at any time to alter, amend, or annul, for sufficient cause, after notice to the parties interested therein. Sammis v. Medbury, 14 R. I. 214. This statute is presumably based upon the theory that the rights of the parties in a proceeding for divorce, as to the custody and support of the minor children of the marriage, can be best determined in connection with said proceeding, upon a full consideration of the circumstances and situation of the parties, instead of leaving such rights open to further, independent litigation. See Husband v. Husband, 67 Ind. 585, 83 Am. Rep. 107; Buckminster v. Buckminster, 88 Vt. 248, 88 Am. Dec. 652; Chester v. Chester, 17 Mo. App. 657. Whatever is decreed, therefore, regarding the custody of children, in a divorce proceeding, is conclusive of the rights of the parties until the decree is either modified or annulled. By virtue of the decree in the petition above referred to, said Rebecca M. Brown became entitled to the custody of said minor children, together with the right to their services, and defendant's intestate was thereby deprived of his common-law right thereto; and, being thus deprived of this right, he became absolved from the correspondent common-law obligation which previously rested upon him to support said children. In other words, the award of the children to the mother carried with it a transfer of parental duties as well as of parental rights. Schouler, Dom. Rel. 8d ed. § 387. As said in 2 Bishop on Marriage & Divorce, § 557: "The true legal principle applicable to cases of this kind seems to be that the right to the services of the children, and the obligation to maintain them, go together; and, if the assignment of the custody to the wife extends to depriving the father of his claim to their services, then he cannot be compelled to maintain them otherwise than in pursuance of some statutory regulation." In Burritt v. Burritt, 29 Barb. 130, the court says: "It would seem almost an oppressive exercise of power, first to withdraw the child wholly from the care, control, and influence of the father; to deprive him entirely of its presence, society, and aid; to put it entirely in the possession and control of the mother, with whom he is at variance; to allow that mother to support, educate, and maintain it in her own way, and agreeably to her own pleasure; and then to require from the husband an absolute and unquestioning compliance with all her demands for the means of its support, education, and maintenance." In short, the right of the father to the services and earnings of his minor children is founded upon the obligation which the law imposes upon him to nurture, support, and educate them; and it continues until their maturity, if they remain with him, when the law determines that they are capable of providing for themselves. But when the father is deprived of their custody and services, by a decree which commits them to the custody of the mother, the duty to support them no longer exists, except as the court may direct, in pursuance of statutory authority. See Gilley v. Gilley, 79 Me. 292; Brow v. Brightman, 136 Mass. 187; Johnson v. Onsted, 74 Mich. 487; Finch v. Finch, 22 Conn. 411; Harris v. Harris, 5 Kan. 46; Hall v. Green, 87 Me. 122. See also R. I. Pub. Stat. chap. 71, §§ 5, 6.

Counsel for the plaintiff relies on the case of Pretzinger v. Pretzinger, 45 Ohio St. 452, which, while it fully sustains his position, and was rendered by a court whose decisions are entitled to very high respect and consideration, is nevertheless opposed to the preponderance of American authorities upon the question here presented. And, moreover, all the parental obligations of the father, so vigorously contended for by the court in that case, could have been enforced in connection with the divorce proceedings. In the states of Arkansas and Illinois there is, or at the time of the rendition of the decisions mentioned below there was, no statutory provision authorizing the court granting the divorce to subsequently modify its orders and decrees concerning the custody and support of the minor children of the marriage; and therefore the cases of Holt v. Holt, 42 Ark. 495, and Plaster v. Plaster, 53 Ill. 445, can hardly be considered authorities in support of the plaintiff's position. Moreover, the fact that, notwithstanding the very numerous cases of divorce granted in this state in which the custody of minor children has been awarded to the mother, no such action as the present has, to our knowledge, ever been instituted, indicates very strongly that the members of the bar never supposed that such an action could be maintained. If said Daniel Bosworth were still living, a change in the said decrees of divorce, in so far as it relates to the children, might, for cause shown, upon application of the petitioner therein, be made. But, said Bosworth being dead, no such change can now be made; and the plaintiff having been, presumably upon her own request, awarded the custody of said children, and no provision having been made in the decree for their support, or, so far as appears, even been asked for, she must be presumed to have assumed that duty upon herself, and is now without remedy. Burritt v. Burritt, supra. Again, as no express promise to pay for the board of said children is shown to have been made by defendant's intestate, and as the granting of the custody of said children to the mother negatives any implication of liability therefor on the part of the father, there is no evidence whatever upon which to base a judgment in favor of the plaintiff. Johnson v. Onsted, supra.

Judgment for the defendant for costs.

Thomas MILLER

v.

Robert McCARDELL.

(.....R. L.....)

A covenant by the lessor of a hotel

NOTE.—The construction of a covenant to "keep" premises in repair made in the above case seems to be in accordance with the authorities generally.

30 L. R. A.

"that he will keep . . . in good repair" the outside of the premises binds him to repair the roof so as to make the building habitable if it was out of repair at the time of the lease, and is not satisfied in such case by maintaining the premises in the same condition as when leased.

(December 5, 1895.)

APPPLICATION by defendant for new trial of an action brought to recover damages for breach of covenant to repair contained in a lease of a hotel in which there was a verdict for plaintiff. Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. E. D. Bassett and E. L. Mitchell, for defendant:

A covenant to repair implies only to restore or keep the premises in as good condition as when the covenant was made.

West v. Hart, 7 J. J. Marsh. 258; Stults v. Locke, 47 Md. 562; Middlekauff v. Smith, 1 Md. 829; Ardesco Oil Co. v. Richardson, 68 Pa. 162; White v. Albany Railway, 17 Hun, 98; Ward v. Kelsey, 38 N. Y. 82, 97 Am. Dec. 773; Gutteridge v. Munyard, 1 Moody & R. 334; Belcher v. McIntosh, 8 Car. & P. 723; Yates v. Dunster, 11 Exch. 15; Harris v. Jones, 1 Moody & R. 173; Stanley v. Tonogood, 3 Bing. N. C. 4; Mantz v. Goring, 4 Bing. N. C. 451; Burdett v. Withers, 7 Ad. & El. 186.

Messrs. Dennis J. Holland and John M. Brennan, for plaintiff:

In a covenant "to keep the premises in good repair" the covenantor is bound to put them in that condition, and he is not justified in keeping them in bad repair because he found them in that condition.

Proudfoot v. Hart, L. R. 25 Q. B. Div. 43 (1890); Payne v. Haine, 16 Mees. & W. 541; Hexter v. Knox, 68 N. Y. 561; Myers v. Burns, 35 N. Y. 272; Cooke v. Cholmondeley, 4 Drew. 326; 3 Parsons, Cont. 233.

Where the landlord has neglected to fulfil his covenant to repair, the tenant may recover, as damages for the breach, the value of the use of any portion of the premises during the time it was rendered untenable.

Hexter v. Knox, supra; Cassidy v. Le Fevre, 45 N. Y. 568; Myers v. Burns, 35 N. Y. 269.

Tillinghast, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action is brought to recover damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the breach, on the part of the defendant, of a certain covenant in a lease made by him. The record shows that on the 1st day of April, 1892, the defendant leased to the plaintiff the estate situated at the southeasterly corner of Mathewson and Washington streets, in the city of Providence, with the building thereon, known as the "St. George Hotel," for the term of three years, the defendant on his part covenanting "that he will keep the outside of said premises in good repair: provided, however, that he shall not be liable for any loss arising in said house by damage from the weather;" and the plaintiff covenanting on his part "that he will keep the interior of said building in good repair, reasonable wear and tear alone excepted." At the trial of the case in the common pleas division the plaintiff offered proof that the roof of said building was out of repair to such an extent that it leaked very badly, causing the house to be frequently flooded with water, the plastering in several of the rooms to fall off, and the paper to peel off from the walls, thereby rendering said rooms uninhabitable, and causing serious damage thereto, and also to the furniture therein, and depriving the plaintiff of the use and benefit of quite a large part of said hotel, and also necessitating the frequent repair of the interior thereof by the plaintiff. Proof was also submitted that during the subsistence of said lease the plaintiff repeatedly requested the defendant to repair the roof and outside of said building, so as to prevent it from leaking; that the defendant repeatedly promised to make such repairs, and that he had on several occasions made some slight repairs thereon, but that they were ineffectual to stop the leaks from which the plaintiff was suffering. It further appeared in evidence that the roof and exterior of said building were out of repair at the time of the making of said lease. The court ruled that, in view of the provisions in the lease, the plaintiff could not recover for damages to his furniture contained in said building, caused by the defendant's neglect to keep the exterior thereof in repair, but that he could recover for the loss of the use and rental of such rooms in said building as were rendered untenable on account of said neglect to repair, and also for the expense to which he had been put in repairing the damages caused by the injury to the interior of said building through the defendant's neglect as aforesaid. The jury found in favor of the plaintiff, and awarded him damages in the sum of $750. The defendant now petitions for a new trial on the grounds that the verdict was against the evidence and the weight thereof, and that the court erred in its rulings aforesaid.

For a brief note on landlord's liability to make repairs, see also Ward v. Fagin (Mo.) 10 L. R. A. 147.

The only contention which is urged at the trial of this petition on the part of the defendant is that the said covenant to repair was fully performed by him if he maintained the premises in the same condition and form as they were when the lease was given; or, in other words, that, as the exterior of the building was in bad repair when the plaintiff hired it, the defendant was under no obligation to put it in good repair during the subsistence of said lease. The covenants to repair in the lease in question were evidently intended to be reciprocal; that is to say, the lessor, in consideration of the covenant to keep the interior of the premises in good repair on the part of the lessee, covenanted on his part to keep the exterior of said premises in good repair. And while the covenant of the lessor may seem at first blush to be self-contradictory, and therefore nugatory, in that it provides that the lessor "shall not be liable for any loss arising in said house by damage from the weather," yet, taking both of said covenants together, as we are bound to do in construing the instrument, it would be absurd to hold that the lessor is not equally bound to the performance of the one as is the lessee to the performance of the other. Indeed, the first duty to repair is evidently on the lessor, as it would be idle and useless to attempt to keep the interior of the premises in good repair so long as the exterior thereof is not in a condition to withstand the ordinary weather incident to our climate. Moreover, it is a well-settled rule, in the construction of covenants and other written instruments, that where there is doubt or ambiguity the construction should be most favorable to the party in whose favor the covenant is made, and most strongly against the party imposing such covenant upon himself. 4 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 470, note, and cases cited. Just what is meant by the proviso to the lessor's covenant aforesaid it is not easy to determine. But we think the common pleas division, in holding that it had the effect to exonerate the lessor from damage to the furniture of the lessee, caused by the leaky condition of the roof and other parts of the house, put quite as favorable a construction thereon as the defendant was entitled to, and hence that he has no reason to complain of said ruling.

That the lessor understood that the duty of keeping the exterior of said building in repair was devolved upon him under his said covenant is clearly apparent from his repeated promises aforesaid, and also from the actual repairs made by him. As to the contention of counsel for the defendant that the covenant to keep said premises in good repair is fully performed by keeping the same in as good condition as when leased, we have to say that if by this he means that a landlord who lets a building for the purposes of a dwelling house or hotel, the building at the time being in whole or in part uninhabitable by reason of its being out of repair, the lessor is under no obligation to put the same in repair, so as to make it inhabitable, we do not agree to such contention. A dwelling house or hotel is primarily made for people to live in, and is intended to protect them from the weather; and, in order to be habitable or tenantable, it must furnish such protection. And where one lets a house for people to live in, and agrees to keep it in good repair, he is bound by the dictates of common reason, as well as by those of common law, to both make it and keep it habitable,—that is, reasonably fit for the occupation of a tenant of the class which occupies it. If we allow the position taken by the defendant, as we understand it, to prevail, the result will practically be this: That, as the said hotel building was in bad repair when the plaintiff hired it, the defendant was bound by his said covenant to keep it in like bad repair during the subsistence of the lease; thus exactly reversing the express terms thereof. In Payne v. Haine, 16 Mees. & W. 543, which was a case where the tenant agreed to keep the premises, and at the expiration of the tenancy to deliver up the same, in good repair, Parke, B., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "If, at the time of the demise, the premises were old, and in bad repair, the lessee was bound to put them in good repair as old premises; for he cannot 'keep' them in good repair without putting them into it. He might have contracted to keep them in the state in which they were at the time of the demise. This is a contract to keep the premises in good repair as old premises, but that cannot justify the keeping them in bad repair because they happened to be in that state when the defendant took them. The cases all show that the age and class of the premises let, with their general condition as to repair, may be estimated, in order to measure the extent of the repairs to be done. Thus a house in Spitalfields may be repaired with materials inferior to those requisite for repairing a mansion in Grosvenor Square, but this lessee cannot say he will do no repairs, or leave the premises in bad repair, because they were old and out of repair when he took them. He was to keep them in good repair; and in that state, with reference to their age and class, he was to deliver them up at the end of the term." To "keep in good repair," says Rolfe, B., in the same case, "presupposes the putting into it, and means that during the whole term the premises shall be in good repair." See also Cooke v. Cholmondeley, 4 Drew. 326; Proudfoot v. Hart, L. R. 25 Q. B. Div. 42. In Myers v. Burns, 85 N. Y. 269, the landlord covenanted to keep the hotel and premises in good, necessary repair at his own expense, and he was held liable thereunder to do what was necessary to enable the tenant to use the premises, although the defect had existed at the commencement of the lease. See also White v. Albany Railway, 17 Hun, 98; Kelsey v. Ward, 88 N. Y. 83; Herter v. Knox, 63 N. Y. 561; Stewart v. Lanier House Co. 75 Ga. 582. In Taylor, Land. & T. 8th ed. § 330, the author says: "A general covenant to repair, when made by the lessor, requires him, not only to keep the premises in good repair, but to put them in that condition, although the tenant may have entered. And if he neglects to make suitable repairs, after being thereunto required by the tenant, the latter may, after waiting a reasonable time, make such repairs himself, and recover the expense from his landlord; or he may at his option leave the premises unrepaired, and recover any damages he may have sustained from the landlord's default therein." See also Cohen v. Habenicht, 14 Rich. Eq. 81; Gutteridge v. Munyard, 1 Moody & R. 336; Harris v. Jones, Id. 178; Mants v. Goring, 4 Bing. N. C. 452; Stanley v. Towgood, 3 Bing. N. C. 4; Wood, Land. & T. § 370.

Petition for new trial denied, and dismissed.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

Cassius C. M. HOWE, Respt.

v.

MINNEAPOLIS, ST. PAUL, & SAULT
SAINTE MARIE RAILWAY COMPA-NY, Appl.

(.....Minn.....)

- *1. The rule that it is negligence per se for one driving a team on a highway not to "look and listen" for trains when approaching a railway crossing is not, as a general rule, applicable to a mere passenger in a vehicle, who has no control over the driver or his management of the team.
2. The plaintiff was, at the invitation of the owner, riding in a wagon owned and driven by another. He had no control over the driver or his management of the team. There was no relation of master and servant or principal and agent between them; neither were they engaged in any joint enterprise. There was no evidence that the plaintiff knew that the driver was incompetent or not keeping a proper lookout for trains when approaching a railway crossing. Held, that plaintiff's negligence was a question for the jury, not—withstanding the fact that it appeared that if he had exercised the degree of vigilance in "looking and listening" required of one having the control and management of a team he would have discovered the approaching train in time to have avoided injury.

*Headnotes by MITCHELL, J.

3. Held, also, that the verdict is not so disproportionate to the nature and extent of plaintiff's injuries as to justify this court in setting it aside as excessive.

(Collins, J., dissenting)

(July 10, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendant from an order of the District Court for Hennepin County denying motion for new trial after verdict in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. M. B. Koon, with Messrs. Alfred H. Bright and George B. Young, for appellant;

The plaintiff was familiar with that crossing; he had passed there frequently at all times of the year and in all kinds of weather; he knew that as he approached the crossing the view was more and more open to the west.

NOTE.—In connection with the above case on the subject of contributory negligence of a person riding with another when injured at a railroad crossing, as distinguished from the imputed negligence of the driver, see also Dean v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 6 L. R. A. 143; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. 80 L. R. A.

v. Howard (Ind.) 8 L. R. A. 593; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Markens (Ga.) 14 L. R. A. 231.

As to imputed negligence of driver, see Mullen v. Owosso (Mich.) 23 L. R. A. 693, and cases there cited in footnotes.

It was clearly negligence for him to rest his safety upon a look at 150 feet from the crossing under such conditions, even if it be assumed that the train was not visible when he reached that point.

Brown v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 22 Minn. 165; Abbott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 Minn. 482; Mantel v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 33 Minn. 63; Rheinerv. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 36 Minn. 170; Harris v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 37 Minn. 47; Marty v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 38 Minn. 106; Weyl v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 40 Minn. 350.

We know of no rule of law that excuses one from the charge of negligence for not seeing a train simply because some part of it is obscured.

Mantel v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 33 Minn. 62; Freeman v. Duluth, S. S. & A. R. Co. 74 Mich. 86, 3 L. R. A. 59.

Under such circumstances it must be held that the plaintiff either did not look, or that his look was careless.

Brown v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 22 Minn. 165; Miller v. Truesdale, 56 Minn. 274; Heininger v. Great Northern R. Co. (Minn.) 61 N. W. 558.

If the plaintiff was gazing at smoke to the east as he testified, that was no excuse for his otherwise gross negligence.

Purl v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co. 72 Mo. 168.

It is not every diverting circumstance, even near by, which excuses men from the use of their senses when entering upon a railroad track.

Donaldson v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 21 Minn. 293; Rogstad v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 31 Minn. 208; Abbott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 Minn. 482; Marty v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 38 Minn. 108; Dekay v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 41 Minn. 178, 4 L. R. A. 632; Heflinger v. Minneapolis, L. & M. R. Co. 48 Minn. 503; Magner v. Truesdale, 58 Minn. 486; Delaney v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 58 Wis. 67; Kearney v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 47 Wis. 144; Olson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 81 Wis. 41; Gebhard v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 79 Mich. 586; Guta v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 81 Mich. 291; Gardner v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 97 Mich. 240 (1893); Butts v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 98 Mo. 272; Elliott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 150 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 1068 (1893); McKinney v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 87 Wis. 282; Greenwood v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 124 Pa. 572, 8 L. R. A. 44; Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Hedges, 118 Ind. 5; Fletcher v. Fitchburg R. Co. 149 Mass. 137, 8 L. R. A. 748; Murray v. Pontchartrain R. Co. 81 La. Ann. 490; Baxter v. Troy & B. R. Co. 41 N. Y. 502; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Whitacre, 85 Ohio St. 627; Ormesbee v. Boston & P. R. Corp. 14 R. I. 102, 51 Am. Rep. 854; Smith v. Wabash R. Co. (Ind.) 40 N. E. 270.

Plaintiff was bound to look and listen.

Hoag v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 111 N. Y. 199; Brickell v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 120 N. Y. 290; Dyer v. Erie R. Co. 71 N. Y. 228; Orecent Twp. v. Anderson, 114 Pa. 643, 60 Am. Rep. 367; Dean v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 129 Pa. 514, 6 L. R. A. 143; Brannen v. Kokomo, G. & J. Gravel Road Co. 115 Ind. 30 L. R. A.

115; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Kutac, 72 Tex. 643; Allyn v. Boston & A. R. Co. 105 Mass. 77; Beach, Contrib. Neg. 2d ed. p. 143.

On petition for rehearing.

The issues as fixed by the decisions were not litigated, and were not submitted to the jury: the plaintiff is bound by the issues tendered by him, and determined adversely by this court.

Abbott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 Minn. 482; Studley v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 249; Hamilton v. People, 29 Mich. 192; Powell v. Heister, 45 Minn. 549; Smith v. Pearson, 44 Minn. 397; Coburn v. Life Indemnity & I. Co. 52 Minn. 424; Bergh v. Sloan, 53 Minn. 116; Green v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 55 Minn. 192; Earl Fruit Co. v. Thurston Cold-storage & W. Co. (Minn.) 62 N. W. 489; Loudy v. Clarke, 45 Minn. 477; United States Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 64 Fed. Rep. 985; Birge v. Bock, 44 Mo. App. 79; Payne v. Chicago & A. R. Co. (Mo.) 31 S. W. 885; Fairbanks v. Long, 91 Mo. 633; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 39 L. ed. 624; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 591, 37 L. ed. 292; Holmes v. Broidwood, 82 Mo. 610; Jandt v. Brook, 88 Iowa, 633; Moloney v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (Iowa) 63 N. W. 690; Pillars v. McConnell (Ind.) 40 N. E. 689; Minton v. Underwood Lumber Co. 79 Wis. 646; Powell, Appellate Procedure, 182; Sherard v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 83 S. C. 467; Nelson v. New York, 181 N. Y. 4; Dawson v. Schloss, 98 Cal. 194; Baughner v. Wilkins, 16 Md. 85, 77 Am. Dec. 279; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Harper, 29 Md. 380; Dennis v. Maxfield, 10 Allen, 138.

The proposition that it was not the duty of the plaintiff to look for the train is not supported by the authorities.

Brown v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 22 Minn. 165; Abbott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 Minn. 482; Studley v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 249; Rheinerv. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 36 Minn. 170; Rogstad v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 31 Minn. 208; Magner v. Truesdale, 58 Minn. 486; Heininger v. Great Northern R. Co. (Minn.) 61 N. W. 558; Dyer v. Erie R. Co. 71 N. Y. 228; Hoag v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 111 N. Y. 199; Brickell v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 120 N. Y. 290; Orecent Twp. v. Anderson, 114 Pa. 643, 60 Am. Rep. 367; Dean v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 129 Pa. 514, 6 L. R. A. 143; Holden v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 169 Pa. 1; Smith v. Maine C. R. Co. 87 Me. 339; Johnson v. Superior Rapid Transit R. Co. (Wis.) 64 N. W. 753; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Kutac, 72 Tex. 643; Allyn v. Boston & A. R. Co. 105 Mass. 77; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Howard, 124 Ind. 280, 8 L. R. A. 593; Miller v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 128 Ind. 97; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Miller, 25 Mich. 274; Potter v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 62 Mich. 22; Grostick v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 90 Mich. 598.

Mr. John W. Arctander, with Messrs. Welch & Welch, for respondent:

Can it under the circumstances be said as a matter of law, even if plaintiff himself was driving, that he was conclusively guilty of contributory negligence.

The facts do not show negligence as a matter of law.

Wright v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 94 Ky. 114; Grostick v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 90 Mich. 598; Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. v. Harrington, 181 Ind. 426; Kellogg v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 79 N. Y. 73; Greany v. Long Island R. Co. 101 N. Y. 419; Moore v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 42 N. Y. S. R. 489; Shaber v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 28 Minn. 108; Kelly v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 29 Minn. 1; Faber v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 29 Minn. 465; Loucks v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 31 Minn. 526; Howard v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 32 Minn. 214; Ittis v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 40 Minn. 273; Hendrickson v. Great Northern R. Co. 49 Minn. 245, 16 L. R. A. 261; Struck v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 58 Minn. 298.

A prudent man's attention may be diverted so that he will fail to look and listen, and it is proper to leave it to the jury to say whether it was negligence to so fail.

Shearn & Redf. Neg. § 90, p. 185, note; Barstow v. Berlin, 84 Wis. 357; Buswell, Personal Injuries, p. 246; Continental Imp. Co. v. Stead, 95 U. S. 161, 24 L. ed. 408; Piper v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 77 Wis. 247; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Dignan, 56 Ill. 487; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Nowicki, 148 Ill. 29; Weller v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 120 Mo. 635; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Cox, 8 Ind. App. 29.

Plaintiff was a passenger, not responsible for the driver's negligence, and it was not his duty to look or listen.

Little v. Hackett, 116 U. S. 366, 29 L. ed. 652; Robinson v. New York U. & H. R. R. Co. 66 N. Y. 11, 23 Am. Rep. 1; Dyer v. Erie R. Co. 71 N. Y. 228; Masterson v. New York C. & H. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 247, 38 Am. Rep. 510; McCallum v. Long Island R. Co. 88 Hun. 569; Bennett v. New Jersey R. & Transp. Co. 36 N. J. L. 225, 18 Am. Rep. 435; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Steimbrenner, 47 N. J. L. 161, 54 Am. Rep. 126; Covington Transfer Co. v. Kelly, 36 Ohio St. 86; O'Toole v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co. 158 Pa. 99, 22 L. R. A. 606; Follman v. Mankato, 85 Minn. 522; Pitts v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 79 Hun. 546; Crawford v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 22 Jones & S. 262.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action to recover for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff in a collision between a farm wagon, on which he was riding, coming from the north, and one of defendant's trains coming from the west. The collision occurred about 10 o'clock in the morning of December 29, 1892, at the crossing of the Osseo road with defendant's main line near Minneapolis. The trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for $20,000 which the court, with plaintiff's consent, reduced to $14,500. This appeal is from an order denying defendant's motion for a new trial. The negligence charged against the defendant was running its train at an unlawful and dangerous rate of speed and failing to give the required signals as it approached the crossing. It is not questioned but that the evidence was sufficient to justify the jury in 30 L. R. A.

finding that the defendant was guilty of negligence as alleged. Defendant's two contentions are, (1) that the verdict is excessive, and (2) that it conclusively appears that the plaintiff himself was guilty of contributory negligence in failing to look and listen for trains as he approached the crossing.

2. The verdict, even as it now stands, is large, but it is clearly not so disproportionate to the nature and extent of plaintiff's injuries as to warrant us in setting it aside as excessive. Plaintiff was a young man, in his best years, and his injuries are both serious and permanent, leaving him badly maimed and deformed for life. Indeed, it would be no exaggeration to say that the evidence would justify the conclusion that he is practically a physical wreck.

3. On the occasion in question, the plaintiff was riding with one Pomeroy, who owned and was driving the team and wagon. Pomeroy had overtaken him on the highway, and invited him to ride. The vehicle was a farm wagon with a box or rack nearly 8 feet high. The team was a gentle one, and, in approaching the crossing, was traveling at the rate of about 8 miles an hour. Plaintiff had no control over the team, or over Pomeroy in its management. There was no relation of master and servant or of principal and agent between them, nor were they engaged in any joint enterprise. Plaintiff was simply taking a gratuitous ride upon the invitation of the owner and driver of the team. Pomeroy, who was driving, and a young man named Wentworth, sat on a spring seat set on the bottom of the wagon box in the front left-hand corner, facing towards the west. Plaintiff, as they approached the crossing, was standing up near the center of the wagon on the right-hand side, and facing towards the team. The sight and hearing of all three were unimpaired. The road being bare of snow, the wagon made some noise, but not sufficient, as they testified, to interfere with their hearing. The morning was cold and frosty, with a light wind from the east. All three were familiar with the crossing, and plaintiff was aware of the fact that they were approaching it. There was no evidence that Pomeroy was not a competent driver. Neither was there any evidence that plaintiff knew or had reason to suppose that Pomeroy was not exercising proper care in looking and listening for approaching trains; certainly none that required a finding that he did. There were no exceptional circumstances that would have excused a traveler driving a team from looking for approaching trains. Neither did anything exceptional occur to divert the attention of one whose duty it would otherwise have been to look. Plaintiff's testimony, which was the only direct evidence of what he did, was that he did look to the west for approaching trains when he was about 225 feet from the crossing; that, seeing none, he turned and looked to the east, and, seeing none in that direction, he again looked to the west, when he was about 150 feet from the crossing; that, still seeing no train in that direction, he again looked to the east, when his attention was attracted to smoke, which he thought perhaps might come from a locomotive, but which proved to be from the smokestack of a factory near Camden Place, that, becoming satisfied that this was not from a train, he turned around to again look to the west, when he was about 25 feet from the track, when he discovered the approaching train within from 100 to 150 feet of the crossing, and going at a rate of from 40 to 50 miles an hour; that just at this time the horses made a jump or "lunge" forward; that Pomeroy tried to check them, but could not; that he (plaintiff) made an effort to get hold of the lines, but failed, and in an instant the collision occurred, and the next thing he knew was when he regained consciousness in the hospital. It is quite apparent from the evidence that the horses were the first to discover the approach of the train, and that neither of the three men in the wagon discovered it until it was almost on the crossing, and the horses within a few feet of the railroad track, when, in their fright, they sprang forward on the track, almost immediately in front of the engine. The highest rate of speed of the train testified to was from 40 to 50 miles an hour. The evidence consists largely of measurements and experiments made by the witness as to the distances at which a train coming from the west could be seen from different points on the highway by a traveler coming from the north, also of photographs illustrative and explanatory of this evidence. It is impossible to state on paper, at least in any reasonable space, anything like the full probative force of the evidence. But a careful examination of it satisfies us that it amounts to a mathematical demonstration that had plaintiff, when at the distance of 150 feet from the crossing, looked west up the track for an approaching train, he would and must have seen the train, conceding that it was running at the highest rate of speed testified to; also, that the view westward up the track was unobstructed for so long a distance that if he had looked in this direction from any point within 150 feet of the crossing he would have seen the train. Hence, although he testifies that he did look at the distance of 150 feet, it must be considered as conclusively established that he did not look, at least with the vigilance required of one driving a team, notwithstanding the "fog and mist" attempted to be raised for the purpose of showing that he might have looked and not seen the train. Moreover, if he had been the driver of the team, even if he had looked at a distance of 150 feet, it would have been negligence for him not to look again, when, as in this case, there was nothing to prevent his doing so. The evidence conclusively established negligence on the part of Pomeroy; and if the same kind and degree of negligence in "looking and listening" was required of plaintiff, in the exercise of reasonable care, as was required of Pomeroy, the driver, then plaintiff was, as a matter of law, guilty of contributory negligence, and the verdict cannot be sustained.

Defendant's contention is that the rule requiring a traveler on a highway, on approaching a railroad crossing, to "look and listen," so as to avoid danger from an approaching train, is, to its full extent, as applicable to one who is being carried in a vehicle owned and driven by another as it is to the driver, who has the control and management of the team, although the passenger has no control over the driver or the management of the team, and although no relation of principal or agent or master and servant exists between the two, so that the doctrine of respondet superior would apply, or although they are not engaged in a joint enterprise, so as to create a mutual responsibility for the acts of each other. We do not think that this is, or, on principle, ought to be, the law. Negligence means merely the want of ordinary or reasonable care according to circumstances. This court, in common with most courts, has held, as a matter of law, that reasonable care requires a traveler driving along a highway, when approaching a railroad crossing, to use his senses by looking and listening to discover and avoid danger from approaching trains. Under exceptional circumstances, there may be exceptions even to this rule. But the degree of care which an ordinarily prudent and cautious man usually exercises will depend somewhat upon the responsibility which is cast upon him. And it does not seem to us that, because reasonable care makes it the absolute duty of the person who has the control of the team and vehicle to look and listen, it necessarily follows that reasonable care imposes the same absolute duty upon one riding in the vehicle, but who is not intrusted with the control and management of the team, and has no control over the person who has. Of course, the fact that the passenger, who has no control over the team or driver, is not chargeable with the negligence of the driver, does not relieve him of the duty to exercise reasonable care to avoid danger. The fact that he is not responsible for the driver's negligence will not relieve him from responsibility for his own negligence. But the question is, What constitutes negligence, and what is the standard of reasonable care on the part of one situated as was this plaintiff? If plaintiff had known that Pomeroy was an incompetent driver, or had known or had reason to believe that he was not performing his duty by looking for approaching trains, and had nevertheless neglected to look for himself, he would undoubtedly have been guilty of negligence. Or if he had in some way actively participated in Pomeroy's negligence he would have been negligent. But that is not this case, or at least the evidence does not establish it. We think that it would hardly occur to a man of ordinary prudence, when riding as a passenger with a competent driver, whom he had no reason to suppose was neglecting his duty, that he was required, when approaching a railway crossing, to exercise the same degree of vigilance in looking and listening for approaching trains that he would if he himself had the control and management of the team. And our conclusion is that a court cannot hold, as a matter of law, that a passenger having no control over the team or its management is guilty of negligence merely because he does not exercise the same degree of vigilance in "looking and listening" on approaching a railroad crossing which is required of the one having the control and management of the team. It is a matter of common knowledge that under ordinary circumstances passengers do largely rely on the driver, who has exclusive control and management of the team, exercising the required care when approaching a railway crossing, and we do not think that the courts are justified in adopting a hard and fast rule that they are guilty of negligence in doing so. Every case must depend largely upon its own particular facts.

The authorities on this precise point are not as numerous as might be expected. In many of the cases where the driver or person in charge was negligent, the injured passenger was within an inclosed carriage or car, and hence had no opportunity to look or listen for approaching trains. It is, however, a noticeable fact that in most of the cases which repudiate the doctrine of Thorogood v. Bryan, 8 C. B. 115, and hold that the negligence of the driver in failing to "look and listen" is not imputable to the passenger, it does not appear that the passenger himself looked and listened, and no suggestion is made that any such absolute duty devolved upon him. Brickell v. New York C. & H. R. Co. 120 N. Y. 290, seems to go as far towards sustaining defendant's contention as any case in the books. But the facts of that case were peculiar. The plaintiff and the driver both occupied the same seat in a top buggy. As it was snowing and blowing, they raised the top, which was all inclosed except the front. This, with the snow and wind, rendered it more difficult to either see or hear approaching trains. This condition of things was necessarily known to plaintiff, who knew of the crossing. The court held that the evidence failed to show that plaintiff himself was free from negligence, which, under the rule in that state, he is bound to prove as part of his cause of action. This was decisive of the case, but the court proceeded, and further held that the evidence affirmatively and conclusively proved the actual existence of negligence of both the driver and the plaintiff. Upon the facts, this might well have been held upon the ground that the plaintiff himself actively participated in the negligence, and what the court said beyond this was not necessary to the decision of the case. That the trial courts of that state do not understand this case as laying down any such absolute rule as is sometimes supposed is evident from Crawford v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 22 Jones & S. 262. In that case the plaintiff sat on the back seat of a carriage, while her mistress sat on the front seat and drove. The plaintiff neither looked nor listened for approaching trains, and yet it was held that her negligence was a question for the jury. Crescent Twp. v. Anderson, 114 Pa. 643, 60 Am. Rep. 867, and Dean v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 129 Pa. 514, 6 L. R. A. 143, are sometimes cited in support of the doctrine now contended for by the defendant. In the first of these cases the plaintiff himself actively participated and united in the negligent act. And in O'Toole v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co. 80 L. R. A.

158 Pa. 99, 22 L. R. A. 606, the court says that in both of these cases "the decision was put on the ground that the negligence of the driver was apparent [to the plaintiff], and he was to some extent under the direction and control of the party injured." Some courts make a distinction between private conveyances and public conveyances operated by common carriers, but it seems to us that any distinction based on this ground alone is wholly indefensible on principle. Others seem to make the position of the passengers the test, holding, impliedly at least, that when he is seated away from the driver, by being separated from him by an inclosure, or by being inclosed in the carriage, is without opportunity to discover danger, or to inform the driver of it, the rule of "looking and listening" does not apply to the passenger, but that otherwise it does. The presence or absence of these circumstances may be, and usually would be, material evidence upon the question of the passenger's negligence, but to hold as a matter of law, and as a rule of universal or even general application, that in their absence the passenger is guilty of contributory negligence if he does not "look and listen," is in our opinion not justifiable upon either principle or reason. The circumstantial evidence in this case may tend quite strongly to prove that plaintiff, as well as the driver, was negligent, but that was a question of fact for the jury. A court would not be justified in holding that his negligence was conclusively established. If the court in its charge instructed the jury too strongly in defendant's favor on this question, it is not a matter of which it can complain.

Defendant's exceptions to the charge of the court are unavailing—First, because not seasonably taken before the jury retired; and, second, because they are, or at least most of them are, too general, being taken to parts of the charge involving two or more distinct propositions, some of which, at least, were unexceptionable, and the particular proposition objected to was not specified. We may, however, add that, while many of plaintiff's requests might have been properly refused on the ground that they were too long and involved to furnish much aid to the jury, yet we discover no prejudicial error in any of them. The assignments of error relating to the admission of evidence and to the refusal of the court to grant a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence are, in our opinion, all without merit.

Having arrived at the conclusion that plaintiff's contributory negligence was a question for the jury, and that the evidence was sufficient to justify the verdict, the result is that the order appealed from must be affirmed.

Collins, J., dissenting:

I dissent. I do not regard the verdict, as reduced by the court, as excessive, for the plaintiff was permanently and very seriously crippled. But I am of the opinion that it would be almost impossible to find a case, if this be not one, in which a court could say, as a matter of law, that the negligence of a plaintiff was conclusively established by the evidence. When instructing the jury, the court charged explicitly that although plaintiff was riding in Pomeroy's wagon upon invitation, and had no control over the team or driver, the duty was upon him to exercise the same care when approaching the crossing, and to be as diligent as to coming trains, as if he was driving his own team; and to this positive instruction plaintiff's counsel took no exception. That the jury disregarded this statement of the law is evident, for it must be conceded that had plaintiff been driving he could not have recovered. I do not claim that the charge of the court below on this point was an accurate statement of the law which should have governed the plaintiff's case, but, in any event, plaintiff's counsel, when contending that the driver's palpable negligence should not be imputed to their client, requested that the jury be charged that if he was guilty of negligence or of want of ordinary care, which contributed to his injuries, he could not recover. That this proposition is abundantly supported by the authorities cannot be questioned. Beach, Contrib. Neg. ¶115, and citations; Allyn v. Boston & A. R. Co. 105 Mass. 77. See also other cases commented upon in the main opinion.

At the crossing in question, the defendant's tracks were on an embankment, or fill, 9 feet above the natural surface of the ground. This fill gradually decreased to the west, until it reached a cut about 1,450 feet from the crossing. For several hundred feet westerly, this cut was slight and not deep enough to conceal from view any part of a locomotive above the wheels. It was demonstrated to a certainty at the trial that when on the highway 170 feet north of the crossing the plaintiff and his companions could have seen a train, if they had looked, at any point within 1,500 feet. At 100 feet from the crossing the approaching train was plainly visible for more than 2,300 feet, and, as a matter of fact, when the plaintiff and his companions were 100 feet northerly of the crossing the train was within 1,500 feet thereof, upon the top of an embankment, and necessarily within plain sight of the most indifferent of travelers. The train was so noticeable that in the prevailing opinion it is stated, notwithstanding plaintiff's positive testimony that he did look and did not see, "that it must be considered as conclusively established" that plaintiff did not look for a coming train. If it is conclusively established by the evidence that the plaintiff did not even look for the train which he knew was due about that time, at a crossing with which he was thoroughly familiar, standing up as he was, and having much better opportunities for looking and listening than had his companions, who were sitting on a seat so low that little more than their heads appeared above the sides of the wagon box, it seems to me that there can be no escape from the conclusion that, as a matter of law, not only did he fail to exercise ordinary care and prudence, such as an ordinarily prudent man would observe, but that he was extremely careless and negligent. To excuse him under such circumstances, to absolve him from the charge of contributory negligence, is to say that he who rides in a private carriage at the invitation of the driver may close his eyes to well-known and imminent dangers, and escape all responsibility if accident results, unless he be aware that the driver is reckless or unskillful, or unless the passenger actually aids in causing the accident. On the controlling facts, no difference can be pointed out between the case at bar and two of those mentioned in the principal opinion. Crescent Trp. v. Anderson, 114 Pa. 643, 60 Am. Rep. 867, and Dean v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 129 Pa. 514, 6 L. R. A. 143, and, applying the rules there laid down the plaintiff here had no cause of action. Finally, I note what is said concerning these two cases in the later one of O'Toole v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co. 158 Pa. 99, 23 L. R. A. 606, which was a case of collision between an electric and a steam car, and quoted in the main opinion, to the effect that in each of those cases the decision was put on the ground that the negligence of the driver was apparent, and he was to some extent under the direction or control of the party injured. If in either of the cases referred to in this remark there was anything said which suggested that the party injured had any control over the driver, or that he pretended to direct him in the slightest degree, or that such fact was patent in determining either case, I am unable to find it after a most careful reading of the opinions. And, especially with reference to the Dean Case, this can also be said of the assertion that both of the decisions were, in part, put on the ground that the driver's negligence was apparent to the passenger. As I read the Pennsylvania cases, they were decided against the parties injured solely and expressly upon the ground that the plaintiffs, riding by invitation, or gratuitously, had contributed to their own injuries by failing to exercise ordinary care and prudence when approaching a well-known place of danger; and this without the slightest regard to the presence of the elements mentioned in the O'Toole Case, or reference to such elements.

Rehearing denied.

ANOKA LUMBER COMPANY, and Albert C. Cobb, Assignee, etc., Appt., FIDELITY & CASUALTY COMPANY of New York, Appt., and Claus Edward NELSON, Intervener, Resp.

(.....Minn.....)

*1. The Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York issued an employers' liability policy to the Anoka Lumber

*Headnotes by BUCK, J.

NOTE.—The rapidly increasing importance of the subject of insurance against employers' liabilities makes this case a valuable one.

This decision makes the beginning of what must become a considerable branch of the law of insurance, and is believed to be a pioneer case.

Company, containing this clause: "The assured, upon the occurrence of an accident, and upon the notice of any claim on account of an accident, shall give immediate notice in writing of such accident or claim, with the fullest information available, to the company, at its office in New York city, or to the agent, if any, who shall have countersigned this policy." Held, that the assured need not give such notice until an accident happens and a notice of a claim is made on account thereof.

2. The above-described policy also contained several provisions relating to its liability, among others: (1) that it insured against all liability on account of fatal or nonfatal injuries suffered by an employee; (2) that the company, at its own expense, would take upon itself the settlement of any loss and the control of any legal proceedings taken against the assured to enforce a claim for injuries to the assured employees; (3) that the assured should not settle with the injured employee without the consent of the insurance company; (4) that no action should be brought against the insurance company after the period in which an action might be brought by the employee against the employer, unless at such period there was a suit pending for such purpose, in which case an action might be brought, in respect to the claim involved in such suit, against the company, by the assured, within thirty days after judgment is rendered in such suit, and not later. Held, that this policy, by the terms of the instrument itself, was not merely one of indemnity against any act of the employee, but that, in case of an accident to him whereby he had a cause of action against the assured, the company would assume and pay the liability. Held, also, that the employee having, while so employed, sustained an injury whereby he recovered a judgment therefor against the assured employer for the sum of $2,255.03, the insurance company was liable therefor upon an action against it, without the employer having first paid the judgment.

3. An employee was personally injured while his employer held an employers' liability policy, and, before the employee commenced an action against the employer to recover damages for such personal injuries, the employer made an assignment under the insolvency law. Gen. Laws 1881, chap. 148. Judgment was afterwards rendered in such action in favor of the employee against the employer for such personal injury; and, in an action upon the judgment by the assured employer against the insurance company, the employee garnished the latter company, and then intervened in the suit. Held, that the claim of the assured against the insurance company did not pass to the assignee by the assignment, and that the intervener is entitled to maintain his garnishee proceedings in the action to recover the amount of his judgment.

(December 23, 1895.)

A PPEALS by plaintiff Cobb and defendant Fidelity & Casualty Company from orders of the District Court for Hennepin County denying motions for a new trial after verdict for intervener in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on an employers' liability insurance policy. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Cobb & Wheelwright for appellant Cobb.

Messrs. Keith, Evans, Thompson, & 30 L. R. A.

Fairchild, for Fidelity & Casualty Co., appellant:

There has been by the failure on the part of the assured to perform the provisions of the condition as to notice, a breach in the contract in a matter which, upon fair and reasonable construction of the contract, the parties must be deemed to have considered vital to its existence, and such breach has discharged the insurer from liability.

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, title Contracts, p. 914.

The contract is one of indemnity only, and there can be no recovery under it in this action because the judgment of Nelson has not been paid by the assured.

1 May, Ins. §§ 1, 2; Castellain v. Preston, L. R. 11 Q. B. Div. 380; Weller v. Eames, 15 Minn. 461, 2 Am. Rep. 150; Cutler v. Southern, 1 Wms. Saund. 116; Hous v. Freidheim, 27 Minn. 294; Houston v. Nord, 39 Minn. 490; Campbell v. Rotering, 42 Minn. 115, 6 L. R. A. 278; Bausman v. Credit Guarantees Co. 47 Minn. 377; American Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Stoneman, 53 Minn. 212; American Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Waleen, 53 Minn. 28; Pioneer Sav. & L. Co. v. Bartsch, 51 Minn. 474; Mechanics' Sav. Bank v. Thompson, 58 Minn. 346.

Mr. A. Ueland, for respondent:

No stipulation in an insurance policy which is used knowing that it cannot or will not be observed, can be said to be a condition, not even when it is called so in the policy.

1 May, Ins. § 162.

If the agreement is to pay damages, there must be damages. A liability to pay, such as a judgment, is not sufficient. But if the contract is to prevent, or protect against, any other particular event when that event takes place, the contract is broken and an action will lie.

Chace v. Hinman, 8 Wend. 452, 24 Am. Dec. 39; Re Nagus, 7 Wend. 499; Webb v. Pond, 19 Wend. 428; Martin v. Bolenbaugh, 42 Ohio St. 508; Kirkey v. Friend, 48 Ala. 276; Jones v. Childs, 8 Nev. 121.

An insurance policy is a personal contract and not assignable except by consent.

Carroll v. Boston Marine Ins. Co. 8 Mass. 515.

Under the English bankruptcy act, which vested the property in the assignee just as fully as it does our insolvency law, Lord Denman held that where a cause of action for trespass was not wholly founded upon an injury to property, but partly upon a personal wrong, it did not vest in the assignee.

Rogers v. Spence, 18 Mees. & W. 571.

If this principle is applied, the assignee has no claim upon the insurance, even though a cause of action did exist when the assignment was made, for the cause of action is not on account of anything that has in any way diminished the insolvent estate.

The intervener has no claim on that estate as his claim was unliquidated at the time of the assignment, and as he was not then a "creditor" within the meaning of the insolvency law or the deed of assignment.

Burrill, Assignm. 763; Re Adams, 12 Daly, 454; Black v. McClelland, 12 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 481; Re Schuchardt & Wells, 15 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 161; Re Bailey & Pond, 2 Woods, C. C. 222; Dusar v. Murgatroyd, 1 Wash. C. C. 13;

Wilder v. Peabody, 37 Minn. 248; Re Shotwell, 49 Minn. 186.

Buck, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action is brought under an employers' liability policy issued by the Fidelity & Casualty Company of New York to the Anoka Lumber Company, insuring the company for twelve months against liability for damages, up to stated limits, on account of fatal or non-fatal injuries suffered by an employee or employees of the assured while engaged in the occupations and at the places specified. On May 25, 1893, while the policy was in force, one of the insured's employees, Claus E. Nelson, the intervener, and respondent was injured. At that time the assured was informed and knew of the accident, but it then gave no notice to the insurance company of its occurrence. On September 13, 1893, Nelson claimed damages of the assured, on account of this accident; and the same day the assured, for the first time, gave notice to the agents of the insurance company that the accident had happened, and that Nelson claimed damages in consequence of it. Afterwards, on October 3, 1893, the assured made a formal statement of the accident and claim on blanks furnished by the appellant. At the time of receiving said statement, appellant claimed that there had not been a compliance with condition 3 of the policy, and afterwards, when notified by the lumber company that suit had been brought by Nelson, refused to defend the action or to consider the accident as coming under said policy, on account of material prejudice, and on account of failure to report the accident promptly. On the 4th of October, 1893, the assured made an assignment, under the insolvency laws of this state, to Albert C. Cobb; and to said Cobb was delivered, with other assets of the Anoka Lumber Company, the policy here in question. In the schedule of assets filed by the Anoka Lumber Company no mention of this policy or reference to it was made. On December 20, 1893, Nelson commenced his action against the Anoka Lumber Company; and on July 5, 1894, he obtained judgment in his suit against it for $2,285. This judgment is wholly unpaid. Upon the entry of this judgment, the present action was brought against this appellant, by said Cobb, as assignee, and the Anoka Lumber Company. Nelson garnished this appellant insurance company, and thereafter intervened in this action. Upon the trial, the court directed a verdict against the defendant for the amount of the judgment obtained by said Nelson, and interest, viz., for $2,380, and also directed the jury to find said sum so found against said defendant to be payable to the intervener by defendant as garnishee of said Anoka Lumber Company. The Fidelity & Casualty Company, and Albert C. Cobb, as assignee of the Anoka Lumber Company, each prosecutes an appeal.

A provision of the policy, numbered 3, is as follows: "The assured, upon the occurrence of an accident, and upon notice of an accident, and upon notice of any claim on account of an accident, shall give immediate notice, in writing of such accident or claim, with the fullest information available, to the company at its office in New York city, or to other agents, if any, who shall have countersigned this policy."

1. The Fidelity Company contends that this provision requires notice to be given whenever any accident occurs, and also that another notice must be given whenever any claim on account of an accident is made. Opposed to this contention, it is asserted that notice is not required by the terms of such provision until there has been both an accident and a claim by reason thereof. We are of the opinion that the latter construction is the correct one. Nelson never made any claim against the Anoka Lumber Company for damages prior to the 18th day of September, 1893; and, upon such claim being made, the company immediately notified the insurance company of the accident and Nelson's claim. No question is raised as to the sufficiency of the written statement or proof of loss. If the injured party, Nelson, never made any claim against the Anoka Lumber Company on account of his injuries, it would be an idle ceremony for the company to give notice of the accident to the insurance company. It only concerned the company when it was notified by Nelson that he claimed damages against it on account of the injuries he had received. When it learned of the threatened liability, then it notified the responsible party in accordance with the terms of its policy, and that was all the notice required under the provisions of its contract. We have no doubt as to the correctness of the construction we have placed upon the provision of the policy we have quoted; but, if there were any doubt as to the meaning of the clause, then such doubt must be solved in favor of the insured. Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 21 Minn. 85, 13 Am. Rep. 385; Symonds v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 23 Minn. 491. This language used in the insurance policy is that of the company in the instrument which it makes and issues; and where it expresses itself in terms of its own creation, and if it needs any interpretation or construction, it certainly cannot complain if the meaning is resolved against it. The cases are numerous which sustain this position. In the case of Anderson v. Fitzgerald, 4 H. L. Cas. 484, 510, it is said: "A policy ought to be so framed that he who runs can read. It ought to be framed with such deliberate care that no form of expression by which, on the one hand, the party assured can be caught, or by which, on the other, the company can be cheated, shall be found upon the face of it." We are not unmindful of the force of the appellant's contention that it would be of great benefit to have immediate notice of any accident, as well as of any claim, for the purpose of getting at the truth of the alleged accident, of finding witnesses who know the facts, and making preparation for the defense of any anticipated claim for damages. Other reasons might be readily suggested, but the insurance company must abide by its own terms, which it has deliberately expressed, and by the whole contract of which these terms are a part. Upon the other hand, it may be said that it might frequently be difficult for the employer to give immediate notice. Take, for instance, our lumbermen, where the employees are in the pine woods, a long distance from the employer's place of business or residence, and where it would, perhaps, on account of deep snows or want of rapid communication in traveling or by telegraph, be an impossibility to know of the accident for a long time, perhaps weeks or months after its occurrence. Under such a condition of things, a policy requiring immediate notice of the accident to the employee to be given to the insurance company by the employer would render the policy entirely useless. We might very well say that the provision under consideration does not need either construction or interpretation, but that the usual and ordinary meaning of it from a grammatical point of view is that which we have indicated and decided.

2. The next question for our consideration is whether the defendant's policy is a contract of indemnity. The defendant claims that it is not liable, because the Nelson judgment has not been paid by the plaintiff. If it be simply a contract of indemnity, then, under the decision of this court in Weller v. Names, 15 Minn. 461 (Gil. 376), 2 Am. Rep. 150, the payment of the judgment is a condition precedent to the right of the plaintiff's recovery. With the rule laid down in that case we need not interfere in what we say here, because in this case we must look to the various terms and scope of the whole policy, and thus determine the intent and meaning of the parties, as evidenced by such contract of insurance. A brief abstract of the policy shows: (1) An insurance against all liabilities on account of fatal or nonfatal injuries suffered by an employee. (2) The company may take upon itself the settlement of any loss, and, if any legal proceedings are taken against the assured to enforce a claim for indemnity for injuries, the company shall, at its own cost and expense, have the absolute conduct and control of defending the same throughout in the name and on behalf of the assured, and the assured shall render to the company all possible aid in securing information and evidence in effecting settlements. (3) The assured shall not, except at his own cost, settle any claim or incur any expense without the consent of the company previously given, in writing, except that he may provide such immediate surgical relief as may be imperative. (4) No action shall lie against the company after the expiration of the period within which an action for damages on account of the given injuries or death might be brought by such claimant or his representatives against the assured, unless, at the expiration of said period, there is a suit, arising out of such accident, pending against the assured, in which case an action may be brought in respect to the claim involved in such action against the company by the assured within thirty days after judgment is rendered in such suit, and not later. Thus we see, from the very terms of the instrument itself, that it is not merely an agreement to indemnify the plaintiff against any act of the employee, but that in case of an accident of such a character as to injure him, whereby a cause of action arises against the assured, the insurer or company will assume the liability. The company takes upon itself the settlement of loss and the control of all legal proceedings, and the assured is forbidden to settle any claim or incur any expense without its consent in writing. At the expiration of the time when a suit can be brought by the employee against the employer arising out of such accident, an action may be brought in regard to such claim against the company within thirty days after judgment is rendered in such suit. If the plaintiff is forbidden to settle a claim for an accident of this kind, we fail to see how it is imperative upon him to pay a judgment rendered against him upon such a claim, as a condition precedent to his right of recovery. The insurance company, by the terms of its own policy, has taken into its own hands the whole machinery for settling such claim, and will not allow the employer to do it. When the injured employee notified the plaintiff of his claim, it at once notified the insurance company thereof, and also of the commencement of the suit against it by Nelson, the injured employee, and demanded that the defendant defend the same. It did not do so, and the burden and expense of so doing fell upon the plaintiff. In that action, which went to judgment after trial and a verdict of $2,285.02, it does not appear that there was any fraudulent collusion between the employer and employee. If the defendant challenges the amount of the verdict as excessive, it can properly be said that its own negligence or obstinacy in not defending may in some measure account for it. At least, it did not do what it agreed to, and in this respect it is bound by the judgment so rendered, which is a substantial liability against the plaintiff in favor of Nelson, the employee.

80 L. R. A.

3. We will now consider the question of the claim and rights of the intervener, Nelson. His claim is hostile to that of the assignee, and the defendant denies any liability to either. When the Anoka Lumber Company made its assignment, no suit had been commenced against it, and judgment was not recovered therein until the ensuing July. Therefore, if the intervener's rights are superior to those of the assignee, it is because the rights and interest which the Anoka Lumber Company had in the insurance policy did not, under its assignment, pass to the assignee, Albert C. Cobb; and if the intervener, Nelson, is entitled to the benefits of this insurance policy, it is by virtue of his garnishment, and not by virtue of any privity of contract growing out of the insurance policy so executed between the Anoka Lumber Company and the insurance company. We are of the opinion that the rights and remedies of the Anoka Lumber Company growing out of the insurance policy did not pass to the assignee by virtue of the assignment. "The assignment is for the benefit of creditors having existing debts against the assignor at the time of the assignment," Wilder v. Peabody, 37 Minn. 248. This was not an existing debt against the insurance company at the time of the assignment. Nelson's merely making a claim against the lumber company did not create a debt which could properly be said to then exist; and whether the lumber company would ever have a substantial claim against the insurance company depended upon two contingencies, one of which was the recovery of a judgment against it by Nelson for an unliquidated personal injury claim in a suit for damages therefor, and the other that the insurance company had a right, under the contract policy of insurance, which it might exercise, to take upon itself the settlement of any loss; and, if legal proceedings were taken by Nelson against the lumber company to recover damages for injuries, then the insurance company had the right to have the absolute conduct and control of the defense throughout the entire proceedings in the name and on behalf of the Anoka Lumber Company; and it was forbidden to settle any claim or incur any expense without consent of the insurance company. Until the judgment in favor of Nelson against the Anoka Lumber Company was rendered, some nine months after the assignment, or whether it was liable at all, the amount of the liability of the Anoka Lumber Company in favor of Nelson was entirely unknown; and, if known, the insurance company had the right to assume and settle or pay it, not to the Anoka Lumber Company, but to Nelson, at least up to the time when Nelson commenced his action against the Anoka Lumber Company, on the 20th day of December, 1898, more than two months after the date of the assignment. This claim might never have become an existing debt in behalf of the Anoka Lumber Company, and until then it was too indefinite and uncertain to come within the provisions of the insolvency law, empowering an insolvent to make an assignment of all of his unexempt property. It was not entered in the schedule of assigned assets, and for the very good reason that a claim resting upon such contingencies would be of no avail, and only a source of embarrassment in settling the insolvent's estate as provided by law. We do not hold that certain rights of action may not be assigned, such as those for recovering real or personal property, and for the recovery of damages, where they have been withheld, or the value thereof diminished, where the cause of action existed at the time of the assignment; but we do not think that a claim or cause of action of this kind comes within the letter or spirit of the law. It is therefore held that the Fidelity & Casualty Company of New York is liable, under its policy, for the amount of the judgment recovered by Nelson, against the Anoka Lumber Company, vis., $2,285.02, with lawful interest thereon, and that the same is subject to the garnishment of the intervener, Claus Edward Nelson.

The order of the Trial Court denying the plaintiffs and the defendant's motion for a new trial is affirmed.

NORTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

William H. STRAUSS, in Behalf of Himself and Other Stockholders,

v.

CAROLINA INTERSTATE BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION.

(.....N. C.)

1. The affairs of an insolvent building and loan association are to be settled in North Carolina by charging borrowing members 6 per cent interest on the amounts they received, with a credit for all they have paid into the concern, whether it was called "fines," "penalties," "weekly dues" or by any other name, while nonborrowing members are entitled to interest at the same rate upon the amounts due them.
2. A receiver of a building and loan association cannot foreclose under the power of sale contained in mortgages held by the association.
3. Instructions to receivers which seem material, if not necessary to their work, may be given by an appellate court in reviewing instructions given by a lower court.
4. Receivers will not be instructed as to the distribution of funds until they have them in court.

(December 20, 1896.)

A PPEAL by the receivers and nonborrowing members of the Carolina Interstate NOTE.—For the rights of a member of an insolvent building and loan association, see note to Southern Bldg. & L. Assn. v. Anniston Loan & T. Co. (Ala.) 29 L. R. A. 120.

80 L. R. A.

Building & Loan Association, from an order of the Superior Court for New Hanover County in favor of borrowing members upon a petition by receivers of the association for instruction as to the proper method of settling its affairs. Modified.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Messrs. E. S. Martin and Ricard & Weill, for appellants:

This court should prescribe such a rule for the settlement of the affairs of this corporation as will do equity and justice between its several stockholders.

Davis v. Industrial Mfg. Co. 114 N. C. 327, 23 L. R. A. 823.

Insolvency occurring in such an association, even the constitution and by-laws of the association itself are not to be regarded.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. 2d ed. p. 506; Towle v. American Bldg. L. & I. Soc. 61 Fed. Rep. 446.

There is an implied agreement that all burdens must be equally borne and all profits equally shared.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. 505, 506.

The true rule of settlement is: The borrowing member must pay what he actually received, with legal interest thereon, but is not to be allowed to deduct all that he has paid in.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. 580.

The value of his stock, after deducting all losses and expenses must be approximated, and that value, so ascertained, be allowed as an offset on his mortgage debt, and the balance of said debt paid.

Endlich, Bldg. Assn. 581; City Loan & Bldg. Assn. v. Goodrich, 48 Ga. 445; Goodrich v. City Loan & Bldg. Assn. 54 Ga. 98.

Messrs. W. R. Allen and Jacob Battle, for appellees:

The rule adopted in the court below is that the borrowing member be charged with all he has received and 6 per cent interest thereon for the average time, and that he be credited with all he has paid to the association, from all sources, and 6 per cent interest thereon for the average time.

This is the rule established by the supreme court for settlement between the borrowing member and the association.

Rowland v. Old Dominion Bldg. & L. Asso. 115 N. C. 825; Meroney v. Atlanta Bldg. & L. Asso. 116 N. C. 882.

If the insolvency of the association consists in its inability to meet the demands of its own members, and if these demands existed prior to the appointment of a receiver, it is difficult to see how the appointment of a receiver can change the rule of settlement.

A receiver's general duty may be said to be to take possession of the state in the room and place of the owner thereof.

Blapham, Eq. § 580.

The appointment does not affect the title, the property, or rights of any who have an interest therein.

Ex parte Dunn, 8 S. C. N. S. 207; Ellis v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co. 107 Mass. 1; Union Bank v. Kansas City Bank, 136 U. S. 223, 34 L. ed. 341.

If the right existed prior to the appointment of the receiver to set off against the debt to the association all that the borrowing member has paid in, and if the appointment of the receiver does not change the title to the property, the right exists to-day.

Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 136 U. S. 39, 34 L. ed. 879; Endlich, Bldg. Asso. 2d ed. 518, note 2, and cases there cited.

Furches, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant is what is called a "building and loan association," organized as a corporation under the laws of North Carolina. Defendant becoming insolvent, the plaintiffs brought an action in the superior court of New Hanover county to close out and wind up the concern. The petitioners, Iredell Meares and P. B. Manning, were appointed receivers, and filed their petition, and asked instructions from the court, in which they say: "Your receivers respectfully report to the court that, in the attempt to collect the debts due to the defendant association by its members, they are met with the difficulty of how to adjust the balances that may be due the association, between the amount of the debt and the amount which may have been paid in by the borrowing members on their shares of stock. The complication arises from the fact that the borrowers, who are indebted to the association, are likewise stockholders therein, and, as stockholders, liable for their pro rata share of whatever losses may have been incurred in the failure of the association. If the relationship between the borrower and the association was simply that of debtor and creditor, the balance could be easily ascertained. The association, however, under its plan, loaned money only to its members; and these members made monthly payments on their stock, which, when amounting, with accruing profits, to the par value of their stock, were expected to be applied to the extinguishment of their loan, the stock being then canceled. The failure of the association, however, eliminates the possibility of maturing the stock, and necessitates an equitable adjustment between its members for the collection and distribution of the assets." Upon the hearing, Judge Graham made the following order:

"This action coming on to be heard before his honor, A. W. Graham, judge presiding in the sixth judicial district, at chambers at Clinton, North Carolina, on the 11th day of October, 1895, by consent of all parties thereto, upon the petition of Iredell Meares and P. B. Manning, receivers of the defendant, the Carolina Interstate Building & Loan Association, praying the court for direction and instruction as to the winding up and settlement of the affairs of said corporation with and among the members and shareholders thereof, and the same being argued by counsel for said receivers and borrowing members of said defendant corporation, respectively, and considered by the court, the court rejects all of the plans of settlement suggested in the petition of said receivers, and now orders, adjudges, and decrees, and the said receivers are hereby advised and directed to wind up, adjust, and settle the affairs of said corporation defendant, and distribute the assets thereof among the respective members or shareholders of said corporation upon the principles and in the manner following, that is to say: In the settlement with members of said corporation who have borrowed money therefrom, and secured the said loan either by a pledge of stock, or by pledge of stock and mortgage on property, and who are now indebted to said association, the said receivers shall charge the said borrowing member with the amount of money loaned to him by said association, charging interest thereon from the date of said loan to the 24th day of July, 1895, at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. And said member shall be credited with all sums of money paid in by him, whether paid as dues, fines, premiums, or in any other manner, and also with interest on all of said payments from the respective dates thereof until the said 24th day of July, 1895, and the sum so ascertained shall be deducted from the amount of the loan to said member by the association, and the balance remaining shall be the debt due and owing by said member to the said association, and shall bear interest from the said 24th day of July, 1895, until paid, at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, and be secured by the mortgage executed by said member to the association securing the original loan. And upon the payment of said balance so ascertained, with all interest thereon, the mortgage given as aforesaid shall be released and discharged by said receivers according to law. That the said receivers shall ascertain as aforesaid the amount due by each and every member or shareholder of said association, and shall notify him in writing of the same, and demand payment thereof; and, if the said amount due by such member shall not be paid within thirty days after service of said notice, the said receivers shall, in their discretion, proceed, either under the power of sale contained in said mortgage, or by proceedings in the proper court having jurisdiction, to foreclose said mortgage, and sell the property conveyed thereby upon such terms as to said receivers shall seem best, or said court may prescribe. And in those cases where only a pledge of stock was made as security for the loan, upon such default the said receivers shall, in their discretion, bring suit against said member personally to recover the balances due said association by him. Upon the ascertainment in the manner aforesaid of the balance due by the borrowing members to the association, and the payment thereof, such borrowing member shall cease to be a member of said association, and shall be discharged from all further liability to said association, either as debtor or stockholder, and shall have no right to participate in the distribution of the assets of said association, but his stock shall be deemed canceled and surrendered. All sums of money collected from borrowing members as hereinbefore directed shall be held by said receivers, and applied by them, with all other assets of said association—First, to the payment of cost, charges, and expenses of executing the trust of said receivership; secondly, to the payment of the creditors of said association in full; and the residue thereof shall be distributed equally and ratably among the nonborrowing members of the association in proportion to the amounts paid in by them, respectively, upon the shares of stock held by them, including the interest upon said several payments from the average date thereof until the said 24th day of July, 1895. And the court doth retain this cause for further direction."

To the order of Judge Graham the receivers and nonborrowing stockholders excepted and appealed.

This is a new question to us. But it seems to us that the parties have applied too much refinement to their theories of settlement, when one more simple, based on plain business methods, would be better. The receivers say in their application for instructions that the whole trouble grows out of the fact that all the parties interested are both stockholders and debtors to the concern; that, if the debtors were not stockholders, there would be no trouble in adjusting the matter. This being so, it seems to us to be of easy solution, by first considering every one having stock in the concern, whether as creditor or debtor, as a corporator. Endlich, Bldg. Asso. § 527. Then consider each member indebted to the concern as a debtor, and you have the condition of things that the receivers say, if they existed, there would be no trouble in adjusting the whole matter. It seems to us that there can be no trouble in the mind, separating the parties interested upon the line we have indicated. And, if this is so, it would seem that the greatest trouble in the way of a settlement has been removed.

30 L. R. A.

But there are other matters to be considered. On the 24th of July the first receiver was appointed, and the corporation ceased at that time. Id. § 528. This date is when the receivers' work commenced, and will be the dividing line between the work of the corporation and that of the receivers. Every one who held stock in the concern on that day, whether as a borrowing or nonborrowing member, is a corporator, and must so remain until the concern is closed out, and will be subject to the burdens and entitled to the benefits according to his amount of stock. Ibid. The capital of the concern will be the shares of stock it has issued, and which have not been redeemed; when redeemed in part, then only as to that part unredeemed, and any other available assets it may have. Its assets will be what money and effects it had on hand on the 24th of July, 1895, including, of course, what debts were then owing to the corporation. In making collections of the borrowing members, they should only be charged with the amounts they had received. Id. §§ 527, 528. And under our statutes as construed in Rouland v. Old Dominion Bldg. & L. Asso. 115 N. C. 825, 116 N. C. 877; Meroney v. Atlanta Bldg. & L. Asso. 116 N. C. 882,—these borrowing members can only be charged 6 per cent interest on the amounts they received, from the time they received them, and are entitled to credits on the amount for all they have paid into the concern since they borrowed the money, whether it was called "fines," "penalties," "weekly dues," or by any other name. The nonborrowing members will be entitled to have interest computed on the amounts due them at the rate of 6 per cent. The receivers should be fully empowered, by order of court, to proceed to collect in the funds of the concern, and to do any other necessary act for the benefit of the concern; to employ attorneys, if necessary, whose pay must be fixed by the court. The appointment of the receivers of this insolvent corporation caused the debts and mortgages due the concern to mature, and they may be collected at once. Endlich, Bldg. Asso. § 528. This rule only applies to insolvent building and loan associations, so far as we have been able to see. But we know of no law that will authorize the receivers to foreclose under the power of sale contained in the mortgages, as we see they were made to the corporation, and the corporation alone is empowered to foreclose by sale.

At first we entertained some doubt as to whether we should review the judgment of the court below and give instructions to the receivers. But as it seemed material, if not necessary to their work, we have gone as far as we thought we were authorized in doing. Beach, Receivers, § 259. But we must decline to give any instruction as to the distribution of the funds until the receivers have them in court. This we think is the well settled rule of equity.

Therefore the order appealed from will be modified and reformed in accordance with this opinion.

Beverly SCOTT, Appt.,

S. H. FISHBLATE.

(.....N. C.....)

A mayor is not subject to a civil action for damages because of an erroneous order made through malice, for the imprisonment of a person for contempt, if it was an order made in court and within his power to make.

(December 17, 1895.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for New Hanover County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for false imprisonment. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

* Mr. Thomas W. Strange, for appellant: If the court ordering said arrest or making said commitment is one of limited jurisdiction, the rule is the judge is liable in a private action for such judicial act, whether it be in excess of, or outside of, his jurisdiction; and such jurisdiction is not presumed, but must be proved.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 669, notes 1, 2.

False imprisonment is the unlawful restraining of a person contrary to his will, either with or without process of law.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 669; Bigelow, Torts, student's ed. pt. 2, chap. 7, § 8, pt. 144.

There was no law in existence prohibiting any one, except a health officer, from burying night soil, at the time of plaintiff's arrest. Therefore a warrant was issued and the plaintiff arrested thereon, detained, and restrained of his liberty without any authority whatsoever, for the warrant was void, and the defendant had exceeded his authority and his jurisdiction.

State v. Weed, 21 N. H. 262, 53 Am. Dec. 188; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 673, note 1.

Defendant is certainly a magistrate of limited jurisdiction, and if such a magistrate exceeds his jurisdiction and imprisons another, he is guilty of false imprisonment.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 669, note 2, p. 673.

Contempt committed in the presence of the court, as alleged in this case, may be punished summarily; but to justify such a punishment and make it lawful, the court must cause the particulars of the offense to be specified on the record, and a copy of the same to be attached to every committal, attachment, or process, etc.

Code, vol. 1, § 650; State v. Mott, 4 Jones, L. 451; Re Deaton, 105 N. C. 59.

Mears, Ricaud & Weill and W. R. Allen, for defendant:

When a justice is acting in a judicial capacity within the sphere of his jurisdiction, no action will lie for any judgment, however erroneous or malicious.

Furr v. Moss, 7 Jones, L. 526; Bradley v.

Fisher, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 335, 20 L. ed. 646; Pratt v. Gardner, 2 Cush. 63, 48 Am. Dec. 652; Cooke v. Bangs, 81 Fed. Rep. 640.

Furches, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of false imprisonment.

At the time of the act complained of, the defendant was mayor of the city of Wilmington, and plaintiff was under arrest, upon a warrant issued by defendant, upon a charge of "burying night soil" within the limits of the city. The gravamen, the act complained of, is an order for contempt of court, made by defendant, under which plaintiff was imprisoned in the common jail of New Hanover county for a number of days. Sufficient appears in the history of this case, as contained in the record, to satisfy us that defendant acted badly on the occasion of making this order, and that he was lacking in that respect for the position he occupied that is usually found in those occupying such positions, and as should have governed his conduct on that occasion, and it seems to us that the testimony of De Rosset and others strongly tended to establish plaintiff's contention that defendant's court was not in session when this order was made; that it was made hastily, and in bad temper; that defendant resumed the chair, and took control of plaintiff's case; that he had just before made an order to remove, for the purpose of carrying into effect an order he had no right to make, when he did make it; and that the claim of defendant, as a reason why he told Clowes (who seems to occupy the convenient positions of justice of the peace, chief of the city police, and clerk of the mayor's court) to fine plaintiff for contempt of court, was that his order given to Clowes, as his clerk was an afterthought. But this was defendant's testimony, and he introduced other testimony tending to sustain his contention that his court was in session at the time the order was made. But this case presents for our consideration a very grave proposition of law, in which the suffering and damage of plaintiff, and the bad conduct of defendant, must be subordinated, for the present, to a discussion of the individual rights of the citizen and the independence of the judiciary. All courts exercising judicial powers have the inherent right to punish for contempt. This power is necessary to their existence, and, where it is for conduct in the presence of the court, it is final, and cannot be reviewed by this or any other court. Bradley v. Fisher, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 335, 20 L. ed. 646; Pratt v. Gardner, 2 Cush. 63, 48 Am. Dec. 652; Cooke v. Bangs, 81 Fed. Rep. 640; State v. Mott, 4 Jones, L. 451; Re Deaton, 105 N. C. 59. As we have said, this power exists in all courts having and exercising judicial functions,—mayor's courts and justice's courts, as well as higher courts, having and exercising greater jurisdiction. Cooke v. Bangs, and Re Deaton, supra. The defendant then had the right—the power—to make the order of contempt, if he was sitting, and his court was open for the transaction of business when he made the order; and, if it was made then, it was in the exercise of a judicial power, and was a judicial act,—a judgment of the court,—and a civil action cannot be maintained by the plaintiff against the defendant for damages, though the order complained of was erroneous, and made through malice. Pratt v. Gardner, Cooke v. Bangs, and Bradley v. Fisher, supra. This seems to be a wrong without a remedy, which is said to be contrary to the spirit of our institutions “that where there is a wrong, there is a remedy.” But, if this is so, it is necessarily so, and it must be taken that the plaintiff agreed that it shall be so. But for the government, of which he is a part, there would be no law, nor would there be any courts to right public wrongs, none to which the citizen (the plaintiff) could appeal to have his private rights declared and enforced. But for the law, and the courts to declare and enforce the law, the plaintiff would be without remedy for any grievance, and the law, of course, must prevail. To have this legal protection, it is necessary to have courts,—judges, justices of the peace, including the courts of mayors of towns and cities; and it is the experience and wisdom of our country that these courts cannot exist, or at least cannot discharge their judicial functions, unless they are made free from pecuniary liability for their judgments while so acting. This does not protect them from impeachment, nor from indictment for misconduct, fraud, or corruption in office, because these are public wrongs, committed against the government, whose servants they are.

NOTE.—For liability of judicial officer for acts of a judicial nature, see Austin v. Vrooman (N. Y.) 14 L. R. A. 138, and note; Williamson v. Lacey (Me.) 25 L. R. A. 506; Thompson v. Jackson (Iowa) 27 L. R. A. 92, and note.
80 L. R. A.

This brings us to the real issue in this case, and that is, whether the defendant's court was open for the transaction of business when he made the order imprisoning the plaintiff for thirty days for laughing in his court; and the jury has settled this question, if there are no errors in the rulings and instructions of the court. There are no exceptions to evidence, and there is no exception to the charge of the court upon the question as to whether the defendant's court was in session or not when the order committing plaintiff for contempt was made. It is expressly stated that there was no exception to this part of the charge. Nor do we find any exception to the charge of the court “except that the court did not give the prayers asked by plaintiff.” We have examined these prayers with care, and can see no error in the refusal of the court to give them to the jury. The first is principally as to whether the “burying night soil” was an offense, under the ordinances of the city of Wilmington, or not, and whether the defendant would not be liable for issuing the original warrant of arrest. If this had been the gravamen declared on in the complaint, it would have presented a very interesting question. Cooke v. Bangs, supra. But it is not, and we do not feel called upon to discuss this question. The gravamen, as we have before stated, is the order for contempt. The only part of this prayer applicable to the case in hand is the closing paragraph, and this was given, in substance, accompanied with the statement that there was no exception to this part of the charge. The other prayers, if asked,—and we are treating them as if asked in writing,—are subject to the same reasons given for not giving the first, and we find no error in the court's refusing them.

There is another exception as to the juror Solomon Bear, and we can very well see, from the conflicting evidence as to whether defendant's court was in session or not, and the surroundings, why the plaintiff should not want Bear on the jury. But we are unable to see any legal error the court made in calling him into the jury box. It seems to be one of the many incidents which take place in the progress of a trial, by which a party is prejudiced, and for which the only relief is at the discretion of the judge. This was asked and refused, and there can be no review of his ruling in this court. After a careful investigation of the case, we find no error entitling the plaintiff to a new trial.

The judgment of the court below is affirmed.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

Thomas H. MAJOR, Appt.,

v.

J. W. CAYCE et al.

(.....Ky.....)

The trustees of a common-school district may contract with a teacher that the latter may teach certain higher branches and as a part of his compensation have the right to charge and receive compensation therefor from all pupils taking such branches, under statutes entitling all pupils of school age within the district to free tuition in certain studies, and providing that no teacher shall be required to teach any other than the common-school branches, unless it is so specified in a written contract with the trustees.

(December 4, 1895.)

APPPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Christian County sustaining a demurrer to the petition in a proceeding brought to compel defendants to provide instruction in the district school for

NOTE.—The above case presents a peculiar question in the law of public schools, which does not seem to have been decided in any prior case.

For some other matters respecting employment of teachers, see Gates v. Fort Smith School Dist. 30 L. R. A.

(Ark.) 10 L. R. A. 186; Hull v. Aplington Independent School Dist. (Iowa) 10 L. R. A. 278, and note; Marion v. Oakland Bd. of Edu. (Cal.) 20 L. R. A. 197; Hosmer v. Sheldon School Dist. No. 2 (N. D.) 25 L. R. A. 353.

plaintiff's daughter without charging extra compensation therefor. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. J. I. Landes and John Feland, for appellant:

All of the resident pupils of the district are entitled to instruction in every branch of learning that is taught, by permission of the trustees, in the school during the term for which the common school is to be kept.

There is an instance of a "common school," and a "private school" conducted in the common-school building in District No. 78 at one and the same time, which is plainly against the policy of the law.

The statutes provide that all of the resident pupils of the district shall have the privilege of the school "free of expenses" and without being required "to contribute toward defraying" the expenses of the school.

Mr. M. D. Brown for appellees.

Grace, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant, Thomas H. Major, being a citizen and resident of common-school district No. 78, Christian county, and being the father of four children resident therein, and within the school ages between six and twenty years, and the father being thus entitled under the law to the benefits of said common school for the education of his children, which was being taught in said district by one G. V. Donnell, under a contract with appellees, as trustees of said district, yet appellant complains that he is denied, and that his children are denied, the full benefit of said common school, to which, under the law, they are entitled, in this: that he says his eldest daughter being sufficiently advanced, and having capacity to study algebra and higher arithmetic, and that both himself and his daughter desiring to do so, yet she is refused the benefit of instruction in these particular branches, unless he will pay additional and specific compensation for such instruction to the teacher, which, he being unwilling to do, he therefore seeks by this proceeding against the trustees and the teacher to compel them to furnish such instruction in these branches to his daughter. Plaintiff states in his petition that these particular studies are in addition to those prescribed by the state board of education, which he says embrace "spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, English grammar, English composition, geography, physiology, hygiene, civil government, United States history, and history of Kentucky, and the nature and effect of alcoholic drinks on the human system." And plaintiff says that the said trustees have authorized and permitted the defendant George V. Donnell (the teacher), employed by them as aforesaid to teach the common school in said district, to introduce and teach in said common school certain other higher studies or branches of learning, which are not embraced in the course of study in such schools under the statute, and which have not been prescribed by the state board of education. viz.: "algebra, higher arithmetic, Latin, bookkeeping, etc.;" and that defendant George V. Donnell has established classes, and is teaching these branches in the school along with, and in addition to, the studies required by law to be taught in such common schools. Plaintiff further alleges that before filing this proceeding he laid his complaint before the trustees, and requested them to compel the teacher to so give the instruction to his daughter in these higher classes, without extra compensation, which they refused to do. Plaintiff contends that under the Constitution and by the provisions of the common-school law his daughter is entitled to this right as claimed. We are cited by plaintiff to the following sections of the common-school law of this state: Ky. Stat. § 4363, chap. 113. This section provides that there shall be maintained throughout the state of Kentucky a uniform system of common schools, in accordance with the Constitution of the state and this chapter. Section 4364 provides that "no school shall be deemed a common school, within the meaning of this chapter, or be entitled to any contribution out of the school fund, unless the same has been, pursuant hereto, actually kept, or is under contract to be kept, by a qualified teacher therein, . . . for five months during the same school year, and at which every child in the district between the ages of six and twenty years has had the privilege of attending, whether contributing towards defraying its expenses or not: provided, nothing herein shall prevent any person from attending a common school, who will obtain the consent of the trustees, and the teachers, and pay the required tuition fees." This section again repeats that "tuition shall be free of expense to every pupil child." Section 4366, among other things, provides that when the school shall require an assistant to serve regularly at a salary, such assistant shall hold a certificate of qualification, and be employed by the trustees. Section 4383 provides that "the state board of education shall, among other duties, prescribe and publish a public graded course of study for common schools, specifying the order of studies, and the time to be allotted to each, which course of study shall be observed by the teacher, and enforced by the trustees." Section 4388 designates what the instruction prescribed by the board shall embrace, and the same is correctly set out by plaintiff in his petition, and has been quoted herein. Section 4445 provides that "the trustees in their corporate capacity, at a meeting called for that purpose, shall employ a qualified teacher, and agree with him as to compensation." Section 4506 provides that "teachers shall faithfully enforce in school the course of study, the use of the text-books adopted in the county, and the regulations prescribed in pursuance of the law. . . . But no teacher shall be required, or under any obligation to teach any other than the common-school branches prescribed by the state board of education in the common schools, unless it shall be so specified in a written contract with the trustees." It may be noticed that while the petition of plaintiff, in speaking of the authority and permission given by the trustees of this school district to the teacher to teach these other and higher branches of education than those prescribed by the state board of education, yet it does not say, in so many words, that the teacher was authorized by the trustees to charge and receive compensation therefor; and while it may be fairly inferred therefrom that such was the case, yet this point is made clear by appellant's counsel in their brief, wherein they say: "In this case, as shown by the allegations of the petition, the trustees of common-school district No. 78 of Christian county employed Donnell to teach the school for five months, beginning September, 1895, and allowed him in the contract of employment to teach what are called the 'higher branches,' not prescribed in the course of studies for common schools, and allowed him to charge tuition fees for these higher branches; and that the teacher refused to permit a daughter of appellant, who is a pupil, within the school age, of the school, to study some of these higher branches which are mentioned in the petition without the payment of extra tuition therefor to the teacher, which appellant refuses to do," etc.

Assuming, as we do, that under the school law the pupils, all within the age and resident in the district, are entitled to attend these common schools, and to receive tuition in all the branches prescribed by the state board of education to be taught therein, free of expenses, and without contributing anything to the expense of such school; and assuming, as we do, that the trustees must in good faith in their conduct with reference to these schools in all respects observe and carry out the provisions of the school law, appropriating to the support of such common school the entire fund provided by law for defraying the expenses of same,—yet we are at a loss to understand what right it is that plaintiff is entitled to, under this school law, that he has been deprived of. It is not alleged that the trustees have in bad faith, or even unlawfully or wrongfully, or at all, in their contract with the teacher, omitted or neglected to demand and require of the teacher to do everything incumbent on him as such teacher. They did not omit from the studies or branches to be taught by him any study or branch of education that the state board of education required to be taught in the common schools of the state. Neither was the teacher authorized to charge or demand, neither has he charged or demanded, of plaintiff any compensation whatever for teaching his children all the branches required by law to be taught, the same that are taught to every other pupil in the school. Neither did he refuse to teach and give instruction to the children of appellant in every branch of education required by law to be taught in common schools, nor did he demand any compensation therefor. In the language of the law, all this was given and tendered, and ready to be performed by the teacher, free of any and all charges to appellant, for his children, as well as to every other child within the school age in the district. There was not accorded, under this contract between the trustees and the teacher, any right or privilege to the children of any other parent resident within the district than was accorded to the children of appellant.

80 L. R. A.

Keeping in view these essential requirements of the law, that the tuition as prescribed by the state board of education must be taught in all common schools of the state, and that every child resident within the several school districts within the school age shall be entitled to attend and to receive instruction in all these branches free of cost, all beyond this was subject to the control, authority, and management of the trustees. They select and make the contract with the teacher, and fix his compensation; they determine where, and under what circumstance, an assistant shall be employed; and, of course, in both cases the trustees must fix the salary to be paid, both the teacher and the assistant, looking in all cases to the school fund. All this matter is under the jurisdiction of the trustees. True it is that we find that under section 4506, before quoted, the trustees may, in their discretion, and by written contract with the teacher, require that he shall teach other branches than those prescribed by the state board of education. This is a matter in their discretion, and can only be done by contract with the teacher. Where the school fund is sufficient to pay such a teacher, and where, by the contract in writing between the trustees and the teacher, they undertake to have other and higher branches taught than those prescribed by the board, paying therefor out of the common-school fund, then doubtless every pupil child who has capacity to study such higher branches, would be entitled to receive such instruction free of charge. But in this case no such requirement was made. No such contract was made between the trustees and the teacher, and we think herein is where appellant's counsel have misapprehended the rights of their client. So far from the trustees contracting with the teacher to give instruction in these higher branches of education, making him compensation therefor, this was expressly disavowed in the contract that they did make with him. And as a part of their contract with the teacher, by which, instead of his being required to do this as a part of the service to be rendered by him for the stipulated price to be paid, it was, on the contrary, expressly agreed that this teacher should have the privilege of teaching these "higher branches," and, as a part of his compensation, that he should have the right to charge and receive compensation for such service from all those who sought to avail themselves of his services in these branches. Such persons paid, and none other. We are unable to see any wrong in all this done to appellant. And while we do not find this thing expressly authorized, we do not find it prohibited by the school law, nor can we see that it in any way impairs the equal benefit of this common-school system to appellant with all others; while we do find that by section 4964 any person may attend these common schools who can obtain the consent of the trustees and of the teacher, and who will pay the tuition charged. It is noticed that it is not provided by law whether this tuition so paid by such an one shall go to the common-school fund, or be paid to the teacher. Doubtless it is left to be disposed of as the trustees and the teacher may determine by contract; and if by this authority, persons not entitled by law to tuition in the common schools can obtain same, we see no reason why by the same method, by contracts between trustees and the teacher, provision may not lawfully be made, as in this case, whereby the teacher may give lessons in the higher branches of education for his own profit. In fact this higher branch of education is contemplated by the common-school law, and it is marked out, and the way and manner in which it may be generally obtained for any particular school district is set forth by article 10 of this same chapter 118, entitled "Graded Common Schools," wherein it is pointed out when, where, and under what circumstances this graded common school may be established; the same to be based on the consent of the people interested, and to be supported by a system of taxation, as supplementary to the common-school fund, properly speaking. In these graded common schools it is contemplated that these higher branches may be taught. This stage of graded common schools, however, has not yet been reached in the district wherein this particular school is being taught. No taxes have been levied for this purpose. Until that is done, and while no fund is provided for it, we see nothing illegal in the trustees, by contract with the teacher, permitting him to give lessons in these higher branches, not prescribed by the common-school law, to those pupils whose parents desire them to take such instruction at their own expense. We have not spoken of the policy of this plan, nor do we commend it as altogether safe. We only say it is not illegal. We think this matter may be fairly left to the sound discretion of the trustees. Of course we regard it a power that should be exercised with great prudence and caution, and care should be taken always that it in no wise impairs the duty, obligation, or efficiency of the teacher in the common-school branches required by law to be taught. The petition does not charge that the efficient service in this matter has been impaired.

Judgment affirmed.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

GUM-ELASTIC ROOFING COMPANY,
Appl.,
v.

MEXICO PUBLISHING COMPANY et al.

(140 Ind. 158.)

1. Attaching a certified copy of a justice's judgment as an exhibit to a complaint to enjoin the execution of a judgment does not make it a part of the record so that it can be considered on appeal.

2. Allegations that a judgment was rendered without jurisdiction of the subject-matter or person of defendant, that no sufficient ground for publication was shown, and that the affidavit stated no ground for attachment,—are mere legal conclusions and not sufficient to require the enjoining of the judgment.

NOTE.—Injunctions against judgments for errors and irregularities.

I. For erroneous rulings and decisions.

- a. Generally.
- b. In refusing a continuance.
- c. In rulings on pleadings or motions.
- d. In rulings on evidence.
- e. As to incompetency of evidence.
- f. As to insufficiency of evidence.
- g. As to excessive judgments.
- h. As to parties.

II. For irregularities.

- a. Generally.
- b. As to infants.
- c. In trial.
- d. In matters of form.
- e. In pleadings and papers.
- f. In records and dockets.
- g. In regard to time of rendering judgment.

1. For erroneous rulings and decisions.

The case of GUM-ELASTIC ROOFING CO. v. MEXICO PUB. CO. holds that the rendition of a judgment by a justice of the peace for a greater amount than the sum stated in the affidavit in attachment is only erroneous, and not void, where the justice had jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the parties. An injunction is therefore refused. This is in accord with the general doctrine.

a. Generally.

As to injunctions against judgments that are erroneous, the rule is well established that equity will not generally interfere with such judgments because there is adequate remedy at law. So, error in refusing a continuance, or erroneous rulings on pleadings, or refusal of a defense, and erroneous rulings on evidence, or that the judgments were rendered on incompetent evidence, or on insufficient evidence, or without evidence, will not be ground for an injunction. To this latter proposition there are some exceptions on the ground of mistake, or where the error is such as to render the judgment void. It is a general rule that an injunction will not be granted against judgments that are excessive, but to this there are exceptions under statutes rendering such judgments void, or where there is no remedy at law, or where the error is such as to render it fraudulent; and some cases go so far as to grant an injunction for excessive judgments on the ground that they are against conscience, or where the matters are connected with the settlement of an estate which is regarded as giving equity jurisdiction. In regard to judgments erroneous as to parties, or that the death of a party was not suggested of record before the judgment was rendered, an injunction will not be granted, but where the error in regard to parties is such as to render the judgment void or fraudulent, an injunction will be granted.
80 L. R. A.

So, it may be said that the rule is almost universal that an injunction will not be granted against a judgment that is erroneous. Neville v. Pope, 95 N. C. 346; Collier v. Falk, 66 Ala. 223; McIndoe v. Hazelton, 19 Wis. 568, 88 Am. Dec. 701; Budd v. Long,

3. A complaint does not show absence of jurisdiction in a justice which will require an injunction against his judgment which alleges that the "process under which appellant was before said justice being publication of notice as a nonresident."

4. A justice's rendition of judgment for more than is demanded by the affidavit of attachment does not make the judgment void so as to warrant an injunction against its execution.

(January 10, 1895.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Marion County in favor of defendants in an action brought to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

18 Fla. 228; Danaher v. Prentiss, 22 Wis. 311; Stockton v. Briggs, 5 Jones, Eq. 309; Earl v. Matthey, 60 Ind. 202; Dunham v. Downer, 31 Vt. 249; Norman v. Burns, 67 Ala. 248.

As there is a remedy by appeal. Neville v. Pope, supra; Rountree v. Walker, 46 Tex. 300; Clopton v. Carlos, 42 Ark. 560; Nicklin v. Hobin, 13 Or. 406.

And an injunction will not be granted for errors in a decree as to priority in insolvent estates, where there is no showing that the same is unjust and that the complainant was not negligent. Coffin v. McCullough, 30 Ala. 107.

Or for errors of the court in a settlement of an account, there being a remedy by appeal. Ex parte Christian, 23 Ark. 641.

So, an injunction will not be granted against an erroneous judgment, as the remedy is in an appellate tribunal. Meem v. Rucker, 10 Gratt. 506.

So, a judgment in favor of a clerk, or commissioner of a court, on a note given for land sold under a court decree, will not be enjoined on the ground that it is erroneous, as the remedy is in the court rendering such judgment. Whiteside v. Latham, 2 Coldw. 91.

Or for illegality inherent in the judgment where the suit is not to annul, as the remedy for such illegality is by an action of nullity. Bell v. Francke, 23 La. Ann. 599.

And an injunction will not be granted on the ground that it is erroneous because the defendant was not personally responsible, as the remedy is by writ of error or supersedeas. Turpin v. Thomas, 2 Hen. & M. 139, 3 Am. Dec. 615.

Or for rendering a personal judgment in a foreclosure suit for notes not yet due, to be paid when they become due, as the remedy is by appeal. De Haven v. Covatt, 33 Ind. 344.

Or for giving a personal judgment against a trustee of an association for a corporate debt, as the remedy is by appeal or certiorari. Wolf v. Schleiffer, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 553.

That the proceedings to render stockholders liable should have been conducted under the Iowa Code, and not under the Iowa act of 1847, and that the court could not render them liable for more than the amount of their stock, and that they were liable to the company only on certain previous conditions, such as the advertisements of the calls for instalments,—will not entitle an injunction, as the proceedings and judgment of a court within its jurisdiction cannot be inquired into, and set aside in this manner. Hampson v. Wear, 4 Iowa, 12, 66 Am. Dec. 116.

And as a party cannot obtain an injunction against a judgment for alleged errors, a stranger to the suit cannot. Mayes v. Woodall, 35 Tex. 637.

And that a judgment was obtained on an ordinance that was unconstitutional will not authorize 30 L. R. A.

Mr. M. Moores for appellant.
Mr. J. E. Flores for appellees.

Monks, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant, who was the plaintiff below, instituted this action against the appellees to vacate a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace, and to enjoin the collection of the same. It is alleged in the complaint "that the Mexico Publishing Company, on November 7, 1892, recovered a pretended judgment in proceedings in attachment and garnishment against the plaintiff, and against certain indebtedness due the plaintiff from the Kimberlin Manufacturing Company, before a justice of the peace, which judgment was in and for the sum of $86.70 and costs of such proceeding. And the plaintiff makes an injunction against the same, as the remedy is by appeal. New Orleans v. De La Cuesta, 10 La. Ann. 724.

A judgment upon bonds given under an unconstitutional act for the sale of liquor will not be enjoined; although the judgment was erroneous it was not void, and will be operative until reversed by a writ of error. Cassell v. Scott, 17 Ind. 614.

So, alleged errors in a judgment of the supreme court will not be relieved against, or sale enjoined, where a party through his own negligence fails to present to the court in which the suit was pending his claim for relief which properly belongs to that court as to the constitutionality of the act on which the judgment is based. Reeves v. Cooper, 12 N. J. Eq. 223.

That a judgment of the supreme court is erroneous will not be ground for injunction. Cochrane v. Van de Vanter (Wash.) 43 Pac. 42.

And that the supreme court rendered an erroneous decision through haste and inadvertence is not ground for an injunction. Pettes v. Bank of Whitehall, 17 Vt. 435.

Or that such court overlooked material facts in the record will not entitle an injunction against the judgment, the remedy being by petition for rehearing. Russell v. Slaton, 33 Ga. 195.

An irregular affirmance in the supreme court furnishes no ground for enjoining a judgment, as there is a remedy in the supreme court to set aside the affirmance. Roebeling Sons Co. v. Stevens Electric Co. 33 Ala. 39.

Or where the attention of the supreme court was not called to the fact that a scire facias showed that it was not issued in time, and which should have caused a reversal, the judgment will not be enjoined. Nicholson v. Patterson, 5 Humph. 394.

And where such court rendered a judgment for the plaintiff below, against whom there had been a verdict and it was erroneous, a lower court cannot enjoin the same, as the remedy is by motion in the supreme court. McCrimmin v. Cooper, 37 Tex. 422.

A judgment on an injunction bond where it has been affirmed on appeal will not be enjoined, although the judgment in the case in which the injunction bond was given was reversed on appeal, as an erroneous judgment is binding until reversed. Boos v. Morgan, 140 Ind. 206.

And a judgment in replevin omitting the alternative, and corrected in the circuit court, and in the justice's court also, after the circuit court had dismissed the appeal, will not be enjoined for errors therein, there being a remedy by appeal. Putnam v. Webb, 15 Or. 440.

An injunction will not be granted for errors in attachment proceedings, the remedy being in that court. Reeves v. Cooper, 12 N. J. Eq. 224, 493.

And an injunction will not be granted on the said pretended judgment a part of this complaint, and files a duly certified transcript of said judgment, and of all the proceedings herewith, as a part of this complaint, marking such transcript Exhibit A." The plaintiff avers that such pretended judgment was and is null and void for the following reasons: "(1) Because the said justice of the peace had no jurisdiction of the subject-matter; (2) because such justice had no jurisdiction of the person of the said Gum-Elastic Roofing Company; (3) because no valid or legal process was ever served upon said Gum-Elastic Roofing Company, and no sufficient ground was shown for publication of notice to said defendant; (4) because the affidavit upon which the proceedings in attachment and garnishment were commenced before the justice of the peace states no ground for an attachment against said roofing company; (5) because the only process under which the said Gum-Elastic Roofing Company was before said justice being publication of notice to such company as a nonresident, and said company not having entered an appearance, and not being in court either by its officer, agent, or attorney, said justice of the peace exceeded his jurisdiction, and rendered judgment against the said corporation for the sum of $86.70 and costs, while the amount stated in the affidavit in attachment filed in said proceedings on behalf of the said Mexico ground that the verdict is erroneous. Rhodes Burford Furniture Co. v. Mattox, 185 Ind. 372.

Or because the verdict was "for the amount sued for" in consolidated actions. Bentley v. Crenshaw, 85 Ga. 371.

Or that the verdict was obtained by undue influence with the jury, and that the verdict was erroneous, as the remedy is by appeal. Terrell v. Dick, 1 Cal. (Va.) 546.

As to verdicts, see Cochran v. Street, infra, and Jawless v. Reese, 8 Bibb, 479, infra, II. c; Butt v. O'Neal, 61 Ga. 368, infra, II. c; Leonard v. Collier, 53 Ga. 387, infra, II. c; Parsons v. Pierson, 128 Ind. 479, infra, II. L.

An injunction will not be granted on the ground of errors of the court to obtain a retrial of facts falsely found by the jury, whether right or wrong. A court of equity is not to hear errors or reverse judgments of law. The case of Ambler v. Wyld, 2 Wash. (Va.) 88, infra, d. must be admitted goes the full length, but that decision is a solitary one, and will not be allowed to overturn a long train of contrary decisions, and the oldest and best-established maxims of our law. Fentress v. Robins, N. C. Term Rep. 177, 7 Am. Dec. 704.

An error of the trial court in the finding of facts is not the mistake of the party, within the meaning of Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 306, authorizing relief against judgments. Center Twp. v. Marion County Comrs, 110 Ind. 579.

An injunction will not be granted because a judgment was for gold or silver, or equivalent in United States currency, as the error, if any, could be reviewed by appeal. Windisch v. Gussert, 30 Tex. 744.

That a judgment was void and illegal because given for confederate notes will not entitle an injunction where complainant does not allege in his petition that such notes at the time of their maturity were worthless, and under the rule as now enforced in this court, as well as in the Supreme Court of the United States, there is nothing to show otherwise than that it was a fact greatly to his advantage. Roller v. Wooldridge, 46 Tex. 485.

But in Thompson v. Bohannon, 38 Tex. 241, where the court erred in rendering a judgment enforcing written contracts for confederate money, apparent on the face of the notes, the judgment was enjoined. This case is not referred to in Roller v. Wooldridge, supra, but the doctrine in regard to such judgments is regarded as changed by the decisions in the United States Supreme Court. The decision in the United States Supreme Court is not quoted, but in McManus v. Scott, 48 Tex. 601, the change in the line of decisions in Texas in regard to confederate money is noted in the following manner: "Though the instructions were in accord with the decisions of the supreme court of this state at the time it was given, the rule has since been changed so as to conform to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in regard to transactions in confederate treasury notes," citing Thorington v. Smith, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 861.

80 L. R. A.

And erroneous taxing of witness fees will not be cause for enjoining the judgment, as the remedy is by certiorari. Stokes v. Knarr, 11 Wis. 390.

An injunction will not be granted for errors in giving judgment for costs, as the remedy is in the court of errors. Thompson v. Meek, 3 Sneed, 271; Calderwood v. Trent, 9 Rob. (La.) 227.

Defects and informalities as to the maturity of the debt in a bill of foreclosure will not authorize an injunction against the same, where the complainant is not prejudiced. Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co., 45 Fed. Rep. 438.

A court of chancery does not act as a court of errors to examine or reverse the judgments of a court of law. Curtis v. China, 1 Ohio, 429; Bullard v. White, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) 288; Odom v. McMahan, 67 Tex. 232; Miller v. Morse, 23 Mich. 365; Ex parte Christian, 23 Ark. 641.

As the remedy is by appeal or writ of error. Holmes v. Remsen, 7 Johns. Ch. 228.

That a judgment is rendered by a mistake of law, will not entitle an injunction where there is a remedy by appeal. Moeschler v. Lochte, 12 N. Y. S. R. 855.

Or a remedy in the court to correct the same. Jillet v. Union Nat. Bank, 56 Mo. 304.

Where the circuit judge made a mistake in remanding the case to the common pleas, instead of allowing it to remain in the circuit court, and the chief justice on a rule to open the case remanded the case to the common pleas, when it ought to have been remanded to the circuit, and the defendant did not know of this until the time to take out a writ of error had expired, an injunction will not be granted where no merit was shown. Stout v. Slocum, 52 N. J. Eq. 83.

But where complainant obtained a change of venue and the case was sent to another justice, but not the next nearest justice, who refused to try the case, and the officer took him before another justice, to which complainant objected, and a judgment of a fine and costs was rendered, and certiorari was taken to the district court, which refused to try the case, and sent it to the circuit court, which refused to try it, and sent it back to the district court,—an injunction will be granted as the judgment is void, although it does not appear whether an attempt has been made to correct the erroneous decision in the certiorari proceeding, and the remedy to resist execution will not prevent an injunction. Connell v. Stelson, 33 Iowa, 147.

And where the justice refused a change of venue in forcible detainer, and Mo. Rev. Stat. 1899, § 6241, provides that after affidavit for change of venue is filed the justice shall not have jurisdiction, the judgment will be enjoined where the title of the land is in question. Jones v. Pharis, 59 Mo. App. 254.

Publishing Company stated that said Mexico Publishing Company ought to recover the sum of $68.60, and gives said sum as the amount sought to be recovered; (6) because said justice of the peace attempted to render a judgment for a larger amount than the sum stated in the affidavit in attachment as due from the said plaintiff herein to said Mexico Publishing Company. Wherefore plaintiff prays that said judgment be vacated and annulled and held for naught, and that the defendants, and each of them, be perpetually enjoined from enforcing, or seeking to enforce, said so-called judgment." Appellees filed separate demurrers to the complaint, upon the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, which were sustained, and appellant excepted. Appellant refused to amend the complaint, and judgment was rendered in favor of the appellees.

Did the court err in sustaining the demurrers to the complaint? This is the only question to be decided. The certified transcript of the judgment and proceedings before the justice of the peace, which were filed with the complaint as an exhibit, did not thereby become a part of the record, and cannot be considered in determining the question of the sufficiency of the complaint. Conwell v. Conwell, 100 Ind. 437; Brooks v. Harris, 41 Ind. 390; Wharton v. Wilson, 60 Ind. 591; Morrison

And in Cochran v. Street, Wythe, 69, 1 Wash. (Va.) 79, it was held that the mistaken belief of four jurors that they were bound by a majority to render a verdict contrary to their own judgment was sufficient ground for enjoining the judgment at law, where this was discovered too late to apply for a motion for a new trial.

But in Howard v. McCall, 21 Gratt. 305, the case of Cochran v. Street, 1 Wash. (Va.) 79, as to allowing a juror to impeach his verdict, was overruled.

b. In refusing a continuance.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment at law for error in refusing a continuance. Syme v. Montague, 4 Hen. & M. 180; Risher v. Koush, 2 Mo. 96, 23 Am. Dec. 442.

As the remedy, if any, is by resort to a higher tribunal. Western v. Woods, 1 Tex. 1.

In Naylor v. Phillips, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 53, it was said that the illegal refusal of a continuance will not justify an injunction against the judgment.

c. In rulings on pleadings or motions.

The exclusion of a defense will not be ground for an injunction against a judgment, there being a remedy by appeal. Hart v. Life Assn., 54 Ala. 496; Moore v. Dial, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 155; Danaher v. Prentiss, 23 Wis. 311; Dunn v. Fish, 8 Blackf. 407; Robbins v. Holley, 1 T. B. Mon. 191.

Or where there is a remedy by certiorari which the party through negligence has failed to secure. Haloomb v. Kelly, 57 Tex. 618.

And erroneous proceedings before a justice refusing an affidavit of illegality will not authorize an injunction against a sale on an execution, as there is a remedy in the circuit court to compel the justice to hear and determine the claim under an affidavit of illegality. Wordehoff v. Evers, 13 Fla. 339.

In Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 11 U. S. 7 Cranch, 332, 3 L. ed. 392, where an injunction was sought because a plea had been erroneously rejected at law, it was held that where a case was fully and fairly tried at law, though the defense ought to have been sustained, an injunction will not be granted against the judgment.

Errors of a court of law in not sustaining a plea of non est record will not authorize an injunction against the judgment. The remedy is by appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas. Black v. Smith, 13 W. Va. 730.

An injunction was refused for change in the interrogatories, where such change was made before they were executed, and for refusing leave to file an amended plea, where a motion for a new trial was not made, and the bill of exceptions was not lost, and the clerk was not insolvent, as was alleged in the bill of complaint. Reynolds v. Dunlap, 94 Ga. 727.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment. 80 L. R. A.

ment on the ground of erroneous rulings. Meixell v. Kirkpatrick, 28 Kan. 315.

Or where erroneous rulings on the trial were not excepted to, as there is a remedy on error. Robuck v. Harkins, 38 Ga. 174.

And errors in allowing an amended attachment will not be ground for enjoining a sale. Tilton v. Coffield, 93 U. S. 163, 25 L. ed. 363.

And error in refusing a new trial will not be ground for enjoining the judgment. Reynolds v. Horine, 13 B. Mon. 234; Collins v. Butler, 14 Cal. 223.

In Hood v. New York & N. H. R. Co., 23 Conn. 609, it was held that an injunction will not be granted to prevent a party from prosecuting his motion for a new trial, on the ground that it was apprehended that the court would commit errors and set the judgment aside.

Erroneous rulings on a motion for a new trial, or failure to charge the jury, will not authorize an injunction against the judgment. Montgomery v. Griffin, Walk. (Miss.) 453.

d. In rulings on evidence.

That the rulings on the evidence were erroneous will not authorize an injunction against the judgment. Gibson v. Cohen, 35 Ga. 350.

Mistakes made by a witness are not ground for enjoining a judgment. Governor v. Barrow, 13 Ala. 540.

And the same was held where erroneous evidence was received, the remedy being by certiorari. Hotzeln v. Cox, 22 Tex. 62; Leiby v. Ludlow, 4 Ohio, 409.

An injunction will not be granted on account of admitting improper evidence, and for errors in the verdict, as the remedy is by appeal. Long v. Smith, 39 Tex. 160.

And error in the admission or rejection of evidence, or for erroneous decisions of law, will not justify relief by injunction where complainant moved for a new trial and then withdrew the motion. Miller v. Duvall, 26 Md. 47.

And error in excluding evidence is not ground for injunction. Vaughn v. Johnson, 9 N. J. Eq. 173; Thomas v. Hearn, 2 Port. (Ala.) 263.

As the remedy is by appeal or by writ of error. Hahn v. Hart, 12 B. Mon. 423.

The exclusion of evidence or a defense will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, as there is a remedy by appeal or writ of error. Dunn v. Fish, 8 Blackf. 407.

But in Ambler v. Wyld, 2 Wash. (Va.) 36, it was held where evidence was freely admitted on one side, and without color of reason was rejected on the other, the trial was not fair and equal, nor such as ought to conclude the parties, and since the injured party did not, and now cannot obtain relief in a court of law, it can only be afforded by a court of equity, and may properly be so, as innumerable precedents will prove; and in Pickett v. Morris, 2 Wash. (Va.) 253 the court says that in

v. Fischel, 64 Ind. 177; Parsons v. Milford, 67 Ind. 489; Lytle v. Lytle, 87 Ind. 281; Wilson v. Vance, 55 Ind. 584; Matheney v. Earl, 75 Ind. 533; Thornton's Pr. Code (Ind.) § 862, note 2. When a recovery is sought on a note, mortgage, or other contract in writing, our Code requires that a copy of the same be filed with the pleading; but when the cancellation or legal destruction of such an instrument is demanded, this rule does not apply. Johnson v. Moore, 112 Ind. 91; Heitman v. Schnek, 40 Ind. 93; Barkley v. Tapp, 87 Ind. 25. Examining the complaint in this case without reference to the transcript, we find that the first, second, third, and fourth reasons given for the judgment of the justice of the peace being void are mere conclusions, and do not help the complaint in any way. Facts, not conclusions, must be averred. Kleyla v. Haskett, 112 Ind. 515; Guerin v. Kraner, 97 Ind. 533; Kern v. Haslerigg, 11 Ind. 443, 71 Am. Dec. 860; Clark v. Lüneberger, 44 Ind. 223; McClamrock v. Flint, 101 Ind. 278. The fifth and sixth specifications present substantially the same question. It appears from the allegations in the fifth specification that the appellant was a nonresident corporation, and was served by publication of notice. That said corporation did not enter any appearance to said cause, and was not in court by any officer, agent, or attorney, and that the justice rendered judgment against the Ambler v. Wyld he might have appealed, and still the court gave him relief. But see Fentress v. Robins, supra, a.

e. As to incompetency of evidence.

That a judgment was obtained on incompetent evidence will not be ground for an injunction. Merritt v. Baldwin, 6 Wis. 439.

Or that it was obtained by incompetent or false evidence. Galena & S. W. R. Co. v. Ennor, 116 Ill. 55.

And an injunction will not be granted on the ground that at the time of the trial the witness for complainant was incompetent. Greenfield v. Frierson, 7 Helsk. 633; Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 368.

f. As to insufficiency of evidence.

And insufficiency of evidence is not ground for an injunction against the judgment. Martin v. Pifer, 96 Ind. 245; Burke v. Wheat, 22 Kan. 723; Braden v. Reitzenberger, 18 W. Va. 286; A. B. Smith Co. v. Bank of Holmes County (Miss.) 18 So. 847; Lockard v. Lockard, 16 Ala. 423.

As the remedy is by appeal. Shreveport v. Flournoy, 26 La. Ann. 709; Cobb v. Garner (Ala.) 17 So. 47; Sartorius v. Dawson, 13 La. Ann. 111; Dupre v. Anderson, 45 La. Ann. 1134; Naughton v. Dinkgrave, 25 La. Ann. 588.

Or by certiorari. Rotzein v. Cox, 22 Tex. 62; Jordan v. Corley, 42 Tex. 284.

Or there is ample remedy by appeal or motion. Morschler v. Lochte, 12 N. Y. S. R. 855.

So where it was rendered without proper evidence, the remedy was by writ of error. Burke v. Wheat, 22 Kan. 722.

Defects in the evidence of service of process will not entitle an injunction against a judgment, the remedy being by appeal or motion to vacate. Pico v. Sunol, 6 Cal. 204.

A judgment "by default" without evidence rendered by a justice of the peace will not authorize an injunction. Hunter v. Hoole, 17 Cal. 418.

Or where the judgment is rendered by a justice without evidence. Wright v. Eaton, 7 Wis. 595.

And an injunction will not be granted on the ground of failure of proof. Powell v. Stewart, 17 Ala. 719.

So, an injunction will not be granted against a judgment, on the ground of inability to prove in the action at law the character of the consideration, for the rules of evidence in equity are the same as those in law. Reed v. Clarke, 4 T. B. Mon. 18.

And that a judgment against a garnishee was rendered on insufficient evidence will not justify an injunction. A. B. Smith Co. v. Bank of Holmes County (Miss.) 18 So. 847. But see Freeman v. Miller, infra.

Relief against dispossession in ejectment may be granted where defendant, having an older entry 30 L. R. A.

but the younger patent, had a defense by possession which he was not allowed to prove because the entry number as recited by the surveyor was wrong and there was no officer from whom he could get copies of the entries to show the mistake. The fact that the court at law had concurrent jurisdiction to relieve against mistakes in titles did not prevent the relief, and the court said: "If a court of law determine contrary to equity, recourse must be had somewhere. It would seem that if a jury acting upon a complicated mass of equitable testimony should err, and persist in it, remedy should be had in equity." Wilson v. Kilcannon, 1 Overt. 201.

That the evidence for a change of venue was insufficient where a change was allowed, and the judgment was enjoined, will not authorize a reversal, if the discretion of the court is not shown to have been abused. Triplett v. Scott, 5 Bush. 81.

For change of venue, see Connell v. Stelson, 38 Iowa, 147, supra, a.

Where a garnishee had made full answers to the inquiries propounded to him by the officer, who wrote out the same and certified it to the court, a judgment for failure to answer interrogatories as to effects in his possession will be enjoined where such interrogatories were not propounded, and he was not aware of the judgment until after the term, and owed nothing. Freeman v. Miller, 33 Tex. 372.

But see P. B. Smith Co. v. Bank of Holmes County, supra.

Injunction will lie to stay execution of a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace against a garnishee, on the answer of the latter that he had executed for his indebtedness a negotiable note which was not yet due, where the justice of the peace had no authority to render judgment against a garnishee, who answered to the effect stated, and without further proceedings or proof, as the justice was without authority to enter up judgment. Kapp v. Teel, 33 Tex. 811.

g. As to excessive judgments.

Generally an injunction will not be granted against a judgment on the ground that it is excessive. (This is in accord with GUM-ELASTIC ROOFING Co. v. MEXICO PUB. CO.) Smith v. D'Lashmutter, 4 Mo. 103; Jones v. Neely, 32 Ill. 71; Fenstermacher v. Xander, 116 Pa. 41; Reed v. Clarke, 4 T. B. Mon. 18; McGowan v. Young, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 160; Bates v. Murphy, Id. 165; Walker v. Shreve, 37 Ill. 474.

As there is a remedy by appeal. Murdock v. De Vries, 37 Cal. 527.

Or by motion for a new trial. Pogue v. Shotwell, 2 Dana, 282.

Or by writ of error. Burlington Ins. Co. v. Mortimer, 52 Kan. 754.

Or by appeal or certiorari. King v. Vaughan, 3 Yerg. 57, 29 Am. Dec. 104.

And in Roots v. Brown, 1 Bibb, 354, as to whether appellant for a greater amount than the sum stated in the affidavit in attachment. Counsel for appellant contend "that the justice of the peace had no jurisdiction over the person of the appellant. The complaint contains no allegation showing a want of such jurisdiction. On the contrary, it is alleged that the only process under which appellant was before said justice being publication of notice as a nonresident." This, then, is a case where the justice had jurisdiction over the person of the appellant, and does not fall within the rule declared in the following cases cited by counsel for appellant: Penrose v. McKinzie, 116 Ind. 89; Johnson v. Ramsey, 91 Ind. 193; Brickley v. Heilbruner, 7

Ind. 488; Grass v. Hess, 87 Ind. 193; Earl v. Matheney, 60 Ind. 202; Cain v. Goda, 84 Ind. 209. The justice also had jurisdiction over the subject-matter. Sections 953, 1433, Rev. Stat. 1881 (Rev. Stat. 1894 [Burns' ed.] §§ 965, 1500). Counsel for appellant urge that the judgment is void for the reason that the justice of the peace rendered judgment for a greater amount than the sum stated in the affidavit in attachment, and cites in support of this proposition the following cases: Henrie v. Swasey, 5 Blackf. 275; Rowley v. Berrian, 13 Ill. 202; Hichins v. Lyon, 35 Ill. 150; Hobson v. Emporium Real-Estate & Mfg. Co. 42 Ill. 806; Forayth v. Warren, 62 Ill. 68; Fellows v. Dickens, 5 La. Ann. 181;

a judgment will be enjoined for excessive damages, was not decided, as new trials will not be granted where the defense only goes to mitigation of damages.

Or that a judgment bears interest which is not supported by the verdict will not authorize an injunction against the same. McMicken v. Millaudon, 3 La. 180.

And error in interest in the judgment will not authorize an injunction, as the same can be corrected after sale on execution, if the property sells for more than the mortgage debt. Walker v. Villavaso, 26 La. Ann. 43.

An injunction will not lie to restrain the execution of a judgment on the ground that the amount is erroneous, being greater than the liability of complainant limited on the bond as surety. Stinson v. Hill, 21 La. Ann. 560.

If in serving the summons the constable by mistake entered a less amount on the copy served then in the original summons, the judgment in excess is only voidable, and the judgment in excess of the amount indorsed cannot be enjoined. (Reversing the former opinion in the same case.) Bassett v. Mitchell, 40 Kan. 549.

So, under W. Va. Code 1868, chap. 124, § 5, providing for a proceeding to correct the judgment by notice and motion, an injunction will not be granted on the ground that the judgment was excessive by reason of miscalculation. Alleman v. Knight, 19 W. Va. 201.

Where a defendant claims that a judgment against him is excessive, and the answer under oath denies the excess as to all but a portion which he credits on the fi. fa., the injunction should be dissolved. Rodahan v. Driver, 23 Ga. 362.

Where it was claimed that a judgment was obtained upon a note given only to be used as collateral and not to be sold, and which was for a greater amount than was due, a judgment upon the same will not be enjoined, in the absence of an allegation that adequate relief could not be had at law, or fraud, or assignment contrary to contract, or unfairness of the defendant. Hungerford v. Sigerson, 61 U. S. 20 How. 156, 15 L. ed. 869.

That the amount of a judgment at law is too large on account of mistake which is not indicated will not authorize an injunction against the enforcement of such judgment, where the mistake occurred through negligence on the part of complainant, and the remedy exists at law to appeal to the court rendering the judgment for relief. Muscatine v. Mississippi & M. R. Co. 1 Dill. 536.

But under Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 4841, providing that the judgment against the claimant in attachment shall be for the principal and interest and 10 per cent damages of the amount claimed in the writ, where the execution was for the assessed value of the property under the statute and greatly in excess of the debt and judgment and damages, the same should be set aside as there is no remedy by motion or appeal. Wills Point Bank v. Bates, 78 Tex. 329.

And where a replevin bond was indorsed "Forfeited," and execution issued against the securities for the full amount of the judgment, interest, and cost, and the appraisal made by the sheriff and indorsed upon the bond was not in compliance with the law in that he appraised personality and realty together as though they were but one thing, and it was evident the bond was given for the forthcoming of the personal property only,—an injunction was granted to allow the surety to prove the real value of the personal property not forthcoming. Miles v. Davis, 36 Tex. 660.

A judgment in attachment for a greater amount than due will be enjoined at the instance of another attaching creditor where judgment was taken with knowledge of the complainants' claim, and this on the ground of implied fraud. Hale v. Chandler, 3 Mich. 531.

In McRae v. Woods, 2 Wash. (Va.) 80, the court enjoined a judgment at law on the ground that it was more than the plaintiff was in conscience entitled to, and there was no standard by which the court could determine the excess. In this case it was a judgment for the whole value of a lottery ticket, which was certainly more than he was entitled to, and the value had not been fixed in the scheme of the lottery, or in the sale, or in the verdict, and evidence of jurors to explain the verdict conflicted.

In Bullock v. Goodall, 3 Call (Va.) 44, a fine of $234 against a sheriff for not returning an execution was enjoined on the ground that by the bill of rights "excessive fines shall not be imposed," and that this was excessive, unconstitutional, oppressive, and against conscience, where the delay in returning execution was at the request of a creditor who had been satisfied. The relief would be granted even if objection had been made to jurisdiction of equity.

And an injunction was granted in a similar case on the ground of a mistake of law owing to a general delusion. Tomkies v. Downman, 6 Munt. 567.

But both these cases were overruled in Bierne v. Mann, 5 Leigh, 364, on the ground that a court of equity cannot correct the errors of a court of law.

Where an executor recovered vindictive damages for levying on a slave as the property of a legatee, and the executor had, prior thereto, sold to himself the slaves belonging to the estate to pay the debts of the estate, an injunction was granted on the ground of vindictive damages, and also to require an account to see whether a sale was necessary for the debts of the estate, although a defense was not made at law in the action of trespass, and the verdict could be impeached, as matters involving an account of executorship are peculiarly within the province of a court of equity. Anderson v. Fox, 2 Hen. & M. 245.

Tilton v. Coffield, 2 Colo. 392. These cases do not sustain the contention of counsel for appellant. The legal proposition they declare is that "the plaintiff in attachment proceedings is not entitled to a judgment for a greater sum than he demands by his affidavit together with interest, if the debt be such as to draw interest." In the cases cited the question was presented and determined on appeal. There is no intimation that a judgment so rendered would be void. In Henrie v. Sweetser, 5 Blackf. 278, this court held that it was error to render a judgment for a greater sum than the plaintiff demands in his affidavit in attachment, together with interest, if the debt be such as to draw interest, and reversed the cause for that reason. The rendition of the judgment for a greater amount than the sum stated in the affidavit did not deprive the justice of jurisdiction nor render the judgment void. If such action of the justice was erroneous, the judgment could not be enjoined, the court having jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter. Earl v. Matheney, 60 Ind. 202; Williams v. Hite, 88 Ind. 808; De Haven v. Covall, Id. 346; McAlpine v. Sweetser, 76 Ind. 78; Hume v. Conduitt, Id. 598. The court below did not err in sustaining the demurrers to the complaint. The judgment is therefore affirmed.

b. As to parties.

That the judgment and execution were against S. et al., and in the suit in which it was pretended to be rendered there were several other defendants named; and that the judgment was rendered on the order of the judge at chambers, and not in term time; and that the only entry of the judgment was in the minute book of the court,—will not be ground for enjoining the judgment where there is no allegation that the judgment was unjust. Sanchez v. Carriaga, 81 Cal. 170.

So, relief will not be granted against a judgment erroneous because of a remission of a verdict against one of the defendants, as the remedy is at law. Reynolds v. Horine, 18 B. Mon. 224.

The enforcement of a judgment rendered on a scil. fa. will not be enjoined where the court rendering the same had jurisdiction of the person and subject-matter, although it was claimed that this complainant was not the party against whom the original judgment was rendered, as a writ of error was an adequate remedy if the judgment was erroneous. Burke v. Gibson, 6 Kulp, 310.

That a discontinuance as to one defendant operated as a discontinuance as to all, will not justify an injunction against the judgment, for if there was error it should have been taken advantage of at the time. Markley v. Rand, 12 Cal. 276.

And where a justice of the peace refused to make proper parties to the suits, and rendered judgments that were unjust, the same will not be enjoined even if no appeal is allowed. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Dowe, 70 Tex. 1.

So, irregularity in rendering a judgment by default against a corporation contrary to statute will not authorize an injunction against the same. Boyd v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 17 Md. 195, 79 Am. Dec. 646.

A judgment against a firm in a firm's name will not be enjoined because not against the partners by name individually, where there is a release of errors, as Wis. Rev. Stat. chap. 100, § 7, subsec. 10, provides a remedy by motion for curing defects in judgment by amendment. McIndoe v. Hazelton, 19 Wis. 567, 88 Am. Dec. 701.

Under La. Code Prac. art. 118, providing that when the suit is brought against the wife for a cause of action relative to her separate interests, the husband must be made a party, and that if the husband is absent the plaintiff must demand that the wife be authorized by the judge before whom the suit is brought, to defend it alone, if she be of age, where the husband was not absent, and citations were served personally on both the wife and the husband, they were not bound to defend the suit, and the effect of the default was to create a tacit joinder of issue as to both husband and wife, and to fully justify a final judgment against the wife which will not be enjoined at her instance. Hall v. Carroll, 10 La. Ann. 412.

An injunction will not be granted on the ground that a plaintiff was dead at the time of the rendition of a judgment, as there is a remedy at law to quash the same. Wynn v. Wilson, Hempst. 688.

Or the remedy is by error coram vobis. Williamson v. Appleberry, 1 Hen. & M. 206.

And an injunction will not be granted against a judgment in ejectment in favor of the purchaser at an execution sale, on the ground that the judgment was entered after death of the defendant in the suit without notice by scil. fa., where it is not shown that the judgment has been satisfied and a scil. fa. would not have aided them. Harper v. Hill, 35 Miss. 63.

That a judgment was rendered against a defendant after his death, or rendered on two verdicts which were contradictory, will not authorize an injunction, as there is a remedy by affidavit of illegality, or motion to set aside. Lockridge v. Lyon, 66 Ga. 137.

The failure to suggest the death of one of the parties to a judgment will not entitle to an injunction against the execution. Hastings v. Cropper, 8 Del. Ch. 165.

So, error in rendering judgment against a garnishee where the debtor was not a party to the judgment will not entitle to an injunction as there is a remedy by appeal. Earl v. Matheney, 60 Ind. 202.

And under R. I. Pub. Laws, chap. 433, providing that any person claiming attached property may assert his claim by becoming a party to the action on motion, the refusal of such right is an error of law, and the judgment for this cause will not be enjoined, as the remedy is by exceptions. Barr v. Carpenter, 16 R. I. 724.

But in Dobbin v. Wybrants, 3 Tex. 457, it was said that a garnishee liable in judgment of garnishment may obtain an injunction against a judgment in favor of the original creditor, against him, for the debt, where he pleaded that the garnishing creditors should be made parties, and pleaded the garnishment in discharge of the debt, which plea was refused.

And where a verdict was rendered against one of two defendants, and the justice entered it against both, it will be enjoined at the instance of the aggrieved party, on the ground of being rendered without jurisdiction and in fraud of plaintiff's rights. Dady v. Brown, 76 Iowa, 523.

An execution and sale will be enjoined where the verdict was uncertain, and indefinite, and improper, as to the party against whom it was rendered, there being several parties to the suit. Butt v. Oneal, 51 Ga. 368.

And a levy, sale, execution, and proceedings on a decree will be enjoined in a bill of review by a defendant where the original decree is erroneous, not being against all the parties that it should have been, thereby prejudicing complainant, and was signed by the solicitor instead of the judge, and there was no order taking the decree pro confesso. Bennett v. Brown, 56 Ga. 216.

Separate judgments rendered by different tribunals against different defendants and at different

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT

LEVYSTEIN BROTHERS, Appts.,

v.

Elizabeth O'BRIEN et al.

(.....Ala.....)

1. Jurisdiction of an infant defendant may be acquired by the service of summons in the same manner as upon defendants who are sui juris.

2. Failure of a court to appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant defendant times where they are joined in the same action are irregular, as under Ga. Code, § 3559, the verdict must cover the issues made, and under § 3595, if the judgment is void, it may be set aside, providing that it was not occasioned by the negligence of the complainant, and an injunction should be granted. Norris v. Pollard, 75 Ga. 353.

Where a judgment was taken in a county against one only of two obligors, who was not served with process in that county, and the resident debtor was not served at all, and judgment was not taken against the one who resided in the county of judgment, an injunction was granted against proceeding on the levy and sale, at the instance of the nonresident debtor. Austell v. McLarin, 51 Ga. 407.

The enjoining of a judgment because of irregularity in its including improper persons will not prevent the issuing of a proper execution. Turner v. Smith, 9 Tex. 623.

For injunctions against judgments for errors occurring subsequent to their rendition, see note to Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Wells, ante, 560.

II. For irregularities.

The case of LEVYSTEIN BROS. v. O'BRIEN holds that where the court acquired jurisdiction of the person of an infant, and failed to appoint a guardian ad litem, the judgment would not be void, and the injunction would not be granted on the principle that chancery has no jurisdiction to enjoin a judgment at law for irregularities attending and errors committed by the court in the rendition thereof, unless such irregularities or errors were sufficient to render the judgment void. This is in accord with the general doctrine.

a. Generally.

Generally an injunction will not be granted for irregularities in judgments, or for matters occurring during the trial, or for matters of form, or for consolidation of causes, or for matters of pleadings, signing, or entering judgments, or for irregularities in receiving verdicts, or in docketing the cause; and the injunction is usually refused on the ground of there being a remedy at law. But there are some exceptions, and injunctions have been granted where the irregularity is such as to render the judgment void, and have been granted for amendments to pleadings, on the ground of surprise, and have been granted for irregularities in docketing the case, and this on the ground of mistake. As to irregularities in the time of trial, or the time of rendition of judgments, there is some conflict of authority which is noted below.

Irregularities in the proceeding or judgment are not sufficient to obtain an injunction against such judgment or the execution. Adams v. White, 23 Fla. 352; Genobles v. West, 23 S. C. 154; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Meyer, 30 Neb. 138.

As there is a remedy at law. Fowler v. Lee, 10 Gill & J. 358, 32 Am. Dec. 172.

Or there is a remedy by appeal. Cobb v. Garner (Ala.) 17 So. 47.

30 L. R. A.

does not make the judgment if recovered against him so invalid as to be subject to collateral attack.

3. Injunction will not lie against a judgment at law against an infant merely because no guardian ad litem was appointed for him and his general guardian was not brought into the action.

(April 26, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Montgomery City Court in favor of com-

Or where there is a remedy by appeal, especially where such irregularities have been corrected, Moeschler v. Loochte, 13 N. Y. S. R. 855.

And will not be enjoined where there is a remedy by writ of error. Eyster's Appeal, 65 Pa. 473.

Or a remedy by an action, or appeal, or by motion in the action. Moeschler v. Loochte, supra.

Or by motion in the action to set the same aside. Neville v. Pope, 35 N. C. 346.

Or a remedy by a motion before the justice or his successor in office, to set aside the judgment, or a writ of recordari in the nature of a writ of false judgment in the superior court. Gallop v. Allen, 113 N. C. 24.

In Eyster's Appeal, supra, it was said that if a judgment was irregularly obtained the remedy is by writ of error, and not by injunction.

Irregularity in proceedings in ejectment will not be ground for a mandatory injunction to regain possession, as there is a remedy at law to regain possession. Baker v. Morgans, 2 Dow, P. C. 526.

Irregularities in restoring a lost record without notice will not be ground for injunction, where it is not claimed that the record as restored was not true. Fuller v. Little, 69 Ill. 229.

And injunctions will not be granted for irregularities in a decree after the lapse of twenty years. Duncan v. Williams, 30 Ala. 341.

b. As to infants.

The failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant where the court has jurisdiction is only an irregularity and will not entitle to an injunction. (This was also held in LEVYSTEIN BROS. v. O'BRIEN.) Drake v. Hanshaw, 47 Iowa, 201.

As the remedy is by writ of error. Ibid.

Or where the nature of the claim is not shown, nor that the judgment is unjust. Lemon v. Sweeney, 6 Ill. App. 507.

An injunction will not be granted in favor of a purchaser against a judgment on a purchase-money bond, on the ground of irregularities in the guardian's proceedings for a sale of property without legal notice to the ward, at least if there is no offer to rescind, as such a defense could have been made in the judgment at law. Shipp v. Wheelless, 33 Miss. 644.

But where the court had no jurisdiction because no representative of minors was before the court, and their guardian had no notice of the proceeding to sell their real estate, an injunction will be granted. Colley v. Duncan, 47 Ga. 663.

So, where the application for the appointment of a guardian ad litem does not show that it was personally served, and the order appointing the guardian ad litem does not show that it was filed, and the guardian's answer does not show that it was served, and the plaintiff's attorney, and the officer who made proof of service, and the infant testify that the infant was not personally served, the court did not acquire jurisdiction, and such infant is not bound. Genobles v. West, 23 S. C. 154.

plaintains in a proceeding brought to enjoin the collection of a judgment against Archie O'Brien, Jr., deceased. Reversed.

The facts as stated by the appellants as a ground for the appeal were as follows:

About the 28th of April, 1894, Levystein Bros obtained a judgment against Archie O'Brien, Jr., in a justice's court of Montgomery county, upon which an execution was duly issued, and levied upon the interest of said Archie in certain real estate in the city of Montgomery, and on motion of plaintiffs therein, in the circuit court of said county, to which these papers were transmitted, an order was made for the sale of said property so levied upon. After this, and before the sale, O'Brien died. At the time said judgment was rendered, and at the time of his death, O'Brien was a minor. No guardian ad litem was appointed to act for him, and no notice given to his regularly appointed guardian. It is not denied that O'Brien had due notice of said proceedings, nor is it averred that any plea of infancy was interposed to any of said proceedings. It is not denied that the debt for which said judgment was rendered was valid and binding upon O'Brien, nor one which he should, in equity and good conscience, pay. Neither is it averred that O'Brien, or any one else, could prove a valid defense to said action. The only averment upon this question is "that, if suit were properly and legally brought on said claim against him, there is a full and legal defense

c. In trial.

An irregularity of an attorney in making a compromise is not sufficient for an injunction. Roller v. Woodriddle, 46 Tex. 486.

A judgment will not be enjoined on the ground that three justices presided in forcible detainer instead of one, as there is a remedy by appeal. Murphree v. Bishop, 79 Ala. 404.

But the incompetency of a judge because interested in the cause will authorize an injunction as the judgment is void, and his incompetency cannot be waived. Chambers v. Hodges, 28 Tex. 104.

And under Tenn. Code, § 4098, prohibiting a justice who is related to the party, from sitting in the case unless his incompetency is waived in writing, a judgment rendered in such a case without a waiver may be enjoined as void. Smith v. Pearce, 6 Baxt. 72.

A judgment of a justice of the peace in Indiana will not be enjoined where a trial was had by a jury of twelve instead of six, and is not void, as Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 1148, provides for granting injunctions only where the plaintiff is entitled to the relief demanded. Rhodes Burford Furniture Co. v. Mattox, 136 Ind. 872.

Impropriety in jurors will not entitle an injunction against a judgment. Yancey v. Downer, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 8, 15 Am. Dec. 35.

But where the sheriff had improperly influenced the jury, which was not discovered in time to apply for a new trial, an injunction against proceeding on the judgment was granted. Lawless v. Reese, 3 Bibb, 486.

For undue influence, see Terrell v. Dick, 1 Call (Va.) 546, supra, I. a.

Intoxication of a witness is not ground for enjoining a judgment. Governor v. Barrow, 13 Ala. 540.

d. In matters of form.

An error of the justice as to matters of form in rendering a judgment will not be ground for injunction. Hunter v. Hoole, 17 Cal. 418.

Blanks in judgment for the amount of taxed costs are not grounds for an injunction. Cammann v. Traphagan, 1 N. J. Eq. 230; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Elwood, 79 Ind. 306.

And a sale of real estate under legal process will not be enjoined because of irregularity in the proceedings, rendering it uncertain as to complainant's right to redeem, or because the judgment is void, where no serious injury to the title is shown as likely to result. And a court of equity will not determine the regularity of former sales in advance of the redemption. Union Iron Works v. Bassick Min. Co., 10 Colo. 24.

But where the report of accounts, and partition, and verdict, were too uncertain to be enforced, and under the pleadings it was impossible to determine the intent of the jury, an injunction was granted. Butt v. Oneal, 51 Ga. 358.

e. In pleadings and papers.

The irregularities in consolidation of cases will not entitle a party to an injunction against the judgment where the debt was valid, there being a remedy by appeal, or by direct application to the court. Saunders v. Albritton, 37 Ala. 716.

The failure to file with the pleadings an affidavit required by law will not entitle a party to an injunction against the judgment. Jackson v. Darcy, 1 N. J. Eq. 194.

And an injunction will not be granted on account of a defective affidavit in attachment, and that the execution misrecited (the judgment, the remedy being by writ of error. Budd v. Long, 13 Fla. 238.

Irregularity in the affidavit attached to the petition under Neb. Code, § 112, providing that every pleading of fact must be verified, is not ground for enjoining the judgment. Johnson v. Jones, 2 Neb. 126.

So, illegal issuing of an attachment will not be cause for enjoining a judgment. Earl v. Mathe-ney, 60 Ind. 202.

The case of GUM-ELASTIC ROOFING CO. v. MEX-100 PUB. CO. holds that a complaint in alleging that the affidavit in attachment states no ground for an attachment will not be a cause for enjoining the judgment, as the same is only a conclusion of law.

Irregularity in the issuing of an attachment by a justice, under Md. act 1831, chap. 271, not made as a defense to the action, will not authorize an injunction against proceedings on the judgment at the instance of a garnishee. Peters v. League, 13 Md. 58, 71 Am. Dec. 622.

And a judgment on a lost note will not be enjoined for insufficiency of the indemnifying bond. Mills v. Jones, 9 La. Ann. 11.

Irregularities in proceedings before a justice, where it was claimed that the party who took a forthcoming bond was not an officer, will not be ground for enjoining the judgment, as there is a remedy by appeal. Clopton v. Carlos, 42 Ark. 560.

And a judgment against the garnishee will not be enjoined for irregularity or insufficiency of the bond relating to his creditor who is a party to the same suit. Field v. McKinney, 60 Miss. 761.

An injunction will not be granted against judgments of a justice of the peace on the ground of splitting into several cases an account which was originally beyond the jurisdiction, where the bill does not show how much the alleged account was, and that the purpose was so made to appear before the justice. Brundage v. Candle, 25 Tex. Supp. 357.

Or where it was not shown that complainant did not participate in such action, and that he was thereto." There is no offer in said bill to pay the said Levystein Bros. any amount that might be found due them. The prayer is that said judgment be declared void, and the collection thereof perpetually enjoined. To this bill defendants interposed several grounds of demurrer, and also moved to dismiss same for want of equity. From a decree overruling the demurrers, and denying the motion defendants appeal.

Messrs. Farnham, Crum, & Weil, for appellants:

The failure to appoint a guardian ad litem was, at most, only an irregularity in no wise affecting the jurisdiction of the court rendering the judgment, and the city court in equity was without jurisdiction to avoid said judgment or to enjoin its collection.

thereby deprived of some right. Pryor v. Emerson, 22 Tex. 162.

An injunction will not be granted on the ground that there is a variance between the judgment, execution, verdict, and declaration, as the remedy at law is by an affidavit of illegality, or by a motion in court to set it aside, or enforcing the plaintiff to amend. Leonard v. Collier, 53 Ga. 287.

But an order of seizure and sale on a judgment by confession was enjoined, where the confession of the judgment, power of attorney, certificate, and affidavit of the justice, taken in another state, were not in compliance with law, and the identity of the note with this on which judgment was confessed was not shown, and there was a defense to the action. Although an appeal lies, yet the injunction will not be dissolved when the facts show that on dissolution the party will be entitled to that remedy on other grounds. Chambliss v. Atchison, 2 La. Ann. 438.

And where foreigners being residents abroad went to trial upon a declaration having a good defense, and new counts were filed covering another claim after the trial commenced, and a delay of a short period only was allowed before the trial was again resumed, and the foreigners had no notice of such counts, an injunction was granted on the ground of surprise, where there is a good defense to such action. Bell v. Cunningham, 1 Sumn. 89.

So, an amendment to the pleadings made without knowledge of counsel for defendant, which authorized a judgment without evidence for $5,000, instead of about $50, where the attorney for the plaintiff had just offered to dismiss on payment of costs and fees, will authorize an injunction against the judgment. Webster v. Skipwith, 26 Miss. 341.

f. In records and dockets.

That the judge did not sign the record of a judgment in Kansas does not destroy the validity of the same, nor justify enjoining a sale under foreclosure. Gordon v. Bodwell (Kan.) 39 Pac. 1044.

Where a judgment was signed "By the court, B. H., plaintiff's attorney," and the minutes were signed by the judge, and the judgment was on the minutes, and the judge approved it, and signed it when he signed the minutes, the injunction will not be granted. Jones v. Word, 61 Ga. 28.

An irregularity in a trial as to the verdict not being written is not ground for enjoining the collection of the judgment, as the remedy is by appeal. Parsons v. Pierson, 128 Ind. 479.

Where, in a judgment in a bastardy case the clerk of the court in the absence of the court and clerk took the verdict of guilty from the jury, which was written by the clerk in the clerk's book, and a formal judgment entered on record, and the supreme court pronounced the judgment a nullity, but was unable to afford relief, and the court below refused to set aside the judgment, and the supreme court refused to change the same on certiorari, as it was a matter of discretion with the court below,—an injunction will not be granted where the complainant does not show any defense to the proceedings. Davis v. Delaware Twp. Overseer of Poor, 40 N. J. Eq. 156.

1 Black, Judgm. § 196; Trawick v. Trawick, 67 Ala. 271.

Infancy is a personal privilege; and the defense upon this ground can only be taken advantage of by the infant himself, or his personal representative, and must be specially pleaded.

Shropshire v. Burns, 46 Ala. 108; Sharp v. Robertson, 76 Ala. 348; Hutton v. Williams, 60 Ala. 107; Ala. Code 1886, Form No. 89, p. 797; Blake v. Douglass, 27 Ind. 416; 1 Black, Judgm. § 196.

The rules governing courts of chancery, in proceedings to enjoin the enforcement of judgments at law, must be very strictly construed.

low refused to set aside the judgment, and the supreme court refused to change the same on certiorari, as it was a matter of discretion with the court below,—an injunction will not be granted where the complainant does not show any defense to the proceedings. Davis v. Delaware Twp. Overseer of Poor, 40 N. J. Eq. 156.

Equity will not enjoin an execution sale or judgment claimed to be void, because not properly docketed, as there is adequate remedy at law, and no merit is shown. Wilkinson v. Rewey, 59 Wis. 554.

So, if a court erred in resuming jurisdiction in redocketing a case without notice, and the error if not waived or corrected could have been corrected by appeal or writ of error, an injunction will not be granted. Virginia v. Dunaway, 17 Ill. App. 68.

Although Minn. Gen. Stat. 1878, §§ 273-277, provide that the entries shall be in the following order: (1) entry of judgment; (2) filing judgment roll; (3) docketing,—an injunction will not be granted at the instance of the assignee for creditors against entering a judgment nunc pro tunc, where it had been docketed, but the parties are not all before the court in the injunction suit. Rookwood v. Davenport, 37 Minn. 533.

But where the magistrate had marked the name of the attorney upon the wrong side of the docket, and given him a leave of absence, and judgment was rendered by default, and not discovered until too late to appeal, and there is a defense to the merits, proceedings on the judgment will be enjoined on the ground of mistake. Brewer v. Jones, 44 Ga. 71.

So, where the rules of court required a new calendar each month, and the call of the docket was at a time when a new calendar should have been made, and the attorney for the defendant, learning that no new calendar was to be made, gave no further attention to the case for that month, a judgment obtained in the absence of such attorney and his client should be enjoined where there was a good defense. Beveridge v. Hewitt, 8 Ill. App. 467.

As to restoring record, see Fuller v. Little, 69 Ill. 229, supra, II. a.

As to time of entering and signing judgment, see infra, g, and Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170, supra, I. b.

g. In regard to time of rendering judgment.

In regard to an injunction on account of irregularity as to the time of the rendition of the judgment an injunction will not be granted because rendered prematurely. As to those rendered at an improper term, or where the justice continued the case to a time when he lost jurisdiction, there appears to be some conflict in the cases. The cases denying the injunction are where the trial took place

National Fertilizer Co. v. Hinson (Ala.) 15 So. 844.

And in proceedings by infants to set aside judgments against them, and to enjoin their enforcement, we are governed by the same rules as in the cases of adults.

13 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 147a; Ralston v. Lahee, 8 Iowa, 17, 74 Am. Dec. 291; Joyce v. McAvoy, 81 Cal. 278, 89 Am. Dec. 190, note; 1 Freem. Judgm. 4th ed. § 151.

If no appointment of a guardian ad litem is made for the infant heirs, this is not jurisdictional.

Brown, Jur. p. 113, p. 10, note 1; Milne v. Van Buskirk, 9 Iowa, 558; Drake v. Hanshaw, 87 Iowa, 292; Joyce v. McAvoy, 81 Cal. 378, 89 Am. Dec. 186, note 2; Cook v. Rogers, 64 Ala. 406; Simmons v. McKay, 5 Bush, 25; 1 Freem. Judgm. § 151.

The adjudication of any question is always final unless corrected by some appellate tribunal, and is never subject to re-examination in any other than an appellate court, upon any issue of law or fact, nor upon the sole ground that the former decision is contrary to equity and good conscience.

2 Freem. Judgm. §§ 486, 487; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 147; Brown, Jur. p. 113, note; Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 1572, 1575.

A court of equity will never set aside or enjoin a judgment on the ground of error or mistake in the judgment in the court of law, nor will this general law be varied because the judgment was upon default, unless there was fraud or surprise or other good reason for the failure to defend.

2 Freem. Judgm. 4th ed. § 487; Ala. Code, § 2835; Marion v. Regenstein, 98 Ala. 475; 1 Beven, Judgm. § 198.

None but the parties to the writ of execution who are liable to be injured by it can complain of irregularities by which it may be infected.

Freem. Execution, § 75; Jefford v. Ringgold, 6 Ala. 544.

The bill should have averred that a valid defense to said claim of appellants could have been proved by the said Archie O'Brien upon at proper time, and the entry of the judgment was too late. This being only a ministerial act would not entitle to an injunction, although the statute may be mandatory as to the time of entry. Others refuse injunctions on the ground that there is a remedy at law, or that complainant is estopped, or was negligent, or that the same is not unjust. Those granting injunctions do so on the ground that the judgments are void when the trial was at a term unauthorized, or that the justice lost jurisdiction by continuing the case without consent beyond the time allowed by law, or on the ground of surprise, where the case was tried after the court had said that it would not be tried at that term.

The premature entry of a judgment will not authorize an injunction against the same. Davis v. Staples, 45 Mo. 567; White v. Crow, 110 U. S. 183, 28 L. ed. 118.

The remedy of appeal against a judgment of a justice rendered in the absence of a party, or proceedings in error where such judgment was rendered by the justice changing the time for trial, advancing the same without notice, will bar an injunction against such a judgment, where no valid defense is shown. Proctor v. Pettitt, 25 Neb. 96.

Proceedings on a judgment and execution levy will not be enjoined on the ground that the presiding judge had been employed before his election to defend for complainant, and at the trial term announced that no cause in which he had been employed as counsel would be tried, but no other counsel was employed by complainant, and he had no substantial defense, and judgment was rendered in his absence at that term. Cardin v. Jones, 23 Ga. 175.

For incompetency of judge, see Smith v. Pearce, 6 Baxt. 72; Chambers v. Hodges, 23 Tex. 104, supra, II. c.

A judgment will not be enjoined on the ground of surprise, where defendant's attorney left court on an announcement that there would be no more jury trials that term, and judgment was taken in his absence, but no valid defense was shown to the action. Phillips v. Samuel, 78 Mo. 657.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment of a justice rendered on a debt not due, and before statutory time allowed to defend, even where plaintiff answered in the injunction suit that it was void, as it was only voidable, and the remedy was by certiorari. McNeill v. Hallmark, 28 Tex. 157.

80 L. R. A.

Where the justice continued a case until the defendant should return, and was to give notice, and the defendant had returned, but was not notified of the time of trial although his attorney was, and declined to make any defense, whatever irregularity there may be in the record in failing to show that the defendant had returned, or that he had received notice of that particular day, the judgment cannot be attacked by injunction as the remedy is by proceedings in error. Devinney v. Mann, 24 Kan. 692.

Forgetfulness of the court to notify counsel when the case will be taken up, after it has been postponed on account of opposing counsel's absence, is not fraud in the ordinary, nor fraud as against the party, where there was no promise of counsel shown to give notice; and an execution on such judgment will not be enjoined, as there is a remedy by motion to set aside, although six years were wasted by attempted writs of certiorari and requests. Morris v. Morris, 76 Ga. 733.

A judgment will not be enjoined where the judge represented to the complainant that an action on appeal was not pending in his court and then rendered a judgment against him ex parte, as such judgment is void, and a complainant has an action of trespass against all parties seeking to enforce the same. Gutierrez v. Pino, 1 N. M. 392.

Irregularities in process, and a statement by the justice that no personal judgment had been rendered, will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, as the remedy is by appeal. Clopton v. Carlos, 42 Ark. 560.

A judgment rendered by a justice in Missouri on Thanksgiving Day is not void, and an execution levy will not be enjoined, as Mo. Rev. Stat. § 2343, provides that a justice may hold court on any day except Sunday, and this is not affected by the statute regarding Thanksgiving Day. The fact that such judgment was void, would not alone entitle relief by enjoining the execution sale. Dear v. Youngman, 19 Mo. App. 41.

Proceedings under a decree contrary to a stipulation respecting the time and manner will not be enjoined where complainant did not comply with such stipulation. Buell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 65 Cal. 202.

An injunction will not be granted to restrain proceedings on a judgment on the ground that a a trial of said cause, or that appellees can prove such defense.

National Fertilizer Co. v. Hinson (Ala.) 15 So. 844; Secor v. Woodward, 8 Ala. 500.

The court erred in overruling the demurrer and motion of appellant.

Black, Judgm. §§ 193, 394.

Mr. E. P. Morrissett, for appellee:

A judgment against a minor who has not been brought into court by service as requested by law is a nullity, not voidable merely, but void.

Ala. Code, § 2579, Rule 23, Ch. Pr. Herring v. Ricketts, 101 Ala. 342.

The service upon the infant in person, without service upon parent or guardian, is no service at all, and does not bring the infant before the court.

Herring v. Ricketts, supra.

How can a valid judgment be rendered against a party not before the court?

A judgment against a party not before the court is a nullity and may be set aside in a collateral proceeding.

Daily v. Reid, 74 Ala. 415.

col. fa. was not issued in proper time. Nicholson v. Patterson, 6 Humph. 304.

An injunction against proceedings on the judgment at law rendered on appeal from a justice, after eight years' delay, where complainant did not know of the appeal having been filed, where there was a valid defense, will not be granted, as there is a remedy by writ of error coram nobis, and complainant knew that an appeal had been granted, and could have taken up the papers, and had it affirmed. Gunn v. Neal, 2 Helsk. 318.

Irregularities of the justice in continuing the case beyond the time allowed by law are not grounds for an injunction, where such adjournment was at the instance of the party complaining. Ewing v. Nickle, 45 Md. 418.

An injunction against a judgment and levy of execution will not be allowed where it was claimed that the judgment of a justice was rendered at an improper time without notice, and after the time fixed for appearance, where a valid defense is not alleged against the claim, and besides there is a remedy at law of motion to set aside, and appeal or error. Peralka v. Fittle, 38 Neb. 754.

Under Justices' Code Civ. Proc. § 58 (Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 1489), providing that on dismissal, confession, or verdict, judgment shall be entered and signed immediately, and in other cases within four days, where the judgment was not rendered or entered until six days after the verdict, an injunction was refused, although this appears to conflict with Burton v. McGregor, 4 Ind. 550, but may be distinguished by the fact that the latter case was tried by the justice, and no decision was given, and no entry made until four days after. In the present case the verdict fixed the judgment which followed as a matter of law, and the failure to enter it was merely ministerial omission, and there was remedy by appeal. Martin v. Pifer, 36 Ind. 245.

Martin v. Pifer, supra, was distinguished in Greenwaldt v. May, 127 Ind. 511, in which case the judgment for costs was obtained by fraud, and entered after the case was dismissed, and an injunction was granted against the judgment in the latter case.

That a justice neglected to make any minute of the verdict, or to enter it in his docket until the day after it was received, will not authorize an injunction against the judgment where no injustice is shown. Stokes v. Knarr, 11 Wis. 390.

Where a case was set for 9 o'clock before a justice, 30 L. R. A.

The heirs at law were proper parties plaintiff in this bill.

Sharp v. Robertson, 76 Ala. 843.

McClellan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In actions against infants, service of summons must be had upon the defendant, as upon defendants who are sui juris; and such service is as efficacious in the former as in the latter case to give the court jurisdiction of the cause. Having thus acquired jurisdiction of the person of an infant defendant, it is the court's duty to appoint a guardian ad litem to make defense for him; but a failure to discharge this duty does not oust the court's jurisdiction, which has already attached, but, to the contrary, if the case proceeds to judgment against the infant without such appointment, whether upon issue joined and trial had, or upon the default of the defendant, such judgment, though irregular and erroneous, and to be so declared upon appeal, is not void, and is therefore not open to impeachment upon collateral attack. 1 and before 10 o'clock the justice announced judgment by default, but desiring to leave town closed his docket, stating that he would make further entry in the afternoon, and the defendant appeared at 10 o'clock and found no entry, and at 3 o'clock the justice finished the judgment entry,—this was erroneous and irregular, but not void. The justice did not lose jurisdiction by adjourning the case, and as the error can be corrected by appeal, or writ of error, an injunction cannot be granted. Central Iowa R. Co. v. Piersol, 65 Iowa, 498.

Where the justice had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and of complainant, who did not appear, the fact that the justice postponed the writing-up or entry of the judgment until the date to which the cause was set for trial against the other parties to the suit did not divest the justice of his jurisdiction either of the subject-matter, or of complainant, nor render the judgment absolutely void, and there is a plain and adequate remedy at law for the review and reversal by appeal, and proceeding in error. Langley v. Ashe, 38 Neb. 55.

Where a justice of the peace having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and parties rendered judgment after the time fixed by statute, an injunction will not be granted, as the remedy is by a direct proceeding to correct the error, and a valid defense to the action must be shown. Gould v. Loughran, 19 Neb. 392.

And that a judgment was rendered without jurisdiction by a justice after the statutory time, where the evidence is conflicting, and the record shows that it was at the proper time, will not authorize an injunction in a collateral attack. Paul v. Davidson, 43 Neb. 505.

And where the justice had not jurisdiction to render the judgment at the time it was rendered, but lost jurisdiction by adjourning it to an uncertain and unknown time, an injunction will not be granted, as such judgment can only be corrected by direct proceedings, at least if there is no showing that the same is unjust, or that the defendant is insolvent. Lindinger v. Glenn, 33 Neb. 187.

The failure to give the defendant notice of the place of hearing to which a justice of the peace had continued a case will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, where there is a remedy at law, and it is not charged that the judgment was obtained by fraud. Gallop v. Allen, 113 N. C. 24.

That complainant believed or supposed a judge

Freem. Judgm. § 151; 2 Freem. Judgm. § 487; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 692-697; Brown, Jur. p. 118; Milne v. Van Buskirk, 9 Iowa, 558; Drake v. Hannahaw, 47 Iowa, 292; Joyce v. McAtoy, 81 Cal. 278, 89 Am. Dec. 172, and notes pp. 185 et seq.; Simmons v. McKay, 5 Bush, 25. This doctrine had been recognized by this court in the analogous case of a lunatic defendant. Walker v. Clay, 21 Ala. 797, 807. And there is, we take it, nothing in the suggestion that, because of the mandatory terms of section 2579 of the Code, a judgment against an infant without the appointment of a guardian ad litem is not merely erroneous and irregular, but void. This section is equally mandatory in respect of suits by infants.—they “must sue by next friend;” yet it would scarcely be insisted that a judgment at the suit of an infant in his own name against one sui juris would be void. The succeeding section (2580) is equally mandatory in form in respect of lunatics; but, as we have seen, judgments against lunatics are not void, though this mandate has been disregarded. And a reference to the authorities cited above will show that, under equally mandatory statutes in other states, the ruling has been that a failure to appoint a guardian to defend for the infant is, at most, reversible error, and not matter for impeachment of the judgment, except upon direct assault. In chancery, infant defendants can only be brought in by service upon their parents, or either of them, if in life, or upon their general guardian, in case the parents are dead, provided such parents or guardian are not adversely interested; and in this latter case, or if there be no parent or guardian, then upon the infant personally, if over fourteen years of age, etc. Code, p. 814, rule 23. Hence what is said in Daily v. Reid, 74 Ala. 416, 417, as to the invalidity of a decree pro confesso against an infant, has no application to a judgment at law on personal service against an infant defendant, especially in view of the doctrine there announced,—that the chancery court “is the guardian of all infant litigants before it, and will permit no such irregularity and error [as the taking of a decree pro confesso against an infant] to pass unredressed.” Nor was it intended by this language of the court in that case, as counsel insist, to convey the idea that the substantive rights of an infant stood upon a plane different from, and higher than, the rights of persons sui juris, or were to be adjudged by a different standard, but only that the court would so far act as his guardian as to see to it that his abstract rights were properly ment could not be rendered at the first term will not justify an injunction, where he was negligent in making defense, and there is a remedy by appeal. Shrieker v. Field, 9 Iowa, 386.

And an injunction was refused against an execution and judgment claimed to have been rendered on a day not authorized by law, where it was not shown that the term was other than a legal and valid one. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Ware (Tex.), 11 S. W. 554.

An injunction will not be granted on the ground that the judgment was void, because rendered on the order of the judge at chambers and not in term time, and that the only entry of the judgment was in the minute book of the court, but there was no showing that the judgment was unjust. If the judgment was void the remedy is by suspension of the execution until a motion to quash is heard, and the court can arrest all process if the judgment is void. Sanchez v. Carriaga, 81 Cal. 170.

An injunction will not be granted against a seizure on the ground that the judgment was void because signed at chambers, where the complainant does not deny under oath that neither he nor his counsel consented to the same. Rush v. Faust, 15 La. Ann. 477.

And judgments and executions thereon will not be enjoined on the ground that the judgment was rendered on the day on which the justice was not authorized by law to hold his court, where there is a remedy by certiorari. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Ware, 74 Tex. 47.

But as to such judgments that cannot be reviewed because the amount is too small, an injunction will be granted. Ibid.

And in Iowa U. Teleph. Co. v. Boylan, 86 Iowa, 90, it was held that a judgment by default rendered by a justice of the peace after he had lost jurisdiction by an unlawful adjournment for more than three days without complainant's consent is void, and an execution thereon will be enjoined; and in Iowa it is held that the complainant in the injunction case need not show that he is not indebted to the party obtaining a void judgment.

And an injunction will be granted against a judgment where there was an order of continuance of all contested causes, and the defendant and his attorney left the court, and judgment was thereafter taken during that term without their knowledge, and there was a valid defense to the action, and this on the ground of mistake and surprise. Jones v. Kincaid, 5 Lea, 677.

As to whether or not a justice lost jurisdiction of a case and power to enter a judgment by neglecting to make a minute of the verdict, and to enter it on the docket until the day after it was received,—quære. But if he did, an injunction will not be granted unless there is a good defense to the action; and besides there is a remedy by certiorari. Stokes v. Knarr, 11 Wis. 369.

In Mahr v. Young, 18 Wis. 634, it was said that where a justice had continued a case beyond the time allowed by law, and lost jurisdiction, and set the same aside, and rendered a judgment which was void, the proper remedy was by injunction or certiorari.

A judgment rendered at a term of the circuit court not authorized by law is void, and proceedings thereon and execution will be enjoined. Cala v. Goda, 84 Ind. 309.

An execution on a judgment that is void because entered in vacation without consent, and not read, approved, or signed by the judge, will be enjoined, and Ind. Acts 1881, p. 93, validating records duly entered, will not cure it, as it is not a record duly entered. Mitchell v. St. John, 96 Ind. 566.

And under La. Code Prac. art. 308, providing for an injunction against doing some acts injurious to the other party, and under La. Const. art. 10, providing that every one shall have an adequate remedy for every injury done to him, an injunction will be granted against proceedings on a judgment that is void because rendered out of term time. Hernandez v. James, 22 La. Ann. 433.

For error as to time of rendering judgments, see Norris v. Pollard, 75 Ga. 368, and Sanchez v. Carriaga, 81 Cal. 170, supra, I. h.

For irregularity as to parties, see supra, I. h.

L. T.

presented to and represented before the forum of conscience; but this is not to say that a court of equity, any more than a common-law court, when the claim of the infant is fully presented, would grant any other relief on the merits thereof than an adult litigant would be entitled to on the same facts. It is therefore quite an error to suppose that chancery will enjoin a judgment at law against an infant, which is not void, and merely irregular and erroneous, on the theory that it is the guardian of all infant litigants, when it is without competency to enjoin such a judgment against a person of full age. The well settled law is that chancery has no jurisdiction to enjoin any judgment at law for irregularities attending, and errors committed by the court in, the rendition thereof, unless such irregularities or errors were of a character to avoid the judgment ipso facto. A merely erroneous and irregular judgment, whether against infants or adults, will not be enjoined. A void judgment against either will be. We have seen that the judgment sought to be enjoined here was of the former class. It was irregular and erroneous, but not void. This appears by the bill. And this is the only ground upon which relief by injunction is sought. No surprise, accident, mistake, or fraud is alleged. The bill was therefore without equity. The court erred in overruling the motion to dismiss for want of equity, and also in overruling those assignments of demurrer which went to the point we have been considering. 2 Freem. Judgm. §§ 489, 518; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 889 et seq.; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 147a; Collier v. Falk, 66 Ala. 228, 228; Murphree v. Bishop, 79 Ala. 404; Preston v. Dunn, 25 Ala. 507. It may also be that, even had this judgment been void, complainants' remedy against it was not by bill for injunction, though as, if void, it is not so upon its face, we have proceeded upon assumption that equity would enjoin it, had it been not merely irregular, but wholly invalid. The decree of the city court must be reversed, and a decree will be here entered sustaining the demurrer, and the motion to dismiss the bill for want of equity, and dismissing the same.

Reversed and rendered.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

HOUSTON DIRECT NAVIGATION COMPANY
v.
INSURANCE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA, Pff. in Err.

(.....Tex.....)

1. A shipment from one point to another within the same state is interstate commerce, although a bill of lading is given and charges are collected to the latter point only where the destination of the property is in a foreign state to which a continuous voyage is contemplated with only a stop to change carriers at the terminal point mentioned in the bill of lading.
2. A provision in a carrier's charter that it shall be subject in the transportation of freight to the laws applicable to common carriers, does not make it subject to state control when engaged in interstate commerce.

(November 25, 1895.)

ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the First Supreme Judicial District to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the District Court for Galveston County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the amount which it had been compelled to pay for the destruction of property in defendant's possession for transportation for the loss of which defendant was alleged to be liable under the state statute. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—For note on the effect of shipments between points in the same state as interstate commerce, see Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sherwood (Tex.) 17 L. R. A. 642.
30 L. R. A.

Messrs. Mott & Armstrong for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Hume & Kleberg for defendant in error.

Brown, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The Insurance Company of North America sued the Direct Navigation Company to recover damages done to and the value of cotton destroyed by fire while in the possession of the navigation company; the insurance company having paid the loss to the owners of the cotton, which had been shipped from Houston on a barge belonging to the navigation company, and insured for the owners by the Insurance Company of North America. The insurance company claimed to be subrogated to the rights of the owners. The navigation company pleaded a general denial, and by special answer to the effect that the fire "was not due to its negligence, nor to its design or neglect;" that the shipment was an interstate shipment, and that the contracts for the transportation of the cotton were maritime contracts concerning the transportation of freight upon the navigable waters of the United States connecting with the high seas; that the barge Katinka was duly enrolled and licensed under the laws of the United States for engaging in such commerce; that the loss was occasioned by fire not due to its negligence. There was a trial before the court without a jury, and judgment rendered for the plaintiff, which judgment was affirmed by the court of civil appeals. The facts are as follows: The Direct Navigation Company is a corporation created by special act of the legislature of the state of Texas, approved October 9, 1866, which act contains, among others, the following provision: "Sec. 10. That the company shall, within six months after the passage of this charter through the legislature, have on the waters of Buffalo bayou and Galveston bay and harbor a sufficient number of steamers, barges, and propellers to meet the demands of commerce upon said company, and they shall be subject in the transportation of freight to the laws applicable to common carriers." The navigation company was organized under this act, and ever since has operated under it, and under license from the United States, running and navigating steamers, barges, and propellers upon the waters of Buffalo bayou and Galveston bay, between the city of Houston and the city of Galveston, and to seagoing vessels, for the purpose of transporting freight. During the month of September, 1892, it owned and operated upon said waters the barge Katinka. On the 15th of September, 1892, the company received at Houston, Tex., 184 bales of cotton, and on the 16th of the same month it received at Houston 154 bales of cotton, giving bills of lading therefor. The bills of lading recited that the cotton was received by the Houston Direct Navigation Company, in apparent good order and well conditioned, of Zeigler & McIlhenny, "for delivery to order; notify John Sherwood & Co. and O. Hayworth, respectively, or their assigns, at Galveston; he or they paying freight and charges, as per margin." The freight and charges were paid at Houston. The bills of lading further provided as follows: "It is understood and expressly stipulated that the liability of the Houston Direct Navigation Company shall cease upon delivery to the next connecting line, and that the said Houston Direct Navigation Company and its connections which receive and transport the said property shall not be liable for loss by fire. . . . The cotton, under this bill of lading, . . . is to be transported to the depots or the landings of the steamboats of forwarding lines at the points receipted to for delivery. It is further agreed that, in case of any loss or damage, that company alone shall be answerable therefor in whose actual custody the same may be at the time of the happening of such loss. This contract is executed and accomplished, and the liability of the Houston Direct Navigation Company terminates, on the delivery of the cotton to the Mallory line, at Galveston, when the liability of the said Mallory line commences, and not before." The cotton shipped to order, "notify John Sherwood & Co.," was the property of John Sherwood & Co., who resided in Liverpool; and the cotton shipped to order, "notify O. Hayworth," was the property of C. Menelas, who was a foreign buyer. When the cotton was delivered to the Direct Navigation Company, it was started on its trip to New York and Liverpool, to be transported by the defendant, the navigation company, to Galveston, there delivered to the Mallory line, which was to transport it to New York, to be there delivered to a connecting line, and thence transported to Liverpool. The bill of lading given by the navigation company was only to Galveston, and then the remainder of the cotton, not destroyed, was delivered to the Mallory line, which gave another bill of lading. On the 19th day of September, 1892, after 172 bales of the cotton had been unloaded from the barge Katinka at one of the wharves at Galveston, a fire broke out in the balance of the cargo yet on board the barge, destroying a part thereof and damaging the balance. The insurance company, under the terms of its policy, took the damaged cotton, and paid the full amount of the insurance on the cotton so burned, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $6,729.38. It sold the damaged cotton in open market to the highest bidder, sustaining a loss of $1,643.78, being the value of the cotton burned and the difference between the value of the damaged cotton before it was damaged and the amount realized from the sale. The trial court found that the origin of the fire was unknown, but it expressly declined to determine whether the fire originated from the negligence of the navigation company or not. Under a number of assignments, practically two questions are presented in this case, which may be stated as follows: (1) Was the Direct Navigation Company engaged in interstate commerce while transporting the cotton in question from Houston to Galveston? If so, then (2) did the provision in its charter, that it should "be subject in the transportation of freight to the laws applicable to common carriers," operate to make it liable under the laws of the state for the loss sustained, notwithstanding the limitation contained in the bill of lading, and the exemption provided by the statutes of the United States?

No distinct and certain definition of "interstate commerce" has yet been fixed by the decisions of the courts, and perhaps none can be given which will apply to all cases. But the law, as applicable to this case, deducible from the decisions of the courts, may be stated thus: When a commodity has been delivered to a common carrier to be transported on a continuous voyage or trip to a point beyond the limits of the state where delivered, the character of interstate or foreign commerce attaches thereto. Cos v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715; The Daniel Ball v. United States, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; Ex parte Koehler, 80 Fed. Rep. 867, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 238; Re Greene, 53 Fed. Rep. 113; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sherwood, 84 Tex. 125, 17 L. R. A. 643, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 240. In Cos v. Errol, supra, the question to be determined was whether or not the property in question was subject to taxation in the state where it then was, and this question depended upon whether or not it had become an element of interstate commerce. The court said: "But no definite rule has been adopted with regard to the point of time at which the taxing power of the state ceases as to goods exported to a foreign country or to another state. What we have already said, however, in relation to the products of a state intended for exportation to another state, will indicate the view which seems to us the sound one on that subject, namely, that such goods do not cease to be a part of the general mass of property in the state, subject as such to its jurisdiction and to taxation in the usual way, until they have been shipped or entered with a common carrier for transportation to another state, or have been started upon such transportation, in a continuous route or journey.

We think that this must be the true rule on the subject. . . . And so we think they continue to be until they have entered upon their final journey for leaving the state and going into another state. It is true it was said in the case of The Daniel Ball v. United States, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 565, 19 L. ed. 1002, 'whenever a commodity has begun to move, as an article of trade, from one state to another, commerce in that commodity between the states has commenced.' But this movement does not begin until the articles have been shipped or started for transportation from the one state to the other. The carrying of them in carts or other vehicles, or even floating them to the depot where the journey is to commence, is no part of that journey. That is all preliminary work, performed for the purpose of putting the property in a state of preparation and readiness for transportation. Until actually launched on its way to another state, or committed to a common carrier for transportation to such state, its destination is not fixed and certain. It may be sold or otherwise disposed of within the state, and never put in course of transportation out of the state. Carrying it from the farm or the forest to the depot is only an interior movement of the property, entirely within the state, for the purpose, it is true, but only for the purpose, of putting it into a course of exportation; it is no part of the exportation itself. Until shipped or started on its final journey out of the state, its exportation is a matter altogether in fieri, and not at all a fixed and certain thing." The questions to be determined are, Did the cotton in question, when delivered to the navigation company, start on its journey to a point outside of the state of Texas? Was its destination at that time fixed and determined upon, and was the carriage from Houston to Galveston a part of the voyage, which was to be continuous? The facts of this case show that the owners of the cotton lived in Liverpool, and the cotton itself was by their agents put in transportation, by delivery to the navigation company, to be carried by it to the city of Galveston, and there delivered to the Mallory line, by which it was to be transported to New York, and thence by connecting line of steamers to the city of Liverpool. The bill of lading upon its face showed that the navigation company was to deliver the cotton to the Mallory line, at Galveston, at which time the liability of the navigation company should cease and that of the Mallory line should attach. There can be no doubt that the destination of the cotton, at the time of its delivery to the navigation company, was fixed and determined, and the point at which it was destined for final delivery was beyond the limits of this state. It is equally clear, from the bill of lading and other testimony, that a continuous voyage was contemplated, and the trip between Houston and Galveston was simply a part of that voyage. Upon this state of facts the cotton would undoubtedly come within the rule laid down in the case cited above, and would be classed as interstate commerce. But the evidence likewise shows that the Houston Direct Navigation Company gave a bill of lading to Galveston only, and not a through bill to cover the entire route, and the charges of freight to Galveston, and wharfage at that place, were paid at the time that the cotton was delivered. Do these facts change the rule of law applicable to the case, and constitute this a local shipment, as distinguished from interstate or foreign commerce?

It has been generally held that where a carrier in one state receives a commodity for shipment by a continuous trip over its own line and connecting lines, giving a through bill of lading to the point of destination, with the provision that its own liability shall cease upon delivery to its connecting line, at a point within the state where it was received, such transportation is to be considered as interstate commerce, and the carrier is but one of several agencies employed. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sherwood, 84 Tex. 185, 17 L. R. A. 648, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 240. The fact that the bill of lading given by the Direct Navigation Company was only to Galveston establishes simply that the liability of the company terminated at that point, and has the same effect, and no more, as if a through bill had been given by the receiving carrier, with the stipulation that its liability should terminate when delivered to the connecting carrier. The effect of such bill of lading as last named would be to make it, although a through bill upon its face, in effect a separate bill, so far as the liability is concerned of each carrier engaged in the transportation. We do not understand that it is necessary that all of the carriers engaged in an interstate or foreign shipment shall be parties to the contract of shipment for the entire route. In fact, as we understand the decisions the character of the commerce is not affected by the terms of the contract of the carrier as it relates to liability for the freight, but only in so far as it shows that it is or is not a part of the continuous carriage from the beginning point to the point of destination. The Daniel Ball, cited above; Harmon v. Chicago, 140 Ill. 274; Foster v. Davenport, 63 U. S. 22 How. 244, 16 L. ed. 248. The last two cases cited involved the question as to whether or not tugboats engaged in towing vessels which were themselves engaged in interstate commerce were to be considered as likewise engaged in such commerce. In each case it was held that such tugboats, although operating locally and within the limits of a state, were to be considered as engaged in interstate commerce, and not subject to the laws of the state. The tugboats were in no sense parties to the contracts for transportation, but were simply agencies employed therein. In Heiserman v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 63 Iowa, 782, the supreme court of that state, upon a bill of lading similar to the one given in this case, held that the transaction constituted a local shipment, and that the rights of the parties were to be determined by the laws of that state. In Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sherwood, 84 Tex. on page 185, 17 L. R. A. 648, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 240, the judge who delivered that opinion approved the case of Heiserman v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co.; but the question decided in the case approved, and now before this court, was not embraced in the case then being decided, and the expressions of approval of the Iowa case are simply obiter dicta, and not to be taken as authority. The court of civil appeals and the counsel for defendant in error refer to the case of Rio Grande R. Co. v. Cross, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 454, in which this court refused an application for a writ of error. In that case the court of civil appeals said: "The evidence does not show that the shipment of the money was interstate, but, if it did, the limitation of liability by the steamship company in its bill of lading applies only to carriage by the ship." The two propositions were involved in the decision of that case, and this court refused the application for writ of error upon the ground that the limitation of liability by the steamship company in the bill of lading given by it did not apply to the carriage by the railway company. The refusal of a writ of error does not imply the approval of the decision of the court of civil appeals upon all questions discussed by it, but simply of the result of the judgment of that court. We conclude from the authorities and the facts in this case that the transportation of the cotton by the Direct Navigation Company from Houston to Galveston was interstate or foreign commerce, and that its liability for the loss must be determined by the rules of law established by Congress, in so far as such rules have been prescribed, unless the provision of the charter before quoted operates to subject the corporation, in the carriage of interstate commerce, to the statutes of the state, instead of the laws of Congress. We believe that the proper construction of the language used in the charter of the navigation company is simply to express, as matter of law, that it is to be regarded as a common carrier, and as such subject to whatever law may be applicable to a common carrier in the business in which it may be engaged. The effect of this statutory declaration is to relieve persons who may have claims against it of the necessity of establishing its character as a common carrier, and to make it liable as such for all losses sustained or injuries inflicted in the transaction of its business. It is not necessary, in the view we take of this case, to determine the question of the validity of such a provision in the charter, if found to be in conflict with the laws of the United States. We simply hold that the language quoted does not have the effect to make the corporation created by the charter subject to state control when engaged in interstate commerce, but that, being a common carrier, and so declared by its charter to be, its liability as such is to be determined under the law which may be applicable to the character of commerce in which it may be engaged at the time. It follows from what we have said that in our opinion the liability of the navigation company in this case is to be determined under the laws of Congress upon the subject, or the common law, in so far as Congress has made no provision therefor, and not by the statutes of the state of Texas, which forbid the carrier to limit its liability as at common law.

The trial court expressly declined to pass upon the question of negligence on the part of the navigation company, and the court of civil appeals made no finding thereon. There was evidence on the part of the carrier tending to show diligence, and to negative the idea of negligence, on its part; but the evidence is not so conclusive as to justify this court in holding, as matter of law, that the loss did not occur through the negligence of the navigation company. We therefore cannot enter judgment in this case, but for the errors of the District Court and the Court of Civil Appeals, as shown herein, the judgments of both courts are reversed, and this cause is remanded to the District Court.

MISSISSIPPI SUPREME COURT.

Mrs. C. M. TAYLOR, Appl.,

v.

John HART.

(.....Miss.....)

1. A lessee of rural as well as urban property is within the provision of Code 1892, § 2498, exempting him from liability to pay rents for buildings destroyed without his fault.
2. An abatement of so much as was paid "for the building" must be allowed under Code 1892, § 2498, in case of the destruction of buildings which constituted a material part of the consideration of the lease.

NOTE.—See, in connection with this case, the note to Porter v. Tull (Wash.) 22 L. R. A. 613, 30 L. R. A.

(October 28, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Yazoo County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover possession of cotton which she had seized for rent. Affirmed.

Defendant leased to plaintiff a plantation for the period of three years for $1,150 per year, on which was a gin house, press, and machinery and the lease stipulated that it was to be returned at the end of the term in as good condition as when received, and that if it was damaged or destroyed by the negligence of the lessee he was to be liable for its value. It was destroyed by fire soon after the lessee took possession without his fault or negligence. He then claimed a deduction of its annual value from the yearly rent and refused to pay the full amount of the rent, whereupon the landlord distrained and seized some of his cotton to pay the rent. He replied it claiming that he was entitled to the deduction in the rent, and also that the landlord had refused to comply with her agreement to furnish means to replace the gin-house if he would do the work. Demurrers to these claims were overruled.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Barnett & Thompson for appellant.

Messrs. Hudson & Perrin for appellee.

Whitfield, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The general doctrine of the common law unquestionably was that, upon a covenant in a lease of land and buildings for a term of years to pay rent, the rent could be recovered after a destruction of the buildings leased by accidental fire. The express contract and promise were not discharged by an act for which the lessor was not responsible. But if "the interest of the lessee in a part of the demised premises was destroyed by the act of God or the public enemy, so as to be incapable of any beneficial enjoyment," the rent was, even at common law, apportioned. Such is the accurate statement of the rule at common law given by Justice Brewer in Whitaker v. Hawley, 25 Kan. 674, 37 Am. Rep. 277, in an opinion of great learning and power, exposing the absurdities of the common-law rule on this general subject as especially applied to the conditions of society existing with us. See also Fowler v. Payne, 49 Miss. 82, 79; Jemison v. McDaniel, 25 Miss. 83; Taylor, Land. & T. § 375. A universal exception to this rule in this country was established where the lease was of a particular room or apartment in a building, or a building merely without any land, in which case the total destruction of the room or building or apartment terminated the lease, and released the tenant from the payment of subsequently accruing rent. See the learned and exhaustive note to Porter v. Tull (Wash.) 22 L. R. A. 618; note to McMillan v. Solomon, 94 Am. Dec. 662; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 742, and authorities cited therein; Lanpher v. Glenn, 87 Minn. 4. Perhaps the inflexible rigor of the general common-law rule is nowhere more strongly put than by Brickell, Ch. J., in Warren v. Wagner, 75 Ala. 202, 51 Am. Rep. 446, where, the lease being of lands and tenements, accompanied with the right of quarrying stone upon the lands during the term, and the injury complained of being the destruction of the limekiln, which it was conceded constituted the principal consideration for the lease, it was held, at the common law, the lessee was bound for the whole rent. This rule has often been assailed as utterly repugnant to justice and reason, never more forcibly than by Justice Brewer in the case of Whitaker v. Hawley, supra, and Chancellor Walworth in Gates v. Green, 4 Paige, 854, 27 Am. Dec. 68, and so harsh was the operation of the rule that in many states (all whose statutes are cited in the note to Porter v. Tull (Wash.) 22 L. R. A.

R. A. 616) statutes have been passed for the purpose of modifying or abrogating it. Many of these statutes, such as those of New York, Ohio, Connecticut, New Jersey, and Minnesota, expressly refer to "lessees or occupants of any building . . . which shall be so destroyed or injured," etc., providing that in such case the lessee may surrender possession, etc., of the leasehold premises. It is clear that all such statutes relate to buildings, and not to lands; and all the decisions to which we are referred on the proposition that the appellee should have surrendered possession of the premises if he wished to avoid the payment of rent accruing subsequently to the fire are constructions of such statutes, and are in cases where buildings in cities were destroyed. Such are Roach v. Peterson, 47 Minn. 291, the buildings being in Minneapolis; Lanpher v. Glenn, 87 Minn. 4, the buildings being in St. Paul; Gay v. Davey, 47 Ohio St. 896, the buildings being in Cincinnati; Johnson v. Oppenheim, 55 N. Y. 280, the buildings being in New York; and Miller v. Benton, 55 Conn. 529, the buildings being in New Haven, in which last case the court remarks upon the use of the word "tenement" as a word applicable in New Jersey, "in popular and legal meaning, to parts of a building leased without the land upon which the buildings stand," as well as to land (page 544).

Our statute, section 2498, Code 1892, * upon the construction of which this case depends, has no such limiting words. Its benefits are for "a [that is, any] tenant." It contains no provision for the surrender by the tenant of the leased property. Where the subject-matter of the lease is a building merely, the tenant may justly be required, in the states whose decisions are cited supra, to "quit and surrender possession" of the demised premises, if he would escape the payment of subsequently accruing rent. But there can be no reason, in the case of a farmer whose cotton crop, in this state it may be, is opening in the field, in requiring him, after the expenditure of large sums on an annual crop, to surrender possession of the premises, and abandon his crop, in order to claim an apportionment of the rent where a gin-house and machinery constituting an essential part of the subject-matter of the lease have been destroyed by fire, if, under our statute, he is otherwise entitled to apportionment. Our condition, as an agricultural community, is wholly different from that of the people of the manufacturing states; and this difference in condition was doubtless in the mind of the compiler of the Code of 1880, in which this statute first appears, and may well have occasioned the difference in the phraseology,—a difference aptly suiting the law to the actual conditions of our people, by far the larger part of whom are agriculturists. The farm in this case was a large and valuable one, 160 bales of cotton being grown thereon in the year 1894. Certainly, no building could have been more essential to the value of the use of this leased plantation than the steam gin of the kind and value shown in the testimony. The appellee testifies that he would not have rented the place without the gin-house and machinery. The reasonable proportion of the whole rental of $1,150, which the gin-house and machinery constituted, is shown to have been $850 by two witnesses, and the jury allowed only $275. The clear tendency of all the modern decisions, in our states, has been to so modify the rule of the common law as to work out a result just and equitable in the situation. At common law, "in the hiring of chattels, though the terms be as absolute and positive as those of a real-estate lease, their absolute destruction without the fault of the hirer terminated the contract;" and it is well said by Mr. Justice Brown in the case cited that "the clear tendency of the rulings has been to do away with the common-law technicalities concerning real estate, and to bring the rules of the common law more in harmony with those respecting personal property;" and that "the distinctions growing out of the feudal system are disappearing, and this distinction between the lease of real property and the hiring of chattels is one which sooner or later will cease to exist." In the same spirit is Coogan v. Parker, 2 S. C. N. S. 255, 16 Am. Rep. at pages 679, 680.

*"A tenant shall not be bound to pay rent for buildings after their destruction by fire or otherwise, without negligence or fault on his part, unless he have expressly stipulated to be so bound."

We must give this statute a construction suited to the needs of our people; and in giving it the construction which we do, holding that it applies to buildings rural as well as urban, and that, in case of the destruction of either kind by fire without the fault of the tenant, there should be an abatement of so much of the rent as was paid "for the building," we think we do this. It is, we think, somewhat significant, too, that sections 2497 and 2498 of the Annotated Code are placed now in the law relating to landlord and tenant, and immediately succeeding sections furnishing remedies for enforcing agricultural liens. In the Code of 1880 they stood in a connection perfectly consistent with the view here announced of the statute, though not so markedly so as they do in their present connection. We have given the subject a most thorough examination, due to its importance, and are satisfied that the construction of section 2498 herein announced is the one most in harmony with the language of the statute looking to the old law, the evil, and the remedy, with justice, and with the peculiar condition and needs of our agricultural population. We refer to the following authorities as bearing out the reason and spirit of our views, in addition to those already cited: "Rent is compensation for the use, and implies the continued existence of the property to be used," says Justice Brewer in the case referred to, at page 691, 25 Kan. To the same effect, in stronger language, is Porter v. Tull, 6 Wash. 408, 22 L. R. A. 617. See Graves v. Berdan, 26 N. Y. 498; Gates v. Green, 4 Paige, 855, 27 Am. Dec. 68; Coogan v. Parker, 2 S. C. N. S. 255, 16 Am. Rep. 659; Penn v. Kearny, 21 La. Ann. 21; Levey v. Dyess, 51 Miss. 510,—as to the tendency of our decisions; Willard v. Till- man, 19 Wend. 358, a striking case, where, even in New York, prior to the act of 1880, in a case where the lease was of three rooms and a strip of land 200 feet in length, and the buildings were wholly destroyed, it was held that the interest in the land remained, and was capable of beneficial enjoyment, but that the tenant was entitled to a pro rata abatement of the rent, and could only be held for an amount which would bear to the entire rent a proportion which the value of the use of the reversionary premises bore to the whole at the date of the annual rent. See also Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 707, 30 L. ed. 776; Coogan v. Parker, Gates v. Green, and Penn v. Kearny, supra. And, specially, see the masterly opinion in Coogan v. Parker, supra, a case noticing, as does Mr. Justice Brewer in the case cited supra, the distinction made at common law between destruction of the leased premises by the act of God or the public enemy, and by accident, as to the reasonableness of which distinction we express no opinion. See Coogan v. Parker, 2 S. C. N. S. 255, 16 Am. Rep. 666, 667. The distinction seems to have obtained at common law, whether the accidental fire was due to negligence of the lessee or not. The distinction seems to be approved in Coogan v. Parker, but repudiated in Whitaker v. Hawley, supra. Our statute states the matter for us. In this case, Coogan v. Parker, the court says on the general subject, in the absence of any statute at all: "Rent is defined to be a certain yearly profit; . . . in retribution for the use. . . . The existence of rent, therefore, presupposes land, and a possible usufruct, for there can be no just demand for retribution or compensation for that which does not exist. An agreement to pay rent, whether a simple contract or a covenant in form, is controlled by the nature of rent. If the conditions under which rent accrues do not exist, there is nothing for either an agreement or a covenant to pay rent to rest upon. . . . Where parties contract together in terms that import the relations expressed by the foregoing definitions, it is obvious that their contract ought to receive such a construction as to preserve the rights and equities lying at the foundation of such definitions. The equity of a contract is its life, springing out of the idea of a reciprocity of benefits and obligations. . . . A contract is the law of the parties. Its equity is the reason of that law. And it is not a mere figure of speech to say that where the reason ceases the law ceases also." This equity—the reasons of the law as related to this subject-matter—is for us happily crystallized in section 2498 of the Annotated Code of 1892.

We do not think the first instruction subject to the criticism made of it. The principle announced, not as clearly as it might have been, but substantially, is that, if the gin-house constituted a material part of the consideration of the lease, on its destruction by fire without the lessee's fault or negligence the rent should be abated in the proportion that the value of the use of the gin-house and machinery bore to the value of the use of the whole premises. It was not intended to authorize "damages," and, fairly construed, does not do so. The instruction is inartificially drawn, but we do not think it could have misled the jury. We find no error.

Affirmed.

OHIO SUPREME COURT.

Julia L. WEBSTER et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.
DWELLING HOUSE INSURANCE COM-PANY of Boston, Mass.

(33 Ohio St. 79.)

1. The interest of a husband in the dwelling house of his wife, used as a homestead by the family, is sufficient to support a recovery by the two jointly on a policy of fire insurance issued to both.
2. Rules followed in courts of equity respecting forfeitures may be available in a suit at law where the facts make their application necessary to the ends of justice.
3. Provisions for forfeitures are to receive, where the intent is doubtful, a strict construction against those for whose benefit they are introduced.
4. If it be left in doubt, in view of the terms of the instrument and the relation of the contracting parties, whether given words were used in an enlarged or a restricted sense, other things being equal, that construction will be adopted which is most beneficial to the promisee.
5. Where a farm dwelling and farm implements are insured by a fire policy issued to a wife and husband, and the dwelling is used and occupied as a family homestead, and the implements are used on the farm where the dwelling is situate, a representation and warranty in the application that the property is owned by them jointly should, unless the contrary intent is manifest, be construed in the popular, and not in a technical legal sense, and when so construed will not be held to be untrue simply because the title to the dwelling is wholly in the wife and the title to the personality wholly in the husband.
6. The examination required to be made by the agent of an insurance company by § 3643, Rev. Stat., relates to the physical condition of the property such as an inspection would disclose, and does not relate to the matter of encumbrances. The "change" mentioned in the statute refers to some physical change in the insured property, its use, or its surroundings, and does not relate to a change respecting encumbrances.
7. Where a policy of insurance stipulates that if any part of the property shall be encumbered by a mortgage without the consent of the company, the policy shall be void, such stipulation is not within the provisions of § 3643. And if, after the issuing of the policy and before the loss, such encumbrance is created by the insured without the consent of the company, the policy is thereby invalidated.

*Headnotes by the COURT.

(December 20, 1895.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Ashtabula County to review a judgment reversing a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on a policy of fire insurance. Affirmed.

Statement by Spear, J. :

Action on a policy of fire insurance issued to Julia L. Webster and James E. Webster, wife and husband, for $2,000 on dwelling house and $250 on farm implements. Defense of forfeiture: First, that representation and warranty made by insured was that property was owned jointly by them, while, in fact, the house was owned wholly by the wife, and personal property wholly by the husband; second, that after issue of policy and before loss insured placed a mortgage lien on the real estate, without notice to or consent of the company, in violation of the terms of the policy. Recovery for amount of insurance on house, no proof being offered of loss or value of personality. Reversed by circuit court on the ground of error in the charge to the jury.

Messrs. Edward H. Fitch and A. J. Trunkay, for plaintiffs in error:

The holding and construction given to the statute (Rev. Stat. §§ 3643, 3644) by the court of common pleas is right.

Queen Ins. Co. v. Leslie, 47 Ohio St. 409, 9 L. R. A. 45; People's Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bowerson, 5 Ohio C. C. 444; United Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Kukral, 7 Ohio C. C. 358.

The construction I contend for has been given by the supreme court of Maine in Cannell v. Phaniz Ins. Co. 59 Me. 582.

See also United Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Kukral, supra; Reilly v. Franklin Ins. Co. 43 Wis. 454, 28 Am. Rep. 552; Cayon v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. 68 Wis. 510; Emery v. Piscataqua F. & M. Ins. Co. 52 Me. 324; Barnard v. People's F. Ins. Co. 66 N. H. 401.

Messrs. Squire, Sanders, & Dempsey, for defendant in error:

There is not an intimation to be found in any language used in this statute that the word "change" refers in any way to the interest of the assured, or to his title, or to encumbrances.

To confine the provisions of this statute as to "changes" and "intentional fraud" to the subject-matter, in regard to which the legislation is had and to what precedes in the very sentence in which the words occur, is but to NOTE.—For undivided interest as sole and unconditional ownership, see Beebe v. Ohio Farmers' Ins. Co. (Mich.) 18 L. R. A. 481, and note.

30 L. R. A.

construe the section grammatically and according to one of the fundamental rules of construction of statutes, namely: "All words of a general nature, not express and precise, are to be restrained unto the fitness of the subject matter or the person."

Brigel v. Starbuck, 84 Ohio St. 280; Aultman, M. & Co. v. J. F. Seiberling Co. 81 Ohio St. 201; Shultz v. Cambridge, 88 Ohio St. 659; Lane v. State, 89 Ohio St. 812; Myers v. Seaberger, 45 Ohio St. 234; Howland v. Carson, 28 Ohio St. 628; Elliott v. Shaw, 32 Ohio St. 481.

Spear, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The action of the trial court which was the ground of reversal may be more briefly treated by considering defendant's requests to charge which were refused than by a review at large of the charge as given.

1. As applicable to its defense of forfeiture by reason of alleged false representation and warranty regarding ownership of property, the defendant requested the court to charge that "no recovery can be had in this action for the loss of any property described in the policy if the jury are satisfied from the evidence that Mrs. Webster had no interest or ownership in the personal property mentioned in the policy, and that Mr. Webster had no ownership or interest in the dwelling house described in the policy."

The claim of the company on this branch of the case was, and is, that in the face of the representation and warranty of the insured that they jointly owned the property, there could be no recovery on a policy issued to them jointly so long as the proof disclosed that the wife was sole owner of the dwelling and the husband sole owner of the personality; in effect that the agreement was violated the moment it was made, and although the parties had paid the company $45 as premium, which the company retained, yet that there never was any valid contract, and the insured, although acting in entire good faith, never had a dollar of insurance on their property.

Perhaps, technically speaking, the claim is not one of forfeiture, for forfeiture is deprivation or destruction of a right in consequence of the nonperformance of some obligation or condition, and we are not accustomed to associate the idea of forfeiture with a contract which has not existed; but manifestly the law as to forfeiture will furnish a guide to the proper disposition of the question. Relief against forfeitures is matter of equitable cognizance, but rules applicable to the subject are resorted to in courts of law, and there seems no good reason why the principles which govern courts of equity should not be available in a suit at law where the facts make such cognizance necessary to the ends of justice.

A primal rule is that forfeitures are not favored either in equity or at law; indeed it is declared as a universal rule that courts of equity will not lend their aid to enforce a forfeiture. Following as a corollary from this, provisions for forfeitures are to receive, when the intent is doubtful, a strict construction against those for whose benefit they are introduced. West v. Citizens' Ins. Co. 27 Ohio St. 1, 22 Am. Rep. 294; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 156, 58 Am. Rep. 806; Blackwell v. Miami Valley Ins. Co. 48 Ohio St. 533, 14 L. R. A. 431; Livingston v. Stickles, 7 Hill, 255; Catlin v. Springfield F. Ins. Co. 1 Sumn. 434; Breasted v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 8 N. Y. 305, 59 Am. Dec. 482. As said by Sherman, J., in Bond v. Swearingen, 1 Ohio, 403, respecting a statutory forfeiture: "Whatever may be the nature or kind of forfeiture, it is never carried by construction beyond the clear expression of the statute creating it." And by Porter, J., in Hoffman v. Aetna F. Ins. Co. 32 N. Y. 418, 88 Am. Dec. 337: "It is a rule of law, as well as of ethics, that where the language of a promisor may be understood in more senses than one, it is to be interpreted in the sense in which he had reason to suppose it was understood by the promisee. Potter v. Ontario & L. Mut. Ins. Co. 5 Hill, 149; Barlow v. Scott, 24 N. Y. 40. It is also a familiar rule of law that if it be left in doubt, in view of the general tenor of the instrument and the relations of the contracting parties, whether given words were used in an enlarged or a restricted sense, other things being equal, that construction should be adopted which is most beneficial to the promisee. Co. Litt. 183; Bacon, Law Maxims, Reg. 8; Doe, Webb, v. Dixon, 9 East, 16; Marvin v. Stone, 2 Cow. 806. This rule has been very uniformly applied to conditions and provisos in policies of insurance, on the ground that though they are inserted for the benefit of the underwriters, their office is to limit the force of the principal obligation. Yeaton v. Fry, 9 U. S. 5 Cranch, 341, 3 L. ed. 119; Palmer v. Warren Ins. Co. 1 Story, C. C. 364, 365; Pelly v. Royal Exch. Assur. Co. 1 Burr. 349." See also Western & A. Pipe Lines v. Home Ins. Co. 145 Pa. 346; Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 21 Minn. 85, 18 Am. Rep. 385; Anderson v. Fitzgerald, 4 H. L. Cas. 484; Riddlesbarger v. Hartford Ins. Co. 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 386, 19 L. ed. 257; Baley v. Homestead F. Ins. Co. 80 N. Y. 21, 36 Am. Rep. 570; Burleigh v. Adriatic P. Ins. Co. 90 N. Y. 221; Griffey v. New York Cent. Ins. Co. 100 N. Y. 417, 58 Am. Rep. 202.

Applying the foregoing rules, how stands the case?

This defense is based entirely on the language of the representation. In giving construction to this representation, what meaning should be placed on the words used? Manifestly such as was intended by the applicants, and which the company knew, or ought to have known, they intended. Should the word "jointly" receive construction in accordance with strict legal ideas? If so, does it mean that the plaintiffs were joint tenants as defined by Blackstone, giving right of survivorship? An Ohio lawyer, even, would hardly have that in mind, for joint tenancy does not exist in Ohio. Should the word be held to imply tenancy in common, where two or more hold by an undivided possession but several freeholds, neither being entitled to an exclusive part, but each entitled to occupy the whole in common with the others, and at the death of one his interest to pass to his heirs and not to the survivors? Plaintiffs claim that they did in fact state to the agent who filled up the application the exact condition of the title, and it was not their fault if he did not so write it. But, be this as it may, and even though the word would suggest tenancy in common to the legal mind, these plaintiffs were not lawyers; the property was in the country, and they were, without doubt, plain country folk. Who would suspect them of intending to be understood that their ownership was that of joint tenants, or of tenants in common, within legal definitions? Rather is it natural to presume that they used the word in the popular sense, implying that they owned the property together, and that no other person was interested in it. And they did. They were in the joint possession of the real estate, and were enjoying the use of the personality together, and no third person was the owner, in any sense, of any part of it. While the title to the real estate was in the wife, and while the husband had no estate in it, yet he had, by force of recent statutes, an inchoate dower right in it, liable to become vested in case she should die seized of it, leaving him her widower, a substantial property right, capable of valuation in a proper proceeding, and under § 8111, Rev. Stat., he could not, even during her life, their marital relations remaining, be excluded from her dwelling.

Nor was the alleged failure to state the exact ownership prejudicial to the company. The purpose of statement of ownership is to prevent the making of wagering contracts, or such as would afford a temptation to the insured to purposely or negligently permit the property to burn; and this purpose would seem to be fully accomplished when it appears that the wife and husband own all the property covered by the policy, and are in possession and use of it in common, although there be a small portion of which the wife has not legal ownership, for usually there is no more vigilant guardian of the husband's interests than is the wife. The property is used by both, for their common comfort and welfare, and that of the family. In the husband's absence the wife has, ordinarily, the entire charge of it, and her interest in its preservation is scarcely second to his.

If the company may stand on a strict technical construction of the words used, and hold the plaintiffs to them though they did not fully apprehend their legal effect, and ought not reasonably to have done so, it is placed in the position of tempting patrons into the payment of premiums, and into resting on a mistaken belief that they have indemnity, only to find, when the trial comes, that their reliance had been upon a broken reed. A court cannot sustain such a contention. If technical forfeitures are to be maintained on such grounds, confidence in commercial faith will be weakened and important property rights impaired. It would be, as it seems to us, carrying technicality to a most unreasonable length, to hold that the representation as to ownership shall forfeit the policy.

Whether a joint action could have been maintained for the personal property we need not determine, for no proof of loss of personal property, or its value having been offered, that claim dropped out. It was held in Dwelling House Ins. Co. v. Leedy et al., decided at January term, 1894, though not reported, that the interest of the husband in the wife's dwelling house used as a homestead by the family, is sufficient to support a recovery by the two jointly on a policy issued to both, and we but follow that case in holding that the action was properly brought in the name of both in this case.

The instruction was properly refused.

2. Defendant also requested the court to charge that "if the plaintiff, after the issuing of the policy sued upon and before the loss, placed a mortgage lien upon the real estate upon which the house burned was situated, without notice to the company, or its consent to such encumbrance, such action on the part of the plaintiff was in violation of the terms of the policy and rendered the policy void, and the plaintiffs, if the jury find the facts as above stated, cannot recover in this action."

This the court refused to give, and charged in substance that the creating of a mortgage encumbrance after the issuing of the policy and before the fire, without notice or consent by the company, would not of itself constitute a defense, but that it would constitute a defense if the jury should find that the giving of such mortgage materially increased the risk. This holding rests upon the proposition that the facts bring the case within the operation of § 8643, Rev. Stat., and that it is governed by that part which reads as follows:

"Any person, company, or association hereafter insuring any building or structure against loss or damage by fire or lightning, by a renewal of a policy heretofore issued, or otherwise, shall cause such building or structure to be examined by an agent of the insurer, and a full description thereof to be made, and the insurable value thereof to be fixed by such agent; in the absence of any change increasing the risk without the consent of the insurers, and also of intentional fraud on the part of the insured, in case of total loss the whole amount mentioned in the policy or renewal upon which the insurers received a premium, shall be paid; and in case of a partial loss, the full amount of the partial loss shall be paid."

No question is made as to the import of the language of the policy in respect to the creating of mortgage liens. It is so clear that its meaning could not have been misapprehended, and is to be enforced as written unless the statute controls the case.

We are not able to agree with the construction of this statute given by the learned trial judge. As we construe the statute, the examination required of the agent before taking the risk relates to the physical condition of the property such as an inspection would disclose, and does not relate to the matter of encumbrances, and hence the change referred to in the statute relates to some physical change in the insured building, its use, or its surroundings, which would, by reason of changed condition, naturally increase the hazard incurred by the company, and does not relate to a change respecting encumbrances. And that where a policy of insurance, as in this case, stipulates that if any part of the property shall be encumbered by mortgage without the consent of the company the policy shall be void, such stipulation is not within the provision of § 8643, and the right of the company to make such a condition, and of the insured to accept it, remains notwithstanding the statute. So that, if, after the issuing of the policy and before the loss, such encumbrance is created by the insured, without the consent of the company, the policy is thereby invalidated.

The question involved is not different in principle from one of the questions disposed of in Sun Fire Office v. Clark, decided October 29, 1895, 53 Ohio St. 36, and the reasoning of the opinion in that case is so satisfactory, and so well supports the conclusion here reached, that further discussion is deemed unnecessary. It is further supported by the able opinion of the learned judge of the circuit court in Dwelling House Ins. Co. v. Webster, 7 Ohio C. C. 511, to which special reference is here made. Our conclusion is also in harmony with the decision in Queen Ins. Co. v. Leslie, 47 Ohio St. 409, 9 L. R. A. 45, and not inconsistent with the judgment of this court affirming People's Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bowersox, reported in 5 Ohio C. C. 444, and the judgment affirming United Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Kukulak, reported in 7 Ohio C. C. 356, when the records in those cases are understood.

It follows that in refusing this instruction, and in the charge as given, the common pleas erred.

Judgment affirmed.

OKLAHOMA SUPREME COURT.

Irwin S. DE FORD et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

W. W. PAINTER, Sheriff of Logan County.

(8 Okla. 80.)

*1. De Ford, one of the plaintiffs in error, owned a lot with a building thereon in the business part of the city of Guthrie, and rented the basement and first floor for the sum of $1,300, and a part of the second floor for offices for the additional sum of $250. He resided with his family on a portion of the second floor, valued at the sum of $250 per annum. The family had no other home. Held, that the building was the dwelling of De Ford, and the home of his family, within the meaning of section 2, chapter 24, Stat. 1893, and was the homestead of plaintiffs in error, and as such exempt from execution.

2. Under this section of the statute, providing for the exemption of land, as a homestead in a city, which has been improved by a building used by the family as a home, the homestead is not lost or forfeited by the circumstances that the style of the building resembles in its architecture ordinary business structures, and that it is on one of the principal business streets, flush with the sidewalk, that the larger portion of the house is rented for the purpose of business and revenue, and the smaller part used for a home, and that the family resides on the second floor and not upon the first floor of the building. If the building is in fact the only home of the family, it is exempt from execution, although its principal use may be for business purposes.

3. The interrogation of witnesses by the judge, during the progress of the case, is not error, and he may, in the exercise of his discretion, aid in eliciting material matter suggested by the evidence.

Burford, J., dissents.

(July 27, 1896.)

ERROR to the District Court for Logan County to review an order overruling a motion for new trial after the dissolution of a temporary injunction restraining the sale of the property and a finding in favor of defendant in a proceeding brought to restrain the sale of certain real estate on the ground that it was exempt under the homestead laws. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Green & Strang, for plaintiffs in error:

The owner of a city lot, itself exempt, may design and erect thereon a building to be used as a dwelling for himself and family, and for the further purpose of leasing a portion thereof to provide an income for himself and family.

Hoffman v. Hill, 47 Kan. 611; Layson v. Grange, 48 Kan. 442; Stevens v. Hollingsworth, 74 Ill. 202; Williams v. Starr, 5 Wis. 534; Spencer v. Fredendall, 15 Wis. 666; Hait v. Houle, 19 Wis. 472; Kent v. Agard, 22 Wis. 150; Phelps v. Rooney, 9 Wis. 70, 76 Am. Dec. 244; Harriman v. Queen Ins. Co. 49 Wis. 72; Gainus v. Cannon, 42 Ark. 508; Klenk v. Knoble, 87 Ark. 298; Skinner v. Hall, 69 Cal. 195; Umland v. Holcombe, 26 Minn. 286; Kelly v. Baker, 10 Minn. 154; Jacoby v. Parkland Distilling Co. 41 Minn. 227; King v. Welborn, 83 Mich. 195, 9 L. R. A. 803; Hartsfield v. Harroley, 71 Ala. 281; Re Tertelling, 2 Dill. 339; Cass County Bank v. Weber, 83 Iowa, 63, 12 L. R. A. 477; Methery v. Walker, 17 Tex. 593; Hancock v. Morgan, 17 Tex. 582; Fryor v. Stone, 19 Tex. 371, 70 Am. Dec. 841; Moore v. Whittis, 80 Tex. 440; Lazell v. Lazell, 8 Allen. 575; Mercier v. Chace, 11 Allen, 194; Baldwin v. Tillery, 62 Miss. 378; Hogan v. Manners, 25

*Headnotes by McATEE, J.

NOTE.—See, in connection with the above case, the note to Cass County Bank v. Weber (Iowa) 12 L. R. A. 477.

30 L. R. A.

Kan. 559, 33 Am. Rep. 199; Rush v. Gordon, 38 Kan. 535; Morrissey v. Donohue, 33 Kan. 646; Bebb v. Crouse, 39 Kan. 345; Milford Sav. Bank v. Ayers, 48 Kan. 602; Wilson v. Taylor, 49 Kan. 774; Tumlinson v. Swinney, 23 Ark. 400, 76 Am. Dec. 432; McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393, 88 Am. Dec. 123; Freem. Executions, § 244.

All homestead exemption laws should be liberally construed.

Vogler v. Montgomery, 54 Mo. 577; Franklin v. Coffee, 18 Tex. 413, 70 Am. Dec. 292; Riggs v. Sterling, 60 Mich. 643; Bouchard v. Rou-rassa, 57 Mich. 8; Campbell v. Adair, 45 Miss. 178; Rhodes v. McCormick, 4 Iowa, 874, 68 Am. Dec. 663; Woodman v. Lane, 7 N. H. 245; Waples, Homesteads & Exemptions, 188; Horn v. Tufts, 39 N. H. 483.

The homestead is the dwelling place of the family where they permanently reside.

Cook v. McChristian, 4 Cal. 26.

Improvements, as the word is used in the homestead exemption laws, embrace whatever is made a fixture upon the land.

Greenwood v. Maddox, 27 Ark. 660.

Messrs. Wisby & Horner, for defendant in error:

Upon the proposition as to whether a debtor ought to be permitted to withdraw assets from the reach of creditors under cover of the exemption law, the cases hold that he ought not, and the only difference in the cases is the different manner of preventing the fraud.

Phelps v. Rooney, 9 Wis. 70, 76 Am. Dec. 244; Rhodes v. McCormick, 4 Iowa, 868, 68 Am. Dec. 663; Casselman v. Packard, 16 Wis. 114, 93 Am. Dec. 710.

The spirit of the law is regarded as superior to its letter.

Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U.S. 457, 36 L. ed. 227; Bebb v. Crouse, 39 Kan. 342.

The Kansas court recognizes the doctrine of "principal use" in full, and the cases do not profess to be decided upon any other theory.

Hogan v. Mannors, 23 Kan. 552, 38 Am. Rep. 199; Rush v. Gordon, 38 Kan. 535; Bebb v. Crouse, 39 Kan. 342.

So with California.

Ackley v. Chamberlain, 16 Cal. 181, 76 Am. Dec. 516; Laughlin v. Wright, 68 Cal. 113; McDowell v. His Creditors, 103 Cal. 264; Re Noah's Estate, 78 Cal. 590.

So in Texas.

Blum v. Rogers, 78 Tex. 530; Blackburn v. Knight, 81 Tex. 326. See also Garrett v. Jones, 95 Ala. 96.

The conclusive test must be that the form, physical characteristics, and geography of the premises must be such as, when taken in connection with their use by the owner, and their value where the statute creates a limit as to value, will convey notice to persons of ordinary prudence who deal with him that they are his homestead.

Thompson, Homesteads & Exemptions, § 104; Waples, Homesteads & Exemptions (1893), p. 183; 2 Freem. Executions, § 244; J. I. Case Co. v. Joyce, 89 Tenn. 237.

The action of the court in interrogating the witness Gill was not only proper, but was commendable.

1 Thompson, Trials, § 355.

30 L. R. A.

McAtee, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a proceeding in injunction to restrain the sheriff of Logan county from selling under execution the following described property, to wit: lot numbered 13, in block 56 in Guthrie proper, in Logan county, for the reason that the property was and is exempt from execution as the homestead of the plaintiffs in error. In the year 1890, Irwin S. De Ford, one of the plaintiffs in error, erected the building situated on the lot herein described, being a lot 82 feet by 80 feet, in the central part of the business portion of Guthrie, to be used, upon his own statement, as "a building to live in, and a part of it to rent for an income for a living" for his family, which consisted of his wife and three children. The basement and first floor were arranged for business purposes. The rooms on the second floor were arranged to be used as business offices, and a portion thereof for the use of himself and family as a "building to live in." There appears to have been no yard or appurtenances of any kind. The three front rooms on the second floor were expressly arranged for office rooms, and the seven remaining rooms on the second floor appear to have been arranged in such a manner (a part of them with folding doors) that they could have been rented for offices or used as a residence. About the 1st of March, 1891, the plaintiffs in error moved into the building, and occupied the rooms on the second floor (either four or six; the number does not definitely appear), and were so residing at the time this action was commenced in the court below. Their residence, as stated, has been continuous from the time the building was completed and occupied. The building is a business building in architecture, construction, and appearance, and cost $8,000. The basement has been rented, at various times, as a justice's court room, saloon, and restaurant. The present rental value thereof is estimated at $300 per annum. The first floor is occupied as a postoffice for the city of Guthrie, and its rental value is $1,000 per annum. The rental value of the second floor is estimated at $500. The value of the portion occupied by plaintiffs in error is estimated by Irwin De Ford at $250, which he afterwards stated he thought was too high an estimate. Upon the trial below, the presiding judge interrogated one or more witnesses freely and at length upon matter upon which he had not been examined in chief, over the objection of the plaintiffs in error. Upon the findings made on the hearing in the trial court, the court concluded that the building in question was not exempt from execution as a homestead, and that the temporary order of injunction theretofore issued in this case should be dissolved, and that the building should be subject to the execution in the hands of the defendant in error, and for costs of the action taxed to the plaintiffs. To all of which findings of fact and conclusions of law the plaintiffs excepted. The plaintiffs, at the same time, filed their motion for a new trial, which was overruled, to which they excepted. Upon the evidence and findings of the trial court, the questions to be determined in the case upon the facts are: (1) Whether the leasing of so large a part of the building, which is claimed by plaintiffs in error as a home, for the purpose of obtaining revenue therefrom for the maintenance of the owner and occupant and his family, destroys the homestead character of the property and the right of plaintiffs in error to claim the same as exempt from execution by reason of the claim thereof as a home by them; and (2) whether the interrogation of the witnesses by the judge in the court below is error, and, if it is error, whether it is of such a character as to entitle the plaintiffs in error to have the case reversed.

Upon the first proposition it is correctly observed, in the brief of the defendant in error, that, upon the general subject of the homestead laws, the views of the court may be "arranged into three classes, namely, those which hold that if any portion of the property be occupied for homestead purposes the whole is exempt; those which hold that the portion occupied is exempt, and the remainder not; and those which hold that the test of exemption is the principal use to which the property is devoted." The view has been held by the supreme court of Iowa "that the portion occupied is exempt, and the remainder not." This, however, has not been adopted, so far as we know, by any other court; and no argument has been presented for its adoption here. The defendant urges for acceptance the view which makes the principal use of the property the test of its exemption as a home, or of its liability to execution; that is, if the major interest in the property claimed as exempt be dedicated to use as a home, the property is exempt; but if the major use of the property claimed as exempt be dedicated to business purposes, then the property is not exempt from execution. In support of that view, the principal cases from the courts of the Western states upon the subject of urban homestead have been carefully reviewed; and it is thereupon concluded by the defendant in error that the doctrine of principal use is that which pervades the later cases. While the limit of area is that which is prescribed for the homestead in this territory, that of value is the limitation selected and provided for by the statutes of a number of the states. The laws of the various states differ in other respects; and little satisfaction, certainty, or advantage can be derived from an examination of the decisions coming from states of which we have not the statutes before us, or, having them before us, find them to be dissimilar to our own. No decision has, however, been hitherto made upon this subject in this territory, and it is important that the principal cases cited in the argument should be examined. In the leading Wisconsin case of Phelps v. Rooney, 9 Wis. 70, 76 Am. Dec. 244, cited and commented upon by both plaintiffs and defendant in error, the question was whether the south one third of lot 4, in block 5, in the city of Milwaukee, with the building and appurtenances thereon situated, constituted a homestead, under the provisions of the Wisconsin statute. The Wisconsin statute provides:

"Sec. 51. A homestead consisting of any quantity of land not exceeding 40 acres used for agricultural purposes, and a dwelling house thereon and its appurtenances, to be selected by the owner thereof, and not included in any town plat, or city, or village; or instead thereof, at the option of the owner, a quantity of land not exceeding in amount $\frac{1}{2}$ of an acre, being within the recorded town plat, or city, or village, and a dwelling house thereon, and its appurtenances, owned and occupied by any resident of the state, shall not be subject to forced sale or execution, or any other final process from a court, for any debt or liability contracted after the 1st day of January in the year 1849." Rev. Stat. 1849, chap. 102.

The style of the building was a store, situated in a block on one of the principal business streets in the city of Milwaukee. The basement and first floor were leased by Rooney, and occupied by tenants under him, and produced, in rents, \$1,500 a year. The rooms above were used by Rooney, the defendant in error, as a dwelling, and were worth \$250 or \$300 a year. Upon this state of facts, the court said: "We have a statute which exempts a homestead, . . . a quantity of land not exceeding in amount $\frac{1}{2}$ of an acre, in a city or village, with a dwelling house thereon and its appurtenances, and which exempted property we all know may be, and frequently is, worth \$10,000, \$20,000, \$30,000 or \$40,000. And the whole policy of the legislation of the state has been to extend, rather than to restrict, the privileges of the exemption laws. The courts, whatever they may think of the general policy of this legislation, and whatever hardships may arise in particular cases in consequence of it, can only construe and interpret the statute as they find it. When the law is on its face sufficiently intelligible, and when a case clearly falls within the operations of its provisions, I feel it my duty rigidly to enforce it, whatever may be my notions of its policy or equity; so, in the present case, while it may be a hardship that the respondent should enjoy, free from all compulsory powers of the court to subject it to the payment of his just debts, the property (the homestead, as I think it is), a portion of which he can rent for \$1,200 or \$1,500 a year, yet if the statute exempts it, we must so declare." And, after stating that Rooney occupied the premises as a dwelling house, and that it was his "home," the court says: "We therefore cannot see why, to all intents and purposes, it is not his homestead, within the meaning of our statute." It continues as follows: "The circumstance that the dwelling was situated on one of the principal business streets of the city or the fact that its external appearance or internal arrangement was like a wholesale or retail store, or because it would be vastly more valuable as a place of business than as a residence, could not affect the question. The case rests upon the fact as to whether the building was really and truly occupied as a dwelling house for himself and family. If so, they are secured in the enjoyment and use of it as such. This, we think, constitutes a homestead under the statute." The court further says that "after what has already been said as to the signification of the word 'homestead,' as used in our statute, and the expression of our opinion that it included the limited amount of land in a city upon which is situated the dwelling house or habitation or abode of the owner and his family, it is only necessary further to remark that this court cannot restrain the operation of the statute within narrower limits than its words import." And the conclusion of the court, upon a review of the whole matter, was that "I cannot believe, in view of the legislation upon this subject, that the legislature intended that a person should lose and forfeit the benefit of the homestead exemption by omitting to use a portion of his dwelling house, or residence with his family, or by devoting such portion to some other use."

But it is claimed by the defendant in error that this case, thus clearly and definitely interpreting a statute like our own, was completely overruled in the later case of Casselman v. Packard, 16 Wis. 114, 82 Am. Dec. 710. In that case the property claimed as exempt was situated in the village of Sparta, the land not exceeding in quantity $\frac{1}{2}$ of an acre. There were situated upon it, besides the dwelling house, in which the claimant resided with his family, various other buildings, which were used and occupied for stores, warerooms, shops, schoolrooms, offices, etc. The claimant occupied the only dwelling house thereon, and its appurtenances. He rented the other buildings upon the $\frac{1}{2}$ of an acre for stores, warerooms, shops, schoolrooms, and offices. He yet claimed them also as his homestead, in addition to the dwelling house wherein his family resided, and which he occupied as a home. The circuit court did not sustain his claim as to the various other buildings, which were rented. That court, in passing upon this state of facts, says that "we cannot believe the legislature ever intended that a person should hold all the buildings which might be erected on $\frac{1}{2}$ of an acre of ground in a city or village, whatever might be their character, or for whatever purposes they were designed, under the homestead exemption law, merely because he might live in one of them. Such a construction seems to us most unreasonable. The statute exempts a given quantity of land, with a dwelling house thereon, and its appurtenances. Of course the exemption of that quantity of land has regard to the purpose for which it is used. It was supposed that this amount of land might be convenient and necessary for the comfort and enjoyment of the dwelling house. Nor are we prepared to say that the entire quantity of land must be devoted exclusively to the use of the dwelling. In addition to the dwelling, a person perhaps might erect a small shop or building of that character on the lot, which he himself used and occupied for the purpose of his trade or business, without forfeiting the exemption. But it is not necessary to express any opinion upon that point in this case; for the testimony shows that there were various buildings on the lot, which he rented for offices, stores, schools, etc.; and it is very clear that these were not exempt." The opinion was rendered in this case by the same judge who prepared the opinion in the Phelps-Rooney Case three years earlier. No reference was made to the Phelps-Rooney Case, and it was not therefore modified or overruled in any sense, to any degree. Indeed there was no occasion for it. The state of facts was wholly different. The Phelps-Rooney Case is precisely like the one in hand in this court. It determined that, upon the provision of a statute like our own, the homestead right may exist in a building occupied as a home by the family of the claimant, notwithstanding the fact that the building was erected upon one of the principal business streets of a large city, and that the basement and first stories were rented out for business purposes, and produced a large revenue to the homestead claimant, amounting to \$1,500 per annum, and that the upper rooms occupied as a home by himself and family were of very subordinate value. The case of Casselman v. Packard simply decides, for the state of Wisconsin, that a homestead claimant may not claim as exempt the house in which his dwelling is upon $\frac{1}{2}$ of an acre of land claimed as exempt, within the business limits of a city, and also devote the rest of the $\frac{1}{2}$ of an acre of land to stores, warerooms, shops, schoolrooms, offices, and other purposes, alien to the homestead character, and claim them also as exempt. This case does not support the contention of the defendant in error, that if the principal use of a single house in which the claimant resides within the city limits be devoted to business purposes, it will exclude the exemption of the whole house, under the statute, for homestead purposes. The cases of Blum v. Rogers, 78 Tex. 580, and Blackburn v. Knight, 81 Tex. 326, are cases decided by the supreme court of Texas, and are interpretations of a statute which is not before us, and the provisions of which are not cited in the briefs of counsel, nor in the opinions of the court. They can therefore render but little service in determining the question. In the former case, the owner of a 2-acre block had, on the east half, his residence and all the appurtenances, except his cow lot, which was on the west half. The rest of this half he cut up into three lots, on each of which he put a dwelling for rent. Each lot was fenced, and a private alley was run between the east and west halves of the block. He reserved the ground around the houses, and the right to take water from the premises, which he sometimes exercised, though there was an abundant cistern near his residence. He also occasionally used the ground about the houses for garden and other purposes. Upon this state of facts, it was held that the three lots, separated by the alley, separately improved, each separated from the other by a division fence, and all separated from the homestead by the alley, "were practically divided from the homestead, and were not exempt from execution." In the latter case of Blackburn v. Knight, it was shown that defendants had long since built on the lot which they now claim as their urban homestead, and had ever since rented the premises to tenants, and only used a strip on the lot about 14 feet wide for the purpose of hauling wood, etc., to their residence, on an adjoining lot. The claim of homestead can only be sustained as to this strip. No rule can be drawn from the state of facts in either of these cases by which the proposition can be sustained that the test of exemption in the occupancy of a single building is the principal use to which the property is devoted. No such doctrine was in fact sought to be established, or announced, or was in question, in either of these cases. In the case of Re Noah's Estate, 73 Cal. 590, cited by the defendant in error in support of his position, it was held: "Noah died, making no provision in his will for his widow, leaving no community property; and a four-story brick business block, valued at \$25,000 is the only separate real property. This could not be divided without material loss. No homestead was set apart during the husband's lifetime. The widow applied to the court to set one apart. Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1465, provides that the court shall set apart a homestead, none having been selected during the lifetime of the deceased, out of his real estate. The section referred to provides that, 'if no homestead [as was the case here] has been selected, designated, and recorded during the lifetime of the deceased, the court must select, designate, and set apart, and cause to be recorded, a homestead, for the use of the surviving husband or wife and the minor children, . . . out of the common property, or, if there be no common property, then out of the real estate belonging to the deceased.'" The homestead selection was sought for by the widow. It was held that, as the property in question was of such a nature that it could not have been selected as a homestead during the lifetime of the deceased, the petition was properly denied. In the absence of the California statute, which makes provision for the family while both husband and wife are living, it is impossible to form any conclusion, or to attach to the opinion the weight which is sought to be given to it by the defendant in error. In Ackley v. Chamberlain, 16 Cal. 181, 76 Am. Dec. 516, a building originally intended as a family dwelling and store house, but changed during its erection so as to adapt it to hotel purposes, but also occupied in part by the family as a home, was held exempt from forced sale. A like construction was placed upon a similar statute in Nevada, in the case of Goldman v. Clark, 1 Nev. 607, in which the supreme court of that state held that a home in an incorporated town, constructed so as to be more suitable for a boarding and lodging house than for a residence merely, and much the larger portion of which was usually rented to lodgers, was exempt as a homestead. The doctrine of principal use was plainly excluded. In the case of Garrett v. Jones, 95 Ala. 96, the house was built in a business part of the town, and used principally as a store, although the owner (an unmarried man) slept in a small back room, and took his meals elsewhere. It was construed not a homestead. Upon that state of facts, the supreme court of Alabama said that it "may be laid down as a safe and conservative rule on that subject that where the trade adaptation and use of a building are incidental or secondary only to its habitation, as a dwelling where the chief use of the structure is that of a home for the owner, and some part only, not essential to this end, is fitted up and used as a shop, an office, or salesroom,—it is a homestead. But, when this state of facts is reversed, and the residence feature is only auxiliary to the business use,—where only a relatively small part of the building is devoted to the uses of habitation, and the chief adaptation and use are those of business,—the building is not a homestead, even though the occupant have no other home, and uses this for all the purposes of living." In the cases above cited from Texas and California, the statutes upon which these interpretations are made is absent; and, if the statute of Alabama providing for the exemption of homesteads is similar to our own, we understand this ruling to support the contention of defendant in error. The same remark may be made upon the case of Re Noah's Estate, 73 Cal. 590.

80 L. R. A.

Cases not showing a similar state of facts, nor presenting the question here proposed and coming from states of which the statutes have not been presented to us, or are unlike our own, do not materially aid us in the solution of the case, nor can we safely follow general propositions cited from such cases. The question arises solely upon a right provided for by the statutes of this territory. We must look first to the statute itself; and, since no decisions have been made upon the statute in this court hitherto, we must, in the next place, look to the courts of states in which the statutory provisions are most like our own, and, if possible, to the courts of those states whose situation is similar to our own, and from which our people have, for the most part, come. It is not too remote to observe that, while the legislature of this territory adopted this statute, of the people who created the legislature, and from which the legislature came, a large majority of them were formerly residents of the state of Kansas, and, more remotely, of other Northern and Western states, and that the legislative representatives of this territory must have passed the statute with the interpretation placed upon similar statutes in the states where the population of Oklahoma, for the most part, originated.

The statutes which we must interpret are found in chapter 84, title Exemptions, §§ 2844, 2845, p. 580, Okla. Stat. 1898, and are as follows:

"(2844) Sec. 1. The following property shall be reserved to the head of every family residing in the territory exempt from attachment or execution and every other species of forced sale for the payment of debts, except as hereinafter provided: . . .

"(2845) Sec. 2. The homestead of a family not in a town or city shall consist of not more than 160 acres of land, which shall be in one tract or parcel with the improvements thereon. The homestead in a city, town, or village consisting of a lot or lots, not to exceed 1 acre with the improvements thereon; provided, that the same shall be used for the purpose of a home for the family; provided also, that any temporary renting of the homestead shall not change the character of the same when no other homestead has been acquired. . . ."

The conditions which entitle the debtor to claim the protection here provided for, in a city, town, or village, are, (1) that he shall have a family; (2) that the lot or lots in any town, city, or village shall not exceed in amount 1 acre, with the improvements thereon; (3) that the said lot or lots shall not exceed 1 acre, and shall be used for the purposes of a home for the family. The privilege is enlarged by the further provision that any temporary renting of the homestead shall not change the character of the same, when no other homestead has been acquired. The statute is without other limitations. It does not prescribe the style of the building which the homestead claimant shall erect; nor does it prescribe that the building should not resemble in architecture ordinary business structures. No limitation is placed upon his choice. It does not provide that the building in which the home is made shall not be placed upon one of the principal business streets. It does not provide that the house shall not be flush with the sidewalk, or compact with other houses, or that the family shall not take boarders in the house, or that the owner shall not rent any particular portion of it for the purpose of deriving a revenue therefrom. It is in no part of the statute provided that a part of the dwelling shall not be used for any other purpose than a home, or that the major part of the building shall be used for a residence and a minor part for business, if so used at all. Nor does it provide that the family shall live in the basement, or on the first floor, the second floor, or upon the third floor. The sole limitation upon the general subject, including all these enumerated particulars, is that "the same (the homestead) shall be used for the purpose of a home for the family, and that the space which the homestead shall occupy shall not exceed 1 acre with the improvements thereon." The same section of the statute which provides for the exemption from forced sale of a homestead "in a city, town, or village, consisting of a lot or lots not to exceed 1 acre, with improvements thereon, provides also that the 'the homestead of a family not in a town or city shall consist of not more than 160 acres of land . . . with the improvements thereon.'"

The provision of 160 acres of land, in the latter clause, is a provision intended, not only as a bare homestead, but as a homestead accompanied by a method of income and a means of support for the family. Could it be contended that, if the income from the land of the rural homestead be greater in value than the rental value of the house in which the homestead claimant resides, then the doctrine of principal use should govern, and the whole homestead be forfeited as a homestead and become subject to execution? In support of such a theory, it is to be argued that the rural homestead is often of great value, and that the revenue from it exceeds the needs of the family, and that the result is thus a fraud upon creditors. And yet the doctrine of principal use has never, to our knowledge, been applied to the rural homestead. The provisions for rural homesteads are provided for in like terms by the statutes. The principles which govern the interpretation of one must be applied to the other. No substantial reason can be given for the application of the doctrine of principal use to the urban homesteads which does not apply with equal force to the rural homestead; and to make the application of that doctrine to the rural homestead would be to destroy the homestead privilege, as it is provided for by the statute, and to leave to the judgment of the court in each instance whether the value of the revenue from the homestead was not greater than the value of the mere residence upon it, and, if found to be so, that the homestead would then cease to be exempt, and to submit the security of the homestead, not to the express and exact provisions of the statute, but to the judgment of the court. In the language of the court in Stevens v. Hollingsworth, 74 Ill. 208, it would be difficult to explain "why the garden, stables, yards, orchard, etc.," upon the rural homestead "shall be exempt, and the shop, mill, or business house, although indispensably necessary to earn a support for the family, and located on the same lot of ground with the residence, shall not be exempt." We are aware that, in the case of Greeley v. Scott, 2 Woods, C. C. 657, Fed. Cas. No. 5,748, Mr. Justice Bradley, in construing a constitutional provision of the state of Florida upon the subject of "homestead," stated that if the rural homestead should become the scene of a diversity of industries, and the farmer owning 160 acres should undertake to establish thereon a sawmill, a gristmill, and a carding and fulling mill, he could not claim all of these separate businesses as pertaining to, and a part of, his homestead, and exempt from execution. The facts cited in the opinion of Justice Bradley would be an appropriate citation against a construction of our statute which would undertake to say that a diversity of industries might be established upon the various portions of an acre in a town or city, under color of the homestead privilege, and might be claimed as exempt from forced sale for the payment of debts. Such a construction we are not making. The construction here made is that which we hold the law to be of this territory, as applied to the facts as they are presented in this case. The statute may be invidious to the rights of creditors. It may be made the cover of great injustice. A large fortune derived from the wealth and resources of creditors may be invested under its protection, and be exempt. Such methods, if such should be the result, might reflect very injuriously upon the credit of the territory. But, if these reflections are just, they are matters to be presented to the legislature for the purpose of urging a modification of the law.

These reflections, however, do not aid us in determining what the statute means. The judicial function is to determine and declare what the law is as it now stands. It is the privilege of the court, as well as its duty, to refrain from undertaking to alter or to give any other than that plain meaning to the law which another branch of the government has enacted and declared. The government is more secure, and the people surer of their legislative rights, when each branch of the government keeps within its own proper province. The law seems plain; and if the people of this territory wish it otherwise it is in their power to make that wish manifest. The legislative body meets in this territory every two years, with full authority to legislate upon this subject, to alter, amend, or entirely revoke this statute. While this particular case may appear to bear upon the interests of the creditor, we cannot make the law, but must declare it just as we believe it to be. The statute for the state of Wisconsin, providing for the exemption of an urban homestead, is set forth above in terms so similar to those of our own as to defy distinction, except as to the amount of land which may be claimed as exempt. We approve the views of the supreme court of that case, as expressed in Phelps v. Rooney, cited above, interpreting and construing that statute.

The statute of the state of Minnesota, providing for the exemption of a homestead, exempts, within a city, town, or village, "as a homestead a quantity of land not exceeding one lot." In the case of Jacoby v. Parkland Distilling Co. 41 Minn. 227, the following facts were, under this statute, submitted to the court for a ruling: This was an action by Fanny Jacoby to determine the adverse claims of the Parkland Distilling Company and others to a tract of land 66 by 165 feet, that being one lot, as originally platted in the city of Minneapolis, on which was erected a three-story brick building, finished for stores below, and with rooms for a residence above. The defendants in error claimed the building under a lien, by reason of certain judgments recovered by them against George G. Jacoby, the husband of the plaintiff in error. It was admitted upon the trial that the debts for which the judgments of the defendant in error were recovered were incurred as stated, and would be a lien upon the property if it was not exempt under the homestead act. The rooms in the second story were occupied as a residence by the plaintiffs in error, and claimed by them as their homestead. Upon this state of facts, it was said by the court that "the fact that the building on the lot in question was in part suited to and used for business purposes was wholly immaterial. . . . No restriction is placed upon the uses of any part of it, provided it is the dwelling of the debtor. This has been the settled construction of the statute for many years. Kelly v. Baker, 10 Minn. 154 (Gil. 124); Umland v. Holcombe, 26 Minn. 286. Neither can the questions of the value of the premises, or what proportion that value bears to the remaining property of the debtor, be at all important, so long as the premises are in area within the limit of exemption fixed by law. Unfortunately, our statute fixes no limit as to value upon a homestead 80 L. R. A.

exemption. It must be confessed that such a law may be greatly abused, and permit great moral frauds; but this is a question for the legislature, and not for the courts." In the case of Kelly v. Baker, here cited and relied upon, "the premises, in question consisted of a quantity of land in a town, upon which was a brick building two stories high, with a basement. The front part was built, rented, and used for a store, and was adapted to such use. The second story of the front part was used as a printing and job office, by a company of which the owner was a member, and also by the owner (who was a physician) as his office. The basement under the front of the building was also rented, a part of it in connection with the store, and the other part for pork-packing, in which the owner also had some articles stored. The rear part of the building was fitted up and used by the plaintiff as his dwelling house, having one entrance through the hall in the rear of his store, and connected with it by a door, and one from the rear of the building. The building was situated on a corner, having an alley in the rear. It was held that the entire building was exempt as the homestead of the owner. 'It is to be observed,' said Mr. Justice Berry, 'that no limitations were imposed by the legislature upon the use which would be made of the homestead of 80 acres, or of one lot, provided, only, it was the dwelling place of the party claiming the exemption. As to the balance beyond what was required for the site of the house, the claimant seems to have been left free to allow it to remain uninclosed, unimproved, vacant, and idle, or to devote it to any use he might choose.'" The statute of the state of Michigan (How. Anno. Stat. § 7721) exempts "a quantity of land not exceeding in amount one lot in any town, city, or village, and a dwelling house thereon, and its appurtenances, owned and occupied by any resident of this state." The provision of the statute is in substance the same as that which we are now interpreting. The supreme court of that state, in King v. Welborn, 83 Mich. 195, 9 L. R. A. 808, November 14, 1890, interpreted this statute. The defendants, Welborn and others, occupied lots 1 and 2, in block 48, and lot 21, in block 49½, in the village of Three Rivers. Upon lots 1 and 2 was a three-story building, used as an hotel, and a two-story wooden building in the rear, used as a dwelling house, and a barn upon lot 21, used in connection with the hotel. They lived in the hotel; had no other residence or home, or land or property, out of which to construct a homestead. The homestead was disregarded by the officer bearing the execution. The court said: "It is insisted that this building was occupied by petitioner and his family for the sole purpose of conducting an hotel, and that therefore no homestead right attached. We cannot agree with this contention. The adoption of this doctrine would be in plain defiance of the statute and render it nugatory as to those engaged in the business of hotel keeping. The benefits of this statute are to be secured to all owners of land which they occupy with their families, and who have no other home. There is no intent apparent anywhere to exclude the families of hotel keepers from the benefits of the act."

A constitutional provision of the state of Kansas (art. 15, § 9) provides "that a homestead to the extent of . . . 1 acre within the limits of an incorporated town or city occupied as a residence by the family of the owner, together with all improvements on the same shall be exempt from forced sale," etc. It is claimed by the defendant in error that the Kansas cases are decided upon the doctrine that the homestead was not exempt as a homestead if the building in which it is claimed is principally used for business, or other purpose than the home of the family. An examination of the Kansas cases does not give us that impression. In the case of Hogan v. Manners, 28 Kan. 552, 38 Am. Rep. 199, Brewer, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, says that "the fact that a party may have his store or shop or office in a part of his residence will not, of itself, destroy its homestead character. We are not called upon to decide whether the occupation by the family of the owner of a single room in a large building used chiefly for stores and offices, will give to the entire building a homestead character. All we do decide is, that where a building, whose size and number of rooms is not shown, is occupied as a residence by the family of the owner, its homestead character is not destroyed by proof that a single room or two is used by the owner for business purposes." In the case of Rush v. Gordon, 38 Kan. 535, the first or lower story and cellar were used by the wife for the purpose of carrying on a retail grocery and provision business. The entire real estate was used by the husband and wife in connection with their residence and the grocery and provision business. It was said by the court: "There is nothing to prevent it from being a homestead within the meaning of the homestead exemption laws, except that the wife keeps a grocery and provision store in the first or lower story, and makes use of the cellar and some other parts of the premises in connection therewith." The property was held exempt. In Bebb v. Crouse, 39 Kan. 342, part of the lower story and basement were leased for business purposes by tenants, and a room attached to the main building was, during a part of the time, leased, and during a part of the time occupied by plaintiffs as a butcher shop; and the question thereupon arose as to whether the occupancy of a part of the building would destroy the homestead right of the plaintiffs in that part of the building so used. The court said: "Why should not an owner do as he wishes with his own building, when it is in reality his own residence, the abode, the dwelling house, the home, of his family? Of course, if it should practically become a business house rather than a home, it would then cease to be exempt. The owner had the privilege of using any part of the building for his family, the basement, the first floor, or second floor. The exemptions do not depend upon so frail a thread as which part of a dwelling a family must use; nor does the architecture of the building, or the question whether it would be more convenient as a store than a dwelling house, decide its character. The test is whether the building was used as a residence, not nominally, but actually. We believe it was in fact the residence of the plaintiffs. It certainly was the only home that they had, and we believe it came within the provisions that exempt it from forced sale. . . . Homestead is limited in its extent in this state, and must be occupied as a residence of the family; but there is no limitation on its value." The doctrine of principal use, contended for by defendant in error, so far from being confirmed in these cases, seems to us to be emphatically refuted. That this conclusion is correct is confirmed by the fact that the authorities cited by the court in the latter case, as authority for the law there announced, are the cases of Phelps v. Rooney, 9 Wis. 70, 76 Am. Dec. 244, and the Minnesota cases of Umland v. Holcombe, 26 Minn. 286; Kelly v. Baker, 10 Minn. 154 (Gil. 124), and Gainus v. Cannon, 43 Ark. 503, which expressly announce the doctrine that if any portion of the property be occupied for homestead purposes the whole is exempt, and which excludes the doctrine of principal use. In the case of Hoffman v. Hill, 47 Kan. 611, the question was whether lot 5, in block numbered 16 in the city of Bunker Hill, Russell county, was exempt as a homestead. The house upon the premises was occupied as a residence by the family of Hill, and the building in which they lived was also used as an hotel and boarding house. Upon this state of facts, it was declared by the court that "it follows, from the decisions made by this and other courts of last resort, that it makes no difference that the homestead or a part thereof may be used for some other purpose than as a homestead, where the whole of it constitutes only one tract of land not exceeding in area the amount permitted to be exempted under the homestead exemption laws, and where the part claimed as not a part of the homestead has not been totally abandoned as a part thereof, by making it, for instance, another person's homestead, or a part thereof, or by using it, or permitting it to be used, in some other manner inconsistent with the homestead interests of the husband and wife." And the authorities relied upon include, along with other Kansas authorities, the case of Bebb v. Crouse above cited, in which the Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Arkansas authorities are relied upon. In the case of Layson v. Grange, 48 Kan. 440, the supreme court cites, with approval, the case of Stevens v. Hollingsworth, 74 Ill. 203, to wit: "The intention of the legislature in enacting the homestead exemption law was not to save a mere shelter for the debtor and his family, but it was to give him full enjoyment of the whole lot of ground exempted, to be used in whatever way he might think best for the occupancy and support of his family, whether in the way of cultivating it or by the erection of buildings upon it, either for carrying on his own business or for deriving income in the way of rent." And then the court proceeds to say that it had recently held that "it makes no difference if a part of the homestead has been used for other purposes not inconsistent with the owner's homestead interests, where the part claimed as not being a part of the homestead has not been totally abandoned by the debtor."

These announcements upon the subject of the extent and the absolute nature of the homestead right are fortified by reference, not only to all the Kansas cases herein referred to, but also to the law as it existed in Illinois, and as it was announced in the case of Re Tertelling, 2 Dill. 889, Fed. Cas. No. 18,842. The adoption in this case of the law as it has been declared in the state of Illinois leaves to the homestead claimant, not only a mere shelter for himself and family, but gives to him the full enjoyment of the whole lot of ground exempt, to be used in whatever way he might think best for the occupancy and support of his family, by carrying on his own business or for deriving income in the way of rent. It also expresses the same doctrine, in another form, when it says that the homestead claimant has not totally abandoned that part of the homestead sought to be subjected to the payment of his debts. These expressions of the law leave, in our judgment, no room for the doctrine that a building in a city, town, or village in this territory, occupied as a homestead, will not be exempt from seizure under execution if the principal use thereof be dedicated to business, or used for the purpose of deriving income by renting any portion of the property whatever, provided that some portion of such building be still used as a homestead by the debtor. We have dwelt upon the Kansas cases because the provisions of the statute of that state hereinbefore cited more nearly resemble the homestead exemption act of this territory than any other homestead act which we have found in this investigation. They are stated in their historical order; and it thus appears that, while Judge Brewer desisted from passing upon the question now under consideration, which was not in the case of Hogan v. Mansers, then before him, yet, when the question afterward came up, the supreme court of that state, in Bebb v. Crouse, did meet the question, and pass upon it, as it has been herein set out. The same interpretation has been placed by Judge Dillon, while presiding as a circuit judge of the United States for the eighth circuit (2 Dill. 889, Fed. Cas. No. 18,842). In that case, the house occupied by the bankrupt debtor was held to be exempt, although a portion of it was used for a brewery. The court there declares that "the constitutional provision respecting the homestead exemption is exceedingly liberal to the debtor; but it may admit of some doubt whether it is just towards the creditor. The quantity of land exempted is limited, but there is no limitation on the value of the land exempted, or the value of the [homestead] improvements thereon. If the building is occupied as a residence by the family of the owner, it is exempt, whatever its value. . . . We only hold that the whole house occupied as a home is exempt, though a portion of it may be used, and may have been constructed with a view to be used, for other purposes."

It was assigned as error that the presiding judge interrogated witnesses during the trial of the cause, and that such interrogation was error. We understand the law to be that it is the duty of the judge, in the exercise of sound discretion, to elicit the evidence upon relevant and material points involved in the case. The record does not show that any error was committed by the judge in the interrogation as participated in by him. Ferguson v. Hirsch, 54 Ind. 837; Blizzard v. Applegate, 77 Ind. 516; Lefever v. Johnson, 79 Ind. 554; Huffman v. Cauble, 86 Ind. 591; Sparks v. State, 59 Ala. 82.

The whole building is exempt from forced sale, and the order of the District Court is reversed, and the injunction herein will be made permanent.

Burford, J., dissents.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, NINTH CIRCUIT

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

PAUSON,|

(70 Fed. Rep. 585.)

The failure of a carrier's agent to stamp the return coupon of a round-trip ticket in order to make it valid for use under the carrier's regulations will not justify the expulsion from a train of a passenger who had presented himself to the agent, and signed the ticket in the agent's presence, and delivered it to and received it from the agent under such circumstances as to justify the belief that the ticket had been properly stamped.

(October 31, 1895.)

NOTE.—As to effect of mistake or omission by carrier's agent upon validity of ticket, see also Ellsworth v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. (Iowa) 29 L. R. A. 173.

30 L. R. A.

ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California, to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for alleged wrongful ejection from defendant's train. Affirmed.

Statement by Hawley, District Judge:

This is an action to recover damages for the alleged wrongful expulsion of the defendant in error from a passenger car of the plaintiff in error. It was commenced in the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco, and, upon motion of the plaintiff in error, was removed to the United States circuit court. The complaint alleges that on the 6th day of September, 1892, the plaintiff (defendant in error) became and was a passenger upon a train of cars operated upon the railroad of defendant (plaintiff in error), running from Seattle, Wash., to Portland, Or., for the purpose of being transported from Seattle to Portland, and had paid to the defendant the fare for such transportation; that while he was a passenger upon said train the defendant wrongfully, maliciously, wantonly, and wilfully assaulted, insulted, and maltreated the plaintiff, and by force and arms ejected him from the said train; that by reason of said acts the plaintiff suffered both physical and mental injuries,—and prayed for damages in the sum of $10,000. The answer denies these allegations of the complaint. The case was tried before a jury, and a verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for the sum of $310.

Upon the trial, the plaintiff, to sustain the issues upon his part, introduced evidence to the effect that he was a merchant engaged in business at San Francisco, Cal., and at Seattle, Wash.; that he had purchased of the defendant a round-trip ticket from Portland to Seattle and return, which, among other things, required that the holder must be identified as the original purchaser of the ticket by writing his or her signature on the back thereof, or by other means, if necessary, in the presence of the ticket agent of the Northern Pacific Railroad at Seattle, Wash., who will witness the same, otherwise it will not be honored for passage; that he had made the trip from Portland to Seattle on this ticket; that on the 6th day of September he sent a messenger to the ticket office of defendant at Seattle to reserve a sleeper; that about 10 o'clock on the evening of said day he went to the ticket office, and asked the agent if he had a sleeper; that the agent replied, "What is your name?" and then asked him for his ticket; that he handed over the ticket in question; that the agent took it, and laid it on the board, and gave him a pen, and said to him, "Please sign that;" that he signed it, and handed it to the agent; that the agent took it to the rear end of the ticket office, and came back with a ticket berth for the sleeper; that the agent folded both tickets together, and handed them over to the plaintiff, who thereupon paid to the agent the sum of $2 for the sleeper ticket; that plaintiff then put the folded tickets in his pocket, got on the train, and, after getting a check for his sleeper berth, went to bed. As to what occurred on the train the plaintiff testified as follows: "I was asleep when the conductor came around, and he asked for my ticket. I had put my ticket under a pillow, in order not to be annoyed, so I could get it when asleep,—under my pillow, in order to have it handy when the conductor comes. So I handed him the ticket, and he looked at it, and he told me that I could not ride on that ticket. I was surprised, and thought may be I gave him the wrong ticket or something, and I asked him what the trouble was with it, and he said, 'That ticket won't go,' and I explained the matter to him. I looked at the ticket,—examined the ticket,—and seen where there was a place where it says, 'Station agent stamp here,' and I seen there was no stamp on it. I explained the matter to him, and I says, 'I have done my part.' I presented the ticket in the presence of two of our men from the store, and I described to him what I had done in regard to it, and that the ticket was all right; that I got the ticket, and paid for it, and signed it in his presence,—all that was required of me to do; and he says, 'That don't make any difference. I know my business, and the ticket ain't no good, and you cannot ride on it.' I told him I had positively paid for the ticket, and it was my own until I had used it up, and 'I am going to ride on it.' He says, 'You cannot; and I know my business; and you cannot ride on this ticket.' And we talked the matter over for some time, and I hated to get out of bed, and told him so. And he says: 'You have either got to pay your fare or get off.' I told him: 'You mean, according to that, I have got to get out of bed and dress myself?' He says, 'That is what you have got to do,' and I got up and dressed myself, and before I got through dressing the train stopped, and the conductor came to me, and I was not quite done yet, and he waited until I got through, and he says, 'Now get off the train.' I told him: 'No, I would not. I wanted to ride on the train, and I had paid my fare, and I did not want to get off.' He says, 'All right; I will put you off.' I says, 'All right; you will have to put me off. I won't go until I am put off.' He says, 'Have you any baggage,' and I says, 'Yes,' and I pulled a satchel from under the bed, and I am not positive, but I think the porter took my satchel, and he led me out of the train onto the platform. When I was on the platform, it looked really—I could not see any light—only a small station there, and asked him if he knew where I could find a hotel or place to stop over night, and he says he don't know; he don't care a damn. I looked around there, and did not like to lay out all night, and did not see any place where I could go to. I told him, 'I think I had better pay my fare and go on,' and I went on the train, and paid my fare, and went on. . . . I was excited, and felt bad on being put off of the train. Never had anything of that kind happen to me before, and I travel a great deal. I felt naturally insulted and degraded, and consider I was treated just like a tramp in being put off the train. I talked to the conductor in reference to the affair, and told him who I was, and told him I was certainly put off the train wrongfully; explained the matter to him; told him how the whole thing happened; told him the same thing over again before he put me off; and the conductor told me he was satisfied in his mind that I was the right man, that it was my ticket, and that I was the right party; and I told him that I belonged to the firm in Seattle, and he told me that he had his instructions, and he had to do according to his instructions." There was a conflict in the evidence as to what occurred at the ticket office between the agent and the plaintiff. The defendant, at the close of the case, moved the court to instruct the jury to find a verdict for defendant, which motion was denied. The court, after stating the conditions on the ticket, and the notice given to the passenger "that it will not be good unless so signed, witnessed, and stamped," and that this notice was substantially a part of the terms of the ticket, charged the jury as follows: "Therefore it was the duty of the plaintiff to present the ticket to an agent for signing and witnessing and stamping. When so presented and signed, it was the duty of the agent to witness and stamp it. There is a controversy between the plaintiff and defendant as to what was done, which you are to decide from the testimony; and if you find from the testimony and evidence that the plaintiff did present himself to an agent, and sign the ticket in his (the agent's) presence, and the agent took the ticket, and returned it in such a way and under such circumstances as to justify plaintiff in believing that he, the agent, had witnessed and stamped the ticket, and plaintiff, so believing, entered the train, he was a legal passenger; and if you find from the evidence, further, that he explained to the conductor the circumstances, he had a right to refuse to pay or deposit a fare with the conductor; and his removal from the train, if you find from the evidence he was removed, was unlawful."

Mr. Joseph D. Redding for plaintiff in error.

Mr. George Lexinsky for defendant in error.

Hawley, District Judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

The disposition to be made of this case depends upon the question whether the charge of the court to the jury states a correct legal principle applicable to the facts and circumstances of this case. The authorities bearing upon this question are by no means uniform, some of the courts holding that it is the duty of the passenger, before going upon the train, to examine his ticket, and to ascertain therefrom whether or not any mistake has been made by the ticket agent; that the face of the ticket is conclusive evidence to the conductor of the train as to the contract between the passenger and the railroad company; that the conductor can look only to the ticket, and has no right to be governed by any statement or explanation of the passenger; that if the ticket is not upon its face such a ticket as entitles the passenger to ride, the conductor has the right, and it is his duty, to eject him from the train; and that his only remedy for the mistake, negligence, or carelessness of the ticket agent is by an action for breach of the contract to recover the extra amount he was compelled to pay for his fare, and he cannot recover for the tort of the conductor in expelling him,—others holding that the passenger has the right to rely upon the acts and statements of the ticket agents or conductors, and that, if expelled from the train when he has acted in good faith and is without fault, the carrier would be liable in damages for such expulsion, whether the action is brought for a breach of the contract or solely for the tort of the conductor. With this conflict in the decisions, state and national, we must examine the reasons given by the courts for the adoption of the rule upon which their decisions are founded, and endeavor to ascertain the controlling principle.

80 L. R. A.

ples of the law applicable to this case which are best established by the soundest reason and justice of the cases. In the view we take of the question of pleadings it is wholly immaterial whether the action is to be treated as founded upon a tort, pure and simple, as claimed by the plaintiff in error, or as an action upon a contract to recover damages resulting from a tortious breach of the contract. Under the system of practice prevailing in many of the states there ought not to be any special controversy as to the character of this action, as the formal distinctions which prevailed at common law are abolished. The action was instituted in California, and, being an action at law, is controlled by the provisions of the Code and decisions of the state court. In Gorman v. Southern Pac. Co. 97 Cal. 6, the court expressly held that, "when a passenger is wrongfully expelled from a train, it is a breach of duty on the part of the carrier, and an action in tort will lie to recover damages." McGinnis v. Missouri P. R. Co. 21 Mo. App. 407; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Roberts, 91 Ga. 518, 519; Hall v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 15 Fed. Rep. 59. In all such actions the plaintiff is not to be confined in his recovery to the price of his extra tickets or fare or mere loss of time, but the jury may award damages for the humiliation or injury received by his wrongful expulsion from the train. Zion v. Southern Pac. Co. 67 Fed. Rep. 508, and authorities there cited. With reference to the principles enunciated in the charge of the court it is deemed proper to refer generally to many cases which discuss the relative rights and duties of a railroad company and of its passengers. It has been held that it is a reasonable regulation upon the part of the company to require passengers getting upon its railroad train without a ticket to pay additional fare, but in this connection the courts declare that a reasonable opportunity must be given to the passenger to enable him to purchase the ticket, and that, if the passenger fails to purchase a ticket solely on account of the premature closing of the ticket office, or of the failure of the railroad company to have an office for the sale of tickets, he cannot be required to pay additional fare, and, if expelled for the nonpayment of the additional fare, after paying or offering to pay the regular fare, he is entitled to recover damages for the expulsion. Pools v. Northern P. R. Co. 16 Or. 261; State v. Hungerford, 89 Minn. 7; Everett v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 69 Iowa, 15, 58 Am. Rep. 207. The reason given is that, to allow a railroad company to enforce its rule for additional fare, under such circumstances, would be punishing the passenger for the railroad company's neglect of duty. Unless the railroad company furnishes the necessary conveniences or facilities for procuring tickets, the passenger cannot be considered to be in any manner at fault. Ray, Negligence of Imposed Duties, 181-183, and authorities there cited.

With reference to the right of a passenger to be carried on the wrong coupon, where the coupons are detached by the conductor on the going trip, and the returning coupon, instead of the going coupon, is retained by the conductor, and the going coupon, instead of the returning coupon, given to the passenger, which the passenger retains without discovering the mistake until he presents it to the conductor on the return trip, and then makes his explanation as to how the mistake occurred, the courts have held that under such circumstances the passenger has the lawful right to be carried on his return trip on presenting the going coupon, with the explanation; and, if expelled for not paying his fare, he is entitled to recover damages for the expulsion. Pennsylvania Co. v. Bray, 125 Ind. 229; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Fitz, 88 Ind. 381, 45 Am. Rep. 484; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Bambrey (Pa.) 16 Atl. 67; Wightman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 73 Wis. 169, 2 L. R. A. 185; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Rice, 64 Md. 63; Rouser v. North Park Street R. Co. 97 Mich. 565. These cases, as well as the others previously referred to, all proceed upon the broad ground that the passenger was wholly without fault; that he had done all that could reasonably be required of him to do; and that the railroad company, by the mistake, carelessness, or negligence of its agents or conductors, was itself at fault. This is the underlying principle of all the well-considered cases upon this subject. This principle is fair to both parties. It is sound, reasonable, and just. In further support of it we cite the following additional authorities: Johnson v. Northern P. R. Co. 46 Fed. Rep. 847; Zion v. Southern Pac. Co. 67 Fed. Rep. 506; Head v. Georgia P. R. Co. 79 Ga. 358; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Dougherty, 86 Ga. 744; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Roberts, 91 Ga. 514; Pittsburg, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Hennigh, 39 Ind. 509; Hufford v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. 64 Mich. 631; St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. v. Macnie, 71 Tex. 191, 1 L. R. A. 667; Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Conley, 6 Ind. App. 9; Murdock v. Boston & A. R. Co. 137 Mass. 293, 50 Atl. Rep. 307; Muckle v. Rochester R. Co. 79 Hun. 38; McGinnis v. Missouri P. R. Co. 21 Mo. App. 399; Burnham v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 63 Me. 298.

In a majority of the cases cited by the plaintiff in error in support of its contention, it affirmatively appears that the passenger was himself at fault, and that the railroad company was free from any fault, negligence, carelessness, or mistake. Especially is this true in the following cases: New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Bennett, 1 C. C. A. 544, 50 Fed. Rep. 496, 6 U. S. App. 95; Dietrich v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 71 Pa. 433, 10 Am. Rep. 711; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Griffin, 68 Ill. 499; Pennington v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 62 Md. 95; Johnson v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 63 Md. 106; Petrie v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 42 N. J. L. 449. In Mosher v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 127 U. S. 390, 32 L. ed. 249,—upon which plaintiff in error principally relies, neither party seems to have been at fault. In that case there was a special contract in regard to a tourist's ticket sold by the St. Louis Railroad Company to Mosher at St. Louis, Mo., "good for one first-class passage to Hot Springs, Ark., and return, when officially stamped on back hereof, and 30 L. R. A.

presented with coupons attached." The St. Louis Railroad extended to Malvern, and a coupon on the ticket entitled Mosher to be carried from Malvern to Hot Springs, and back on the Hot Springs Railroad. The regulations upon the ticket provided that it was not good for return passage "unless the holder identifies himself as the original purchaser to the satisfaction of the authorized agent of the Hot Springs Railroad at Hot Springs, Ark." When Mosher returned, he went to the ticket office of the Hot Springs Railroad, at Hot Springs, for the purpose of having himself identified in pursuance of the terms of the ticket, but failed to obtain such identification on account of the failure of the Hot Springs Railroad to have an agent at that place. He returned over the Hot Springs road to Malvern, and when he got upon the train of the St. Louis road the conductor called for his ticket, and refused to honor it, because its conditions had not been complied with. Another condition upon this ticket was "that in selling this ticket the St. Louis, Iron Mountain, & Southern Railway Company acts only as agent, and is not responsible beyond its own line." Upon these facts the court held that Mosher had no cause of action against the St. Louis Company for his expulsion. In the course of the opinion the court said: "By the first condition of the contract contained in the plaintiff's ticket, the defendant is not responsible beyond its own line. Consequently it was not responsible to the plaintiff for failing to have an agent at the further end of the Hot Springs Railroad. The agent who was to identify the passenger and stamp his ticket there was the agent of the Hot Springs Railroad Company, and is so described in the ticket, as well as in the petition. If there was any duty to have an agent at Hot Springs, it was the duty of that company, and not of the defendant. . . . The omission to have an agent at Hot Springs not being a breach of contract or of duty on the part of this defendant, the case is relieved of all difficulty."

This was the reason, and the sole reason, given for the decision. It will therefore readily be seen that the decision in that case does not support the views contended for by the plaintiff in error.

In New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Winter, 148 U. S. 60, 73, 38 L. ed. 71, 80, there is a clear recognition of the fundamental principles which we have announced. The court, in the course of the opinion, said: "The reason of such rule is to be found in the principle that where a party does all that he is required to do, under the terms of a contract into which he has entered, and is only prevented from reaping the benefit of such contract by the fault or wrongful act of the other party to it, the law gives him a remedy against the other party for such breach of contract."

In the present case Pauson introduced testimony tending to show, and from which the jury were authorized to infer, that he had fully complied with all the conditions of the ticket upon his part; that he "did present himself to an agent, and sign the ticket in his [the agent's] presence, and the agent took the ticket, and returned it in such a way and under such circumstances as to justify plaintiff in believing that he, the agent, had witnessed and stamped the ticket, and plaintiff, so believing, entered the train." The court did not err in instructing the jury that, if they believed such facts to be true, then the plaintiff was a legal passenger, and his removal from the train was unlawful.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

COMMONWEALTH of Massachusetts

v.
Daniel F. MURPHY.

SAME

v.
E. Edward ENOS.

(.....Mass.....)

1. The provision as to cruel and unusual punishment, in the 8th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, has no application to crimes against the laws of a state.
2. The punishment of imprisonment for life, under Stat. 1893, chap. 463, for criminal intimacy with a female child under the age of sixteen years, is not in violation of the constitutional provision against cruel or unusual punishments.
3. The legislature is ordinarily the judge of the expediency of creating new crimes and of prescribing penalties, whether light or severe, for prohibited acts.
4. One who intentionally commits a crime is responsible criminally for the consequences of his act, if the offense proves to be different from that which he intended.
5. Lack of knowledge or of good reason to believe that a girl is under sixteen years of age is no defense under Stat. 1893, chap. 463, providing the penalty of imprisonment for life in case of criminal intimacy with such a person.

(January 1, 1896.)

EXCEPTIONS by defendants to rulings of the Superior Court for Bristol County made during trial of indictments against defendants for abusing and carnally knowing a female child under the age of sixteen years. OVERRULED.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. H. J. Fuller, for defendant Murphy: To call the acts done in this case, with the consent and even procurement of one fully capable of consenting, a "violent and felonious assault," is absurd.

Smith v. State, 12 Ohio St. 466, 80 Am. Dec. 855; Evte v. Pickett, 11 Nev. 255, 21 Am. Rep. 754; Hall v. State, 40 Neb. 320; Whitcher v. State, 2 Wash 288 Reg. v. Martin, 9 Car. & P. 213; Reg. v. Johnson, 10 Cox, Crim. Cas. 114; Reg. v. Woodhurst, 12 Cox, Crim. Cas. 443.

The defendant ought not to have been convicted unless he knew, or had good reason to believe that the girl was under sixteen years of age. "Ignorance or mistake in point of fact is, in all cases of supposed offense, a sufficient excuse."

Myers v. State, 1 Conn. 502; 1 Bishop, Crim. L. § 801; Com. v. Dreto, 19 Pick. 179.

NOTE.—On the subject of cruel and unusual punishment, see also Re Birdsong (C. S. D. Ga.) 4 L. R. A. 623, and note; People v. Durston (N. Y.) 7 L. R. A. 715; People v. Morris (Mich.) 8 L. R. A. 685; and Hobbs v. State (Ind.) 18 L. R. A. 774. 30 L. R. A.

This is the common-law doctrine, and the statute should be construed with reference to it.

1 Bishop, Crim. L. § 291b; Com. v. Presby, 14 Gray, 65.

Messrs. H. J. Fuller and Fred V. Fuller, for defendant Enos:

The statute is in conflict with article 8 in the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and article 26 of the Declaration of Rights of Massachusetts, because it provides for the infliction of a cruel and unusual punishment."

Body of Liberties (1641); Anc. Charters, Col. Laws, 43; 1 Wm. & M. chap. 2, Bill of Rights, 1688; 1 Bishop, Crim. L. 946, 947.

Although it has been held that the amendment to the Federal Constitution does not apply to state legislation (Pervear v. Massachusetts, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 475, 13 L. ed. 608; Com. v. Hitchings, 5 Gray, 482), the language is found substantially in most state Constitutions, and since the 14th Amendment it has been held otherwise by Justices Field, Harlan, and Brewer.

O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 36 L. ed. 450; Ho Ah Kow v. Nunan, 5 Sawy. 552.

Whatever the purpose of the statute was in the country where it originated, we think that its presence in the Constitution of this state confers power upon the court to declare void legislative acts prescribing punishments for crime in fact cruel and unusual. Cruel and unusual punishment may, although of a kind that is permitted, be excessive in degree and extent.

People v. Durston, 119 N. Y. 577, 7 L. R. A. 715; Ex parte Kemmler, 136 U. S. 436, 34 L. ed. 519; Wilkinson v. Utah, 99 U. S. 130, 25 L. ed. 345; O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 36 L. ed. 450; State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 165, 54 Am. Rep. 557; Ho Ah Kow v. Nunan, supra; Barker v. People, 8 Cow. 700; State v. Pettie, 80 N. C. 867, 34 Am. Dec. 672; Fraser v. State, 8 Tex. App. 268, 30 Am. Rep. 181; State v. Driver, 78 N. C. 423; State v. Danforth, 3 Conn. 112.

The statute before the court attempts to define the crime of rape and create a felony punishable by life imprisonment where at common law a misdemeanor was at most committed.

Pub. Stat. chap. 202, §§ 27, 28; Com. v. Roswell, 143 Mass. 82; Com. v. Burke, 105 Mass. 376, 7 Am. Rep. 581.

Probably any new statutory offense may be punished to the extent and in the mode permitted by the common law for offenses of a similar nature.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 329; Re Bayard, 25 Hun, 549.

This statute is in violation of the spirit if not the letter of the 25th article of the Declaration of Rights, which says: "No subject ought, in any case, or in any time, to be declared guilty of treason or felony by the legislature."

Pub. Stat. 210, § 1; Com. v. Carey, 12 Cush.

252; Com. v. Smith, 11 Allen, 257; State v. Smith, 83 Me. 369, 54 Am. Dec. 578.

Mr. Andrew J. Jennings, District Attorney, for the Commonwealth:

The assault could not be made with consent, because the law holds the child incapable of giving a valid consent to the completed act of carnal intercourse which includes an assault.

Com. v. Roosenell, 143 Mass. 82; Givens v. Com. 29 Gratt. 890; State v. Tilmán, 80 La. Ann. 1249, 81 Am. Rep. 286; Hays v. People, 1 Hill, 351; State v. Wright, 25 Neb. 88; People v. McDonald, 9 Mich. 150; State v. Dancy, 83 N. C. 608.

Knowledge of age is immaterial.

Bishop, Statutory Crimes, § 490, and cases cited; Com. v. Savery, 145 Mass. 212; Com. v. Farren, 9 Allen, 489; Com. v. Raymond, 97 Mass. 567; Com. v. Wentworth, 118 Mass. 441; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6; Com. v. Connelly, 163 Mass. 539.

Knowlton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases may be considered together, as substantially the same questions are raised in both of them.

Under Pub. Stat. chap. 202, §§ 27, 28, the question whether an indictment for an assault with an intent to commit rape upon a female child under the age of ten years can be maintained, if the child consents to what is done, was very fully considered in Com. v. Roosenell, 143 Mass. 82, and decided in the affirmative. This case must be deemed to have settled the law in this commonwealth in accordance with the weight of judicial opinion, although there is some conflict of authority in other jurisdictions. The several acts in amendment of section 27, above cited, which raise the age of consent by girls to carnal connection, do not assume to change the nature of an offense to which they relate. One who unlawfully, carnally, knows and abuses a female child under the age of sixteen years, is guilty of the same crime, under Stat. 1893, chap. 466, as one who committed the offense upon a child under the age of ten years when Pub. Stat. chap. 202, § 27, was in force. Stat. 1886, chap. 805; Stat. 1888, chap. 891; Stat. 1893, chap. 466. There is no doubt of the intention of the legislature to treat the crime of having carnal connection with a girl under the age of sixteen years as rape, even if she gives her full consent so far as she is capable of consenting.

The defendants contend that the statute last cited is in conflict with article 8 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and of article 26 of our Declaration of Rights, because it provides for the infliction of a cruel and unusual punishment. The first of these articles has no application to crimes against the laws of a state. Com. v. Hitchings, 5 Gray, 482. Without implying that article 26 of our Declaration of Rights is applicable to the statute before us, it is clear that the punishment prescribed is not cruel or unusual in kind.

There is some ground for the contention that the statute is a departure from the principles which lie at the foundation of our ancient law in regard to rape, and which justify the treatment of it as one of the most heinous crimes that can be committed. The legislation is different in character from Stat. 1886, chap. 829, and Stat. 1888, chap. 811, which were enacted for the punishment and prevention of seduction. But whatever we may think of the policy of a statute that treats a girl fifteen years and eleven months old, however mature she may be in body and mind, as if she were incapable of committing the crime of fornication, and subjects a boy of the same age, with whom she joins in sexual intercourse, to a possibility of the same punishment as if he were guilty of murder in the second degree, the legislature is ordinarily the judge of the expediency of creating new crimes, and of prescribing penalties, whether light or severe, for prohibited acts. We cannot say that the punishment prescribed for this offense, when the girl is nearly sixteen years of age, and voluntarily participates in it, is beyond the constitutional power of the legislature to inflict.

The presiding justice was asked to instruct the jury that unless the defendant knew, or had good reason to believe, that the girl was under sixteen years of age, he could not be convicted. How far a mistake of fact in regard to the nature of his act may be availed of by a defendant in a criminal case is sometimes a difficult question to answer. In general it may be said that there must be malus animus, or a criminal intent. But there is a large class of cases in which, on grounds of public policy, certain acts are made punishable without proof that the defendant understands the facts that give character to his act. In such cases it is deemed best to require everybody, at his peril, to ascertain whether his act comes within the legislative prohibition. Among these cases are prosecutions for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, for selling adulterated milk, for unlawfully selling naphtha, for admitting a minor to a billiard room, and the like. Com. v. Savery, 145 Mass. 212; Com. v. Farren, 9 Allen, 489; Com. v. Wentworth, 118 Mass. 441; Com. v. Emmons, 98 Mass. 6; Com. v. Raymond, 97 Mass. 567; Com. v. Connelly, 163 Mass. 539. Considering the nature of the offense, the purpose to be accomplished, the practical methods available for the enforcement of the law, and such other matters as throw light upon the meaning of the language, the question in interpreting a criminal statute is whether the intention of the legislature was to make knowledge of the facts an essential element of the offense, or to put upon every one the burden of finding out whether his contemplated act is prohibited, and of refraining from it if it is. The application of this rule to crimes like bigamy and adultery has led to some conflict of authority. Com. v. Hayden, 163 Mass. 457, 28 L. R. A. 818; Queen v. Tolson, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 168. See also Com. v. Presby, 14 Gray, 65. The defendants in the present cases knew that they were violating the law. Their intended crime was fornication, at the least. It is a familiar rule that, if one intentionally commits a crime, he is responsible criminally for the consequences of his act if the offense proves to be different from that which he intended. See Reg. v. Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. 154, 175.

Exceptions overruled.

ARKANSAS SUPREME COURT.

Ex parte S. D. HAWKINS.

(.....Ark.....)

A constitutional provision forbidding exile does not prevent the granting of pardons to convicts upon condition that they leave the state and never return.

(November 23, 1895.)

A PPEAL by petitioner from a judgment of the Chancery Court for Pulaski County denying his application for a writ of habeas corpus to procure his discharge from the penitentiary to which he had been committed for the violation of the terms of a pardon under which he had been released therefrom. Affirmed.

Statement by Riddick, J.:

S. D. Hawkins filed a petition in the Pulaski chancery court for a writ of habeas corpus. He alleged that in the year 1881 he was convicted of a felony in the Lonoke circuit court and sentenced by that court to be imprisoned in the state penitentiary for the period of four years. That afterwards, on the 7th day of June, 1881, and while he was serving his sentence of imprisonment, the governor of the state granted him a pardon upon the express condition following: "That the said Hawkins should immediately depart from and remain without the borders of the state of Arkansas, said pardon to be void if the said Hawkins was found within the borders of the state after the 12th day of June, 1881." He further alleged that, by virtue of said pardon, he was set at liberty and left the state before the 12th day of June, 1881, and remained out of the state for several years; that he then returned, and was rearrested and confined in the penitentiary. He alleged that the condition attached to said pardon was null and void, that his imprisonment was illegal, and prayed that a writ of habeas corpus be directed to E. T. McConnell, superintendent of the state penitentiary, etc. All formalities were waived. McConnell appeared and filed a demurrer to the petition, which demurrer was sustained by the court, the petition dismissed, and writ refused. From this order of the court an appeal was taken.

Messrs. Dan. W. Jones and W. S. McCain for appellant.

Mr. E. B. Kinsworthy, Attorney General, for appellee.

Riddick, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The first question for us to determine is whether the condition upon which the pardon was granted was valid or not. In other words, did the governor have power to annex to his pardon the condition that the petitioner should "depart from and remain without the borders of the state?" It is said, in Bacon's Abridgment, that "It seems agreed that the King may extend his mercy on what terms he pleases, and consequently may annex to his pardon any condition that he thinks fit, whether precedent or subsequent, on the performance whereof the validity of the pardon will depend." 7 Bacon, Abr. p. 412; 4 Bl. Com. p. 401. It is now well settled that, when the Constitution gives an unrestricted power of pardon to the governor of the state, he has the right to annex to his pardon any condition, precedent or subsequent, provided it be not illegal, immoral, or impossible to be performed. Ex parte Hunt, 10 Ark. 284; United States v. Wilson, 83 U. S. 7 Pet. 150, 8 L. ed. 640; Ex parte Wells, 59 U. S. 18 How. 307, 15 L. ed. 421; Arthur v. Craig, 48 Iowa, 264, 30 Am. Rep. 395; State v. McIntire, 1 Jones, L. 1, 59 Am. Dec. 576; 1 Bishop, New Crim. L. § 914. Our Constitution provides that the governor shall have power to grant pardons "under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by law," and a statute expressly authorizes him to grant pardons on condition that the convicted person "shall leave the state and never again return to it." Const. 1874, art. 6, § 18; Sand. & H. Dig. § 2412. But it is said that this statute is in conflict with section 21 of article 2 of the Constitution, which provides that under no circumstances, shall any person be exiled from the state. We do not agree with this contention. This provision of the Constitution forbidding exile was intended as a protection to citizens and inhabitants of the state. Any statute of the legislature or order of the courts, or execution, inflicting upon a person banishment from the state would, under that section, be void. It forbids exile or compulsory banishment, but it does not say that a person may not, of his own volition, leave the state to escape punishment, or that the governor may not, by his pardon, permit him to do so. To hold that it did would be to construe a provision that was intended to protect the inhabitants of the state into one restricting the power of the governor when exercised in their behalf. Who can doubt that it would be esteemed a great boon by most of those unfortunates against whom a sentence of imprisonment in the penitentiary for a long term of years has been rendered to be allowed to escape it by leaving the state? When a citizen of another state or country commits a crime in this state, it might, under some circumstances, be to the best interest of all concerned that a pardon be granted on condition that he leave the state and never return. One can readily conceive of other instances when, to prevent the possibility of future strife between the convicted person and those against whose persons or property he had committed a crime, it would be proper to impose this as a condition of the pardon. We think the Constitution does not deprive the governor of the power to grant pardons on such conditions. As Hawkins accepted his pardon on this condition, and afterwards violated it, the pardon by its own terms became void. His subsequent arrest and imprisonment were therefore legal.

The judgment of the court dismissing his petition was, in our opinion, right, and is affirmed.

Bunn, Ch. J., concurred in the judgment only on the ground that, if the condition was void, the pardon was also void.

NOTE—For conditions in pardons generally, see note to People v. Cummings (Mich.) 14 L. R. A. 285, 30 L. R. A.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

Horatio HOULTON, Appt.,

v.

Charles H. DUNN, Resp't.

(.....Minn.)

*The plaintiff agreed with defendant to locate him upon a valuable quarter-section of pine land, which had been long withdrawn from market for railroad purposes, and to instruct him as to what he should do as such settler, and do all that was necessary or could be done to bring the land into the market, and enable defendant to acquire title thereto under the homestead or pre-emption laws of the United States. In pursuance and performance of this agreement, the plaintiff attended several sessions of Congress, and appeared before the Secretary of the Interior and the committees of the Senate and House of Representatives, and employed counsel to urge the passage of a bill declaring said lands forfeited to the government, and providing that parties who had settled on the land in good faith should have the preference to enter the same under the homestead laws, when the same should be restored to the market. For such services the defendant agreed to pay plaintiff when he (defendant) should acquire the right to make final proof for such land. Held, that the contract was void as against public policy.

(January 17, 1906.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the District Court for Sherburne County granting judgment on the pleadings in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover the amount which defendant had contracted to pay plaintiff for services in aiding defendant in establishing his title to certain government land. Affirmed.

*Headnote by BUCK, J.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Mr. Robertson Howard, with Messrs. J. M. Gilman and C. D. O'Brien, for appellant:

That a party may lawfully contract to do what the plaintiff undertook to do under the agreement, as alleged in the complaint, is perfectly well settled.

Powers v. Skinner, 84 Vt. 274, 80 Am. Dec. 677; Burke v. Child, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 450, 22 L. ed. 624; Barry v. Capen, 151 Mass. 99, 6 L. R. A. 808; Chesebrough v. Conover, 50 N. Y. S. R. 463, affirmed, 140 N. Y. 332; Beal v. Polhemus, 67 Mich. 180; Denison v. Crawford County, 48 Iowa, 211.

Unless the agreement in express terms involved an illegal or an unlawful act, or an act against public policy, the court could not presume or infer that the parties intended or contemplated any such act.

Moyer v. Canisany, 41 Minn. 242; Hunt v. Test, 8 Ala. 718, 42 Am. Dec. 659.

The defendant was not a trespasser when he settled upon the land referred to in the complaint, even if the land was not then open to settlement under the homestead or pre-emption laws of the United States.

Quinn v. Chapman, 111 U. S. 445, 28 L. ed.

NOTE.—Validity of contract for services to procure legislation.

The line of demarcation between contracts for procuring legislation which are upheld and those which are condemned seems to be well drawn. All contracts for legitimate professional services for a fixed compensation are enforced, while those for a contingent fee or which require personal influence, personal solicitation of members, or any trickery or underhanded means to secure the legislation, are not enforced.

The whole subject is well covered by the decision in Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 57 U. S. 18 How. 314, 14 L. ed. 953. There an agent undertook for the sum of $15,000 to bring such influence to bear upon the legislators through their kind and social dispositions as to cause them to pass a railroad charter giving certain privileges. The means to be used were to be secret, and the sub-agents were to be stimulated to active partisanship by a high contingent fee. The language of the court covers the ground so thoroughly as to justify an extended quotation from the opinion as follows: "Legislators should act from high considerations of public duty. Public policy and sound morality do therefore imperatively require that courts should put the stamp of their disapprobation on every act and pronounce void every contract the ultimate or probable tendency of which would be to sully the purity or mislead the judgments of those to whom the high trust of legislation is confided. All persons whose interests may in any way be affected by any public or private act of the legislature have an undoubted right to urge their claims and arguments, either in person or by counsel professing to act for them, before legislative committees, as well as in courts of justice. But where persons act as counsel or agents, or in any representative capacity, it is due to those before whom they plead or solicit that they should honestly appear in their true characters, so that their arguments and representations, open and candidly made, may receive their just weight and consideration. A hired advocate or agent, assuming to act in a different character, is practising deceit on the legislature. Advice or information flowing from the unbiased judgment of disinterested persons, will naturally be received with more confidence and less scrupulously examined than where the recommendations are known to be the result of pecuniary interests, or the arguments prompted and pressed by hope of a large contingent reward, and the agent stimulated to active partisanship by the strong lure of high profit. Any attempts to deceive persons intrusted with the high functions of legislation, by secret combinations, or to create or bring into operation undue influences of any kind, have all the injurious effects of a direct fraud on the public. Legislators should act with a single eye to the true interests of the whole people, and courts of justice can give no countenance to the use of means which may subject them to be misled by the pertinacious importunity and indirect influences of interested and unscrupulous agents or solicitors.

"Influences secretly urged under false and covert pretenses must necessarily operate deleteriously on legislative action, whether it be employed to obtain the passage of private or public acts. Bribes, in the shape of high contingent compensation, must necessarily lead to the use of improper means and the exercise of undue influence. Their necessary consequence is the demoralization of the agent who covenants for them; he is soon brought to believe that any means which will produce a beneficial result to himself are proper means; and that a share of these profits may have the same effect of

476; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 331, 23 L. ed. 424; Frisbie v. Whitney, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 187, 19 L. ed. 668; Yosemite Valley Case, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 77, 87, 21 L. ed. 82, 85; Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513, 24 L. ed. 732.

Messrs. Robt & Slack, for respondent:

All agreements for pecuniary considerations to control the business operations of the government, or the regular administration of justice, or the appointments of public officers, or the ordinary course of legislation, are void, as to public policy, without reference to the question whether improper means are contemplated or used in their execution.

9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 900, citing Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 45, 17 L. ed. 868; Sweeney v. McLeod, 15 Or. 330; Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, 5 Watts & S. 315, 40 Am. Dec. 519; Bryan v. Reynolds, 5 Wis. 200, 68 Am. Dec. 55; Wood v. McCann, 6 Dana, 366; Gil v. Williams, 12 La. Ann. 219, 68 Am. Dec. 787; Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 57 U. S. 16 How. 314, 14 L. ed. 953; Mills v. Mills, 36 Barb. 474; Weed v. Black, 2 MacArth. 268, 29 Am. Rep. 613.

The illegality should not, then, be left to the jury, but should be decided by the court.

Pierces v. Randolph, 12 Tex. 290; Thomp. Trials, p. 849, § 1097; Harris v. Roof, 10 Barb. 489; Rose v. Truax, 21 Barb. 361; Spalding v. Ewing, 149 Pa. 375, 15 L. R. A. 727; Ormerod v. Dearman, 100 Pa. 561, 45 Am. Rep. 391; Chippewa Valley & S. R. Co. v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 75 Wis. 224, 6 L. R. A. 601.

The contract sued on is treated as an entirety, the alleged services are in fact inseparable, and no attempt is made to separate the lawful, if any there be, from the unlawful. No recovery, then, can be had on any portion. Bishop, Cont. p. 185, § 487; Bisby v. Moor, 51 N. H. 402.

Buck, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff claims to have acquired valuable information in regard to certain pine lands in Bayfield county, Wis., and that the plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement, by the terms of which the defendant was to enter into possession of 160 acres of such pine lands, belonging to the United States, not then in market, nor subject to entry, and to hold the same until it could be purchased from the government; and the plaintiff, for a consideration to be paid by the defendant, agreed to procure such legislation from Congress as would enable the defendant to secure the land in preference to any other party. The plaintiff performed his part of the agreement, and procured the promised legislation; and this action is brought by the plaintiff upon the agreement, to recover from the defendant the sum of $3,500, the amount claimed by the plaintiff to be the value due him for his services, as well as for certain expenditures made by him pursuant to said agreement. There was an answer by the defendant, and reply thereto by the plaintiff, which we need not set out in detail. When the cause was called for trial at a general term of the district court for Sherburne county, the defendant moved for judgment upon the pleadings, upon the ground quickenings the perceptions and warming the zeal of influential or careless members in favor of his bill. The use of such means and such agents will have the effect to subject the state governments to the combined capital of wealthy corporations, and produce universal corruption, commencing with the representative and ending with the elector."

Condemnation of such contracts generally.

There are many expressions in opinions of the courts which would lead to a general condemnation of all contracts to procure legislation, and some decisions tending also in that direction. But those expressions are not intended to apply to cases of legitimate services, and the decisions are usually in cases where some evil tendency or influence was apparent. There seems to be no case in which legitimate services for a fee payable absolutely have been condemned.

In Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 45, 17 L. ed. 870, the question was as to the validity of an agreement to procure a contract from the government, but the court decides the case adversely to the agreement by analogy to the case of contracts to procure legislation, holding that it is settled that contracts to procure legislation are void.

A contract providing a compensation for obtaining legislation or to prevent legislative investigation into the affairs of a railroad company is void. Usher v. McBratney, 3 Dill. 885.

A contract by a railroad company to refrain from any effort to obtain a grant of public lands from the legislature and to aid another company to procure it by all reasonable and proper assistance in consideration of a share of the grant obtained by the latter, is void as against public policy. Chippewa Valley & S. R. Co. v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 75 Wis. 235, 6 L. R. A. 601.

90 L. R. A.

In Wilday v. Collier, 7 Md. 273, 61 Am. Dec. 344, it is said by way of argument that contracts by advocates cannot be enforced when the character in which they solicited the passage of the act is not disclosed.

To warrant a recovery the evidence should be required to establish the fact with reasonable clearness that the services alleged to have been performed were such as the law will sanction in aiding and promoting legislative action. Harris v. Simonsen, 28 Hun, 518.

Contracts for legitimate professional services upheld.

An agreement to draft a bill for the franchise and place it in the hands of some member of the legislature to be introduced in that body but containing no promise to work for it or its passage is not contra bonos mores. Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335, 99 Am. Dec. 384.

The Virginia statute against lobby services does not apply to contracts for legitimate professional services in preparing and arguing a case before the legislature. Yates v. Robertson, 80 Va. 473.

Contingent fee makes contract void.

A contract to give a percentage of a claim against the government for services in collecting it is void as against public policy, where the services in fact consisted largely in procuring legislation from Congress by which the postoffice department should be required to pay the claim. Spalding v. Ewing, 149 Pa. 375, 15 L. R. A. 727, affirming 9 Pa. Co. Ct. 471.

A contract for a contingent fee to procure or endeavor to procure an act of the legislature by any sinister means or by using personal influence with the members is void. Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, 5 Watts & S. 315, 40 Am. Dec. 519.

A contract for a contingent compensation to procure the passage of an act to reimburse a person for property taken from him for violation of that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; and the motion was granted by the court, upon the ground that the agreement was void as against public policy.

The principal controversy is over that part of the plaintiff's complaint which is as follows, viz.: "And the plaintiff further states to the court that, during the sessions of Congress of 1887-88 and 1888-89 and 1889-90 and 1890-91, he attended at Washington from three to six months each year, and appeared before the Secretary of the Interior and appropriate committees of the Senate and House of Representatives, and employed counsel, for the purpose to urge the passage of a bill declaring said lands forfeited to the government, and also that parties who had in good faith settled upon said lands should have the preference right to enter the same from the government under the homestead laws, when the same should be restored to the market; that by an act of Congress approved September 29, 1890, entitled 'An Act to Forfeit Certain Lands heretofore Granted for the Purpose of Aiding in the Construction of Railroads and Other Purposes,' the lands hereinbefore described, together with other lands, became forfeited to the United States, and by § 2 of the act the defendant has the prior right, over any one else, to prove up and acquire title to the lands hereinbefore described, by reason of his being a settler thereon." It is then further alleged that defendant did make final proof, and acquired title to said land, and that at the time he settled upon the same, and when he acquired the right to make final proof therefor, the land was worth $12,000 to $15,000, and that the defendant sold the pine timber upon the land for $12,000. The business relations between these parties will be better understood by our quoting further from the allegations in the complaint, which we do, one of which is as follows, viz.: "That the said defendant was wholly unacquainted with said business, but desired to settle upon a valuable quarter section of said lands, and acquire a title thereto, under the homestead or pre-emption laws of the United States, when said lands should be restored to the market, and desired the plaintiff to locate him (the defendant) upon some such quarter section, and instruct him as to what he should do as such settler, and to take charge of him, and do all that was necessary or could be done to bring the land into market, and enable the said defendant to acquire title thereto, and promised and agreed that he would do what was right with the plaintiff for such information and service, in the way of compensation therefor, when he (the defendant) should acquire the right to make final proof of such land."

The question here involved is a very important one, and we regret that we did not have the benefit of an oral argument by the very able counsel for the plaintiff. If there were services rendered and expenditures incurred by the plaintiff for the defendant, as he alleges, entirely disconnected with the services rendered in procuring congressional legislation, they would constitute a good cause of action; but, unfortunately for the plaintiff, he has included the law cannot be enforced. Gil v. Williams, 12 La. Ann. 219, 68 Am. Dec. 767.

A contract for a contingent fee to procure the passage of a law annulling one marriage and legalizing another is void. Wood v. McCann, 6 Dana, 386. But in that case the court held that the evidence did not show that an illegal contract had been made, and therefore the contract was enforced.

In Jones v. Blackledge, 9 Kan. 502, 12 Am. Rep. 506, which was a case of the collection of a claim against the government, the court says, all contracts of the collection of claims, whether they are to be performed before courts, before Congress or the legislature, or before any of the executive departments for a compensation contingent upon success, are clearly against public policy; for the compensation in such cases being contingent is often very large in amount and holds out great inducements and temptations to the use of undue and even corrupt means for their collection.

Contracts for a contingent compensation or to use personal or any secret or sinister influence on legislation are void. Coquillard v. Bearss, 21 Ind. 482, 53 Am. Dec. 362.

A contract for compensation contingent on success in procuring the passage of the bill is void. Foltz v. Cogswell, 86 Cal. 542.

There are a few cases in which this rule does not appear to have been followed. In DAVIS v. COM. post, 743, it was held that the legislature may authorize the employment of an agent to prosecute claims on behalf of the state which require the procuring of legislation for a fee contingent on his success.

So, in Iowa a contract between a county and an agent to procure from the general government the swamp lands to which the county is entitled or indemnity therefor, his compensation to be one half of what he procures, is upheld in Denison v. Crawford County, 48 Iowa, 211, although to effect the object certain congressional action became necessary. The court placed its ruling upon the ground that nothing was contemplated or done except what was legitimate in such cases, but there is no discussion of the effect of the provision for contingent compensation which so many of the other cases have condemned.

Also in Chesebrough v. Conover, 140 N. Y. 382, a contract containing the element of a contingent fee was enforced.

Contract for personal influence or lobby services.

A contract for lobby services is unlawful. Sweeney v. McLeod, 15 Or. 330.

An agreement in respect to services as a lobby agent or for the sale of personal influence and solicitations to procure the passage of a public or private law by the legislature is void. Powers v. Skinner, 34 Vt. 274, 80 Am. Dec. 677.

In Mills v. Mills, 40 N. Y. 540, 100 Am. Dec. 535, a contract to give all the "aid in his power, spend such reasonable time as may be necessary, and generally to use his utmost influence and exertion to procure the passage into a law of the bill heretofore introduced," was held to furnish a temptation to resort to corrupt means and improper devices to influence legislative action and to be void. And that decision affirmed the ruling in the lower court. Mills v. Mills, 36 Barb. 474.

All contracts for services generally, in procuring legislation, are void from public policy. If the contract is broad enough to cover services of any kind whether secret or open, honest or dishonest, the law pronounces a ban upon the paper itself. But contracts which provide for particular services to be rendered, such as the collection of evidence, the preparation of papers, or the delivery the value of the whole services and expenditures in one lump sum, and seemingly as though the contract was entire. Evidently, the court below so treated the transaction, and, from a perusal of the pleadings, we do not see that it could have done otherwise. See Burke v. Child, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 628. The courts hold that there are two kinds of agreements relative to the matter of procuring legislation from our state and national legislatures and our municipal bodies, boards, or officers. One is the evil and mischievous agreement which tends to corrupt the lawmaking power, and is accomplished sometimes by subtle acts of personal importunity and intrigue, or by secret and insidious overtures, while at other times corrupt results are reached by startling boldness and daring. Some of the authorities which refuse to enforce this kind of agreements are as follows: Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, 5 Watts & S. 815, 40 Am. Dec. 519; Harris v. Roof, 10 Barb. 489; Ross v. Truax, 21 Barb. 361; Mills v. Mills, 36 Barb. 474; Burke v. Child, supra; Spalding v. Ewing, 149 Pa. 876, 15 L. R. A. 727; Oceanyan v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. 108 U. S. 261-274, 26 L. ed. 539-545; Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 45, 17 L. ed. 268; Woodstock Iron Co. v. Richmond & D. Extension Co. 129 U. S. 648, 32 L. ed. 819. In the case of Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, 5 Watts & S. 815, 40 Am. Dec. 519, it was said by the court: "It matters not that nothing improper was done or was expected to be done by the plaintiff. It is enough that such is the tendency of the contract; and that it is contrary to sound morality and public policy, leading necessarily, in the hands of designing and corrupt men, to improper tampering with members, and the use of an extraneous secret influence over an important branch of the government. It may not corrupt all; but if it corrupts, or tends to corrupt, some, or if it deceives, or tends to deceive or mislead, some, that is sufficient to stamp its character with the seal of reprobation before a judicial tribunal." In the case of Ross v. Truax, 21 Barb. 361, the agreement was "to use his influence, efforts, and labor in procuring the passage of a law by the legislature;" and the agreement was held void, as against public policy, and that, as the contract was entire, it was wholly void, and that no recovery could be had for even legitimate services performed under the agreement. In the case of Weed v. Black, 2 MacArth. 268, 29 Am. Rep. 618, the court uses the following language: "If the terms of the contract be broad enough to cover services of any kind, whether secret or open, honest or dishonest, the law pronounces a ban upon the paper itself." In the case of Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 45, 17 L. ed. 268, Mr. Justice Field said, in reference to agreements for compensation in procuring contracts from the government: "It [such principle] has been asserted in cases relating to agreements for compensation to procure legislation. These have been uniformly declared invalid, and the decisions have not turned upon the question whether improper influences were contemplated or used, but upon the corrupting tendency of the agreements." Further along in the opinion he says: "It is sufficient to observe, generally, that all agreements for pecuniary considerations to control the business operations of the government, or the regular administration of justice, or the appointments to public offices, or the ordinary course of legislation, are void as against public policy, without reference to the question whether im-of arguments, are valid. Weed v. Black, 2 MacArth. 268, 29 Am. Rep. 618.

Common fairness requires that neither party shall be permitted to have secret consultations and exercise secret influences that are kept from the knowledge of the other party. The business of lobby members is not to go fairly and openly before the committees and present statements, proofs, and arguments that the other side has an opportunity of meeting, and refute if they are wrong, but to go secretly to the members and ply them with statements and arguments that the other side cannot openly meet, however erroneous they may be, and to bring illegitimate influence to bear upon them. If the lobby member is selected because of his personal or political influence it aggravates the wrong. The tendency and object of these influences are to obtain by corruption what it is supposed cannot be obtained fairly. Frost v. Belmont, 6 Allen, 162.

In Buck v. First Nat. Bank, 27 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 139, which arose under a note given to secure a recommendation of a convict for clemency, the court says that even in cases of petitions to the legislative department of government any promise to pay money to influence or secure official action in any form whatever other than by the use of open and legitimate evidence and argument will be entirely without consideration because opposed to public policy.

It is the tendency of judicial decisions to discountenance all attempts to influence the deliberations and determinations of public bodies other than by arguments which being openly made, bear directly upon the merits of the pending measure 30 L. R. A.

or application because in contravention of sound public policy. Milbank v. Jones, 137 N. Y. 370.

There can be no recovery upon a contract for lobby services. Harris v. Roof, 10 Barb. 489.

A contract for personal influence, efforts, and labor, to procure the passage of a law with a promise of a share of the results in case of success, is void. Ross v. Truax, 21 Barb. 361.

A contract for lobby services, for personal influence, for mere importunities to the members of the legislature, for bribery or corruption, or for influencing them by other arguments, persuasions, or inducements than such as directly and legitimately bear upon the merits of the pending application, is illegal and void. Brown v. Brown, 34 Barb. 533.

No compensation can be recovered for services rendered in personally soliciting members of the legislature to pass a bill. Cary v. Western U. Tel. Co. 47 Hun, 610.

A contract to prosecute and superintend a claim before the legislature is void. Bryan v. Reynolds, 5 Wis. 200, 68 Am. Dec. 55.

A contract to procure the passage of a bill by solicitation or other lobbying measures is illegal, but a contract for services such as drafting the petition to set forth the claim attending the taking of testimony, collecting facts, preparing arguments, and submitting them orally or in writing to the proper authority, is valid. Burke v. Child, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 441, 22 L. ed. 628.

In California the court seems to have made an exception to the general rule. In one of the cases the exception is made to rest partly upon the legislative definition of lobbying. But such ground would seem to be insufficient to support the dis-proper means are contemplated or used in their execution. The law looks to the general tendency of such agreements, and it closes the door to temptation, by refusing them recognition in any of the courts of the country." It will be observed that many of the decisions are based upon the corrupt tendency of such contracts, rather than the particular wording of the contract itself.

There are very eminent courts holding that contracts for the performance of services in procuring legislation can be enforced, where only fair and honorable means have been used, and especially when such legislation results in great public benefit. The plaintiff seeks to bring his services within this rule, alleging that the plaintiff's services were not rendered for the benefit of any one individual, but that his services were rendered in securing the passage of a public act which restored lands to the public domain for the public benefit, to which the railroad companies had no right. It may well be doubted whether the legal effect of the passage of the law has been as alleged by plaintiff, viz., beneficial to the public at large; but we think it is plainly evident from the pleadings that it was not the public weal that concerned the plaintiff, in what he did, but to secure the passage of an act which would secure to the defendant the right to enter and pay for 160 acres of pine land for the paltry sum of $1.25 or $2.50 per acre; while the land was actually worth from $12,000 to $15,000, and for which services and expenses in so doing he was to be paid, as he claims, the sum of $3,500. Who was to pay this consideration? The plaintiff says that the defendant should do so, but, if the plaintiff was expending money and time and rendering services for the benefit of the public, why should this defendant alone be responsible therefor? And how the public could be benefited by the passage of a law allowing settlers to enter pine land for the sum of $200 or $400 per quarter section, which was worth $12,000 or more at the time, is not made to appear very satisfactorily. If there were a large amount of these lands which were taken in the manner secured by the defendant, through plaintiff's agency, we think it is safe to say that the public was robbed, instead of being benefited. Prolific as have been the schemes for robbing the government of its pine timber, it is seldom that cases have come to the knowledge of our courts where such a gigantic fraud has been practiced in the name of a public benefit. It may be that the defendant's pocket is sweating with ill-gotten gains and public plunder, but this gives no legal cause of action against him by the plaintiff. We are reminded by the plaintiff that these lands had been for many years withdrawn from market for the benefit of certain railroads; that the railroads had forfeited their rights; that the secretary of the interior had so declared; but that there was evidently some doubt as to whether settlers upon these lands would have a right to prove up and acquire title to them without an act of Congress so declaring. It was this doubt which led to the making of the contract sued upon in this action. It is immaterial that the courts subsequently decided that a certain settler upon these lands could hold them under the order of the Secretary of the Interior made in 1887. The vice of the whole transaction rests in the lobbying influence exerted by the plaintiff in procuring national legislation to remove this doubt, and to enable the defendant to secure forthwith this valuable land for a tion since the courts in the other states have held that contracts such as are upheld in California are void whether they are properly lobbying contracts or not. It is there held that a contract to work for the passage of a bill in the legislature is not void as against public policy provided there is no concealment of interest in the matter, but such interest is known and understood by the members whose judgment is sought to be influenced. Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335, 99 Am. Dec. 384.

So, a contract is not illegal, although it contemplated the use of personal solicitation with the members of the legislature, if there is no personal influence brought to bear, or any dishonest, secret, or unfair means to be used to accomplish the object. Folts v. Cogswell, 38 Cal. 542.

Application of rules.

In a case relating to a contract with the government for the leasing of a building for postoffice purposes, the court says, an agreement to use personal influence for a compensation dependent on success will be void. Elkhart County Lodge v. Crary, 98 Ind. 238, 49 Am. Rep. 744.

An agreement to make the necessary statement of facts, and attend before the proper committees prepared to argue the case, and to do all that is necessary and proper to be done to insure the passage of the bill for the first $1,500 that shall be received on the claim, is not illegal on its face, and the court will presume its legality until the contrary is made to appear. And the fact that the contractor actually performs lobby services will not defeat his recovery upon the contract if such services were not contemplated by the parties when the contract was made. Russell v. Burton, 66 Barb. 539.

In Chesebrough v. Conover, 140 N. Y. 382, recovery upon a contract for services before the legislature in procuring the passage of a bill was upheld, although it appeared that the evidence might have warranted the jury in finding that there were lobby services rendered, where such finding was not made, although the contract provided for contingent compensation, the court saying nothing upon that feature of the case.

In Lyon v. Mitchell, 36 N. Y. 241, 36 Am. Dec. 503, it is said as argument by the court that it is allowable to employ counsel to appear before the legislative committee or the legislature itself to advocate or oppose a measure in which the individual has an interest. But that personal solicitation of legislators is not a subject of contract. And the principle of that case was followed in McKee v. Cheney, 52 How. Pr. 144.

In Sedgwick v. Stanton, 14 N. Y. 229, it is said that persons may no doubt be employed to conduct an application to the legislature as well as to conduct a suit at law. But they cannot with propriety be employed to exert their personal influence with individual members or to labor in any form privately with such members out of the legislative halls. Whatever is laid before the legislature in writing, or spoken openly or publicly in its presence or that of a committee, if false, may be refuted, or if such is whispered into the ear of individual members, is frequently beyond the reach of correction.

A contract for services as an attorney before a legislative body is valid, but for lobby services is nominal sum, compared with its actual value. Neither party knew the defendant's legal rights to the land if he had any. The plaintiff was not a legal practitioner, competent to advise upon such matters, but a lobbyist seeking to influence the votes of members of the national legislature during a period of from three to six months each year for four years. It is true that he alleges that he employed counsel to urge the passage of a bill declaring these lands forfeited to the government, and that parties who had settled upon them in good faith should have the preference; but it nowhere appears that either plaintiff or his attorney ever prepared a petition, map, or collected documents or evidence of any kind, or prepared a written argument or made an oral one; yet he alleges that he agreed with the defendant to do all that was necessary or could be done to bring the land into market, and enable the defendant to acquire title thereto, and that for such purpose he spent several months each year, for four years, in Washington, endeavoring to procure the passage of a law by Congress giving the defendant the right to purchase the land occupied by him. The means employed are not particularly stated, but he accomplished his purpose. As it took the defendant several months each year, for a period of four years, to succeed, and the only means disclosed is that he went before the appropriate committees, we think that the unavoidable inference is that he solicited the personal aid of members of Congress in doing all that was necessary or could be done to secure the passage of the law. The earmarks and taint about the whole transaction are too plain to be ignored and disregarded, and public policy demands that such contracts shall not be enforced. The case of Moyer v. Cantieny, 41 Minn. 242, is cited by the plaintiff in support of his views of the law. Moyer was an attorney at law, and was employed by Cantieny to procure from the government a pardon for Cantieny's son, who was imprisoned in the penitentiary for a term of years. Cantieny agreed to pay Moyer for his services, if successful in securing the pardon, the sum of $200. Moyer performed the services, and was successful. The court upheld the contract upon several grounds; among others, that it would be proper, and often expedient, that an attorney at law examine the case upon which the conviction was based, and see whether, notwithstanding the final judgment of the law, the case may not be of such a nature as to justify the extraordinary power of pardon. To the reasons given by the court in this case, we may add that the statute expressly provides that a person convicted of a crime may, by petition, apply to the governor for a pardon. Such petitioner is usually one who is confined in some prison, and unable to present the petition personally to the governor. Not only this, but it is very seldom that such petition is made by one learned in the law; and it is therefore a legal right which a prisoner has, under such circumstances, to employ an attorney to prepare his petition, present it to the governor for pardon, and have such argument made in behalf of the petitioner, as may be pertinent and advisable. As a petition and pardon are authorized by law, the presentation of a petition duly and legally prepared, accompanied by a legal argument in behalf of the petitioner showing the illegality of his confinement, or its injustice, and that public interests would not be violated by the granting to him of a pardon, cannot be a proceeding contrary to public policy, and certainly a contract for such purpose should not be declared void.

We do not condemn the attempts to secure legislation for legitimate purposes, and in a legitimate manner. Many laws are passed solely for the public good by reason of the presentation of the proper evidence, and arguments addressed to legislative bodies or the proper committees by outsiders, done openly, and without corrupting influences having been exercised. Frequently our educational, charitable, and humane laws are thus procured.

void. McBratney v. Chandler, 22 Kan. 682, 31 Am. Rep. 213. And the court refers for a definition of lobby services to the case of Kansas P. R. Co. v. McCoy, 8 Kan. 543, where it is said that if money be used directly in bribing or indirectly in working up a personal influence upon individual members, which omits to secure a member's vote without reference to his judgment, such use is illegal.

Analogous cases.

In England the question of employing agents to procure the passage of bills does not seem to have been expressly passed upon, but there are a few analogous cases in which contracts to withdraw opposition to the legislature have been passed upon. Lord Howden v. Simpson, 10 Ad. & El. 738; Simpson v. Lord Howden, 9 Clark & F. 61; Vauxhall Bridge Co. v. Earl Spencer, Jac. 64, 2 Madd. 356; Edwards v. Grand Junction R. Co. 7 Sim. 337, 1 Myl. & C. 650.

It has there been held that a promise by a corporation to pay the expenses of soliciting bills in parliament cannot be enforced, but these rulings are placed on the ground that it is not within the power of the corporation to make such a promise, rather than on the ground that the promise is per se void as contrary to public policy. MacGregor v. Dover & D. R. Co. 13 Q. B. 618; East Anglian R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co. 11 C. B. 775, 21 L. J. C. P. 23, 16 Jur. 249.

80 L. R. A.

In this country there have been a few cases of contracts to withdraw opposition to bills. Martin v. Second & Third Street Pass. R. Co. 3 Phila. 316; Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Alf. (Vt.) 294, 15 Am. Dec. 76.

A town has no authority to expend money to send lobbyists to the legislature. Frankfort v. Winterport, 54 Me. 250; Westbrook v. Deering, 63 Me. 281.

A town cannot raise money to defray the expenses of a committee appointed to petition the legislature to annex its territory to that of another municipality. Minot v. West Roxbury, 113 Mass. 1, 17 Am. Rep. 52.

An agreement with a member of the legislature to give him a compensation for procuring the passage of a law is void. Bank of Monroe v. State, 28 Hun. 581.

In an Alabama case it is held that the confirmation of incomplete titles to land obtained from a foreign government is in its nature judicial and not legislative, and therefore a contract by an attorney to do all in his power to prevent the confirmation of one grant and the recognition of another is not void, since the legislature will be better able to act intelligently after hearing all that can be presented on both sides, than it will be if left to work out the problem unaided by the ingenuity of counsel. Hunt v. Test, 8 Ala. 712, 42 Am. Dec. 652.

H. P. F.

There are also many just and meritorious private claims, where, through the neglect or wrongful acts of the government, it would not be improper to present them for allowance and payment, and do so by fair argument and legitimate evidence. Many just individual claims have remained unpaid for years through the neglect of our legislative bodies to give them proper recognition, while corrupt legislation has enabled the lobbyist to succeed, to the injury of the public welfare, and deleterious to private morals. In the language of our Constitution, each person "ought to obtain justice freely and without purchase; completely and without denial; promptly and without delay, conformably to the laws" (art. 1, § 8); but hiring an agent to lobby a large portion of the year, during several years, in procuring legislation securing to an individual government lands, for a comparatively small sum, worth more than $12,000, does not come within that class of contracts which is sanctioned by the law, and does not meet with our approval. The prevalent iniquitous system of lobbying with members of our legislative bodies and public officials is fast becoming a menace to our capacity for self-government. Courts can do but little to stop this most pernicious vice, because it is seldom that such cases come before them; but, when they do appear, there should go forth from the judicial forum only rebuke and the ban of disapproval.

The order for judgment in behalf of the defendant upon the pleadings in the court below is affirmed.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Theodore E. DAVIS

COMMONWEALTH of Massachusetts, Appt.

(164 Mass. 241.)

1. The legislature may authorize the employment of an agent to prosecute claims on behalf of the state which require the procurement of legislation, for a fee contingent on his success.
2. The trust imposed upon the states by the act of Congress refunding the direct tax levied in 1861, to hold the same for the benefit of the persons from whom it was collected, is not binding upon states which paid the tax out of their treasuries, and did not collect it by a levy upon its inhabitants.
3. A state cannot resist payment of compensation to its agent who has under his contract with it become entitled thereto, on the ground that it has promised the United States that it would not make the payment.
4. A waiver of claim to compensation, or estoppel from asserting it, under a contract to collect the direct tax returned by the general government for a state which had paid the tax out of its treasury, for a percentage of the amount received, is not worked by consenting to its receipt on condition that no part of it shall be used to pay the claimant, since such consent will at most amount to an agreement that he shall be paid in some other way.
5. The manner in which compensation shall be paid may be waived or modified without destroying the promise that a certain amount shall be paid where the latter is the principal part of the contract.

(September 6, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Suffolk County in favor of petitioner in a proceeding brought to enforce payment of compensation which defendant had agreed to give to plaintiff for collecting the amount due defendant from the United States as return of direct taxes levied in 1861. Affirmed.

On March 20, 1888, the following resolution by the legislature of Massachusetts was approved by the governor:

"Resolved, that the governor and council are hereby authorized to employ the agent of the commonwealth for the prosecution of war claims against the United States, to prosecute also the claim of the commonwealth for a refund of the direct tax paid under act of Congress approved August 5 in the year 1861, and of the interest paid upon war loans during the period from 1861 to 1865, also to fix his compensation, which shall be paid out of any amount received therefrom."

On February 5, 1890, the governor and council made the following order:

Ordered, that Theodore E. Davis, of Washington, D. C., agent of the commonwealth for the prosecution of war claims against the United States, be, and he is hereby, authorized to prosecute also the claim of the commonwealth for a refund of the direct tax paid under acts of Congress approved August 5 in the year 1861, and that his compensation be 2 per centum of any amount he may collect, which shall be paid out of the proceeds received therefrom, and paid into the treasury of the com-

NOTE.—Attention is called to Wallis v. Smith, 157 U. S. 271, 39 L. ed. 603, in connection with the above case. In it the attorney who prosecuted the claim attempted to compel the comptroller to draw a warrant for the payment of his commission. The state courts decided against him and he appealed to the United States Supreme Court for relief. That court, however, held that having accepted the money upon the condition imposed by Congress he could not compel the state to violate its agreement and pay the money to him. There is a distinction, however, between the two cases in that it does not appear from the Wallis Case where the money which was originally paid to the United States was obtained, while the Davis Case expressly holds that the trust is not binding because the money was originally paid from the treasury, and not raised by taxation.

Upon the subject of validity of contracts to procure legislation, see note to case immediately preceding this one.

monwealth; the same to be in full for compensation and expenses on account of said claim.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Hosea M. Knowlton, Attorney General, and J. Mott Hallowell, Second Assistant Attorney General, for appellant:

If a person is employed to secure the passage of a law appropriating the money for the benefit of the employer, upon a contract by the terms of which the compensation of the person employed is contingent upon the passage of the law, and is payable only out of the money so appropriated, such a contract is void as against public policy.

Barry v. Capen, 151 Mass. 100, 6 L. R. A. 808; Mills v. Mills, 40 N. Y. 546, 100 Am. Dec. 535; Lord Houden v. Simpson, 10 Ad. & El. 793; Powers v. Skinner, 84 Vt. 274, 80 Am. Dec. 677.

A contract for a fixed sum to perform legitimate services is legal; such as drafting a petition to set forth a claim, attending to the taking of testimony, collecting facts or preparing arguments and submitting them to the proper authorities.

Burke v. Child, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 441, 23 L. ed. 628; Frost v. Belmont, 6 Allen, 182; Sedgwick v. Stanton, 14 N. Y. 289; Lyon v. Mitchell, 86 N. Y. 235, 98 Am. Dec. 502; Chippewa Valley & S. R. Co. v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 75 Wis. 235, 6 L. R. A. 601.

A contract, although for contingent compensation, to prosecute a claim against the government, either before one of the executive departments or before a commission or a court of claims, is valid.

Manning v. Sprague, 148 Mass. 18, 1 L. R. A. 516; Stanton v. Embury, 93 U. S. 557, 23 L. ed. 985; Wright v. Tebbitts, 91 U. S. 252, 23 L. ed. 220; Wyllis v. Core, 56 U. S. 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; Sedgwick v. Stanton, supra; Burbridge v. Fackler, 3 MacArth. 407; Denison v. Crawford County, 48 Iowa, 211. Contra, Jones v. Blackledge, 9 Kan. 562, 12 Am. Rep. 506.

But a contract to secure either legislation or the recognition of claims, through personal influence brought to bear upon individual members of the legislature, or through secret or corrupt methods, is illegal and void.

Burke v. Child, Frost v. Belmont, and Lyon v. Mitchell, supra; Harris v. Roof, 10 Barb. 489; Fuller v. Dame, 18 Pick. 472.

A contract to secure the passage of a law when payment is to be contingent upon the passage of such law is null and void; and especially is this so when payment is to be made solely out of the proceeds arising from the passage of the law.

Gil v. Williams, 12 La. Ann. 219, 68 Am. Dec. 767; Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 57 U. S. 16 How. 814, 14 L. ed. 953; Cocquillard v. Beares, 21 Ind. 482, 88 Am. Dec. 862; Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 54, 17 L. ed. 870; Clippinger v. Hepbaugh, 5 Watts & S. 815, 40 Am. Dec. 519; Chippewa Valley & S. R. Co. v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. supra; Wood v. McCann, 6 Dana, 366; Jones v. Blackledge, supra; Spalding v. Ewing, 149 Pa. 875, 15 L. R. A. 727.

There is no presumption of infallibility which prevents the state from pleading that its acts were wrong or its contracts void, if such a plea could lawfully have been made by a citizen.

The doctrine of estoppel does not apply to contracts void from public policy.

Cardozo v. Swift, 113 Mass. 250; Durham v. Presby, 120 Mass. 285; Cranson v. Goes, 107 Mass. 440, 9 Am. Rep. 45.

It can never be within the bounds of legitimate legislation, to enact a special law, or pass a resolve dispensing with the general law in a particular case, and granting a privilege and indulgence to one man by way of exemption from the operation and effect of such general law, leaving all other persons under its operation.

Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326.

It was an implied condition, going to the very essence of the contract made between the petitioner and the commonwealth, that, if payment was to be made upon the terms agreed upon the sum should be secured and delivered in such a shape that payment upon such terms would be possible without involving the commonwealth in a breach of trust. The plaintiff was unable to procure such a delivery. The act which he secured contained the proviso that no part of the money appropriated should be paid out to any attorney or agent under any contract for services then existing or previously made. The petitioner therefore failed to perform the part which was to entitle him to his compensation.

The condition referred to may be construed as one of the trusts attached to this fund.

Urann v. Coates, 109 Mass. 581; Lewin, Tr. p. 109; Dommett v. Bedford, 8 Ves. Jr. 149; Shee v. Hale, 13 Ves. Jr. 405.

Messrs. John D. Long and William Schofield, for appellee:

This contract, having been expressly authorized by a resolve of the legislature, which was approved by the governor, cannot be declared void by the court as against public policy, unless the resolve is outside the constitutional powers of the legislature.

The legislature, acting within the Constitution, is the supreme power upon the question of what is good public policy.

Ackert v. Barker, 181 Mass. 436; Fogg v. Supreme Lodge U. O. of G. L. 156 Mass. 431.

The resolve is clearly within the power conferred upon the legislature by the Constitution, pt. 2, chap. 1, § 4.

Chitty, Prerogatives of the Crown, 95; 1 Hallam, Court History, chap. 8, p. 254.

The legislature may, and frequently does, enact a law for a particular case.

Rice v. Parkman, 16 Mass. 326; Davison v. Johnnot, 7 Met. 388; 41 Am. Dec. 448; Sohier v. Massachusetts Gen. Hospital, 3 Cush. 483; Re Northampton, 158 Mass. 299; Norwich v. Hampshire County Comrs. 18 Pick. 60; Re Kingman, 153 Mass. 566, 12 L. R. A. 417.

The action of the legislature must be presumed to have been taken upon full investigation and upon reasonable grounds.

Com. v. Huntley, 156 Mass. 236, 15 L. R. A. 889; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 228; Davison v. Johnnot, supra; McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 869; Legal Tender Cases, 110 U. S. 421, 33 L. ed. 204; 7 Harvard L. Rev. 129.

This contract cannot be declared void as contra bonos mores. All reasons urged in support of the contract upon the question of public policy apply with greater force upon the subject of morals.

Pollock, Cont. 6th ed. 286; Holman v. Johnson, 1 Cowp. 341; State Treasurer v. Cross, 9 Vt. 289, 31 Am. Dec. 626; Brown v. Anderson, 1 T. B. Mon. 198; Greenwood v. Ourtis, 6 Mass. 358, 4 Am. Dec. 145.

If this contract had been made by the governor and council alone, without a previous act of the legislature, it should not be declared void as against public policy.

A contract wholly between individuals may be void as against public policy, when a similar contract made by individuals with a public officer would be enforced.

Elkhart County Lodge v. Crary, 98 Ind. 238; State Treasurer v. Cross, supra; Canal Fund Comrs. v. Perry, 5 Ohio, 57; Sterner v. Palmer, 34 Pa. 181; State v. Johnson, 52 Ind. 197; State v. Elling, 29 Kan. 397; Wisher v. McBride, 49 Iowa, 220; Pepin County v. Prindle, 61 Wis. 301; Hall v. Marshall, 80 Ky. 552; Beham v. Ghio, 75 Tex. 87; Odneal v. Barry, 24 Miss. 9.

Even if this contract is to be governed by the rules which apply to contracts between individuals, it does not violate any rule of public policy which had been established at the time it was made.

Services rendered in procuring legislation may be legitimate, and a contract for legitimate legislative services is valid.

Chesbrough v. Conover, 140 N. Y. 882; Fuller v. Dame, 18 Pick. 472; Frost v. Belmont, 6 Allen, 152; Blake v. Norfolk County Comrs. 114 Mass. 583; Burke v. Child, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 441, 23 L. ed. 623; Simpson v. Lord Howden, 9 Clark & F. 61; 10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 793.

As the petitioner seeks to recover upon an express contract, the important question is, What kind of services were intended and contemplated as within the scope of the contract.

Barry v. Capen, 151 Mass. 99, 6 L. R. A. 106.

It must be assumed, as a principle of construction, in the absence of proof, that only lawful services were contemplated.

Fuller v. Dame, supra; Beal v. Polhemus, 67 Mich. 130.

The services were open services, and not secret, and this also must be taken as a fact upon the petition and demurrer.

Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 57 U. S. 16 How. 314, 14 L. ed. 953.

Contingent fees for services in judicial proceedings before the court are lawful.

Blaisdell v. Ahern, 144 Mass. 393, 59 Am. Rep. 99.

Also for services before commissioners or courts of claims.

Manning v. Sprague, 148 Mass. 18, 1 L. R. A. 516; Wright v. Tebbitts, 91 U. S. 252, 23 L. ed. 320; Stanton v. Embry, 93 U. S. 543, 23 L. ed. 933; Taylor v. Bemiss, 110 U. S. 42, 28 L. ed. 64.

The obligation of the commonwealth to the petitioner is not affected by the trusts imposed by the act of Congress of March 2, 1891, and 30 L. R. A.

accepted by the commonwealth, by the resolve of April 8, 1891.

The resolve of 1888 authorizes the employment of the petitioner absolutely, and by the employment and obligation to pay the stipulated sum was created. If the fund originally intended for his compensation is diverted by subsequent appropriation, the obligation to pay him is in no way affected.

United States v. Langston, 118 U. S. 389, 30 L. ed. 164; Belknap v. United States, 150 U. S. 588, 37 L. ed. 1191.

If a contract is valid when made, it is not rendered invalid by subsequent legislation.

Boyer v. Tabb, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 546, 21 L. ed. 757; Knight v. Lee [1893] 1 Q. B. 41.

A state which consents to be sued cannot, by subsequent legislation, impair the obligation of its contracts.

Danolds v. State, 89 N. Y. 36, 42 Am. Rep. 277; People v. Stephens, 71 N. Y. 527; Troy & G. R. Co. v. Com. 127 Mass. 43.

Field, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition against the commonwealth, under Pub. Stat. chap. 195, as amended by Stat. 1887, chap. 246. The commonwealth demurred to the petition. The superior court overruled the demurrer, and ordered judgment for the petitioner; and the commonwealth appealed to this court. The order of the governor and council passed February 5, 1890, seems to us within the authority granted by the resolve of March 20, 1889, chap. 39, and we have no doubt that the legislature had the constitutional power to pass the resolve. We cannot declare the contract made with the petitioner by the governor and council void as against public policy, because the legislature has sanctioned it. Whether a similar contract between private individuals, in which the compensation to be paid is made contingent upon success, would be deemed at common law void, as against good morals and public policy, we need not consider. The legislature can determine for itself what public policy requires or permits to be done in the prosecution in any form of claims of the commonwealth against the United States. It is not bound, in fixing the compensation of its agents, to conform to the rules of the common law as interpreted by the courts, or to pass a general law whereby individuals shall be put upon the same footing as the commonwealth in the prosecution of similar claims.

The more difficult question in the case is whether the obligation of the commonwealth to the petitioner is affected by the act of Congress of March 2, 1891, and by the acceptance of the money by the commonwealth from the United States under the resolve of April 8, 1891, chap. 46. By that resolve the commonwealth accepted in full satisfaction of all claims against the United States on account of the collection of the direct tax under the statute of the United States approved August 5, 1861, the money which had been credited to it by the secretary of the treasury of the United States, under the provisions of the statute of the United States, approved March 2, 1891; and the commonwealth further accepted all trusts imposed upon it by the provisions of the last-named statute. The statute of the United States approved March 2, 1891, appropriated the money necessary to reimburse to each state and territory the amount of the direct tax collected under the statute of the United States approved August 5, 1861; and it provided in § 8 that "no money shall be paid to any state or territory until the legislature thereof shall have accepted by resolution the sum herein appropriated and the trusts imposed in full satisfaction of all claims against the United States on account of the levy and collection of said tax, and shall have authorized the governor to receive said money for the use and purposes aforesaid." The trusts imposed by this statute are "that where the sums or any part thereof credited to any state, territory, or the District of Columbia have been collected by the United States from the citizens or inhabitants thereof, or any other person either directly or by sale of property, such sums shall be held in trust by such state, territory, or the District of Columbia, for the benefit of those persons or inhabitants from whom they were collected or their legal representatives." In this commonwealth the tax was not collected by a levy upon the inhabitants, but was paid by the commonwealth out of its treasury, and therefore this commonwealth did not receive the money upon the trust above mentioned. This statute of the United States also provided as follows: "That no part of the money hereby appropriated shall be paid out by the governor of any state or territory or any other person to any attorney or agent under any contract for services now existing or heretofore made between the representative of any state or territory and any attorney or agent. All claims under the trust hereby created shall be filed with the governor of such state or territory and the commissioners of the District of Columbia, respectively, within six years next after the passage of this act; and all claims not so filed shall be forever barred, and the money attributable thereto shall belong to such state, territory, or the District of Columbia, respectively, as the case may be." We consider the statute to mean that no part of the money received shall be paid out to any agent or attorney under any contract for services made before or existing at the time of the passage of the statute, but we doubt whether this provision can be regarded as a part of the trust created by the statute. We are inclined to think that the commonwealth, after it received the money, held it as its own absolute property. It may be doubtful whether this provision of the statute last cited was intended to apply to states which had paid the tax out of their treasuries; but, if it be construed as including all the states, then the reception of the money by the commonwealth under the statute may be held to imply a promise on the part of the commonwealth to the United States, that it will not pay out of the money so received any compensation to any agent or attorney under any contract for services made before the passage of the statute. Assuming this to be so, what is the legal effect of such a promise upon the claim of the petitioner against the commonwealth? If the petitioner has performed his contract with the commonwealth, according to the terms of the contract, has become entitled to his compensation, we think that it would be no defense for the commonwealth that it had promised the United States that it would not pay to him his compensation. It may be conceded that Congress, in appropriating money to be paid out of the treasury of the United States to the states, can impose upon it any trust which it sees fit, and that the states, if they accept the money, are bound to carry these trusts into effect.

The most formidable argument is that as the original resolve provided that the compensation of the agent to be employed "shall be paid out of any amount received" from the United States, and as the order under which the petitioner was employed provided that "his compensation be 2 per centum of any amount he may collect, which shall be paid out of the proceeds received therefrom, and paid into the treasury of the commonwealth, the same to be in full for compensation and expenses on account of said claim," the petitioner, by assenting to the commonwealth's receiving the money under the act of Congress which in effect provided that no part of the money, when received, shall be paid to him, has waived his claim for compensation or is estopped from asserting it. The petitioner not only alleges that he helped to procure the passage of the act of Congress, but in the 8th paragraph of this petition, alleges also the following: "Your petitioner says that very soon after the passage of the said act of Congress of March 2, 1891, to refund the direct tax, the chief clerk of the state auditor's office under the direction of the then state auditor, Mr. W. D. T. Trefry, wrote to him at Washington, and requested him to prepare the form of a resolve for the legislature to pass, in accordance with the requirement of said act of Congress, accepting the sum therein appropriated, and also the proper form of a claim to be made upon the treasury department of the United States for obtaining the money, and that both of said forms were prepared by your petitioner and forwarded, and were used by the commonwealth in obtaining said money," etc. It is plain from these allegations that it must be considered that the petitioner assented to the commonwealth's receiving the money on the terms provided in the statute of the United States of March 2, 1891. The promise implied on the part of the commonwealth, if one is to be implied from its acceptance of the money under such a statute, may certainly be regarded as importing at least a moral obligation, which it may be the duty of the commonwealth to keep. Is it to be inferred that the petitioner, in procuring the passage of the statute, and in assenting to the commonwealth's receiving the money under it, intended to waive altogether his claim for compensation? We think not. Congress, in the statute, did not undertake to declare void any contracts theretofore made between the representative of any state and an agent or attorney. Congress only provided that the money appropriated should not be used to pay for the service of any such agent or attorney. If the money was to be held in trust by the state for the persons from whom the tax was collected, this was a necessary provision if these persons were to be paid in full out of it; but if the money was not held in trust by the state, but belonged to the state absolutely, it is largely a matter of form whether the obligations of the state shall be discharged out of the money received from the United States or out of other funds of the state. We think that due effect can be given to the conduct of the petitioner if we hold that, at most, it amounted to an assent on his part that he need not be paid out of the money received from the United States, and that the commonwealth, so far as he is concerned, may keep its promise to the United States. But the petitioner has in substance performed his part of the contract, and the commonwealth has fully received the benefit contemplated by such performance; and, whether the contract was a provident one or not, the commonwealth ought, in substance, to perform its part of the contract, and we see no legal difficulty in its doing so. The principal thing promised is a certain amount of compensation, to be determined in a certain manner. It is a subordinate and separable part of the contract that the compensation shall be paid out of the proceeds, and this last may be waived or modified by the parties without a cancellation or avoidance of the whole contract. We are of opinion that the commonwealth is bound to pay the amount of the compensation agreed upon from any appropriation that may be made for the purpose. See Pub. Stat. chap. 195, § 4. It was agreed by the attorney general at the argument that, if the demurrer should be overruled, judgment should be entered against the commonwealth.

Judgment accordingly.

WEST VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

J. R. SMITH et al.

v.

Daniel CORNELIUS, Impleaded, etc.: Appt.

(.....W. Va.....)

*1. The property known as the "Berkeley Springs" is the property of the state of West Virginia, the legal title being in the corporation known as the "Trustees of Berkeley Springs" in trust for the public, as provided by chapter 202, Acts 1882.

2. Possession and claim of ownership undisputed by Virginia and this state, of said property for 119 years, raises a presumption of a grant or dedication by Lord Fairfax, as lord of the fee, for public use.

3. Long and uninterrupted possession of land with claim of ownership will justify a presumption of grant.

4. Long and uninterrupted possession of land by the state, with claim of ownership for public use, and user by the public, will raise a presumption of a dedication by the proper owner for such public use.

5. Where a public corporation vested with state property for public use makes a lease of it which is ultra vires, a private person cannot sustain a suit to contest it; this can be done only by the state or the corporation.

6. Directors, as such, of such corporation, cannot sustain such a suit.

7. Nature of office of directors discussed.

8. Liability of directors for wrongful acts referred to.

9. The lease involved in this case, of its property by the trustees of the Berkeley Springs, is ultra vires, and void.

10. A public corporation vested with powers by the state to be exercised for the public cannot transfer to another the exercise of such powers, and make a lease of its property necessary to enable it to execute its functions, without legislative consent.

*Headnotes by BRANNON, J.

NOTE.—As to the nature of public corporations owned by the state, see also State v. Board of Regents (Kan.) 20 L. R. A. 378, and note.
30 L. R. A.

11. Persons dealing with a corporation must take notice of what is contained in the law of its organization, and must be presumed to be informed of the restrictions annexed to the grant of power by the law by which the corporation is authorized to act.

12. A conveyance is made to one and his assigns. In a suit to annul it, until it appear that he has transferred the property such assigns need not be made parties as unknown assigns or otherwise.

13. In a suit to annul an act of a corporation as ultra vires the corporation must be a party.

(November 12, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendant Cornelius from a decree of the Circuit Court for Morgan County in favor of complainants in a proceeding brought to cancel a lease of the Berkeley Springs and to enjoin defendants from proceeding to act in accordance with its provisions. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Flick & Westenhaver and William H. Travers, for appellant:

It was error to allow the amended bill to be filed.

The case was, when this bill was tendered, still at rules for all purposes except for the motion to dissolve.

Gilmer v. Baker, 24 W. Va. 72.

If the application to amend had been made at the right place and time it should have been denied, because the original injunction bill was under oath, the facts set forth in the amended bill were fully known to the plaintiffs when they filed their original bill, and they show no sufficient reason for not having stated the whole of their equity in the original bill, and not having made proper parties to it.

Matthews v. Dunbar, 8 W. Va. 188; Rodgers v. Rodgers, 1 Paige, 424; Whitmarsh v. Campbell, 2 Paige, 67; Norris v. Kennedy, 11 Ves. Jr. 565; Carey v. Smith, 11 Ga. 539; Barton, Ch. Pr. p. 324.

The court below should not have perpetuated the injunction on the hearing of the motion to dissolve it.

Ottawa v. Walker, 21 Ill. 605, 74 Am. Dec.

123; 2 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1682; 1 Barton, Ch. Pr. 468; High, Inj. § 95; 4 Minor, Inst. 902; Code, chap. 125, § 58; Pecks v. Chambers, 8 W. Va. 210.

It was error to dissolve the injunction because the corporation the "Trustees of Berkeley Springs" was not made a party, and to perpetuate the injunction in the absence of the "unknown assigns" of Daniel Cornelius.

The act of 1882, chapter 202, vests the control and management of the property in controversy in the trustees of Berkeley Springs.

Whatever, therefore, may be the rights of a minority of the individual trustees to sue in such cases as may stockholders in private corporations, the necessity for making the trustees of Berkeley Springs a party in its corporate capacity is the same as in cases involving the property of any private corporation.

Davenport v. Doves, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 626, 21 L. ed. 938; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 267; Robinson v. Smith, 8 Paige, 222, 24 Am. Dec. 212; Hervey v. Veazie, 24 Me. 9, 41 Am. Dec. 864; Brewer v. Boston Theatre Props. 104 Mass. 378.

The bill in this case makes the "unknown assigns" of Daniel Cornelius parties defendant, and both the temporary and the perpetual injunction runs against him and his unknown assigns.

These unknown assigns including the one who is named in the answer, were not brought before the court, either by an appearance or by an order of publication. In their absence it may not have been error to refuse to dissolve the injunction on this ground alone, but it certainly was error to hear the case on the merits and to perpetuate the injunction, and this error cannot be waived by the other parties to the suit.

1 Barton, Ch. Pr. pp. 225, 226; Morgan v. Blatchley, 88 W. Va. 155; Hill v. Proctor, 10 W. Va. 59; Donahue v. Fackler, 21 W. Va. 124.

The plaintiffs have no right to maintain this suit.

The facts establish, therefore, a complete, indefeasible, and unconditional title to this property in West Virginia as the successor of Virginia.

The true nature of the state's title is by dedication.

Cincinnati v. White, 81 U. S. 6 Pet. 431, 8 L. ed. 452; Beatty v. Kurts, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 566, 7 L. ed. 521; M'Connell v. Lexington, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 582, 6 L. ed. 735; New Orleans v. United States, 85 U. S. 10 Pet. 662, 9 L. ed. 573; Sarpy v. Municipality No. 2, 9 La. Ann. 597, 61 Am. Dec. 221; State v. Trask, 6 Vt. 355, 27 Am. Dec. 554, note; Price v. Plainfield, 40 N. J. L. 603.

As individuals the trustees are given no powers. They cannot act severally, but must act in meeting as a corporate body.

The title as well as the beneficial ownership, both at law and in equity, are in two persons either in the corporate body, the trustees of Berkeley Springs, or in its cestui que trust, the state of West Virginia, neither of which are concerned in the prosecution of this suit, but both of which are abundantly able to care for themselves.

1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 260.

80 L. R. A.

Similar conditions have often arisen in the administration of what is known as charitable trusts.

To prevent a failure of the trust or to redress a wrong done by the trustee, the King of England, as parens patriæ the state in America, by its executive officers, may bring a suit in either the name of the attorney general or of the state for the administration of the trust, wherein all proper relief can be had.

Atty. Gen. v. Heelis, 2 Sim. & Stu. 76; Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen, 539; Wesson v. Washburn Iron Co. 13 Allen, 101, 90 Am. Dec. 181; Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co. 37 U. S. 12 Pet. 91, 9 L. ed. 1012; Western Lunatic Asylum v. Miller, 29 W. Va. 326; High, Inj. §§ 747, 753, 755; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 1041-1043; Doolittle v. Broome County Supers. 18 N. Y. 155.

Directors are simply the managing agents of the corporation. Their office alone gives them no interest in the corporate property; and they need not, unless a statute or the charter or the by laws so require, be stockholders.

1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 505.

Directors of a corporation as such can act on behalf of the corporation only as a board.

1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 531, 532; Bultrick v. Nashua & L. Railroad, 62 N. H. 413.

Like all other agents, they must act in the name of their principal.

Brewer v. Boston Theatre Props. 104 Mass. 385.

The suit must always at law, ordinarily always in equity, be in the name of the corporation; if the corporation cannot act or will not act,—that is, if its managing agents, the directors cannot or will not,—in the corporate name, then and only then may the stockholders sue in equity.

1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 235-259, especially §§ 238, 240, 241, also 531, 532; Park v. Petroleum Co. 25 W. Va. 108, 111; Park v. New York & E. Oil Co. 26 W. Va. 436; Washington Bank v. Lewis, 22 Pick. 24; Smith v. Hurd, 13 Met. 371, 46 Am. Dec. 690.

The contract of January 23, 1895, was one proper to be made.

When a deed is executed under the official seal of the corporation, as was done here, this creates a strong presumption that those executing it on behalf of the corporation had full and legal authority so to do.

Devlin, Deeds, § 343; Fidelity Ins. T. & S. D. Co. v. Shenandoah Valley R. Co. 32 W. Va. 244.

The term "to alienate" has a technical legal meaning, and any transfer of real estate short of a conveyance of the title is not an alienation of the estate.

1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 466, note 1; Conover v. Mutual Ins. Co. 1 N. Y. 290; 1 Devlin, Deeds, § 247.

Of the necessity for the improvements the trustees are the sole judges.

Perry, Tr. § 511; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 140, 141.

Trustees in cases of that sort may make building leases with the popular covenants for repairs and insurance for a term of ninety-nine years; in fact, such is the usual term where the improvements to be made require a large outlay of money.

Hill, Trustees, 463; Atty. Gen. v. Owen, 10

Ves. Jr. 555, 560; Atty. Gen. v. Cross, 8 Meriv. 539; Atty. Gen. v. Backhouse, 17 Ves. Jr. 293.

If the trustees exercise their discretionary powers in good faith and without fraud or collusion, the court cannot be reviewed or control their discretion.

Perry, Tr. § 511; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 140, 141.

Mr. D. B. Lucas, for appellees:

The lease is in violation of the charter.

The lease grants to Cornelius special privileges, as the proprietor of a future hotel, in the use and enjoyment of the public springs and grounds. This is also a violation of the charter.

It is not only the right, but the duty, of the minority of the directory to restrain the majority from violating the charter or wasting, imperiling, or totally destroying the subject of the trust.

Thompson, Liability of Officers of Corporations, p. 453.

It is possible that the attorney general, had his attention been called to the matter, would have had the power to intervene, in the name of the state, to prevent the destruction and alienation of this property; but he having failed to take proper steps, it became the duty of the directors to interpose, and they, as a corporation, having refused to do so when requested to do so by a minority, such minority was in duty bound to go forward and save the subject-matter of the trust from utter destruction.

Park v. Petroleum Co. 25 W. Va. 103; Crumlish v. Shenandoah Valley R. Co. 28 W. Va. 623.

The violation of the charter is of itself irreparable injury in the eye of the law, and no further averment on that subject would have been necessary.

2 High. Inj. § 1213.

If the directors of a corporation are guilty of a breach of trust, injurious to the corporate property, or to the rights of the shareholders, or a portion of them, and if the corporation refuses to institute the proper proceedings to restrain or redress such injury, one or more of the shareholders may do it in their individual names.

Thompson, Liability of Officers of Corporations. 853, 885; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 246, note, 389, 392; Park v. New York & E. Oil Co. 28 W. Va. 486; Crumlish v. Shenandoah Valley R. Co. 28 W. Va. 623; Boyce v. Montauk Gas Coal Co. 37 W. Va. 73; Sweeny v. Wheeling Grape Sugar & Ref. Co. 30 W. Va. 443.

In such case equity may grant relief at the suit of a single stockholder.

2 High. Inj. § 1203.

The trustees could not delegate their trust.

Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 249.

Brannon, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

J. Rufus Smith, president of the board of trustees of Berkeley Springs, and C. P. Jack, A. R. Unger, and H. C. Harmon, trustees of said board, filed a bill of injunction in the circuit court of Morgan county against Daniel Cornelius and his assigns, unknown to the plaintiffs, alleging that the said board of trustees constituted a corporation with the usual incidents; that they were incorporated by act 30 L. R. A.

of the legislature of West Virginia passed March 27, 1882, it being chapter 203 of the Acts of 1882; that the plaintiffs had applied to all the trustees to unite with them in the bill, but only those who were plaintiffs consented to do so; that, before any general meeting of the board, irreparable injury might be done to the springs, baths, and other public property committed to the care and charge of said trustees; that certain of the trustees had assembled and undertaken to organize themselves into a special meeting, and, by a vote of four out of six trustees then present, made an agreement with Daniel Cornelius, or his assigns, to alien the said public property for the term of 99 years, and, for the improvement thereof and the public use and managing and controlling it, Cornelius and his assigns were by the agreement allowed to to tear down and remove the present bath houses, beautify the grounds, erect new bath houses and an hotel, and manage and control the public property, charging certain rates for certain baths, and certain other rates, to be fixed by Cornelius, for other baths, receiving the returns from the property, and paying the trustees 1 per cent of net profits from the baths. The bill alleged that, for certain reasons given, the meeting of the trustees at which the agreement was made was irregular and unauthorized to make it, and that it was an act in violation of the charter of said board, as found in said act of 1882, and against its prohibition, and that the action of the board, and the lease deed which had been executed under it (thus leasing the public property and its control, and granting Cornelius and his assigns special and peculiar privileges), were violative of the said act, and of the trust reposed in said trustees, and beyond the power of the trustees, and void. The bill prayed an injunction to restrain Cornelius and his assigns from proceeding under the lease, or taking possession of the property, and that the lease be declared void. An amended and supplemental bill was filed, alleging that, since the preparation of the original bill, a meeting had been called of the trustees to take into consideration the subject of enjoining Cornelius from going on with the lease, but that the meeting refused to take any action looking to an injunction. This amended bill made the corporation the board of trustees of the Berkeley Springs a party defendant. Such proceedings were had that a motion to dissolve the injunction awarded upon the bill was overruled, and the injunction was perpetuated, and Cornelius brought this appeal.

A question which at once calls for decision in this case is, Have the plaintiffs a right to maintain this bill? This renders it pertinent, if not indispensable, to ascertain the ownership of the grounds at the town sometimes called "Bath," sometimes "Berkeley Springs,"—the county seat of Morgan county, known as the "Public Grounds," containing those springs whose waters have been famous for their medicinal properties for 150 years,—since that ownership will indicate who is to prevent the illegal alienation of the property and its diversion from its proper use. At this date the court can have no difficulty in asserting that these grounds are the property of the state of West Virginia. Were we back in time near the act of October, 1776, we likely could not assert the public right to this beautiful property with so much confidence. By that act the Virginia legislature (9 Hen. Stat. p. 247), it would seem, simply seized 50 acres of the land of Thomas, Lord Fairfax, the celebrated proprietor of the Northern Neck of Virginia, by vesting it in trustees to be laid off into quarter-acre lots, with convenient streets, and established them as a town by the name of "Bath," and authorized the trustees to sell the lots for building purposes, to "accommodate numbers of infirm persons who frequent those springs yearly for the recovery of their health." The act reciting no consent on the part of Lord Fairfax, nor providing for obtaining his consent, and from its mercifully reserving to him "one large and convenient spring, suitable for a bath," and exempting from sale any lot whereon he may have built a house, would seem to be an act of confiscation. Though it gave him, in mercy, the proceeds of sale, yet it took the fee—the land—from him forever. The act enacted that all the "Warm Springs," as they were then called, except the one reserved to Lord Fairfax, should be vested in the trustees, "in trust to and for the public use and benefit, and for no other purpose whatsoever." Under this clause the trustees marked out that square or plot of ground containing the celebrated springs, and reserved it for public use for the healing and pleasure of the people, as we find it in our day. It is a park of beauty, as well as a fountain of health and pleasure, used and enjoyed by thousands of people every returning summer. The public title cannot be shaken at this late day. Perhaps it was once questionable. Was that old act of 1776 one of forfeiture or confiscation, or did Lord Fairfax consent to it? We do not know. If he consented, it does not appear. Those were troublous times when that act passed. The stately and noble old Lord Fairfax, though the patron and unflinching friend of Washington, so much so that he is said to have declared that, if the American Revolution failed, he would save Washington's neck, was yet to the core loyal to King George, as well we might expect him to be when he bethought himself of the princely landed estate vested in him by descent from ancestors who had received it from royal grant. So loyal was he to the mother country, as Kercheval says, that when he heard at Greenway Court of the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, and foresaw the loss of the English cause, he called a servant to put him to bed, saying, "It is time for me to die." He died December 10, 1781. Perhaps it was because of his known disloyalty to the colonies that this act of 1776 was passed. Was it valid? We need not inquire. The old lord, bent with age, made no resistance to it. Neither did the Reverend Denny Martin, his nephew and devisee, nor those who subsequently claimed under him. The commonwealth of Virginia claimed it to be, as it was in fact long held in actual possession for public use, its property. In March, 1857, we find an act of its legislature recognizing it as public property, as it declared that "the public property in the town of Bath, in the county of Morgan, known as the 'Public Square and Berkeley Springs,' shall be vested in and governed by a board of trustees, whom it named, and whom it constituted a corporation by the name of the "Trustees of the Berkeley Springs," and made sundry provisions of regulation. Thus, the state of Virginia owned it. It passed to West Virginia by the legislative grant of Virginia to the new state, found in chapter 68 of the Acts of 1862-63 of the legislature of the reorganized government of Virginia. West Virginia has always claimed it. We find a resolution of the legislature of 1866 (page 171) calling on the trustees for a plan to secure to the state the revenue from the property, which, it is said, is the property of the state; and chapter 145, Acts 1872, declares: "The public grounds in the town of Bath, in the county of Morgan, known as the 'Public Square,' and the medicinal springs and improvements thereon, shall be and continue under the management and control of a board of trustees, in trust as heretofore, for the public use and benefit." It terminates at a fixed time the powers of the then trustees, and names others, and declares them and their successors a corporation by the name of the "Trustees of the Berkeley Springs," and makes divers provisions for management. By chapter 281, Acts 1872-73, the legislature assumes control over the property, authorizing a lease or mortgage. By chapter 202, Acts 1882, the legislature again declares that the property, in the language of the act of 1857, shall be held by trustees for public use, and appoints trustees, and declares them a corporation. Thus, we find, by the two states, unbroken possession for 119 years, with claim of title and ownership, and no one disputing it. Of course, under the statute of limitations, the state acquired indefeasible title. And so, from this great lapse of time, we would conclusively presume either a grant or a dedication from Lord Fairfax,—either or both, as might be requisite to sustain the state's title. Wheeling v. Campbell, 12 W. Va. 36; Archer v. Saddler, 2 Hen. & M. 370; 1 Lomax, Dig. p. 782, title Prescription; Matthews v. Burton, 17 Gratt. 812; Cincinnati v. White, 31 U. S. 6 Pet. 481, 488, 8 L. ed. 452, 456. See note on dedication in State v. Trask, 27 Am. Dec. 559, covering the whole subject; Cole v. Sprout, 35 Me. 161, 56 Am. Dec. 696; Harris's Case, 20 Gratt. 383.

Question might arise whether the act of 1882 vested title or only control in the body corporate; but as the act of 1857 used the word "vest," and clothed the corporation with title, and the corporation has had continuous being since, though its members have changed, and the act of 1882 continues it "under the management and control of the trustees in trust as heretofore, for public use," I think the dry title is in the corporation; the state being the beneficial owner, with power to resume all title at its will.

Thus, the state being owner, who but it shall, who but it can, through its law officer, the attorney general, or by some action of the legislature, assail the action of the trustees in making the lease to Cornelius? Here is a corporation—not a private joint-stock one, but a public one—managing public property for public ends, with no private interests in it. I here borrow language from Green's Brice, Ultra Vires (page 698), as pointedly expressive of the law on this point, and abundantly supported by authorities from all quarters: "No person may institute proceedings with respect to wrongful acts which, if of a private nature, are not wrongs to himself, and, if of a public nature, do not specially affect himself." Same author says, on page 700, that the attorney general is the party to move, and, until he does so, no other one can. No refusal is here shown, and, if it were, these trustees could not do so for want of interest. This rule is applicable though the act be one ultra vires, says same author (page 708). See Talbot v. King, 32 W. Va. 6; High, Inj. § 747; 1 Beach, Pub. Corp. §§ 18, 351, 352; Springer v. Walters, 189 Ill. 419; State v. Cunningham, 81 Wis. 440, 15 L. R. A. 561; Grant, Corp. 188; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. p. 1100, § 909, note 1; Id. § 910; Seager v. Kankakee County, 102 Ill. 669. See, especially, Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 85 Wis., on page 526. A suit to enjoin the sale and injury of a public park by a city cannot be brought by an individual, but only by the attorney general or properly authorized officer. Moury v. Providence, 16 R. I. 422. It surely cannot be that anybody and everybody can intermeddle in the affairs of the state. If so, where would be the end or limit of litigation and confusion? In some cases, where the attorney general has refused to act, courts have acted at the relation of a citizen, though not interested. State v. Cunningham, 88 Wis. 90, 17 L. R. A. 145, and Id., 81 Wis. 440, 15 L. R. A. 561. It appears that the corporation can contest an ultra vires act of its directory. But, though a private citizen may not do so, it is abundantly settled that where there is a corporate excess of power, which tends to the public injury or defeats public policy, it may be restrained in equity at the suit of the attorney general. Stockton v. Central R. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 52, 17 L. R. A. 97; Green's Brice, Ultra Vires, p. 706; Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1098; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 910; Beach, Inj. § 1844; Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. syl. 4, 85 Wis. 425, particularly 526, 527; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 1043.

But the plaintiffs, to sustain their right to sue, say they are not simply private individuals, but president and members of the board of trustees. This does not give them capacity to sue. Directors are only agents of the corporation to conduct its business, and not the corporation, and, as such, have not a shadow of interest in its property, and need not be stockholders, unless statute or by-law so requires, and cannot act individually, as they have no inherent power as agents, but only collectively as a board. Pennsylvania Lightning Rod Co. v. Cass Twp. Bd. of Edu. 20 W. Va. 860. They are but officers "representing the interests of that abstract legal entity, the corporation, and those who own shares of its stock." Addison v. Lewis, 75 Va. 702; Burr v. M'Donald, 3 Gratt. 215; 4 Thomp. Corp. § 4875; 3 Thomp. Corp. §§ 3904, 3905; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 531. "They can act in behalf of the corporation only as a board. Their power is not joint and several, but joint." Buttrick v. Nashua & L. Railroad, 62 N. H. 413. They are not even proper defendants in suits against the corporation. 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 258. How, then, can we say that the act of the plaintiffs in bringing this suit, without any authority from the board, is even an official act? The corporation could sue to enjoin this lease, but this is not a suit of the corporation. Here, I think, the case of Stewart v. Thornton, 75 Va. 215, very apposite, holding that, as a county school board is a corporation, suit to recover a fund belonging to it must be brought in the corporate name, and that a suit by persons styling themselves "directors of the county school board," could not be maintained. Judge Burks said the suit was not by the corporation, but by Thornton and others, who were members of the board, and acted under the erroneous impression that, because they were such members, they could maintain the suit in their names. He referred to a similar erroneous impression in the case of People v. Fulton, 11 N. Y. 94, where certain persons brought suit in their own names, as trustees of a religious society, instead of in its corporate name, to recover possession of property belonging to it. The court said: "Incorporated religious societies are aggregate corporations, and whatever property they acquire is vested in interest in the body corporate; and while the officers have it under their control or dominion, whatever possession they have is the possession of the artificial person whose agents they are. Though called 'trustees,' they do not hold the property in trust for the corporation or the religious society. The name is simply the title of their office, and their position respecting the corporate property would be the same if they were denominated 'directors' or 'managers.' Their right to intermeddle is an authority, and not an estate or title. They have no other possession than the directors of a bank have of the banking house. This would be so upon general principles relating to the legal nature of corporations, apart from the particular language of the act concerning religious corporations." Other cases are cited by Judge Burks.

The plaintiffs are not stockholders. The state is the only owner of the corporate property, though the technical legal title may be in the corporation. Stockholders of joint-stock companies may sue because of their interest as such, to vindicate corporate rights under certain circumstances stated in Crumlish v. Shenandoah Valley R. Co. 28 W. Va. 623; Park v. New York & K. Oil Co. 26 W. Va. 486; Moore v. Schoppert, 22 W. Va. 282; Rathbone v. Parkersburg Gas Co. 81 W. Va. 798. But those cases are not material in this case, as the plaintiffs do not and cannot sue as stockholders. These trustees are but directors. No matter about their denomination. Their status is that of directors. No authority is cited to sustain such a suit by directors but Thompson on Liability of Officers of Corporations (453), a work not in our library. An adverse brief states that it is based only on the English case of Joint-Stock Discount Co. v. Brown, L. R. 8 Eq. 381. I have examined this case, and it surely decides no such proposition. A judge said the director sought to be charged with liability for acts ultra vires should have called the stockholders together, and laid the matter before them, and requested them to sue, or to have sued himself. This is a mere incidental opinion or dictum arguendo, not authority. It is said this authority in directors to sue must ex-1st, else they would be liable for wrongs of the directors, without means to protect themselves. But, surely, directors not parties to a wrongful act are not liable for acts of others. Without intending to state the rule accurately or fully, in the absence of close investigation, which I do not deem necessary in this case, I apprehend that directors are not liable for the wrongful acts of other directors, unless they connive at them, or the loss is the result of their own neglect of duty, when ordinary care would have averted the loss; and they are not liable for their own acts unless fraudulent or a misappropriation of funds; and they are not liable for error of judgment or want of knowledge. Briggs v. Spaulding, 141 U. S. 132, 35 L. ed. 662; Spring's Appeal, 71 Pa. 11, 10 Am. Rep. 684; 8 Thomp. Corp. §§ 4019, 4109.

Another question very important in the case is whether the action of the board in making the lease to Cornelius transcended its powers, rendering that lease unlawful. For myself, I have had no question since the oral argument, and now, since I have carefully examined, I have no question, but that this lease is an act beyond the powers of the board, and void; and this whether we view the subject as under the common law of corporations or under the act which constitutes the charter of the corporation known as the "Trustees of the Berkeley Springs." View the matter first under the common law of corporations. A corporation is an artificial being, created by the state, for the attainment of certain defined purposes, and therefore vested with certain specific powers, and others fairly and reasonably to be inferred or implied from the express powers and the object of the creation. Acts falling without that boundary are unwarranted,—ultra vires. If the act sought to be done is foreign to the nature and design of the corporation, it is ultra vires; and, though the act be calculated to attain the purpose, yet it may be ultra vires because of the undue means of accomplishing it. "Corporations created by statute must depend, both for their powers and the mode of exercising them, upon the true construction of the act creating them." "The statute, quoad the corporation, is an enabling act, not only in regard to the powers conferred, but also as to the mode prescribed for exercising those powers; and, unless the mode so prescribed is observed by the corporate body, its act will not bind the corporation." Pennsylvania Lightning Rod Co. v. Cass Twp. Bd., 20 W. Va. 860. Here we find a public corporation, vested with valuable land, property of the state, to answer an object deemed to be of public utility by the state, and charged, by the plainest construction, with the duty of retaining in itself absolute possession of it, and commanded in words to manage and control it for public use and benefit, and receive the revenues arising therefrom, vested with these powers not beyond recall, but subject to recall or modification at the will of the legislature; the body composed of particular persons named by the legislature, because, as we must presume, of particular confidence in their personal management of the property and their fitness. We find the board of this corporation making a lease of the property to one individual, not able financially to perform his agreement, for a term of ninety-nine years,—a term longer than the life of nearly every human being then living,—giving him exclusive possession with power to utterly change the grounds, tear down the bath houses, receive all revenues, fix his own charges on certain baths; in short, to hold, occupy, manage, and control, according to his will, the property, in place of the thirteen chosen agents of the state. If we say that any franchise existed in the corporation, and can say that it retained it notwithstanding this lease, yet it was a mere lifeless, hollow shell, as, by the lease, the board deprived itself for a century of the property and means of carrying out the charge committed to the corporation, and transferred the right to do just what it was charged with doing, which is the substance and soul of the franchise. If this lease be valid, what becomes of the right of the state to sell the property or change its policy or mode of managing it for the public use? Even a private corporation, unless authorized by charter to do so, cannot lease or dispose of its franchise or its property needful in the performance of its obligations to the state, without legislative consent; and I should think that, for a stronger reason, a public corporation cannot. Stockton v. Central R. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 52, 17 L. R. A. 27; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 30 L. ed. 83; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 189 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55. It cannot sell out its business and assets. 8 Thomp. Corp. § 3983; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 512, 513; 1 Beach, Priv. Corp. §§ 361-363. The supervisors of Norfolk county and the council of the city of Norfolk leased a ferry for thirteen years, but it was held void. It was held that the right of disposal is not incident to the ownership of property held as a public trust. Roper v. McWhorter, 77 Va. 214. We cannot infer any such power as inherent in this corporation. As well might the directors of the hospitals for the insane or of the penitentiary assume to turn over to others the institutions and powers committed to them, so far as the power to do so is concerned. To allow such a total alienation of functions and property indispensable to execute them would be to enable a body of public agents chosen for fitness to avoid the doing of their duty, and delegate their powers,—create a deputy. In this instance, one man, not chosen by the state, becomes the deputy of thirteen, charged with all their capacities in matters requiring discretion and judgment, and to their exclusion. A public corporation cannot thus delegate powers committed to it. Could any other state institution do so? 1 Beach, Priv. Corp. § 536; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 536. Apart from the question of the lease of the property, they cannot delegate the exercise of their judgment, discretion, and official functions. But this contract effectually does so, by giving Cornelius sole management, yielding only 1 per cent of net profits as a rental.

Another reason against the validity of this lease is that it is flatly in the teeth of a prohibition in the act giving life to this corporation, and direction to its trustees. That act, after creating the corporation, and vesting it with its property and powers, inserts a proviso—I say a proviso—"that the said trustees shall have no power to mortgage or otherwise alien the public property aforesaid, nor shall they grant to the proprietor of any hotel, or any person, any special or exclusive privileges in the use or enjoyment of said springs or public grounds." The word "alien" is used. My search in Abbott's, Anderson's, Bouvier's, and Black's Law Dictionaries does not tell me that the word means anything in law but to transfer property, thus covering a lease as well as conveyance in fee. The transfer of an estate for years as much falls under the broad word "alien" as a transfer of the fee. The lease conveys the very title not in fee, but the whole title, for its term. It is absolute for that term, not a mere deed of trust, with power to end it by redemption. A particular estate is carved out of the fee, and title to it conveyed. Surely, a conveyance of the absolute possession for ninety-nine years is an alienation. It is certainly so within the sense of this proviso; for it cannot be thought that the legislature intended to forbid only the transfer of the fee, and yet allow an absolute lease, carrying the possession and use for so long a period as ninety-nine years. The word "otherwise" here has force. The language is "mortgage or otherwise alien," meaning in any wise alien. The act of 1857 contained this same prohibition. The act of 1878 gave authority to lease, notwithstanding any prior law; but the act of 1882 returned to the policy of the act of 1857, by reinserting the same prohibition as that found in the act of 1857, repealing all acts in conflict, thus affording a reason to say that by the late act it was meant to repeal the act of 1878. And this lease, besides giving Cornelius sole control, confers on him special and exclusive hotel privileges, contrary to the meaning of the act of 1882.

Thus, I am clear in the opinion that the trustees had no color of authority to make this lease. Whether it was advisable or not we have no right to say. No power could authorize it but the legislature. Of this want of power in the trustees, Cornelius and all others must take notice, for no one can plead ignorance of law; and "persons dealing with corporations must take notice of what is contained in the law of their organization, and they must be presumed to be informed as to the restrictions annexed to the grant of power by the law by which the corporation is authorized to act." William v. Fredericksburg, O. & C. R. Co. 27 Gratt. 119; Haden v. Farmers' & M. Fire Assn. 40 Va. 683; Life Assn. of America v. Rundle, 108 U. S. 222, 26 L. ed. 337.

Objection is made that the case was not matured as to the unknown assigns of Cornelius. The bill makes the unknown assigns parties, but does not aver any alienation by Cornelius. His answer does not aver any, or give any names of alienees, but, to the reverse, states a mere hope to effect one. I do not think that if a bill states and exhibits a deed from A. to B. and his assigns, no assigns appearing, it renders it necessary to make them parties. The title is yet in Cornelius, for aught that appears. Multitudes of old deeds convey to a person and his assigns. In a bill to set such a deed aside, must assigns be made parties, it not appearing there are any? I should think not.

It is assigned for error that the court allowed an amended bill to be filed, first, because the original was yet at rules, and there had been no proceeding but a motion to dissolve made in term, at which time the amended bill was tendered, and the amended bill was allowed at a subsequent term, while the original was still at rules. We should construe the statute for amendment liberally. If there was reason for the amendment, I think it could be tendered in term, and allowed in term, though the case on the original be at rules. Was there need of the amendment? Surely, there was, as the corporation was not a party, and it was a necessary party. Like a natural person, if its rights are involved, it ought to be before the court; and, if the parties do not bring it in, the court ought to require it; and the party but did by this amendment what the court would require. Code, chap. 125, § 58. It was an indispensable party. Where the question is one of the validity of its acts, whether it is ultra vires, affecting the corporation itself, it is especially necessary that it be a party. Green's Brice, Ultra Vires, p. 653; Hurst v. Coe, 30 W. Va. 158.

Secondly, it is objected that all the matter of this second bill was known to the plaintiffs before it was filed, and therefore leave to file it ought not to have been given. I do not understand our liberal practice as debarring an amended bill simply because the party, when he filed the original, knew a fact which, by inadvertence, he omitted or did not deem it pertinent. That would be a harsh rule, exacting perfect recollection and judgment at the first step. It is within the discretion of the court. If unreasonable delay in asking to file it exists, and there is no excuse, doubtless leave might be refused.

But here there was no unreasonable delay in tendering it. This bill charged that the board had sanctioned the lease, by subsequent action, and it made the corporation for the first time a party. It was proper to charge this ratification, and absolutely indispensable to bring the corporation before the court, and this alone justified the amended bill.

It is objected that the defendant entered a motion to dissolve, and that, instead of passing on it alone, leaving the injunction standing, the court went on to perpetuate it, while the original bill was at rule, and the case not on the hearing docket. The case was in the court, though at rules. Cornelius filed his answer to the original bill on May 14, and on May 17 the motions to dissolve and to file amended bill were argued; and on June 25 leave to file amended bill was allowed, and the defendants appeared, waived further service of process, and adopted, as their joint and several answers to both bills, the answer already filed by Cornelius; and the case was heard on the bills, said answer, replications, depositions, and exhibits, and argument of counsel. No continuance asked. No objection to hearing, though that hearing, as just shown, was on the merits. No denial of the matter of the amended bill was made. No one wanted to take further steps in the case. Under these facts, as the bill was purely an injunction, we cannot say it was error to perpetuate the injunction, instead of merely overruling the motion to dissolve. I do not see how any prejudice resulted to Cornellius, as all the facts were in. He made no show of presenting any, or altering the phase of the case.

There was a demurrer to the bill. It ought to have been sustained, and the bill dismissed, for want of capacity and interest in the plaintiffs to maintain it; and, as the only plaintiffs had no interest, the bill was not amendable by the substitution or introduction of the state or corporation as plaintiffs. There was no community of interests between them to be brought in. Opinion in Stewart v. Thornton, 75 Va. 221.

We sustain the demurrer and dismiss the bill. It is needless to say that this is without prejudice to a suit by the state or the corporation.

FLORIDA SUPREME COURT.

WIGGINS & JOHNSON, Appts.,

v.

Robert WILLIAMS.

(.....Fla.....)

- *1. Where several interlocutory orders are made in a case, and only certain ones specified are appealed from, the appellate court will be confined to the orders mentioned in the appeal.
2. Constitutional provisions similar to that contained in the 3d section of the Bill of Rights of our Constitution were designed to preserve and guarantee the right of trial by jury in proceedings according to the course of the common law as known and practised at the time of the adoption of the Constitution.
3. The guaranty of the right of trial by jury was intended to provide for the future as well as the past, and to secure the right of such trial in all cases, whether then or thereafter arising, which would properly fall within those classes of rights to which by the course of the common law the trial by jury was secured.
4. The legislature may create new rights unknown to the common-law procedure of trial by jury, and may organize new tribunals without common-law powers to adjudicate such rights without a jury, but a mere change in the form of an action will not authorize the submission of common-law rights in the trial of which according to the course of the common law a jury was employed, to a court in which no provision is made to secure a jury trial.
5. Courts of chancery are not strictly courts according to the course of the common law, and the constitutional guaranty of trial by jury has no reference to such courts in their recognized sphere of equity jurisdiction, nor does such guaranty extend to all cases at law, as there are proceedings in many inferior courts, and many summary proceedings in vis privus courts, in which a jury was never employed.
6. Prior to the enactment of chapter 3884, act of 1889, the court of chancery in this state had no jurisdiction to enjoin a mere trespass upon land and boxing and scraping the trees thereon for the purpose of making turpentine, or the removal of turpentine therefrom, where no other element of irreparable injury, or recognized ground of equity jurisdiction, was alleged.

* Headnotes by MARRY, Ch. J.

NOTE.—For injunction against trespass to cut timber, see note to Carney v. Hadley (Fla.) 22 L. R. A. 233.

30 L. R. A.

7. Prior to the adoption of our first Constitution in 1839, securing and continuing the right of trial by jury, the court of chancery in this state did not exercise jurisdiction to enjoin the mere cutting and removal of the ordinary growth on timbered lands; but in order to give the court jurisdiction in such cases it had to be further shown that the injury was irreparable in the sense that full and adequate relief could not be obtained at law, or that the trespass went to the destruction of the property in the character in which it had been enjoyed, or that it was necessary to prevent a multiplicity of suits.
8. In a suit to enjoin a trespass upon land the complainant must have title, and, as a general rule, be in possession, in order to successfully invoke the aid of the court by injunction; and if his title is brought in question under facts showing a substantial dispute in reference thereto, the court ordinarily will not enjoin, or if an injunction has been already granted will not make it perpetual until there is a settlement of the title at law, unless in cases of serious and irreparable injury the aid of the court is invoked to preserve the property pending a legal suit already instituted to test the legal right.
9. The 2d section of the act of 1889 (chapter 3884) extends the powers of the court of chancery in the cases therein provided for beyond the limits of its jurisdiction as exercised when the right of trial by jury was first secured in this state by constitutional provision, in this, that claimants of timbered lands are given the right to have an injunction against the trespasses mentioned, without reference to the character of the injury as being irreparable, or the adequacy of the legal remedy for the wrong, or actual possession of the claimant.
10. When a court of chancery in the exercise of its general or concurrent jurisdiction assumes the right to dispose of a case for one purpose, it will proceed to the settlement of the entire case, even to the adjustment of legal rights connected therewith, which otherwise would be beyond its powers.
11. While in all cases in which a court of equity, prior to the adoption of the Constitution, assumed jurisdiction for one purpose and proceeded to a complete adjustment of the entire case, even to the settlement of strictly legal rights, the right of trial by jury as to the legal question cannot be invoked, still it is not in the power of the legislature to confer upon the court of equity jurisdiction to grant injunctions in matters with respect to which its jurisdiction did not extend before the adoption of the Constitution, and draw to it a legal cause of action cognizable exclusively at law and triable by jury, and have both disposed of by the court without a jury.

12. To the extent of conferring jurisdiction on the court of chancery to enjoin the trespasses mentioned in the 2d section of the act of 1890, supra, by a mere trespasser without color of right or authority, the act can operate; but to the extent of awarding an account for damages for a mere trespass cognizable at law, and in respect to which the court of equity had no jurisdiction independent of the statute, it impairs the right of trial by jury according to the course of the common law and secured by the Constitution.

(January 4, 1896.)

A PPEAL by defendants from orders of the Circuit Court for Suwannee County enjoining them from taking turpentine from lands alleged to belong to plaintiffs and directing them to pay damages for injuries already committed by them. First order affirmed, second reversed.

Statement by Mabry, Ch. J.:

A bill in chancery filed in this case by appellee against appellants alleges, in substance, that the complainant and one Robert T. Hall, prior to the 20th day of September, 1890, were engaged in the business of producing and manufacturing naval stores, resin, and spirits of turpentine in Suwannee County, and became indebted to their commission merchants, Ellis, Young, & Co., in a sum of money which they could not at the time pay, and, in order to pay and fully settle said indebtedness, conveyed to said Ellis, Young, & Co. the interest of complainant and Hall in certain lands that were boxed for turpentine purposes. The interest conveyed, it is alleged, was the yield of turpentine from the boxed trees on the lands, situated in said county and described in the bill, and containing about 100,000 boxes. It is averred that Hall was settled with and went out of the business, and that the settlement with Ellis, Young, & Co. left the other turpentine lands and business of complainant unencumbered on account of any indebtedness to Ellis, Young, & Co., or other parties in Savannah, with whom complainant and Hall had traded; that after the settlement with Ellis, Young, & Co., which was on the 20th of September, 1890, complainant had, among lands boxed for turpentine, certain lands, the trees on which had lately been boxed—called virgin dips—containing about four and one-half crops, of 10,000 boxes to the crop; the lands containing the four and one-half crops being described in the bill. It is further alleged that complainant was the lessee of the turpentine timber and sole owner of the property described; that Ellis, Young, & Co. sold and conveyed their said interest acquired from complainant and Hall to the defendants about the 20th of September, 1890, and a few days thereafter they entered upon, took possession of, and worked the four and one half crops belonging to complainant, and had gathered the turpentine from the boxed trees thereon, carried it off the land, and appropriated it to their own use, and that they had continued to do so to the commencement of the suit; also that they had been distilling the turpentine into resin and spirits with other turpentine from their own trees, and claim the whole as their own, and that they did so after being forbidden by complainant, and after they knew that they were not the boxed trees purchased from Ellis, Young, & Co.; that defendants may claim that their purchase from Ellis, Young, & Co. contains the land in section 82, which is true, but the same is township 8, R. 11 S. and E., and not in section 82, township 2, R. 11 S. and E., which contains the new boxes of complainant. The bill alleges the yield of the four and one-half crops and states the value of the spirits and resin at $900 each dripping, and that the drippings should have commenced on the 20th of September, 1890, the boxes being then full and continued monthly thereafter. It is further claimed that defendants should account to complainant for the turpentine so wrongfully taken from his crops, and that they should be enjoined from interfering with his turpentine lands. It is also stated on the belief of complainant that defendants had no property in the county except what they procured from Ellis, Young, & Co. and their stock, fixtures, and what spirits and resin they had on hand gathered from their own and complainant's said crops. The prayer of the bill is for an injunction, an account, and for process. A demurrer to the bill was overruled.

The answer filed by defendants admits that complainant and Hall were engaged in the business stated; that they became indebted to Ellis, Young, & Co., and, in order to settle with them, conveyed the property as alleged in the bill, upon which there were about 100,000 turpentine boxes. It is alleged that the property alleged to have been conveyed to Ellis, Young, & Co. was not the only property sold and conveyed to them, but complainant and Hall failed in business and conveyed their entire turpentine interest as copartners, consisting of turpentine still, wagons, mules, and all utensils and equipments belonging to said turpentine business, to Ellis, Young, & Co., the purpose and intent of complainant and Hall being to surrender, without reservation, their entire copartnership interest in said business to Ellis, Young, & Co.; that complainant and Hall, having become greatly indebted and insolvent, and being desirous of settling their indebtedness, transferred to Ellis, Young, & Co. their entire turpentine interest, and by said transfer made a full settlement of their copartnership indebtedness to Ellis, Young, & Co. Further, that it was not true that complainant was the owner of the property which he claims in his bill; that the land was held by lease by the firm composed of complainant and Hall, and the trees thereon had been boxed for turpentine purposes, and worked by them in their turpentine business, together with all the balance of their turpentine farm which they conveyed to Ellis, Young, & Co. in settlement of said indebtedness to them, and that it was the purpose and intent of complainant and Hall to convey their entire interest in the land to which complainant lays claim, and that said land was left out of the deed to Ellis, Young, & Co. through inadvertence on the part of complainant; that complainant furnished the description of the property contained in the deed to Ellis, Young, & Co., and his purpose and intent were to give a full and complete description of all property owned by him and Hall as partners, whether held in fee, or by lease for years, and that when such description was given, complainant represented that it embraced the entire copartnership property of himself and Hall. It is then alleged that defendants purchased the same property from Ellis, Young, & Co., believing at the time, from representations of complainant, that they were purchasing the entire turpentine farm which had been owned and worked by complainant and Hall; and defendants allege that complainant himself believed at the time that the land which he now claims was described in the deed to Ellis, Young, & Co.; that discovering, sometime afterwards, the omission of the land from the description in the said deed, he set up a pretense that he had not conveyed it, and still had title to the same; that said pretense and claim on the part of complainant were a fraud upon the rights of defendants, as they were led to believe by complainant and Hall that said land was conveyed to Ellis, Young, & Co., and that they (defendants) had acquired by their said purchase the entire turpentine farm aforesaid. Also, that the purchase from Ellis, Young, & Co. by defendants comprised the same property sold to them by complainant and Hall, but the deed to defendants was not executed until a considerable length of time after they had taken possession of the land and worked the said turpentine farm. The allegations of the bill as to the yield of turpentine and the value of the same are denied. Replication was filed to the answer.

On the application of complainant an injunction was granted, and defendants moved to dissolve it. On the hearing of this motion the court ordered that upon defendants filing a bond in the sum of $1,000 the injunction granted be so far modified as to allow defendants to dispose of the manufactured naval stores, spirits, and resin distilled by them from crude turpentine taken from the boxes claimed by complainant.

Certain proceedings were had in reference to a violation of the injunction, but they claim no attention on the present appeal.

At the hearing of the contempt proceedings the court made a further order permitting the defendants to file a bond in the sum of $1,400, in lieu of the one already filed by them, and upon the filing of such bond, that the injunction be dissolved. The $1,400 bond was filed, and subsequently complainant filed a petition setting forth that said bond was insufficient to indemnify him in the damages he had sustained up to that time, and that if the court was satisfied on the showing to be made that said bond was insufficient, that defendants be enjoined from shipping or disposing of any of the manufactured naval stores then in the county or state, and also that they be prohibited from shipping or removing said naval stores from the premises claimed by complainant, or in any way disposing of them until the final hearing of the case.

The cause was referred to an examiner named, to take the evidence in the cause and report it to the court. An order was also made that the question of the sufficiency of the bond as to amount be referred to the master, who was directed to take proof and report whether or not the bond for $1,400 was sufficient to indemnify complainant against loss by reason of the alleged trespasses of defendants, should it finally appear that complainant was entitled to damages, and what amount of damages had accrued from the 20th of September, 1890, to the date of the order. Also whether or not said bond was sufficient, in the event complainant recovered at the final hearing, to indemnify him against loss to the date of the order, and such further damages as might result to him by reason of the continued hacking of the trees and removal of crude turpentine from the premises in question, from the date of the order to the first day of October, 1891.
30 L. R. A.

The master reported his findings on the question of the sufficiency of the bond, and also the evidence upon which such findings were based. There was filed with this report of the master a written agreement of counsel for the respective parties to submit the evidence reported to the court on all the issues in the cause, reserving the right for either party to urge objections to testimony deemed to be improper. The cause was set down for final hearing, and at that time counsel for defendants made a motion to strike out and suppress certain portions of the evidence, and some of the evidence objected to was suppressed.

On the 11th of June, 1891, the day fixed for the final hearing of the cause, the court made an order directing the examiner, appointed to take the evidence in the cause, to forthwith report the evidence of the witnesses, or show cause why he failed to do so. On the 13th of June, 1891, the court proceeded to hear the cause upon the pleadings and the evidence reported, with the agreement of counsel, and decreed that complainant was entitled to recover damages for the removal by defendants of turpentine from the four and one half crops of turpentine boxes mentioned in the bill, both before and since the institution of the suit, and the master was ordered to take an account of the damages to complainant by reason of the removal of turpentine from said crops by defendants from the 20th of September, 1890, until the hearing, and that in taking said account he was to use the pleadings and proofs already taken, and such other evidence as he might deem advisable, or that the parties might offer.

In response to the order of June 11, 1891, to report the evidence of witnesses, or show cause for failure to do so, the examiner reported, on the 15th day of that month, that he proceeded to take testimony in the cause, and counsel for complainant offered no evidence before him as examiner, but postponed the taking of evidence until the testimony in reference to the sufficiency of the bond was taken, and that after such testimony had been taken, counsel for both parties entered into the agreement which had been reported with the testimony taken, and that after the receipt of the order of June 11 he notified counsel that he was ready to take the evidence as examiner, but none was offered. Under the reference in the decree of June 13, 1891, the master examined witnesses on behalf of complainant, and reported that defendants had removed from the four and one-half crops of boxes claimed by complainant crude turpentine which, when manufactured into spirits and resin, would amount to $5,235.16, on which the profit was $1,500. The account stated by the master in favor of complainant was $1,500, and the account and testimony upon which it was based were reported to the court. Motion was made by complainant to confirm the report of the master, and for decree for the amount reported, and that defendants be enjoined from further trespassing upon the boxes in question. On the hearing of the motion to confirm the report and for decree, the court, on application of defendants, granted ten days' time in which to file exceptions to the master's report, and also ordered that defendants be enjoined from further dipping crude turpentine from the four and one-half crops of turpentine boxes claimed by the complainant. This order was made on the 1st of July, 1891. Exceptions to the report were filed, and upon a hearing some were overruled and some sustained in part, and the cause was again referred to the master to take an account and report to the court. Such report was made and notice given to confirm it. Thereupon defendants entered an appeal from the decree rendered on the 13th of June, 1891, directing the master to take an account of the damage to complainant by reason of the removal of turpentine from the boxes claimed by him, and also from the decree rendered July 1, 1891, enjoining defendants from further dipping turpentine from said boxes.

Further facts bearing on the facts involved in the appeal taken are stated in the opinion.

Mr. B. B. Blackwell for appellants.

Messrs. J. L. Frases and M. E. Broome, for appellee:

Where trespass to property is a single act, and is temporary in its nature and effects, so that the legal remedy of an action at law for damages is adequate, equity will not interfere, but if the trespass is continuous in its nature, and repeated acts of trespass are done or threatened, although each of such acts taken by itself may not be destructive or inflict irreparable injury, and the legal remedy may therefore be adequate for each single act if it stood alone, the entire wrong may be prevented by injunction.

Mills v. New Orleans Seed Co. 65 Miss. 391; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 245; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1857.

An injunction will be granted against a trespass producing mischief which reaches to the very substance and value of the estate, and goes to the destruction of it in the character in which it is enjoyed.

White v. Flannigan, 1 Md. 525, 54 Am. Dec. 668; Musselman v. Marquis, 1 Bush, 463, 89 Am. Dec. 637; Lyon v. Hunt, 11 Ala. 295, 46 Am. Dec. 216.

A court of equity having jurisdiction to enjoin a continuing trespass, this jurisdiction draws with it the power to award compensatory damages therefor.

1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 236, 237; see note and authorities.

80 L. R. A.

Mabry, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The interlocutory orders appealed from in this case are those made on June 13 and July 1, 1891, and we are confined to them at this time. Mann v. Jennings, 25 Fla. 780; Lensjety v. Coe, 26 Fla. 49. The order of June 13 determined that appellee (complainant below) was entitled to recover damages by reason of the removal by appellants of turpentine from the four and one-half crops of boxes on the lands, described in the bill of complaint, both before and since the institution of the suit, and the master was ordered to take an account of said damages from the 20th of September, 1890, when, it is alleged, appellants took possession of said turpentine boxes, until the hearing, and in taking the account the master was directed to use the pleadings and proofs then in the cause, and such other evidence as he might deem advisable, or that the parties might offer. After the cause was at issue, an examiner named was appointed to take the testimony therein, and there was also an order directing the master, but not designating any one as such, to take testimony and report as to the sufficiency of a bond that had been executed in the case by appellants under the order of the court. The examiner named acted, without objection of the parties, as master in taking testimony as to the sufficiency of the bond, and such testimony extended to the entire merits of the case. By agreement of counsel, the testimony taken on the question of the sufficiency of the bond was reported to the court as the testimony on all the issues in the case, and it was upon such testimony that the decree of June 13 was made.

It is insisted for appellants that the testimony did not authorize this decree, and further that the legislature could not confer upon the circuit court, exercising chancery jurisdiction, power to award damages for a mere trespass. The inhibition of such legislation, it is claimed, is found in the third section of the bill of rights, that "the right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate forever." Counsel also claims that the court erred in that portion of the order directing the master to take further evidence in stating the account, in view of the agreement of counsel reported by the master.

The case arose since the adoption of the Act of 1889 (chapter 3384), the second section of which provides "that courts of chancery shall entertain suits by any person or persons claiming any timbered lands in this state to enjoin trespasses on said lands by the cutting of trees thereon or removal of logs therefrom, or by boxing or scraping the said trees for the purpose of making turpentine or by removal of turpentine therefrom; and in such suits the said courts shall cause an account to be taken of the damage to the complainant from any of said trespassing before or after the institution of the suit, and decree payment of the amounts shown due upon such accounting by the defendant or defendants." The title of this act is "An Act to Extend the Powers of the Courts of Chancery in This State." The testimony, conceded to be proper for the consideration of the court, sustains, in our opinion, the claim of appellee to four and one half crops of turpentine boxes described in the bill. The deed from appellee and R. T. Hall to Ellis, Young, & Co. does not embrace the four and one-half crops, and the written leases, with the indorsements thereon, admitted to be proved, and in evidence, show title in appellee.

The answer sets up as a defense that appellee and Hall sold all the property employed by them in their turpentine business to Ellis, Young, & Co., who sold the same property to appellants, and that through inadvertence the four and one-half crops in question here were left out of the deed to Ellis, Young, & Co. Appellants' deed from Ellis, Young, & Co. does not embrace the said four and one-half crops, and while there is some testimony, brought out on cross-examination of a witness for appellee, tending to show that appellee intended to convey all of his property employed in the turpentine business, including the crops in question, to Ellis, Young, & Co., still the record evidence supports appellee's title, and there is no sufficient parol testimony to overcome it. Appellants did not testify in the case, and in fact offered no evidence to sustain their allegation that they purchased from Ellis, Young, & Co. the crops claimed by appellee. The testimony places appellants in the attitude of trespassers without claim or color of right upon the lands on which the boxed trees claimed by appellee are situated. The second contention for appellants under the decree of June 18 is, that the statute directing an account of damages for a mere trespass upon land in a court of chancery is unconstitutional, as such causes of action were triable by jury according to the course of the common law, and secured to the parties by the 3d section of the bill of rights in our Constitution. By the second section of the statute referred to it will be seen that claimants of timbered lands are given the right to invoke the injunctive power of the court to prevent the cutting of trees thereon, the removal of logs therefrom, the boxing or scraping the trees for the purpose of making turpentine, or the removal of turpentine from the land; and in such suits the court is directed to cause an account to be taken of the damage to the complainant resulting from the trespasses before or after the institution of the suit, and to decree payment of the amounts shown to be due upon such accounting. In the case of Reddick v. Meffert, 32 Fla. 409, the 2d section of the act in question, as applied to the facts of that case, was recognized as being valid, though its validity to any extent was not there questioned and no claim for damages was involved. The question presented in the present case demands a consideration of the constitutional guaranty of a jury trial for the assessment of damages under the conditions disclosed by this record. The 3d section of the bill of rights does not grant the right of trial by jury, but secures or guarantees such right existing at the time of the adoption of the Constitution. We said in Buckman v. State, 34 Fla. 48, 24 L. R. A. 806, that "when the right of trial by jury is secured by constitutional provision in general terms like ours, and without any qualification or restriction, it must be understood as retained in all those cases that were triable by jury ac-ording to the course of the common law. The provision in the first Constitution, framed in 1838, 'that the right of trial by jury shall forever remain inviolate,' contemplated, without doubt, a continuation of jury trials in all cases where such was the practice at the common law, and there is nothing in the subsequent Constitutions to indicate a change of meaning in this respect." We have also held that the 10th section of the bill of rights was designed as a guaranty and protection of the citizen against a trial, except in certain enumerated cases, unless upon presentment or indictment by such grand jury as was known at the common law. English v. State, 31 Fla. 840; Donald v. State, 31 Fla. 255. The authorities with great uniformity hold that constitutional provisions like ours were designed to preserve and guarantee the right of trial by jury in proceedings according to the course of the common law as known and practiced at the time of the adoption of the Constitution. Plant River S. B. Co. v. Roberts, 3 Fla. 102, 43 Am. Dec. 178, and notes; Blanchard v. Raines, 20 Fla. 437; Tabor v. Cook, 15 Mich. 322; Plimpton v. Somerset, 33 Vt. 283; North Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Snowden, 42 Pa. 488, 33 Am. Dec. 580, and note; Norris's Appeal, 64 Pa. 275; Watts v. Griffin, 6 Litt. (Ky.) 244.

Courts of chancery were not, strictly speaking, courts of common law, their jurisdiction and practice being derived principally from the civil law where no jury was employed; hence the guaranty of a trial by jury has no reference to such courts in their sphere of equity jurisdiction, nor does it extend to all cases at law, as it is perfectly clear that there were many proceedings in common-law courts in which juries were not used. Proceedings in laying out highways and in assessing damages for the taking of private property for public use (Beekman v. Saratoga & S. R. Co., 3 Paige, 45, 23 Am. Dec. 679; Koppikus v. State Capitol Comrs., 16 Cal. 248; Ross v. Irving, 14 Ill. 171), the proceedings in many inferior courts and many summary proceedings in ancient courts, were without jury, and the guaranty of jury trial has no application to them. It is not necessary to go into an enumeration of such cases. A principle has been established in the jurisprudence of this country, that new rights unknown to the common-law procedure of trial by jury may be created, and provision made for their determination in the absence of a jury, without violating the constitutional provision we are considering. But while it may be competent for the legislature to create new tribunals without common-law powers to adjudicate new rights without a jury, the mere change in form of an action will not authorize the submission of common-law rights to a court in which no provision is made to secure a trial by jury. A statute in Michigan provided that any person claiming title to lands through the auditor general's deed, executed upon a sale thereof for nonpayment of taxes, may file a bill in chancery to quiet his title without taking possession thereof. It was claimed that the statute gave the right to file the bill against one in possession of the land, although at the time of the adoption of the Constitution under which the act was passed trials of titles to lands were at law. It was held that the statute did not have such meaning, but if it did, the legislature was powerless to enact it. Judge Cooley, speaking for the court in Tabor v. Cook, supra, said: "The present is one of those cases where a right to a trial by jury existed when the Constitution was formed, and this right must therefore 'remain.' Whatever proceeding the legislature authorizes for the determination of adverse claims, the right of the party in possession to a jury trial must be kept in view, and some mode pointed out by which he can demand it. In civil cases at law, including ejectment suits, provision is made by statute and rule whereby either party may obtain a jury; but there is no such provision for cases in chancery, and it is only in special cases, where the court desires the verdict of a jury for its own guidance, that issues in chancery can go before a jury at all. A defendant in chancery, therefore, cannot waive a jury by failing to demand it, because no mode is provided by which any such demand can be made, and a statute which should authorize a bill in the nature of an ejectment bill, without at the same time providing some means by which a jury could be had at the option of defendant, would be in palpable disregard of the provisions of the Constitution which we have quoted." This court said in Flint River S. B. Co. v. Roberts, 2 Fla. 102, 48 Am. Dec. 178, that this guaranty of trial by jury "has always been an object of deep interest and solicitude, and every encroachment upon it has been watched with great jealousy." The language of the court in Plimpton v. Somerset, supra, is that, "the Constitution was intended to provide for the future as well as the past, to protect the rights of the people by every safeguard which their wisdom and experience then approved, whether those rights then existed by the rules of the common law or might from time to time arise out of subsequent legislation. All the rights, whether then or thereafter arising, which would properly fall into those classes of rights to which by the course of the common law the trial by jury was secured, were intended to be embraced within this article. Hence it is not the time when the violated right first had its existence, nor whether the statute which gives rise to it was adopted before or after the Constitution, that we are to regard as the criterion of the extent of this provision of the Constitution, but it is the nature of the controversy between the parties, and its fitness to be tried by a jury according to the rules of the common law, that must decide the question." This opinion also very properly states that the Constitution "should be construed in the spirit with which it was enacted, and that any restriction of its present application should come, not through legislation and judicial construction, but from the direct, constitutional, and considerate action of the people."

By looking into the jurisdiction of the court of chancery we find that originally it did not entertain jurisdiction to enjoin a trespass upon land, but in analogy to the remedy of injunction to prevent waste dependent upon privity of title between the parties, courts of equity extended the remedy to cases of trespass without privity of title under certain conditions. This extension of the remedy of injunction took place prior to the formation of our first Constitution in 1839. The basis of the jurisdiction in such cases was the probability of irreparable injury, the inadequacy of a pecuniary compensation, the destruction of the estate in the character in which it had been enjoyed, or the prevention of a multiplicity of suits where the right to the property was controverted by numerous persons, each insisting on his individual right. The courts were practically unanimous in announcing the rule that something more than a mere trespass, susceptible of adequate remuneration, must be shown before a court of equity will exercise jurisdiction. Carney v. Hadley, 32 Fla. 344, 23 L. R. A. 283; Indian River S. B. Co. v. East Coast Transp. Co. 28 Fla. 387; Burns v. Sanderson, 13 Fla. 381; Jerome v. Ross, 7 Johns. Ch. 315, 11 Am. Dec. 484; McMillan v. Ferrell, 7 W. Va. 223; Gauss v. Perkins, 3 Jones, Eq. 177, 69 Am. Dec. 728; Powell v. Cheahire, 70 Ga. 357, 48 Am. Rep. 572; 2 Beach, Inj. §§ 1125 et seq.; Kerr, Inj. pp. 112 et seq.

What will constitute irreparable injury, when a pecuniary recovery at law will be inadequate, or what will amount to a destruction of the estate in the character in which it has been held, has given rise to diversity of opinion. In England, after the court of chancery commenced to grant injunctions in cases of trespass, the remedy was eventually pressed to the extent of restraining the cutting of timber trees, on the ground that it was destruction and took away the substance of the land, but without some element of irreparable injury in addition to the mere destruction of the timber the court did not exercise such jurisdiction up to the time of the formation of our first Constitution in 1838, and in the early settlement of this country when forest timber was abundant, the court of chancery would not enjoin and dispose of the entire case unless irreparable injury, such as a verdict at law could not adequately atone for, was alleged and shown. It must be conceded that lately the jurisdiction of the court has been extended in some cases to the prevention of injury or destruction of the ordinary growth on timbered lands upon the theory that it is destructive of the estate, but an examination of the cases shows, in our opinion, that up to the time when the right of trial by jury in common-law cases was secured here by constitutional provision, an injunction would not be granted in chancery to restrain the cutting of ordinary growth on timbered lands unless the injury was irreparable, so that full and adequate relief could not be granted at law, or where the trespass went to the destruction of the property as it had been enjoyed, or where it was necessary to prevent a multiplicity of suits. In addition to the cases already cited, the following bear upon the jurisdiction of the court of chancery to enjoin the cutting of timber:

Green v. Keen, 4 Md. 98; Shipley v. Ritter, 7 Md. 408, 61 Am. Dec. 371; Powell v. Rawlings, 38 Md. 239; Thompson v. Williams, 1 Jones, Eq. 176; Cowles v. Shaw, 2 Iowa, 496; Stevens v. Beekman, 1 Johns. Ch. 318; Tatler v. Humble, 67 Ind. 444; Hillman v. Hurley, 82 Ky. 626.

It was a fundamental doctrine of the court of equity, as stated by Pomeroy (vol. 1, § 181, Eq. Jur.) that when the court "has jurisdiction over a cause for any purpose, it may retain the cause for all purposes, and proceed to a final determination of all the matters at issue. For this reason, if the controversy contains any equitable feature or requires any purely equitable relief which would belong to the exclusive jurisdiction, or involves any matter pertaining to the concurrent jurisdiction, by means of which a court of equity would acquire, as it were, a partial cognizance of it, the court may go on to a complete adjudication, and may thus establish purely legal rights and grant legal remedies which would otherwise be beyond the scope of its authority." The decision of this court in the case of Griffin v. Fries, 23 Fla. 178, was based upon this principle. The same principle is announced in Montgomery & F. R. Co. v. McKenzie, 85 Ala. 546.

It may be safely stated that in all those cases in which a court of equity, prior to the adoption of the Constitution guaranteeing a trial by jury, and by virtue of its general or concurrent jurisdiction for one purpose, had proceeded to a complete adjudication of the entire case, even to the settlement of legal rights which otherwise would be beyond its powers, it cannot be successfully claimed that the guarantee of trial by jury exists as to the legal right. But while this is true, we are not prepared to recognize the power in the legislature to confer equity jurisdiction to grant injunctions in matters in respect to which such jurisdiction did not exist before the adoption of the Constitution, and draw to it a legal cause of action cognizable exclusively in a law court and triable by jury, and have both tried by the court without a jury. Should such a power be conceded in the legislature, it is not perceived where the limit of the power to abolish jury trials in cases existing according to the course of the common law would be placed. Scott v. Neely, 140 U. S. 106, 85 L. ed. 358.

Before reverting to the statute under which the bill was filed in the present case, further reference to the practice of chancery in granting injunctions to restrain trespasses is necessary. The complainant was required to have title and as a general rule be in possession before he could ask the aid of the court, and if his title was brought in question by the defendant, the court ordinarily would not enjoin, or, if an injunction had been granted, would not make it perpetual, until the title had been established at law. A mere denial of complainant's title was not sufficient, and to entitle the defendant to a trial at law his title must be based upon facts showing a substantial dispute of complainant's title. 2 Beach, Injunctions, §§ 1189, 1140. It was also early established that the court would interfere by injunction to prevent a trespass in some cases where the title was in dispute, but this was in aid of a suit at law, and the court interfered, not for the purpose of trying the legal title, but to preserve the property pending the suit over the title at law. West v. Walker, 3 N. J. Eq. 279, note A; Shubrick v. Guerard, 2 Desauss. Eq. 616; Wadsworth v. Gorre, 96 Ala. 227; Bacon v. Jones, 4 Myl. & C. 433.

It is evident, we think, that the statute had extended the powers of the court of chancery, 80 L. R. A.

in the cases provided for, beyond the limit of its jurisdiction as exercised when the right of trial by jury was secured in this state by constitutional provision. Claimants of timbered lands are given by the statute, not only the right of an injunction for the trespasses mentioned, but also to have an account taken of the damages resulting therefrom, and this without reference to the character of the injury as being irreparable, the solvency of the trespasser, or the adequacy of the legal remedy for the wrong. The bill, it is apparent, does not allege a case sufficient for the interposition of a court of chancery to assess damages independent of the statute, and while it may be conceded that in reference to the entire subject-matter of recognized equitable jurisdiction the legislature may modify or expand the powers of the court as to such matters, this cannot be done to the extent of depriving a party of a right guaranteed to him by the Constitution. No doubt can exist that the recovery of damages for a mere trespass was by legal remedy according to the course of the common law in which a jury was employed. The action of trespass was a well-recognized legal remedy, and at the time of the adoption of our first Constitution the court of chancery did not enjoin a mere trespass and assess the damages incident thereto, unless some recognized equitable ground for the court's interference was alleged and shown. The statute authorizes an injunction against certain specified trespasses on timbered lands, and to the extent of conferring the power to prevent, under the conditions prescribed, the unauthorized entry upon such lands and committing the acts mentioned, we see no good reason why it may not be done; but to the extent of authorizing a court of equity to assess damages for a trespass under the conditions prescribed by the statute, is unauthorized. It deprives a party of the right of trial by jury in a case according to the course of the common law when the Constitution was adopted. Of course where the court of chancery, in the exercise of either its general or concurrent jurisdiction, assumes the right to enjoin a trespass, it may, in order to do complete justice in the case, assess the damage resulting therefrom. But it is not competent, in our judgment, for the legislature to confer the power to enjoin in cases where it did not exist before, and at the same time draw to it the incidental power to assess damages in a case clearly triable at law by a jury.

Our conclusion is, that the order of June 13, directing the master to assess, was erroneous. We do not discover any error in the order of July 1, 1891, the only other order from which an appeal was taken. In the order of June 13, the court, in directing an account of the damages to be taken, restrained appellants from further trespassing upon the premises of appellee, and the order of July 1 was made on motion to confirm the master's report of the damages. As has been stated, the testimony placed appellants in the attitude of trespassers without color of title, and on such showing the court was authorized to arrest any further trespassing upon the premises in question. This order will be affirmed. The order of June 13, 1891, directing an account of the damages to be taken, will be reversed, and it is so ordered.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT.

STATE of New Jersey, as rel. Albert RUSHWORTH,

v.

JUDGES OF INFERIOR COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF HUDSON COUNTY.

(.....N. J.....)

*1. Congress is without power to interfere with or control state courts, except in so far as the Federal courts have appellate jurisdiction.

*2. Congress cannot, without the consent of the state, constrain the state courts to entertain or act upon applications for naturalization.

*3. It is competent for the state legislature to prescribe and limit the times when and during which such applications may be heard in the state courts.

*Headnotes by VAN SYCKEL, J.

(August 30, 1895.)

APPPLICATION for a writ of mandamus to compel defendants to naturalize the relator. Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Before Van Syckel and Lippincott, JJ.

Mr. W. D. Daly for relator.

Van Syckel, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

An act of the legislature passed March 26, 1895, entitled "An Act Concerning Naturalization and Regulating Procedure in Cases of Naturalization in Courts of This State, and Establishing Uniform Fees of Clerks and Judges in Naturalization Cases," provides, NOTE.—Powers of state legislatures and courts in respect to naturalization.

There has been some conflict in opinion upon the question how far state jurisdiction over naturalization remained after the adoption of the Federal Constitution. But it is now regarded as settled that except in relation to purely state citizenship the state is wholly subject to the Federal law upon the subject.

In one of the earliest cases it was held that the United States Constitution did not deprive the individual states of the concurrent authority to naturalize citizens, although such authority cannot be exercised so as to contravene the rules established by the authority of the Union. The true reason for investing Congress with power to naturalize was to guard against too rigid instead of too liberal a mode of conferring the rights of citizenship as states cannot exclude citizens who have been adopted by the United States, but they can adopt citizens upon easier terms than Congress may deem expedient to impose. Collet v. Collet, 2 U. S. 2 Dall. 294, 1 L. ed. 387.

But in United States v. Villati, 2 U. S. 2 Dall. 370, 1 L. ed. 419, Iredell, J., says that, had the question not previously occurred, "I should be disposed to think that the power of naturalization operated exclusively as soon as it was exercised by Congress."

And in Chirac v. Chirac, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 259, 4 L. ed. 234, Chief Justice Marshall says, that the power of naturalization is exclusively in Congress does not seem to be, and certainly ought not to be, controverted, and that ruling is referred to as a decision in Houston v. Moore, 13 U. S. 5 Wheat. 49, 5 L. ed. 30, but in Holmes v. Jannison, 39 U. S. 14 Pet. 593, 10 L. ed. 606, it is referred to as a dictum.

In Scott v. Sandford, 60 U. S. 19 How. 398, 15 L. ed. 691, it is stated that we must not confound the rights of citizenship which the state may confer within its own limits, and the rights of citizenship as a member of the Union. It does not by any means follow, because he has all the rights and privileges of a citizen of a state, that he must be a citizen of the United States. He may have all of the rights and privileges of the citizen of a state, and yet not be entitled to the rights and privileges of a citizen in any other state. Nor have the several states surrendered the power of conferring these rights and privileges by adopting the Constitution of the United States. Each state may still confer them upon an alien, or any one it thinks proper, or upon any class or description of persons; yet he would not be a citizen in the sense in which that 30 L. R. A.

word is used in the Constitution of the United States, nor entitled to sue as such in one of its courts, nor to the privileges and immunities of a citizen in the other states. The rights which he would acquire would be restricted to the state which gave them. The Constitution has conferred on Congress the right to establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and this right is evidently exclusive, and has always been held by this court to be so. Consequently, no state, since the adoption of the Constitution, can, by naturalizing an alien, invest him with the rights and privileges secured to a citizen of a state under the Federal government, although, so far as the state alone was concerned, he would undoubtedly be entitled to the rights of a citizen, and clothed with all the rights and immunities which the Constitution and laws of the state attached to that character. And that statement is quoted with approval in Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 160, 36 L. ed. 109.

In Golden v. Prince, 3 Wash. C. C. 814, the court in speaking of bankruptcy laws stated the exercise of the power of the state governments to pass bankruptcy and naturalization laws as incompatible with the grant of power to Congress to pass uniform laws upon the same subjects.

If a state could superadd to the naturalization laws of Congress any requisites before the alien would be relieved from the incapacities of alienage and acquire the privileges and immunities of citizenship in the several states, then the Constitution has failed, notwithstanding its plain expressions, to give Congress the power to establish uniform rules of naturalization. Com. v. Towles, 5 Leigh, 743.

A state has no power to pass a law concerning citizenship which contravenes the acts of Congress on that subject. Barzilas v. Hopkins, 2 Rand. (Va.) 276.

The passage of the act of Congress nullified existing state regulations upon the subject. Rouche v. Williamson, 3 Ired. L. 141.

In State v. Manuel, 4 Dev. & B. L. 25, the court, in contrasting naturalization and emancipation, states that the former belongs to the government of the United States.

The power of passing laws on the subject of naturalization exclusively pertains to the general government. Davis v. Hall, 1 Nott & M'C. 232.

The right of citizenship in its enlarged sense was after the adoption of the Constitution, not only a national right, but from the nature of the case it must necessarily be governed by the law of the whole nation, and after Congress exercised the power conferred upon it, it no longer fell within among other things, that "no person shall hereafter be naturalized or admitted to be a citizen of the United States by any court of this state within the thirty days next preceding any national, state, municipal, general, special, local, or charter election." The relator was refused naturalization by the Hudson county pleas solely upon the ground that his application was made within thirty days next preceding the election for municipal officers in the town of West Hoboken. The only question submitted to the judgment of this court is whether the above-recited provision of the act of 1895 is constitutional.

The Federal Constitution provides that Congress shall have power to establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States." Article I, § 8, cl. 4. Judge Story, in his Commentaries on the Constitution (vol.

2, § 1104), says: "It follows, from the very nature of the power, that, to be useful, it must be exclusive, for a concurrent power in the states would bring back all the evils and embarrassments which the uniform rule of the Constitution was designed to remedy. And accordingly, though there was a momentary hesitation, when the Constitution first went into operation, whether the power might not still be exercised by the states, subject only to the control of Congress, so far as the legislation of the latter extended, as the supreme law, yet the power is now firmly established to be exclusive." Mr. Hamilton, in the Federalist (No. 82), says that the power given to Congress to establish a uniform rule of naturalization throughout the United States must necessarily be exclusive, because, if each state had power to prescribe a distinct rule, there could be no uniform rule. It is entirely settled that the scope of state legislation. Lynch v. Clarke, 1 Sandf. Ch. 584.

Since the authority which any state court can have on this subject is derived from the law of the United States, Congress alone can prescribe uniform rules of naturalization. Re Gladhill, 8 Met. 168.

A state cannot make a subject of a foreign government a citizen of the United States. This can only be done in the mode provided by the naturalization laws of Congress. Lanz v. Randall, 4 Dill. 425. In that case the court says: "I am of opinion that no state can make the subject of a foreign prince a citizen of the state in any other mode than that provided by the naturalization laws of Congress; that when the Constitution says that Congress shall have power to establish a uniform rule of naturalization, . . . it designed these rules, when established, to be the only rules by which a citizen or subject of a foreign government could become a citizen or subject of one of the states of this Union, and thereby owe allegiance to such state, and to the United States, and cease to owe it to his former government."

The grant by the states to the general government of power over naturalization vested the power exclusively in Congress, and no power remained in the states to change or vary the rules of naturalization Congress established, or to authorize any foreign subject to denationalize himself and become a citizen of the United States without compliance with the conditions Congress has prescribed. Minneapolis v. Reum, 56 Fed. Rep. 576.

But a state may confer such rights of citizenship as it pleases so far as relates to itself only. But it can make citizenship of the United States only according to the rules prescribed by act of Congress. Re Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443, 84 Am. Dec. 700.

Power of Federal government to confer power on state courts.

There has been considerable doubt, which is not wholly settled yet, as to the position which the state courts occupy in the naturalization scheme. It is held by some judges that the Federal government can confer no power on the state courts, and that therefore the power which they exercise must have been derived from some other source. Other judges have held that state courts when acting as courts for naturalization are for this purpose courts of the United States. The true theoretical constitutional position of state courts when so acting is hard to define, but their practical position has been so long recognized and acted upon that it must be regarded as established if the courts have not defined it.

80 L. R. A.

In California it was held that the provision of the Constitution giving Congress the power to establish a uniform rule of naturalization means that the rule when established shall be exercised by the states. Congress has no power to confer jurisdiction upon state courts. Ex parte Knowles, 5 Cal. 804.

But an Arkansas case held that Congress after prescribing a uniform rule of naturalization may lawfully give state courts jurisdiction in cases arising under it. State v. Penney, 10 Ark. 621.

In Re Ramsden, 18 How. Pr. 435, the court holds that the state legislatures can confer no power upon the state courts in naturalization proceedings, but states that "the power of legislation upon this subject existed in the states prior to the Constitution. . . . The power has been superseded by an act of Congress passed under the Constitution. Congress adopts the state tribunals as the agents to exercise the power, as they would have performed it before. The concurrence of the state legislatures, expressed or fairly implied, adds the sanction of the state to this delegation of power. Whether such tribunals are bound to act may admit of controversy. That their acts are lawful, if they do so, seems undeniable."

In People v. Sweetman, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 371, in a proceeding for perjury under the state laws alleged to have occurred in naturalization proceedings, the court holds the indictment cannot be maintained because the court was at the time a court of the United States, and that rule was followed in Re Christern, 11 Jones & S. 523.

But in other cases it has been held that state courts may punish for perjury committed before them in naturalization proceedings. State v. Whittemore, 50 N. H. 245, 9 Am. Rep. 194.

In Rump v. Com. 30 Pa. 475, it is held that the statute of Geo. II., chap. 7, followed by the Pennsylvania act of 1743, made naturalization of foreigners a subject of judicial cognizance before the state courts; and this jurisdiction has never been taken away. The Constitution of the United States does not propose to change the jurisdiction but only the rule of its exercise, and the acts of Congress expressly leave it to the courts, so that false swearing in such a proceeding is perjury.

When we admit that Congress cannot authoritatively confer judicial powers on state courts, we only mean that Congress cannot compel them to entertain jurisdiction in any case, or to perform any judicial act. But we do not mean that Congress cannot empower them to perform any judicial act to which they are competent, and for the performance of which they have an adequate inherent jurisdiction. The argument which denies no state can pass naturalization laws. Houston v. Moore, 18 U. S. 5 Wheat. 48, 5 L. ed. 30; 1 Kent, Com. § 424. The United States statute provides for the naturalization of aliens by application to a circuit or district court of the United States, or a district court or supreme court of record of any of the states, having common-law jurisdiction and a seal and clerk. The United States government has thus selected the state courts as one of its agencies to hear and act upon applications for naturalization.

While it must be conceded that the state can pass no law which regulates the subject of naturalization, or the order of business in the Federal courts, the solution of the controversy in this case, in my judgment, turns upon the question whether the state may not regulate the order of business in its own courts in relation to this subject, or refuse altogether to per-to state tribunals the power to perform the process of naturalization erroneously assumes, for its premises, that the performance of that act renders it necessary for them to be invested with some jurisdiction in addition to that which they already possess. This, however, is an evident mistake, and hence the fallacy of all the reasoning that is based upon such an erroneous assumption. Morgan v. Dudley, 18 B. Mon. 693, 68 Am. Dec. 735.

As to the duty of state courts to act, it has been held that—

The powers of naturalization given to the state courts are naked powers which impose no legal obligation on courts to assume to exercise them, and such exercise is not within their official duty on their oath to support the Constitution of the United States. And the state legislature may lawfully prohibit the courts from taking jurisdiction of such cases. Re Stephens, 4 Gray, 561.

Congress has no power to impose the duty of naturalization upon state courts. Special courts may absolutely refuse to act. And if they assume to act they may prescribe other conditions than those required by act of Congress, and may reject the application unless satisfied of the proper qualifications of the applicant. Re Lab, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 723.

In State v. Penney, 10 Ark. 621, the court says: "Whether the state courts are bound to exercise concurrent jurisdiction permitted to be retained by them even when enjoined upon them by act of Congress is not altogether well settled. Some strong intimations to the contrary have been given by the judges of the Supreme Court of the United States and in some instances the courts of the particular states have refused to exercise this jurisdiction."

In State v. Managers of Elections, 1 Bail. L. 215, it was held that under the state laws an Indian cannot be admitted to citizenship so as to be entitled to a vote. But the effect of the United States laws upon the subject are not discussed. And a like ruling seems to have been made in State v. Bass, 7 Yerg. 74, although there the question was not directly before the court but the case turned upon the question of the right to tax an Indian.

What state courts may act.

Congress has conferred power to naturalize, upon state courts having common-law jurisdiction and a seal and clerk (Act 1842, April 14). Under this statute it is not necessary that the court have all the common-law jurisdiction that pertains to all classes of actions, but simply that it exercise its powers according to the course of the common law; but it must have, in addition to a seal, a clerk distinct from the judge, charged with the duty of keeping a true record of its doings and afterwards mit its courts to entertain applications for naturalization. Article 3, § 2, of the Federal Constitution provides "that the judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and the treaties made or which shall be made under their authority to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states; between a state and citizens of another state; between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states; and between a state or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens or subjects." Whether Congress can permit the state courts to exercise jurisdiction over any of these subjects has been a source of much controversy. Martin v. Hunter, 14 U. S.

of authenticating them. Re Dean, 33 Me. 489, 13 L. R. A. 229.

A court which is authorized to hear and determine all complaints and prosecutions in like manner as justices of the peace, and has jurisdiction of all civil suits and actions cognizable by a justice of the peace, is a court of common-law jurisdiction. Re Gladhill, 8 Met. 168.

The court with some common-law jurisdiction may naturalize. So the city court of Lexington may do so. Morgan v. Dudley, 18 B. Mon. 693, 68 Am. Dec. 735.

In one Illinois case it was held that a court which is limited in its jurisdiction as to the action, the persons, and the amount, is not a court of common-law jurisdiction within the meaning of the act of Congress. Knox County Supers. v. Davis, 63 Ill. 421.

But in a later case it was held that courts need not possess general common-law jurisdiction, but they must be courts of record for all purposes. People v. McGowan, 77 Ill. 649, 20 Am. Rep. 254; Dale v. Irwin, 78 Ill. 170.

A court having power to punish misdemeanors at common law according to the course of the common law may entertain an application for naturalization. United States v. Lehman, 39 Fed. Rep. 49.

A state court in order to be able to entertain naturalization proceedings need not have all common-law jurisdiction. It is sufficient if it may exercise a part of that jurisdiction. United States v. Power, 14 Blatchf. 223.

In Texas the county court has power to naturalize aliens. Ex parte Burkhardt, 18 Tex. 470.

In New York county courts have jurisdiction of naturalization proceedings. People v. Pease, 30 Barb. 593.

In California county courts have power to naturalize. Re Conner, 39 Cal. 93, 2 Am. Rep. 427.

A court of record for special, and not general, purposes cannot naturalize. Mills v. McCabe, 44 Ill. 194.

A probate court having no common-law jurisdiction cannot entertain an application for naturalization. Ex parte Tweedy, 22 Fed. Rep. 84.

But People v. Pease, supra, cites the case of Re Smith, 3 Law Gaz. 237, to the effect that probate courts in Ohio have jurisdiction in naturalization proceedings.

In Re Gladhill, 8 Met. 168, the court was of opinion that the court had jurisdiction of naturalization proceedings, although it had no separate clerk. Ex parte Cregg, 2 Curt. C. C. 98; State v. Whittemore, 50 N. H. 245, 9 Am. Rep. 196.

But the weight of authority is the other way. State v. Webster, 7 Neb. 492. H. P. F.

1 Wheat. 804, 4 L. ed. 97. Justice Washington, in Houston v. Moore, 18 U. S. 5 Wheat. 27, 5 L. ed. 25, said that "he held it to be perfectly clear that Congress cannot confer jurisdiction upon any courts but such as exist under the Constitution and laws of the United States, although the state courts may exercise jurisdiction on cases authorized by the laws of the state, and not prohibited by the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal courts." In Martin v. Hunter, supra, this was accepted as a correct exposition of the Constitution; and the court in that case denied that Congress could vest any portion of the judicial power of the United States, except in courts ordained and established by itself. The contrary view was deemed irreconcilable with the context of the Constitution, "the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court, and in such inferior courts as Congress may from time to time ordain and establish." Article 3, § 1.

The conclusion to be drawn from these declarations of the Federal courts, I think, must be that Congress is without power to interfere with or control state courts, except in so far as the Federal courts have appellate jurisdiction. It is immaterial to consider whether the granting of naturalization is strictly a judicial function. If Congress has, without the consent of the state, the power to impose such a duty upon the state courts, there is no legal limit to the authority of the national legislature to burden the state courts with such a volume of business as to essentially impair their capacity to exercise the judicial functions for which they were created by the state. The inability of Congress thus to fetter and disable the instrumentalities provided by the state for carrying on the operations of its own government was the ground upon which the power of the Federal government to lay an income tax upon the salaries of the state judiciary was denied in Buffington v. Day, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 113, 20 L. ed. 122. Chancellor Kent, in his Commentaries, says that in Houston v. Moore, 18 U. S. 5 Wheat. 1, 5 L. ed. 19, the supreme court disclaimed the idea that Congress could authoritatively bestow judicial powers on state courts. In that case it is said that it is perfectly clear that Congress cannot confer jurisdiction upon any courts but such as exist under the Constitution and laws of the United States, although the state courts may exercise jurisdiction in cases authorized by the laws of the state, and not prohibited by the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal courts. The learned author declares that in the case last cited the judges of the supreme court very clearly intimated that the state courts were not bound, in consequence of any act of Congress, to assume and exercise jurisdiction in such cases, and he regards the doctrine as well founded that Congress cannot compel a state court to entertain jurisdiction in any case. 1 Kent, Com. 899, 400, 402. Such has been the view adopted by state courts, where the question has been involved. Haney v. Sharp, 1 Dana, 442; Ex parte Pool, 2 Va. Cas. 276. The national courts have recognized their want of authority, in cases not within the appellate jurisdiction of the United States, to issue injunctions to the state courts, or in any other manner to interfere with their jurisdiction or proceedings. Diggs v. Wolcott, 8 U. S. 4 Cranch, 179, 2 L. ed. 587. "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively or to the people." U. S. Const. Amend. 10. There has been no surrender by the states of the right to establish their own courts, to define and limit their jurisdiction and functions, and to regulate and control them in all respects, except as to appellate jurisdiction, and as to subjects within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. The state establishes its own courts, defines their jurisdiction, appoints its judges, and pays their salaries. Whether the judges of the state courts shall act in applications for naturalization, or execute any other like authority with which they may be lawfully invested, is, in my opinion, exclusively within, and subject to the will of, the legislative branch of the state government.

My conclusion, therefore, is that it is competent for the state legislature to forbid state courts, altogether, to entertain or act upon applications for naturalization; and therefore it could lay any restraint, regulation, limitation, or condition upon the practice in such cases which it might deem expedient or proper. No right is claimed, or could be conceded on behalf of the state, to interfere in any respect with the subject of naturalization in the Federal courts. This inability on the part of the Federal government to constrain the state courts to act in no wise impairs the exclusive power of the United States over the subject of naturalization. The power of Congress to create inferior courts and such other agencies as it may deem necessary for the complete exercise of this branch of its exclusive authority is not circumscribed. In my judgment, it was within the power of the state legislature to pass that section of the act which has given rise to this discussion, and the application for a writ of mandamus to the court below must be refused, with costs.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

ORIENTAL HOTEL COMPANY, and W.
G. Nieman et al., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

John GRIFFITHS et al.

(.....Tex.....)

1. A petition to enforce a mechanic's lien is not insufficient because it fails to set forth plans and specifications which are made part of an alleged contract declared upon.
2. Holders of liens cannot be divested of them and their liens transferred to the proceeds of a sale on foreclosure of another lien to which they are not made parties.
3. Lien creditors are concluded as to the sufficiency of the completion of a building, in the absence of fraud or mistake, by its acceptance by the architect and the owner.
4. The description of the property in a decree foreclosing a lien which properly describes the lot and building is not made insufficient by adding "and except the land and the basement and foundation" of the building.
5. Failure to pay a debt in stock when stock was due and demanded makes the entire demand due in money.
6. A resolution of directors included in a deed of trust, to the effect that this shall constitute a prior and first lien, is inoperative to change the relation of that lien to others as fixed by law.
7. The time of the inception of mechanics' liens is the time to which they relate in giving them effect, under Sayles's Civ. Stat. art. 3171, as amended in 1889, saving mortgages and other encumbrances on the land at the time of the inception of other liens, and art. 3179, placing all liens upon an equal footing, so that a mortgage upon an incomplete building is subject to all mechanics' liens which accrue before its completion.

(November 4, 1895.)

ERROR by defendants W. G. Nieman, Herman N. Haeussler, St. Louis Trust Company, Oriental Investment Company, and William Spellman, to review a judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals for the Fifth Supreme Judicial District affirming a judgment of the District Court for Dallas County in favor of plaintiffs in an action by John Griffiths, Baker & Smith Company, and Eaton & Prince Company, to enforce mechanics' liens against the Oriental Hotel in priority of claims against the same property held by the plaintiffs in error. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

The following briefs were filed in the court of civil appeals:

Meurs. Barry & Etheridge, for appellants Nieman, Haeussler, Spellman, St. Louis Trust Co., and Oriental Investment Co.:

A petition seeking a foreclosure of a mechanic's lien which sets out in hac verba the contract made the basis of claim of lien is vulnerable to special exception for failure to set forth, as a necessary part of such contract, the plans and specifications of the architect, the contract pleaded showing on its face that such plans and specifications formed a part thereof.

Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, § 184; Lombard v. Johnson, 76 Ill. 599; Glacius v. Black, 50 N. Y. 145, 10 Am. Rep. 449; Burch, Ins. pp. 29, 80.

Whereas there are various liens filed, in conformity to the statute on the subject, by different mechanics and lumber and material men against the same house for work done and lumber and material furnished and used in the construction thereof, a proceeding and sale of the house upon any one of the liens will release it from the whole of them, and the purchaser at the sheriff's sale will accordingly hold it entirely discharged therefrom.

Rev. Stat. (Sayles' Addendum), arts. 3172, 3173, 3179; Anshutz v. McClelland, 5 Watts, 487; Werth v. Werth, 2 Rawle, 151; Burt v. Kurtz, 5 Rawle, 246; Durham v. Mayo, 82 Ga. 192; Hoidritter v. Elizabeth Oil-Cloth Co. 6 Fed. Rep. 188; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 196, 253; 2 Jones, Liens, § 1492; Betterton v. Eppstein, 78 Tex. 448.

An instrument showing upon its face that another writing is made a part thereof is inadmissible as evidence of a contract unless accompanied by such other writing.

Burch, Ins. pp. 29, 80; Farmers' & M. F. Ins. Co. v. Meekes, 10 W. N. C. 806; Lycoming Mut. Ins. Co. v. Sailer, 67 Pa. 108; Byers v. Farmers' Ins. Co. 85 Ohio St. 606, 35 Am. Rep. 623.

Joint creditors, whether by record, specialty, or simple contract, must all join in an action to recover the debt which they respectively hold together, and it is not competent for one or more, or any number less than the whole number interested, to sue.

Stachely v. Peires, 28 Tex. 329; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Hollingsworth, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) § 173; Tate v. Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co. 13 Gray, 79; Middlebrook Bros. v. Zapp, 78 Tex. 29; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 392, 402; McLean County Coal Co. v. Long, 91 Ill. 617; Yell v. Snow, 24 Ark. 554.

Under a building contract stipulating that the value of the work shall "be paid for when the work shall be finished entire and complete, and accepted by the architect," an acceptance by the architect does not conclude the parties from proving that, as matter of fact, the work has not been "finished entire and complete" in accordance with the contract.

Glacius v. Black, 50 N. Y. 145, 10 Am. Rep. 449; 2 Sutherland, Damages, p. 520.

If appellee Griffiths, prior to entering into his contract and prior to the furnishing of any material or the performance of any labor thereunder, knew that the Oriental Hotel Company was then negotiating a loan from the St. Louis Trust Company, to be secured by a deed of trust upon its properties, the proceeds thereof to be held by the said St. Louis Trust Company, to be by it paid to various mechanics and materialmen toward the completion of the Oriental Hotel building as the work thereupon progressed urged upon the said St. Louis Trust

NOTE.—For superiority of mechanics' liens over prior mortgages, see Wimberley v. Mayberry (Ala.) 14 L. R. A. 805, and note.

30 L. R. A.

Company the consummation of such loan, or encouraged such consummation by acts and conduct sufficient to induce a reasonable belief on the part of said trust company, that appellee relied for payment or part payment upon the fruits of said loan rather than upon his mechanic's lien, and that the said trust company, so urged or so induced, made said loan, a part whereof appellee, knowing how the same was procured and secured, demanded and received, then the lien afforded by the deed of trust given to secure such loan is superior to any lien existing in favor of appellee.

McGraw v. Bayard, 96 Ill. 146; 2 Jones, Liens, § 1504; 1 Jones, Mortg. § 737; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 273, 495; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. p. 265, note; Horsey v. Chew, 65 Md. 555; Lanahan v. Latrobe, 7 Md. 268; Frierson v. Branch, 30 Ark. 453; Harrison v. Mock, 10 Ala. 185; Irwin v. Tabb, 17 Serg. & R. 422; Geisse v. Beall, 3 Wis. 391; 2 Perry, Tr. § 596; Portsmouth Iron Co. v. Murray, 38 Ohio St. 323; Patterson v. Dushane, 187 Pa. 28; Roberson v. Tonn, 76 Tex. 535.

A mechanic who contracts, performs labor, and furnishes material subsequent to the execution, delivery, and recordation of a valid mortgage, embracing, not only the land and improvements thereon, but the improvements to be thereafter placed thereon, does not acquire a lien on the improvements superior to the mortgage.

Newark Lime & C. Co. v. Morrison, 18 N. J. Eq. 138; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 67, 282, 287; Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Nye, 45 Iowa, 618; 1 Jones, Mortg. § 609; Willsie, Mortgage Foreclosure, § 725; Rev. Stat. (Sayles' Addendum) art. 8171; Choteau v. Thompson, 2 Ohio St. 127.

A judgment decreeing foreclosure of a mechanic's lien upon a certain lot and hotel building thereon, "save and except the land and the basement and foundation of said hotel building," is erroneous for want of such description as will enable a purchaser from the sheriff to identify and remove that portion of the building upon which the foreclosure is adjudged.

Allday v. Whitaker, 66 Tex. 670.

The promise of a corporation to make part payment for work and material in a specified amount of its own capital stock is not such an obligation as, if not specifically performed, becomes an absolute demand for money, but it constitutes the promisee a subscriber to the capital stock of the corporation, and entitles him, upon the performance of the contract, to compel the issuance of the certificates of stock or to recover of the corporation their value at the time of the demand.

Cook, Stock & Stockholders & Corp. Law, §§ 52, 60, p. 25, and note; 2 Sutherland, Damages, pp. 887-889; More v. Hudson River R. Co. 12 Barb. 156; 1 Waterman, Corp. pp. 165, 168; Soule v. Daves, 7 Cal. 576; Porter v. Buckfield Branch Railroad, 32 Me. 589; Barker v. Troy & R. R. Co. 27 Vt. 766.

Mr. H. A. Haessler, for appellants Neiman and Oriental Investment Co.:

The sale under the Spellman judgment and lien prevented any other sale or order of sale—the power of the court over the rem was exhausted by the judgment and sale in the Spellman Case.

In no event could a judgment for sale of the property be made until the judgment and sale so made under the Spellman judgment had been set aside.

2 Jones, Liens, § 1492; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 196, 252; Anshuts v. McClelland, 3 Watts, 487 (1836); Re Donkel's Estate, 1 Pearson (Pa.) 213 (1862); Choteau v. Thompson, 2 Ohio St. 114 (1853); Moxley v. Shepard, 3 Cal. 64; Crowell v. Gilmore, 18 Cal. 370 (1861); Willamette Falls Transp. & M. Co. v. Riley, 1 Or. 187; Werth v. Werth, 2 Rawle, 151; Burt v. Kurze, 5 Rawle, 246; Durham v. Mayo, 32 Ga. 192.

On petition for rehearing.

Messrs. Watts, Aldredge, & Eckford, for appellants, in support of petition:

The lien of the mechanic under our statute begins with the beginning of his work under his contract, and takes precedence over all claims fastened upon the property subsequent thereto.

Tammell v. Mount, 68 Tex. 215; Keating Implement & Mach. Co. v. Marshall Electric Light & P. Co. 74 Tex. 607; Barber v. Reynolds, 44 Cal. 533; Welch v. Porter, 63 Ala. 232; Central Trust Co. v. Continental Iron Works, 51 N. J. Eq. 605; Kiene v. Hodge, 90 Iowa, 212; Henry v. Bruns, 43 Minn. 295; Choteau v. Thompson, 2 Ohio St. 129; Huttig Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Denny Hotel Co. 6 Wash. 122; Crowell v. Gilmore, 18 Cal. 370.

In the absence of some constitutional limitation or statutory prohibition, parties may contract in writing for a first and paramount lien upon property, either real or personal, and when such contracts are duly recorded, all parties thereafter dealing with the property are bound by such contracts.

Lippencott v. York, 86 Tex. 283; Martin v. Roberts, 57 Tex. 568; Taylor v. Huck, 65 Tex. 241; Claes v. Dallas Homestead & L. Assn. 53 Tex. 53; Mundine v. Berwin, 62 Tex. 343; Berry v. Boggess, Id. 241.

The statute provides: "Any lien, encumbrance, or mortgage on the land or improvement at the time of the inception of the lien herein provided for, shall not be affected thereby."

The mortgage under which appellants claim is not to be construed in the light of an ordinary mortgage. It is not a mortgage to secure an existing or pre-existing indebtedness, but it is a mortgage given for the purpose of raising a fund with which to build a house, and the trustee obligated and bound itself to receive that fund and pay it out only upon certificates of the architect as the work upon the building progressed. The equities that ordinarily exist in favor of the mechanic, upon the ground that he creates something that enhances the security, while recognized and conceded, cannot be greater than the equity of the bondholders in this case, whose every dollar went into the house, to which, as the mechanics knew, the bondholders looked for their security.

West v. Klotz, 37 Ohio St. 420; Platt v. Griffith, 27 N. J. Eq. 207; Taylor v. La Bar, 25

N. J. Eq. 222; Macintosh v. Thurston, Id. 242; Wisconsin Planing Mill Co. v. Schuda, 72 Wis. 277; Kien v. Hodge, 90 Iowa, 212; Huttig Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Denny Hotel Co. 6 Wash. 122.

The mortgage when delivered relates back to the agreement for the loan.

2 Jones, Liens, § 1459; Jaeger v. Bossicuz, 15 Gratt. 83, 76 Am. Dec. 189.

Messrs. Coke & Coke, for appellees:

The petition in this case alleged a good cause of action without setting out in hac verba the plans and specifications in question. Said plans and specifications were no part of the contract pleaded, and if they had been it would not for that reason have been necessary to set them out.

Woolers v. International & G. N. R. Co. 54 Tex. 298; Rollins v. St. Paul Lumber Co. 21 Minn. 7; Holman v. Criswell, 15 Tex. 396; Sydnor v. Hurd, 8 Tex. 105; Wells v. Fairbank, 5 Tex. 584; Boettler v. Tendick, 78 Tex. 488, 5 L. R. A. 270; Dingley v. Greene, 54 Cal. 336; Johnson v. White (Tex.) 27 S. W. 174; Wyckoff v. Meyers, 44 N. Y. 148; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Bayliss, 62 Tex. 574; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 136, 254.

A suit to foreclose a mechanic's lien is, in Texas, a proceeding in equity, and all persons holding mechanics' liens on the property sought to be affected are necessary parties to said suit, and the judgment had in said cause, and sale made thereunder, do not affect the right of any lienholder not made a party.

Texas Civ. Stat. (Sayles' Supp.) arts. 3164, 3171, 3173, 3175, 3179; Sayles' Stat. arts. 1340, 1340a, 3179a, § 2; Acts 1871, p. 29, § 3; State v. Rhomberg, 69 Tex. 220; Waldroff v. Scott, 46 Tex. 4; Thomas v. Owenby, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (White & W.) § 1212; Schultze v. Alamo Ice & Brew. Co. 2 Tex. Civ. App. 244; 2 Buckner, Dig. p. 618, art. 107, and authorities; Delespine v. Campbell, 52 Tex. 10; Robertson v. Guerin, 50 Tex. 323; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 809, 401a; 2 Jones, Liens, § 1571; 8 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1269; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 165, note 4, 171, 172, note 6; Whitney v. Higgins, 10 Cal. 547, 70 Am. Dec. 748; Davis v. Alford, 94 U. S. 546, 24 L. ed. 284; Murray v. Rapley, 30 Ark. 574; McGraw v. Bayard, 96 Ill. 153; Hamilton v. Dunn, 22 Ill. 261; Whitelle v. Texas Loan Agency (Tex.) 27 S. W. 815; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 443, 25 L. ed. 1057; Hicks v. Scofield, 121 Mo. 381.

Under the builder's contract in this case the acceptance of the work by the architect, and his certificate that the same had been done in accordance with the contract, were final and binding upon defendants, and they could not avoid the conclusive effect thereof, except by pleading and proving fraud, collusion, or mistake.

Boettler v. Tendick, 78 Tex. 492, 5 L. R. A. 270; Dingley v. Greene, 54 Cal. 336.

The Oriental Hotel Company having accepted said building from Griffiths as completed in accordance with his contract, such acceptance was binding upon appellants in the absence of pleading and proof of fraud or mistake.

Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, § 254.

Under the evidence adduced the jury would not have been justified in finding that plaintiff

Griffiths had waived his lien or was estopped from asserting its priority to the lien of the trust deed to the St. Louis Trust Company, trustee, hence there was nothing to submit to the jury and the court correctly instructed them to find for plaintiff.

First, as to estoppel.

Burleson v. Burleson, 28 Tex. 415; Scoby v. Sweatt, Id. 730; Equitable Mortg. Co. v. Norton, 71 Tex. 689; Hamblin v. Knight, 81 Tex. 851; Page v. Arnim, 29 Tex. 70; Peters v. Clements, 52 Tex. 143; Edwards v. Dickson, 66 Tex. 617; Dynum v. Preston, 69 Tex. 291; Bigelow, Estoppel, p. 570.

Second, as to waiver.

Irvine v. Garner, 50 Tex. 54; Dean v. Hudson, 1 Tex. Unrep. Cas. 370; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lacroix, 45 Tex. 168; Jones v. White, 72 Tex. 316; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 117, 278.

Under the statute of Texas, if the owner of a lot begins the erection of a building thereon, according to given plans and specifications, and prosecutes the work continuously to completion according to said original design, all mechanics' liens growing out of the construction of such building are a lien on said house and lot superior to the lien or mortgage thereon executed and recorded after the commencement of the building, and the court, in foreclosing the lien of these appellees only on the building above the foundation, rendered in favor of appellants a judgment more favorable than they were entitled to.

Const. 1876, art. 16, § 87; Texas Civ. Stat. (Sayles' Supp.) arts. 3164, 3171, 3179; Schultze v. Alamo Ice & Brew. Co. 2 Tex. Civ. App. 242; Hamburg-Bremen F. Ins. Co. v. Garlington, 66 Tex. 106, 59 Am. Rep. 613; Neilson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co. 44 Iowa, 78; Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Slye, 45 Iowa, 616; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 450, 25 L. ed. 1060; Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co. 4 Dill. 575; Getchell v. Allen, 34 Iowa, 560.

Where one takes a mortgage on the lot on which a house is in course of construction, and requires the owner to complete the building according to the plans and specifications upon which it is being constructed, and permits the mortgagee to pay the money borrowed to the builders and contractors erecting the house, and in addition requires the owner to give to the mortgagee a bond of indemnity against any mechanics' liens said borrowed money falls to satisfy, said mortgage will not constitute a lien on said property prior to the lien of a contractor who has contributed to the carrying out of such plans and specifications.

Avery v. Clark, 87 Cal. 628; Davis v. Bilsland, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 661, 21 L. ed. 969; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 452, 25 L. ed. 1060; Fuquay v. Stickney, 41 Cal. 587.

A judgment foreclosing a mechanics' lien on a definitely described lot and the six-story brick and stone building thereon, save and except the land and the basement and foundation of the building, is sufficiently definite.

Allday v. Whitaker, 66 Tex. 670; Myers v. Maverick (Tex.) 27 S. W. 950; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, 379.

If a corporation promises to pay a given sum of money at a given time, part of which can be paid in stock of the corporation at par, and fails to make said payment in stock at the time specified, the whole demand becomes one for money, and the payee cannot afterwards be required to accept the stock.

Hardin v. Titus, Dall. Dec. (Tex.) 622; Dunman v. Strother, 1 Tex. 91, 46 Am. Dec. 97; Baker v. Todd, 6 Tex. 274, 55 Am. Dec. 775; Deel v. Berry, 21 Tex. 468, 78 Am. Dec. 286; Smith v. Falwell, 21 Tex. 466; Short v. Abernathy, 42 Tex. 95; Bummel v. Houston, 68 Tex. 11; Lawson, Cont. § 449; 2 Whart. Cont. § 619; Story, Cont. § 969.

Messrs. Cobb & Avery, for appellee De Wolf:

In Texas a suit to foreclose a mechanic's lien is an equitable proceeding, and all mechanics' lienholders who have filed and recorded their lien should be made parties.

In such a suit other mechanics' lienholders who are not parties are not affected by a judgment and sale of the property therein, and can still enforce their liens against the property the same as if such judgment had not been rendered or sale made.

Buntyn v. Shippers' Compress Co. 68 Miss. 94; Davis v. Alford, 94 U. S. 545, 24 L. ed. 288; Whiteoelle v. Texas Loan Agency (Tex.) 27 S. W. 309; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 443, 25 L. ed. 1057; Sayles' Stat. art. 3179a, § 2; Austin & N. W. R. Co. v. Rucker, 59 Tex. 587; Pope v. Graham, 44 Tex. 198; Thomas v. Ownby, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (White & W.) § 1212; Hicks v. Scofield, 121 Mo. 381.

Where it appears on the face of the petition that there is a nonjoinder of proper parties plaintiffs, such fact can only be taken advantage of by special exception on that ground, and cannot be reached by general demurrer or objection to the evidence under a general denial, and if such fact does not appear in the petition, it can only be reached by a plea in abatement.

Rev. Stat. art. 1265; Shelby v. Burtis, 18 Tex. 645; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. LeGierse, 51 Tex. 189; Mott v. Ruenbuhl, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (White & W.) § 599; McGwire v. Glass, 4 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 54; Howard v. Britton, 71 Tex. 286; Gair v. Tuttle, 49 Fed. Rep. 198; Duncan v. China Mut. Ins. Co. 129 N. Y. 287; Clarion First Nat. Bank v. Hamer, 49 Fed. Rep. 45, 7 U. S. App. 69.

In this state, where there is a mortgage on land and a building is afterwards erected on the land so as to create a mechanic's lien, the mortgage has a priority on the land only, and the mechanic's lien has priority on the building, which may be sold and removed from the land.

Crooker v. Grant, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 182; Pope v. Graham, 44 Tex. 198; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 443, 25 L. ed. 1057; Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co. 4 Dill. 570; Davis v. Bislard, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 659, 21 L. ed. 989; Neilson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co. 44 Iowa, 71; Getchell v. Allen, 84 Iowa, 559; Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Skye, 45 Iowa, 615; Hicks v. Scofield, 121 Mo. 381; Hartun Steam Heater Co. v. Gordon, 2 N. D. 246.

When a lienor and the owner of the land enter into a contract whereby said owner agrees to erect on the land a building, and the owner makes contracts with materialmen and thereby creates mechanics' liens, such mechanics' liens attach to the interest of both said lienor and said owner, and they are superior to the rights of said lienor.

Henderson v. Connolly, 123 Ill. 98; Paulsen v. Manake, 126 Ill. 73; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Kountze, 30 Neb. 719, 12 L. R. A. 83; Millcup v. Ball, 80 Neb. 728; Sheehy v. Fulton, 38 Neb. 691; Hill v. Gill, 40 Minn. 441.

The mere recording of the mortgage without furnishing any money will not give the mortgage priority over a mechanic's lien contract made before any money was furnished.

Kupatrick v. Kansas City & B. R. Co. 83 Neb. 620; North Presby. Church v. Jeans, 32 Ill. 214, 88 Am. Dec. 281.

The opinion of the court of civil appeals was as follows:

Finley, J.:

"Appellants' first assignment of error applies to appellee Griffiths alone, and is as follows: 'The court erred in not sustaining the special exceptions of defendants to the second amended petition of plaintiff John Griffiths, to the effect that said petition was insufficient, in that the plans and specifications of the architect referred to in and made a part of the alleged contract declared upon were not set out in said petition. Such plans and specifications not being set out, defendants were not enabled from the petition of said plaintiff to determine whether or not said plaintiff had complied with his contract.'

"The contract set out by plaintiff Griffiths in his petition provided: 'That for the consideration hereinafter mentioned the parties of the first part agree and bind themselves . . . to erect, build, and complete a hotel building in the city of Dallas, state of Texas, on the corner of Commerce and Akard streets, according to drawings and specifications and addenda to specifications made for same by Isaac S. Taylor, architect; . . . the work to be done under the superintendence and according to the directions of said architect, he having power to reject any portion of the work or materials which in his opinion is not in accordance with said drawings and specifications, and his decision in all such matters shall be final and binding. . . . That the said architect shall be at liberty to make any deviation from or alteration in the plan, form, and construction described and shown in said plans and specifications without in any way affecting the validity of this agreement.' In consideration of the faithful performance of aforesaid work the hotel company agree to pay the contractor the sum of $315,000. Payments to be made upon vouchers from said architect.

"The petition alleged that on August 24, 1891, the said work under said contract being practically done, the said Isaac S. Taylor, architect, did make and deliver to plaintiff his certain certificate in writing, in substance as follows:

"No. ———, St. Louis, Mo., August 24, 1891.

"To Oriental Hotel Company: I hereby certify that John Griffiths is entitled to the payment of thirty-three thousand two hundred and fifty dollars, balance in full for all demands per agreement, for construction of hotel building on corner of Commerce and Akard streets, in city of Dallas, Texas. §83, 250.

Isaac S. Taylor.'

"That said certificate was the voucher of said architect, provided for in said contract, upon which plaintiff was entitled to payment. That the said architect did, on January 16, 1892, formally, and in strict accordance with the terms of said contract, accept said work, and give to plaintiff Griffiths the certificate therefor, which certificate was in words and figures as follows:

"St. Louis, Mo., January 16, 1892.

"John Griffiths, Esq.—Dear Sir: I consider your contract fulfilled on the Oriental Hotel Building at Dallas, Texas.

"Respectfully, Isaac S. Taylor.'

"That the acceptance, evidenced by the aforesaid certificate of January 16, 1892, was a formal acceptance under and in accordance with the terms of said contract. The petition further alleged that on February 4, 1892, at a regular meeting of the board of directors of said defendant, the Oriental Hotel Company, said board duly passed a resolution, and placed the same upon the minutes, accepting said hotel building from said petitioner and other contractors, as fully completed in accordance with said contract. Appellants (defendants below) excepted to said petition, because it failed to set forth the plans and specifications of the architect, the same being sworn to be part of the alleged contract, which exception was overruled. The plans and specifications referred to in the contract according to which the building was to be erected were not necessary to be set out in detail by the pleadings of the plaintiff. Especially is this true in view of the allegations that the work was accepted by the architect, and the Oriental Hotel Company as well, as being completed in accordance with the terms of the contract. If the work was accepted as coming up to the contract, as alleged, in the absence of allegations of fraud or mistake there was no issue rendering it proper to go into inquiry whether the work was performed according to the plans and specifications. Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 136, 254.

"The second and ninth assignments of error raise the same question, and are next presented by appellants. They are: 'Second. The court erred in sustaining the exceptions of plaintiffs to the eleventh paragraph of defendants' answer, in that the foreclosure and sale therein set forth discharged the premises described by plaintiffs from any and all mechanics' liens, and transferred the liens of the plaintiffs, if any they ever had, to the proceeds of said sale, and the purchaser under said sale took the premises unencumbered by any mechanic's lien. Said judgment was in no sense void, and the plaintiffs should not have been permitted to attack the same in this, a collateral, action.' 'Ninth. The court erred in sustaining the demurrers of the plaintiffs De Wolf, Baker, & Smith Co. and Eaton & Prince Co., to the eleventh paragraph of the defendants' answer, in that the judgment of foreclosure and sale and purchase therein set forth had the legal effect of conveying the premises described by plaintiffs to the purchaser, Neiman, discharged of any and all claims of mechanics' liens, and same had the effect of transferring any liens said plaintiffs may have had from the property to the proceeds of said sale, and there could be no second sale to satisfy other mechanics' lien claims.' Appellants urge under these assignments this proposition: 'Where there are various liens filed in conformity to the statute on the subject by different mechanics, lumber and material men, against the same house, for work done and lumber and materials furnished and used in the construction thereof, a proceeding and sale of the house upon any one of the liens will release it from the whole of them, and the purchaser at the sheriff's sale will accordingly hold it entirely discharged therefrom.' The eleventh paragraph of defendants' answer and the exhibits attached thereto show that in a suit brought by one Spellman against the Oriental Hotel Company, wherein Spellman was the sole plaintiff and the hotel company the sole defendant, a judgment was entered on August 26, 1892, in favor of Spellman for $15,719.51, with foreclosure of mechanic's lien on the property in question in this case; that thereafter, on November 1, 1892, the same was sold under order of sale issued on said judgment, and purchased by defendant Neiman for the sum of $250; that after this purchase Neiman notified the sheriff that there were other mechanics' liens on the property sold, and that the sheriff should not pay the entire purchase price to the plaintiff in the writ, but should pay it into court, and ask the court's instructions in regard to the same; that he would claim that the property could not be sold again under another lien. Spellman's judgment was in the usual form of a judgment for foreclosure of lien in Texas, and the clerk of the court was ordered to issue to the sheriff or any constable of Dallas county, Texas, an order of sale, commanding him to sell said Oriental Hotel property as under execution, and to apply the proceeds so realized to the payment and satisfaction of the said Spellman's judgment, and, if there was a surplus, to pay said surplus to the defendant hotel company. The order of sale issued on said judgment conformed thereto, and was an order directing sale to be made for the benefit of said Spellman, and directing the proceeds, after satisfying his debt, to be paid to the hotel company. The record shows that the property in question cost over one half million dollars. To said eleventh paragraph of defendants' answer plaintiffs demurred, on the ground that the matters therein set up showed no defense to the action, and were irrelevant and immaterial, it appearing from said pleading and exhibits that plaintiffs were not parties to said judgment, and not affected or bound thereby, which demurrer the court sustained.

"The statutory law in force in Texas at the time of the making of the contracts filed as liens, and at the time of bringing the suits, and at the time of the trial of this cause, bearing on 'this controversy, was, in substance, as follows:

"Article 8164: 'Any person or firm who may labor, or furnish material, machinery, or fixtures, or to erect any house or improvement, . . . under or by virtue of any contract with the owner thereof, upon complying with this act, shall have a lien on such house, building, fixtures, or improvement, and shall also have a lien on the lot necessarily connected therewith, to secure payment for labor, lumber, material, machinery, or fixtures. . . .

"Article 8165: . . . It shall be the duty of every original contractor, within four months . . . after the indebtedness shall have accrued, to file their contract in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the property is situated, and cause same to be recorded in a book to be kept by the county clerk for that purpose.'

"Article 8167: . . . The contracts . . . when filed and recorded as above provided shall be accompanied by a description of the lands, houses, and improvements made against which the lien is claimed.'

"Article 8171: 'The lien . . . shall attach to the building . . . in preference to any prior lien or encumbrance or mortgage upon the land. . . . and persons enforcing same may have such building . . . sold separately . . . provided any lien, encumbrance, or mortgage on land or improvement at time of inception of lien shall not be affected thereby, and holders of such liens need not be made parties.'

"Article 8172: 'When improvements are sold separately, the purchaser shall be, by the officer making the sale, placed in possession thereof, and he shall have the right to remove the same within a reasonable time.'

"Article 8179: 'The liens for work . . . shall be upon an equal footing, without reference to the date of filing the lien, and in all cases where a sale shall be ordered and the property sold, which may be described in lien, the proceeds arising from such sale, if not sufficient to discharge all the liens against the same, without reference to the date of filing the lien, shall be paid pro rata on the respective liens. . . .

"The constitutional provision upon which the legislative enactments are based reads (Const. 1876, art. 16, § 37): 'Mechanics, artisans, and materialmen of every class shall have a lien upon the buildings and articles made or repaired by them for the value of their labor done thereon, or material furnished therefor; and the legislature shall provide by law for the speedy and efficient enforcement of said liens.' The lien is created by the Constitution, and the statutes serve the purpose only of providing the means for its enforcement. In effecting this object, the statutes place the liens held by different persons for work or material upon the same building upon the same footing, without reference to the date of filing. They are made co-ordinate liens upon the same property. The statute is silent as to the matter of parties in the proceeding of foreclosure of the mechanic's lien, and lays down no special procedure differing from other foreclosure suits. No special form of decree is provided, but the decree in this proceeding is left to be governed by article 1340, Rev. Stat., which prescribes the form of decree of foreclosure of mortgages and other liens without distinction. As there is no special procedure provided by statute for the foreclosure of mechanics' liens, and as the several liens are made of the same dignity and force, we must look to the law governing the foreclosure of other co-ordinate liens to determine the question of necessary parties. Waldroff v. Scott, 46 Tex. 4, 5; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 309, 315. Foreclosure suits are equitable proceedings, and all parties whose rights are to be affected by the result must be made parties before they can be concluded by the decree. Waldroff v. Scott, supra; Adams v. Cook, 55 Tex. 165; Whiteville v. Texas Loan Agency (Tex.) 27 S. W. 309; 3 Buckner, Dig. §§ 107, 122; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1269; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 443, 25 L. ed. 1057; Davis v. Alford, 94 U. S. 546, 24 L. ed. 284; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 173, note 6.

"We are cited by appellants' counsel in support of their proposition to the Pennsylvania case of Anshuts v. McClelland, 5 Watts, 487, and the Georgia case of Durham v. Mayo, 32 Ga. 192. These cases announce the proposition contended for, but they are based upon statutes materially different from ours. In Pennsylvania the proceeding is purely statutory. It is a proceeding, and is not governed by the principles of equity applicable to the ordinary equitable proceeding of foreclosure of liens. The Georgia case is based upon a statute which provides: 'Whenever any house and lot, or houses and lands, subject to encumbrances herein created, shall be seized and sold by authority of any process or decree of any court in this state, the same shall pass to the purchaser free from such encumbrance, which encumbrance shall attach to the proceeds in the hands of the officer making it, on a notice, as in cases of claims to money raised under execution, which notice with the money shall be returned to the court by the officer.' It is urged that article 8179 of our statutes, before quoted, in providing for the prorating of the proceeds of the sale of the property in a foreclosure suit, where the proceeds are insufficient to discharge all the liens, was intended and should be construed to have the effect of transferring all co-ordinate liens upon the property to the proceeds of the sale, and passing the property to the purchaser free from such liens, notwithstanding such liens are not parties to the foreclosure proceeding. That the legislative intent was to place all such liens upon an equal footing is quite clear; but that it was also intended that a foreclosure sale at the instance of one lienor should discharge the property from other co-ordinate liens, whose holders are not parties to the suit, and transfer such liens to the proceeds of sale, is certainly not expressed in the statute. Can such an intent be implied? No provision whatever is made for notice to co-ordinate lienors; no direction is given as to any inquiry and adjudication of co-ordinate liens by the court, and the holding of the funds for distribution; and no method is pointed out to co-ordinate lienholders for proceeding against the fund. The Constitution commands the legislature to provide for the speedy and efficient enforcement of such liens created by that instrument, and it would seem that, if the legislature had intended that all liens should be discharged by the sale of the property procured by one lienor, it would have provided also the means of protecting the holders of other liens of the same character. All parties holding such liens are entitled to their day in court, and such liens cannot be divested out of them by a judicial proceeding to which such holders are not parties. The assignment is therefore not well taken.

"Appellants' third assignment of error complains of the court for admitting in evidence, over objection, the contract declared upon by appellee Griffiths: (1) Because the contract was not accompanied by the plans and specifications therein referred to. This point has already been noticed. (2) Because the contract appears to be between the hotel company as one party and John Griffiths, William E. Frost, Frank R. Alsip, Carl D. Bradley, and J. Foster Rhodes, as the other parties, while Griffiths is the sole party plaintiff. Griffiths and the hotel company were the parties who contracted, and the other parties were mere sureties; this clearly appears from the contract, and the objection to the evidence was properly overruled.

"The tenth and eleventh assignments raise the same question as to other parties, and, for the reasons above given, are untenable.

"Appellants' sixth, fourth, and fifth assignments of error announce this proposition: 'Under a building contract stipulating that the value of the work shall be "paid for when the work shall be finished entire and complete, and accepted by the architect," an acceptance by the architect does not conclude the parties from proving that, as matter of fact, the work has not been "finished entire and complete," in accordance with the contract.' The contract provided that the parties of the first part were to erect, build, and complete the building in question according to the drawings, specifications, and addenda to specifications made by Taylor, the architect, 'the work to be done under the superintendence and according to the drawings of said architect, he having power to reject any portion of the work or materials which, in his opinion, is not in accordance with said drawings and specifications, and his decision in all such matters shall be final and binding; . . . that the said architect shall be at liberty to make any deviation from or alteration in the plan, form, and construction described and shown in said drawings and specifications, without in any way affecting the validity of this agreement; and the said architect shall also be at liberty to make any addition to or omission in the work and materials of said building as he may think proper.' And, after providing for the time and manner of the payment of 85 per cent of the contract price for the work covered by said contract, said contract further provided that 'the remaining 15 per cent of the value of the work to be paid for when the work shall be finished entire and complete and accepted by said architect. Payments to be made upon vouchers from said architect.' The architect certified that Griffiths had fulfilled his contract, and was entitled to $33,250, balance in full as per said agreement.

"The Oriental Hotel Company, by resolution of its board of directors, accepted the building from Griffiths as completed in accordance with his contract. Acceptance by the architect and acceptance by the hotel company were alleged by plaintiffs, while defendants' pleadings as to this point consisted of a general denial. The work having been accepted by the architect and the hotel company as well, and there being no allegations of fraud or mistake, there was no issue upon which evidence was admissible tending to show that the work was not performed according to the contract. Boettler v. Tendick, 73 Tex. 492-494, 5 L. R. A. 270; Collier v. Betterton (decided by this court at present term) 87 Tex. 440; Dingley v. Greene, 64 Cal. 386. There is no force in the further contention that the acceptance of the hotel company was not binding upon lien creditors. In the absence of fraud or mistake alleged and proved, such an acceptance could not be gone behind by other lien creditors. Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, § 254. None of the propositions presented under these assignments are meritorious.

"Appellants' eighth assignment is directed at the action of the court in directing a verdict for appellee Griffiths upon the alleged ground that the evidence tended to show that Griffiths had waived his lien in favor of the trust company, or that his conduct was such as to lead the trust company to believe that he would not assert a superior lien to its mortgage, and that it did rely upon such conduct and so believe, etc. This assignment is not sustained by the record; Griffiths did not waive his lien, and he said nothing and did nothing upon which the trust company was justified in relying as a waiver of his lien in its favor. While Griffiths knew that the loan would be made, it was made independent of him. He did not influence it, and no word or act on his part is shown to be in any degree the basis of the loan on the part of the trust company. The trust company must be held to have had notice that the laws of Texas gave such a contractor a prior lien upon the building for his work; and it made the loan knowing that Griffiths would have such lien prior to its lien, and it attempted to provide against it by requiring the hotel company first to expend $250,000 on the building before its money should be paid over, and to give bond to keep the property free of liens. There is nothing in the evidence which would have justified a verdict against Griffiths upon the grounds of waiver or estoppel. As to waiver: Irvin v. Garner, 50 Tex. 54; Dean v. Hudson, 1 Tex. Unrep. Cas. 870; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lacroix, 45 Tex. 168, 170; Jones v. White, 72 Tex. 316; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, §§ 117, 278. As to estoppel: Burleson v. Burleson, 28 Tex. 415, 417; Scoby v. Sweatt, Id. 730; Equitable Mortg. Co. v. Norton, 71 Tex. 689; Hamblin v. Knight, 81 Tex. 351; Page v. Annin, 29 Tex. 70-78; Peters v. Clements, 52 Tex. 143, 144; Edwards v. Dickson, 66 Tex. 617, 618; Bynum v. Preston, 69 Tex. 291; Bigelow, Estoppel, p. 570.

"Appellants' twelfth assignment: 'The court erred in instructing a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs DeWolf, Baker & Smith Co., and Eaton & Prince Co., in that it was an undisputed fact that the contracts of each and every of said plaintiffs were entered into, and the labor performed and the material furnished thereunder, long subsequent to the execution, delivery, and recordation of the deed of trust under which defendants claim, which deed of trust embraced the lot and improvements then thereon, as well as all improvements thereafter placed upon the same, and the court erred in not giving in charge to the jury upon this question the second charge requested by defendants. Said plaintiffs' contracts being long subsequent to the execution and recordation of said deed of trust, said plaintiffs acquired a lien only upon such interest as the mortgagor then had, and the court erred in not so instructing the jury.' The hotel company, in August, 1889, began the erection of the building in question according to the plans and specifications prepared therefor by I. S. Taylor, architect, and had, prior to February 24, 1890, completed and paid for the foundation thereof. On February 24, 1890, the hotel company let to Griffiths a contract for the greater part of the construction of the building above the foundation. Griffiths began his work on April 4, 1890, and from that date until the work was completed he proceeded continuously, with a short cessation only in the fall of 1890. March 19, 1891, Baker & Smith Co. contracted with the hotel company to build and place in said hotel building a steam-heating and boiler apparatus, and on July 6, 1891, Eaton & Prince Co. contracted with the hotel company to furnish, supply, and erect in said hotel building three elevators, described in said contract. Baker & Smith Company and Eaton & Prince Company commenced work under their respective contracts at once upon making the same, and performed said contracts according to the terms thereof, and finished the same about October 19 and November 24, 1891, respectively. On February 6, 1890, the hotel company made a proposition to the St. Louis Trust Company to negotiate the hotel company's bonds, to be secured by a mortgage on the hotel property. This proposition referred to the plans prepared by Taylor, architect, under which the hotel building was being erected, and gave estimates of the cost of the various parts of the building; among others, of the work afterwards done by Baker & Smith Co. and Eaton & Prince Company. This proposition resulted in an agreement dated April 30, 1890, between the hotel company and the trust company as representative of the proposed bondholders, whereby the hotel company is bound to construct the building according to the aforesaid plans, specifications, and estimates. This contract likewise provided for the payment by the trust company of the money borrowed directly to contractors engaged in the construction of the hotel building. As part of this contract, and under the same cover, the trust company took from the hotel company a bond with security, to indemnify them against mechanics' and other liens not satisfied by the borrowed money in the hands of the trust company. Pursuant to this agreement, the hotel company executed its mortgage, dated May 1 and recorded May 20, 1890, on the hotel lot and improvements. March 19, 1891, Baker & Smith Company contracted with the hotel company to do certain of the contemplated work on the building, and did it. July 6, 1891, Eaton & Prince Company contracted to do certain of the contemplated work on the building, and did it. The contractors have never been paid in full for their work so done, and have filed their liens. The court instructed a verdict for these parties, and a foreclosure of the lien on the building above the foundation, and refused the following charge asked by appellants: 'It appearing that the contracts of the plaintiffs, DeWolf, Baker & Smith Company, and Eaton & Prince Company, with the hotel company, were entered into subsequent to the execution, delivery, and recordation of the deed of trust under which defendants claim, which deed of trust embraced, not only the land and improvements then thereon, but the improvements to be thereafter placed thereupon as well, and it appearing that neither of said plaintiffs performed labor or furnished material until after the execution, delivery, and recordation of said deed of trust, you are instructed that the lien afforded by said deed of trust was paramount and superior to the lien asserted by said plaintiffs, and the sale under said deed of trust extinguished any claim of lien said plaintiffs may have had; and you will so find.' This assignment presents a question of some difficulty. The legislative intent is not as plain as it might be expressed. We think, however, that a fair and liberal construction of the statute, keeping in view the constitutional mandate and the manifest object to be accomplished, leads to the conclusion that it was intended to give mechanics a lien upon the building which their labors and materials brought into existence as a building, superior to all other liens. But for such labor and material the building would not have been erected, and no mortgage lien could have attached thereto. The fact that their contracts were made and work performed after the execution and record of the mortgage upon the land and prospective building, under the facts of this case should not have the effect to subordinate their liens to that of the mortgage. Const. 1876, art. 16, § 37; Sayles' Tex. Civ. Stat. arts. 8164, 8171, 8179; Schultze v. Alamo Ice & Brew. Co. 2 Tex. Civ. App. 242, 244; Hamburg-Bremen F. Ins. Co. v. Garlington, 66 Tex. 106, 59 Am. Rep. 618; Neilson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co. 44 Iowa, 73-78; Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Sigs, 45 Iowa, 616-618; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 450-452, 25 L. ed. 1060, 1061; Taylor v. Burling- ton, O. R. & M. R. Co. 4 Dill. 575, Fed. Cas. No. 13,788; Getchell v. Allen, 84 Iowa, 560; Aerry v. Clark, 87 Cal. 628; Davis v. Bilsland, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 661, 21 L. ed. 989; Fugay v. Stickney, 41 Cal. 587.

"The fourteenth assignment complains that the decree does not sufficiently describe the property upon which the lien of appellees other than Griffiths is foreclosed. The decree properly describes the lot and building thereon, and forecloses the lien on the property described, 'save and except the land and the basement and foundation of said hotel building.' This description we think sufficient. Alday v. Whitaker, 66 Tex. 671; Myers v. Maverick (Tex.) 27 S. W. 950-1088; Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, 379.

"Appellants' seventeenth assignment: 'The court erred in not requiring the plaintiff Griffiths to accept the $5,000 stock tendered him in open court by defendants, and in not giving defendants credit therefor, because: First, said stock was tendered to Griffiths within a reasonable time after he procured the purported final certificate; and, second, because, by the terms of the contract Griffiths became and was a subscriber to the original capital stock of said hotel company, and it was not a contract to deliver or to pay him stock of any other company.' The hotel company promised to pay Griffiths for constructing its hotel building the sum of $315,000, in manner and sums as follows: '$5,000 of the above sum to be paid in stock of the said hotel company, at par value; $35,000 to be paid when the second-story joists are on; $14,000 to be paid when the third-story joists are on; 85 per cent of the value of the remaining work done and finished in the building to be paid for every thirty days. The first valuation after the first payment of 85 per cent must include all work done up to that time, the payments of $35,000 and $14,000 having been deducted from said valuation. The remaining 15 per cent of the value of the work to be paid for when the work shall be finished entire and complete and accepted by the architect. Payments to be made upon the vouchers from said architect.' On August 24, 1891, Griffiths received certificates from the architect that he was entitled to the stock. Griffiths demanded, but failed to get, the stock, October 10, 1891. On January 16, 1892, he received final certificates from the architect. The only tender of the stock made before the trial was made January 28, 1892. On failure to pay in stock at the time the debt became due, and when the stock was demanded, the entire debt became a demand for money. Hardin v. Titus, Dall. Dec. (Tex.) 622; Dunman v. Strother, 1 Tex. 91, 46 Am. Dec. 97; Baker v. Todd, 6 Tex. 274, 55 Am. Dec. 775; Deel v. Berry, 21 Tex. 463, 73 Am. Dec. 236; Smith v. Falwell, 21 Tex. 466; Short v. Abernathy, 42 Tex. 94; Bummel v. Houston, 68 Tex. 11, 12; Lawson, Cont. § 449, 2 Whart. Cont. § 619; Story, Cont. § 969. The assignment is without merit.

"We have considered all the assignments of error, and, finding none of them well taken, the judgment will be affirmed."

30 L. R. A.

The petition for rehearing having been overruled, an application for a writ of error was made upon the same arguments used in the lower court.

Brown, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The Oriental Hotel Company, a corporation organized under the laws of Texas, owned a block of ground in the city of Dallas, and had entered upon the work of excavating and putting in the basement of a hotel building thereon. On the 6th of February, 1890, the said hotel company submitted a proposition, in writing, to the St. Louis Trust Company, of St. Louis, Mo., in which it was stated that the said hotel company proposed to issue $250,000 first-mortgage bonds on the hotel building and ground to raise money for the purpose of completing the said building. Accompanying the proposition were the specifications and plans, prepared by the architect for the building then in course of erection and thereafter to be completed. The bonds were to be issued May 1, 1890, at a rate of interest to be agreed upon. The trust company was to receive and sell the bonds, and act as trustee under the deed of trust or mortgage to be given to secure the bonds. On the 15th day of February, 1890, Adolphus Busch, F. Herrold, Marquard Forster, Augustus Gehner, and Mrs. Joseph Schneider, submitted to the trust company a written proposition to take the bonds, which proposition was in these words: "We, undersigned, agree to take bonds of Oriental Hotel Company, of Dallas, Tex., on proposition as made, provided we get a bond, as suggested, making them beyond all controversy a first lien upon property when fully completed in all details. Such bonds to bear 7 per cent interest, payable semi-annually, at St. Louis, Mo. Amount of issue to be $250,000, and stockholders to expend, with realty, at least $250,000 before any of our money is used." The bonds were sold to the parties making the proposition. Afterwards, and on May 1, 1890, were delivered, and the deed of trust given in accordance with the proposition, which was duly recorded, May 20, 1890, in the records of Dallas county. The deed of trust was in the usual form of such instruments, and conveyed to the St. Louis Trust Company all the franchises, rights, and privileges of the Oriental Hotel Company, the lot or block of land upon which the building was to be erected, "together with all the improvements thereon, or that thereafter may be placed thereon." And the said deed of trust contained a provision binding the said hotel company to pay and discharge all taxes and assessments of every kind and description imposed upon the property mortgaged, free and clear of any lien or encumbrance by reason thereof. In the resolution adopted by the stockholders, authorizing the board of directors to make such mortgage, which resolution is copied into the deed of trust, it is provided that "said mortgage is to constitute a first and paramount lien on said property." On the 30th day of April, 1890, the Oriental Hotel Company entered into a written contract with the trustee aforesaid, in which it was recited that the bonds of said company were subscribed for with the understanding that the building should be completed in accordance with the plans and specifications mentioned and described in the proposition made by the company to the trustee, and that the bonds should be lawfully authorized and issued, ready for delivery, secured by mortgage or deed of trust, to the satisfaction of the proposed stockholders, and properly recorded, and abstract of title furnished, showing the said deed of trust to be the first and only lien; the money for the bonds to be paid by the subscribers to the said trust company; the money so paid not to be paid out by the trustee on said building until the Oriental Hotel Company should have expended as much as $250,000 upon said hotel, including the cost of the real estate on which said hotel is located and the amount already expended; the building and premises to be kept free and clear from any and all liens whatsoever, except the said lien under the said deed of trust, in which case the trust company was to pay out the money paid in for the bonds for the completion of the said building, as the work progressed, upon the estimates of the architect and superintendent of construction of the said building. On the same day, the 30th of April, 1890, the Oriental Hotel Company, as principal, and Thomas Field and Frank Field, as sureties, entered into a bond payable to the St. Louis Trust Company, conditioned that if the Oriental Hotel, then in the course of construction in the city of Dallas, should not be in all respects fully completed and ready for occupancy, free from all liens and charges whatsoever, except the deed of trust to secure the said bonds, that they, the said principal and sureties, should, within sixty days after the expenditure of the $250,000 obtained by the sale of the bonds, pay to the said St. Louis Trust Company, for the benefit of the bondholders, a sum of money which would be sufficient to complete the hotel building and discharge the same from all liens and charges except the deed of trust.

During the time of the negotiations between the Oriental Hotel Company and the St. Louis Trust Company for the sale of the bonds, John Griffiths was negotiating with the hotel company a contract for the erection of the hotel building. Griffiths knew of the proposition to sell the bonds through the trust company, and, before closing his contract with the Oriental Hotel Company, inquired of the trust company as to the probability of completing the sale. Upon being informed that the bonds had been subscribed for by responsible parties, he entered into a contract with the hotel company, on the 28th day of February, 1890, to erect and construct the said building, in accordance with the plans and specifications, for the sum of $315,000, and soon thereafter entered upon the work of constructing the said building, in accordance with the contract. The building was accepted by the architect and by the hotel company as having been completed in accordance with the contract. The hotel company failed to pay the last payment due upon the said building, amounting to $——. Griffiths filed his contract in due time and form to secure a mechanic's lien upon the said buildings and grounds. At different dates, which are not material, the Western Electric Company (which transferred its claim to defendant in error De Wolf), Baker & Smith Company, Eaton & Prince Company, and W. H. Spellman, each furnished material and performed labor in the construction of the said hotel building of the Oriental Hotel Company, after the execution and record of the deed of trust given by the said hotel company to the St. Louis Trust Company. The claim of each of the said parties was duly filed and recorded within the proper time and manner to secure a lien upon the said building and premises. W. H. Spellman brought suit against the Oriental Hotel Company upon his claim, and foreclosed his mechanic's lien upon the premises, including the building. Under the judgment of the district court in that case the property was sold, and W. G. Neiman purchased it for $250. None of the other claimants of liens were made parties to this proceeding. The St. Louis Trust Company sold the property under the deed of trust given to it by the Oriental Hotel Company, and it was bought in by the Oriental Investment Company. Both of these sales were made after the liens in favor of the defendants in error had been fixed according to law. The sales under the judgment in favor of Spellman and under the deed of trust were regular and sufficient to convey title as against the hotel company. The Oriental Investment Company, by special answer, claimed title to the property under the sale by virtue of the judgment in favor of Spellman, and also under the sale made by the St. Louis Trust Company under the deed of trust. The plaintiffs excepted to this portion of the answer, which exceptions were sustained by the court. Separate suits were brought in the district court against the Oriental Hotel Company in favor of the different plaintiffs in this suit, to recover their debts and foreclose the mechanics' liens. All of these suits were consolidated in the district court, and, thus consolidated, constitute the case now before us. There was a trial in the district court, and judgment in favor of the plaintiffs for their several amounts, with foreclosure of their liens and order of sale, from which judgment the defendants appealed to the court of civil appeals of the fifth district, which affirmed the judgment of the district court. The plaintiffs in error assigned the following grounds, in substance, upon which they seek a review and reversal of the judgment of the court of civil appeals: (1) That the court erred in sustaining exceptions to the defendants' answer, setting up title under the judgment rendered in favor of Spellman and sale thereunder. (2) That the court erred in sustaining exceptions to that portion of the defendants' answer which set up title acquired under the sale by the St. Louis Trust Company by virtue of the deed of trust given by the Oriental Hotel Company. (3) That the judgment of the court, foreclosing the lien of the plaintiffs, except Griffiths, upon a part of the building situated upon the lots described, is erroneous. (4) That by the terms of the mortgage it had a first and paramount lien upon the property, and the court erred in decreeing priority of lien in favor of the plaintiffs over the claim of the Oriental Investment Company, the purchaser under said deed of trust. (5) That the court erred in refusing the special charge asked by the defendant, submitting to the jury the question as to whether or not Griffiths was estopped to assert his claim of priority of lien against the deed of trust to the St. Louis Trust Company. (6) That the court erred in excluding evidence offered by the defendant to show that Griffiths had not completed his work according to the contract. (7) Upon the trial the defendants tendered to John Griffiths, in open court, $5,000 of the capital stock of the Oriental Hotel Company, which he declined to receive, and the court refused to compel him to accept, but instructed the jury to find for Griffiths for the amount of his claim, without deducting the $5,000 in stock so tendered. This action of the court was assigned as error.

We have carefully examined the record in this cause, and find no error in the judgment of the court of civil appeals, upon any points set up in the petition for writ of error, except that specified in the third ground. We shall therefore not discuss any other question in the case, as the opinion of the court of civil appeals, as we think, clearly expresses the law applicable to the rights of the parties. By the judgment of the district court, which was affirmed by the court of civil appeals, the mechanic's lien of John Griffiths was foreclosed on all of the property described in the petition, including the lands and improvements thereon, and the mechanics' liens of Eaton & Prince Company, Baker & Smith Company, Wallace L. De Wolf, and W. G. Neiman were foreclosed on all of said property, "save and except the land and basement and foundation of the said hotel building," which liens were declared to be superior and paramount to the lien of any other party to the suit. The judgment directed that the clerk issue an order of sale to the sheriff or any constable of Dallas county, commanding him to sell the property in satisfaction of the judgment, and that he sell the lands and the basement and foundation of said hotel building separately from the balance of the said hotel building, applying the proceeds arising from the sale of "the land and basement and foundation of the building" to the satisfaction of the judgment in favor of John Griffiths, and if any surplus remain after paying the judgment of John Griffiths, that it be paid to the Oriental Investment Company; and that he apply the proceeds arising from the sale of the balance of the said hotel building in satisfaction of the judgments in favor of the Eaton & Prince Company, the Baker & Smith Company, Wallace L. De Wolf, and W. G. Neiman, and to payment of any balance which may remain unpaid on said judgment in favor of John Griffiths, in case his judgment had not been satisfied out of the proceeds of the "sale of the land and the basement and foundation of the said building." And if the proceeds realized from the sale of said property, except "the land and basement and foundation," be not sufficient to pay and discharge all said judgments, including the balance due on said Griffiths judgment, then said judgment and the balance of said Griffiths judgment shall be paid pro rata. If any surplus remain after paying all of the said judgments in full, the same to be paid to the Oriental Investment Company. In case the proceeds arising from said sale shall not be sufficient to pay all of said judgments in full, the respective plaintiffs to have execution against the defendant the Oriental Hotel Company for the collection of such balance. Article 3179 of the Revised Statutes provides: "All liens for work and labor done or things furnished, as specified in this act, shall be upon an equal footing, without reference to the date of filing the account or lien; and in all cases where a sale shall be ordered and the property sold, which may be described in any account or lien, the proceeds arising from such sale, if not sufficient to discharge all the liens against the same, without reference to the date of filing the account or lien, shall be paid pro rata on the respective liens." It will be seen that, if we disregard the deed of trust made by the hotel company to the St. Louis Trust Company, all of the plaintiffs in this case would have participated equally with John Griffiths in the proceeds of the sale of the land, the foundation, and the basement of the hotel building. By the judgment entered, the plaintiffs, except John Griffiths, were denied the right of participation in the proceeds of the sale of such land, foundation, and basement, which could only be affected in case some superior right had intervened between the right of John Griffiths and the other plaintiffs.

30 L. R. A.

In order, therefore, for us to decide upon the correctness of the judgment entered, we must determine as to the priority of the deed of trust over the liens of those plaintiffs who did work or furnished material under contracts entered into with the hotel company subsequent to the date of the deed of trust. It is claimed by the Oriental Investment Company, the purchaser under the deed of trust, that the said deed of trust held a prior and first lien upon the land and building so far as then constructed, and as it was to be thereafter completed, from the date of the making and recording of the said deed of trust, as against all claims arising thereafter out of the construction of the said building. This claim is based upon the language of a resolution of the board of directors of the hotel company, embodied in and made a part of the deed of trust. If the legal effect of the deed of trust would have been to give such prior lien without expressing it in the instrument, then the use of the language was wholly unnecessary, and conferred no right that would not have existed. If, on the other hand, the deed of trust, without the use of this language, would not have created such prior and paramount lien, as against subsequent mechanics' liens, then the use of that language could not affect the rights of persons who were not parties thereto, and whose liens had their foundation in the laws of the state, and were not dependent upon contracts between the parties with reference thereto. It follows, therefore, that a proper consideration of the rights of the parties and the question involved demand that the language relied upon should be disregarded, and that the legal effect of the instrument should alone be considered. The proposition made by the hotel company to the trust company—the deed of trust and the bond given by the hotel company to the trust company—show that the erection of the hotel building had been begun and its continuance to completion was fully contemplated by the parties. Specifications of the work to be done accompanied the proposition, and the proposition upon which the deed of trust itself was based provided that the money received from sale of the bonds should remain in the hands of the trust company, to be paid out by it to persons who might furnish material or perform labor in the prosecution of the work; and the bond given by the hotel company to the trust company provided that in case any liens created upon the said building should not be discharged within 60 days after the expenditure of the $250,000 procured by the sale of the bonds, then the hotel company should furnish sufficient funds to discharge such liens. The facts clearly indicate that the parties, at the time of making the trust deed, understood that liens superior to that of that instrument might accrue thereafter, and carefully provided for protection against them. The law in force in Texas at that time gave to all persons who might furnish material, fixtures, or tools, or who might labor in the construction of the said building, a lien upon the lands and the building to secure payment therefor. The parties contracted with reference to and in view of the law as it then existed, and must be charged with notice of such rights as might accrue in the course of constructing the building, even if they had not been actually contemplated by the parties. Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 451, 25 L. ed. 1060. When a building or other improvement is in course of construction, and any person takes a mortgage on the land upon which such building or improvement is situated, or on the improvement itself, he does so with the knowledge that it may be necessary for the completion of the building that other contracts should be made for labor and material, and it is clearly the policy of this state, as shown by its statute law, that an intervening mortgagee shall not destroy the statutory rights of persons that may be acquired thereafter in the course of constructing such building. The deed of trust in this case expressly reserved a lien upon the building thereafter to be constructed, and it is evident from the facts that the principal security for the bonds which were being sold was to be created by the completion of the contemplated hotel building. If the position taken by the counsel for the Oriental Investment Company be correct, then an intervening mortgagee could arrest the progress of such work, destroy the 80 L. R. A.

statutory rights and liens of all persons who might be engaged in the work, and assert a lien by contract which would be superior to that given by the law under which the contract was made. This, we believe, cannot be maintained.

It is claimed, however, that the lien given by the statute (Sayles' Civ. Stat. art. 3171) does not give priority to mechanics' liens over mortgages and encumbrances existing upon the land or improvements at the time that the work is done or material furnished for which the statutory lien is claimed. To sustain this position reference is made to Trammell v. Mount, 68 Tex. 210, in which Judge Willie, in delivering the opinion of the court, uses this language: "The lien of a mechanic, though not fixed before the record of the contract or bill of particulars, when it is fixed relates back to the time when the work was performed or the material furnished, and hence takes precedence of all claims to the property improved which have been fastened upon it since that time." In that case the question was as to priority between the lien of a materialman and an attaching creditor. The only question before the court was whether or not the materialman's lien was prior to that of the attachment, the material having been furnished before levy of the attachment. It did not involve the question now before this court. Besides, that decision was made under the act of 1885 (Sayles' Civ. Stat. art. 3171), which reads as follows: "The lien herein provided for shall attach to the buildings, erections, or improvements for which they were furnished, or the work was done, in preference to any prior lien or encumbrance or mortgage upon the land on which said buildings, erections, improvements, or machinery have been put or labor performed, and the person enforcing the same may have such building, erection, or improvements sold separately; provided, any lien, encumbrance, or mortgage existing on the land or improvements at the time of the accrual of the lien herein provided for shall not be affected thereby." In 1889 the legislature amended article 3171, as above quoted, there being no material difference in the language used in the first clause of that section as amended, from that used in the original article. The proviso in the article, as amended in 1889, reads thus: "Provided any lien, encumbrance, or mortgage on the land or improvement at the time of the inception of the lien herein provided for, shall not be affected thereby, and holders of such liens need not be made parties in suits to foreclose liens herein provided for." The language of this proviso differs from that embraced in the original article only in the omission of the word "existing," which does not change the meaning of the law, and in the use of the word "inception," in lieu of the word "accrual." In view of the fact that the former act had been by the supreme court of this state construed as fixing the time when the lien began at the date when the work was done or material furnished, and the further fact that the word "accrual," as used in the former statute, and upon which that decision must have been based, is replaced by the word "inception," we must conclude that the legislature intended to make a change as to the time at which the lien given by the statute should begin; otherwise, the amendment would have been useless. What is meant by the "inception of the lien," as used in the statute, we must determine from a consideration of the language of the proviso in connection with other provisions of the law. The Constitution of this state secures to mechanics, artisans, and materialmen a lien upon the buildings and articles made or repaired by them for the value of their labor done thereon, or the material furnished therefor, and commands the legislature to provide by law for the speedy and efficient enforcement of said liens. Const. art. 16, § 37. In obedience to this mandate the legislature has enacted the laws referred to, which will be liberally construed in order to secure the rights guaranteed by the Constitution. By article 8179, Rev. Stat. heretofore quoted, all liens are put upon an equal footing, and each mechanic, materialman, or laborer participates in the lien created by the statute, from the foundation to the final completion of the structure. The man who lays the foundation has an equal claim upon the whole structure with all others, and the man who completes the work has an equal claim upon the foundation with him who does the work thereon or furnishes the material therefor. The lien, then, which is secured by statute, extends in favor of each, from the beginning to the completion of the work, and if it so extends and embraces all that has been done from the beginning to the completion, its "inception" must be the time to which it is made to relate in giving effect. The word "inception" means "initial stage." Century Dict. It does not refer to a state of actual existence, but to a condition of things or circumstances from which the thing may develop. When the building has been projected, and construction of it entered upon,—that is, contracted for,—the circumstances exist out of which all future contracts for labor and material necessary to its completion may arise, and for all such labor and material a common lien is given by the statute; and in this state of circumstances the lien to secure each has its "inception." Under a statute in the state of Iowa by which the mechanic's lien is made to attach from "the commencement of the building, erection, or other improvement" (Revision 1860, § 1853), it has been held that "all persons furnishing material or labor in the construction and completion of any building, erection, or improvement acquires a lien upon the entire building or improvement, superior to the lien of any mortgage which may be given by the owner upon the lands or improvements subsequent to the beginning of the work on such building or improvement." Neilson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co. 44 Iowa, 73; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 443, 25 L. ed. 1057. In Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. it was held that where a railroad was built by sections, and after the completion of one section of the road a mortgage was given and bonds issued, constituting a first-mortgage lien upon the entire road built and to be constructed, contractors and laborers who furnished material and labor in the construction of the subsequent sections of the road, and after the record of the mortgage and issue of the bonds, had a lien upon the entire road for the work so done. The reasoning in that case is very conclusive as to the right and justice of this construction of the statute. It is true that the language of the statute of Iowa is more definite in its terms than the statute of this state, but we believe that a proper construction of our statute, as above shown, gives to it the effect that was given to the Iowa statutes in the cases cited.

If the construction claimed by the plaintiffs in error be given to the statute of this state it would result in many absurd and unjust consequences. For example, let us suppose that Griffiths's contract called for the completion of the hotel building, except the portions for which the other plaintiffs furnished material or upon which they performed labor, and that Griffiths's contract had been complied with and the building completed, except the portions last named, and that after this was done Griffiths's claim remaining unpaid, the deed of trust had been executed, as it was in this case, before the contracts were made under which the other plaintiffs acquired their rights. Now, by the construction claimed, Griffiths would have a prior lien upon the entire building, including all that the other plaintiffs had furnished, either in material or labor, and yet they who furnished the material or labor would have only a second lien thereon, for the reason that the mortgage intervening would take precedence over them. If we adopt the construction of the statute which seems to have been applied by the district court and approved by the court of civil appeals, the result will be, in such case as that stated above, that Griffiths would have his lien upon all the work completed by him, and would be allowed to participate in the proceeds of that which had been added by the other plaintiffs, while they would be denied their statutory right to participate with him in the portion completed before the mortgage was given. Suppose that Griffiths had the entire contract for building the house, except the plastering and painting, and that, before the plastering and painting were done, the mortgage had been given; then the result would be that Griffiths would have his lien upon the entire building, painted and plastered, while the other parties, who did the plastering and painting, and furnished the material therefor, would have a lien, equally with Griffiths, only upon the plastering and painting as it might be upon the walls, woodwork, or other parts of the house. Would it be practicable to separate these, in case of a foreclosure of the lien and sale, so as to adjust the rights of the parties in the proceeds of that portion consisting of the plastering and painting? In fact, it would be almost impossible to construct a house of any considerable value, except upon cash payments, without making such complications between the parties as would render it impracticable, if not impossible, to adjust their equities under any such rule of construction as that upon which this judgment is based. When a statute is plain and unambiguous in its terms, and not susceptible of more than one construction, courts are not concerned with the consequences that may result therefrom, but must enforce the law as they find it. But when a statute is ambiguous in its terms, or susceptible of two constructions, then the evil results and hardships which may follow one construction may be properly considered by the court, and it is right that the court shall place upon the statute that interpretation, of which it is fairly susceptible, which will attain the just solution of the questions involved and protect the rights of all parties. Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 324. The construction that we place upon the statutes of this state, to the effect that when the erection of any building or construction of any improvement is begun, that constitutes the inception of all subsequent liens, is consistent with the entire body of the statute laws of this state on the subject, preserves the equality of all those who contribute to the construction of the building, and affords an easy solution and just result in case of intervening liens; for it is but just that he who acquires a lien upon property under such circumstances, and seeks to derive to himself the benefits of the improvement to be made, enhancing in value the security thus obtained, should be charged with notice that those who thereafter perform labor upon or furnish material for the completion of such improvement will be protected, under the law, in the liens created by the statute. Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 443, 25 L. ed. 1057.

We therefore hold that, under the facts in this case, John Griffiths, Eaton & Prince Company, Baker & Smith Company, Wallace

L. De Wolf, and W. G. Neiman, as assignees of W. H. Spellman, were entitled to have their liens foreclosed upon the lot upon which the building was situated and the entire building, and that the same should have been sold as a whole, and the proceeds applied to the discharge of their several claims, if sufficient, and, if not sufficient, that they then be paid pro rata; and if there should be any surplus of such proceeds after payment of all of the said liens, then such surplus to be paid to the Oriental Investment Company, but in case the proceeds of such sale should not discharge the claims of the said parties, then that execution should issue against the Oriental Hotel Company for the balance remaining unpaid. The district court erred in ordering the sale of the land, foundation, and basement separately from the balance of the building, and in ordering the proceeds of such sale to be applied to the payment of Griffiths's claim, to the exclusion of the other lienholders, and also in ordering the building, other than the land, foundation, and basement, to be sold separately, and the proceeds distributed among the several lienholders; and the court of civil appeals erred in affirming the said judgment for that reason.

It is therefore ordered that the judgments of the District Court and of the Court of Civil Appeals be reversed, and that judgment be here rendered in favor of the plaintiffs below and W. G. Neiman for the several amounts for which judgment was rendered by the district court, and that the liens of all the said parties be foreclosed upon the land and the entire building, and the proceeds distributed in accordance with this opinion. It is further ordered that the plaintiffs in error recover from the defendants in error all costs of the court of civil appeals and of this court, and the defendants in error from the plaintiffs in error the costs of the district court.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

William F. VILAS, Resp't.,

v.

McDONOUGH MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Impleaded, etc., Appt.

(.....Wis.....)

A mechanic's lien for machinery placed in a mill is superior to a prior mortgage taken on the premises when the mill was unfinished and substantially without machinery, under Rev. Stat. § 3314, making such liens "prior to any other lien which originates subsequent to the commencement of the construction . . . or work" for which the lien is claimed.

(December 17, 1895.)

APPEAL by McDonough Manufacturing Company from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Ashland County in favor of plaintiff

NOTE.—See preceding case of Oriental Hotel Co. v. Griffiths (Tex.), ante, 765, and footnote thereto.
80 L. R. A.

in a proceeding to foreclose a mortgage to the exclusion of an alleged mechanic's lien claimed by appellant for machinery furnished and attached to the property mortgaged. Reversed.

Statement by Newman, J.:

This is an action to foreclose a mortgage on a lumber mill and other property in the city of Ashland. On the 31st day of December, 1890, the plaintiff lent to one Donald A. Kennedy, who was then the owner of the mill and land, $10,000, and took a mortgage thereon, dated the same day, and recorded on the 10th day of January, 1891, for security for its repayment. Before making the loan, the plaintiff made inquiry as to the title to the property, and as to encumbrances upon it, and was assured that there was no lien or encumbrance upon the property, and that there was no outstanding contract wherefrom any lien or encumbrance could arise. Kennedy had recently built the mill, which was still unfinished, and substantially without machinery. Afterwards he put in it machinery which he bought of the appellant. The appellant is a manufacturer of sawmill machinery, at Eau Claire, Wis. Between the 14th day of February, 1891, and the 4th day of May, 1891, it manufactured for, and sold and delivered to, Kennedy, sawmill machinery to the amount and value of $5,259.25, which was put into the mill, and became a part thereof. This machinery was manufactured and furnished to Kennedy pursuant to a verbal order or agreement made about November 5, 1890, whereby appellant agreed to manufacture the machinery, and ship it as ordered. The appellant commenced immediately to manufacture the machinery, and had some of it completed before the date of plaintiff's mortgage, and manufactured and shipped it all as ordered and previously agreed upon. The appellant filed its petition for a mechanic's lien October 26, 1891, claiming $4,259.25. The plaintiff made the appellant and other lien claimants defendants in his foreclosure action. The appellant set up its claim of lien, which it claimed to be prior and paramount to the lien of plaintiff's mortgage. The trial court decided against this claim, holding the plaintiff's mortgage to be the prior and paramount lien, and gave judgment accordingly. From this judgment the appeal is taken.

Mr. T. F. Frawley, for appellant:

The mechanic's lien of appellant for sawmill machinery and material, manufactured for and furnished to Kennedy under and in pursuance of the contract of November 5, 1890, to complete and equip his sawmill, theretofore commenced and then in the process of erection, attached to the 1 acre of land, upon which said sawmill is situate, from the date of the commencement of such sawmill, September 1, 1890, and is superior and paramount to plaintiff's said mortgage.

Sanborn & Berryman, Anno. Stat. § 3314, 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 88; Apperson v. Farrell, 56 Ark. 640; McCrea v. Craig, 23 Cal. 522; Marston v. Kenyon, 44 Conn. 350; Hartun Steam Heater Co. v. Gordon, 2 N. D. 246; Monroe v. West, 12 Iowa, 119, 79 Am. Dec. 524; Neilson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co. 44 Iowa, 71; Gardner v. Leck, 52 Minn. 522; Miller v. Stoddard, 54 Minn. 486; Merrigan v. English, 9 Mont. 118, 5 L. R. A. 837; Morris County Bank v. Rockaway Mfg. Co. 14 N. J. Eq. 189; Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Paulson, 28 N. J. Eq. 804; Hewson-Herzog Supply Co. v. Cook, 53 Minn. 534; American F. Ins. Co. v. Pringle, 2 Serg. & R. 188; Pennock v. Hooser, 5 Rawle, 292; Hahn's Appeal, 39 Pa. 409; Parriah & H.'s Appeal, 83 Pa. 111; Bassett v. Swartz, 17 R. I. 215; Davis v. Bilsland, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 659, 21 L. ed. 969; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 443, 25 L. ed. 1057; Meyer v. Egbert, 101 U. S. 728, 25 L. ed. 1078; Hall v. Hinckley, 32 Wis. 862; Lampson v. Bowen, 41 Wis. 484; Wisconsin Planing Mill Co. v. Schuda, 72 Wis. 277.

The appellant having made a binding contract to manufacture and furnish certain material for Kennedy's mill, and having entered upon the construction of such machinery and material prior to the execution of the mortgage, its lien for such machinery and material is prior to that of the mortgage, though none of the machinery and material was delivered on the ground until after the recording of such mortgage.

Carew v. Stubbs, 155 Mass. 549; Parriah & H.'s Appeal, supra; Edwards & McC. Lumber Co. v. Mosher, 88 Wis. 672.

The machinery and material having been furnished by appellant to Kennedy as a part of a continuous account, the contract therefore must be regarded as an entirety, and its character is neither changed nor the right of appellant affected because such machinery and material were furnished from time to time, as the progress of the building required.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 74, 151; Mellor v. Valentine, 8 Colo. 255; Squires v. Fithian, 27 Mo. 135; Hahn's Appeal, 39 Pa. 409; Hofer's Appeal, 116 Pa. 360; Spruhen v. Stout, 52 Wis. 517.

Plaintiff knew that although material might thereafter be delivered to complete and equip such mill, that although the same was not actually used and employed therein, still a lien therefor would attach of the date of the commencement of the building.

Odd Fellows' Hall v. Masser, 24 Pa. 508, 64 Am. Dec. 875; Singerly v. Doerr, 62 Pa. 9; Cooper v. Cleghorn, 50 Wis. 113; Spruhen v. Stout, supra.

He knew that, although Kennedy, after the giving of such mortgage, might make alterations in the mill as originally designed, and, though not then contemplated either by Kennedy or himself, provided such alterations did not change the design and purpose of the building so that the whole when finished was not substantially a different building from the one first commenced, that a lien for the work and material so done and furnished would relate back to the period when the building was commenced, to the exclusion of the intervening encumbrance.

Phillips, Mechanics' Lien Law, 220; Hartun Steam Heater Co. v. Gordon, 2 N. D. 246.

In determining the right of the materialman, under a mechanic's lien claim, the question is not whether the original contract is binding, but whether the material was furnished in the ordinary progress of the building, with an understanding that it should be so furnished.

Hofer's Appeal, 116 Pa. 360.

Though the original contract were but a mere understanding, and the various items of machinery were furnished from time to time, and some not specified were so furnished, still, under the mechanic's lien law, it will be treated as one contract.

Spruhen v. Stout, 52 Wis. 517.

If the work be done for and on the credit of the building, the place where it is done can make no difference.

Singerly v. Doerr, 62 Pa. 9; Parriah & H.'s Appeal, 83 Pa. 111; Spruhen v. Stout, supra.

Neither this court, nor any other court, in construing this or like statutes, discriminates against a materialman who furnished materials for the construction of a building because such material may have been machinery.

Stockwell v. Campbell, 39 Conn. 362, 12 Am. Rep. 393; Parriah & H.'s Appeal, supra; Girard

Point Storage Co. v. Riehle (Pa.) 11 Cent. Rep. 156; Bodley v. Denmead, 1 W. Va. 249; Cooper v. Cleghorn, 50 Wis. 118; Spruhen v. Stout, supra; Lampson v. Bowen, 41 Wis. 484.

Messrs. Winkler, Flanders, Smith, Bottum, & Vilas, for respondent:

The statute for mechanics' liens proceeds upon just principles in entire consistency with the registry laws, and thus imposes notice of a possible lien only when the changed condition of the premises, by reason of the lien claimant having begun to apply labor or materials thereto, fairly and naturally puts one interested to inquiry.

Attachment to the realty is the essential, and with its beginning commences the lien.

Jessup v. Stone, 18 Wis. 467; Rees v. Ludington, 18 Wis. 277, 80 Am. Dec. 741; Chapman v. Wadleigh, 33 Wis. 273; Wisconsin Planing Mill Co. v. Schuda, 72 Wis. 277; Kendall Mfg. Co. v. Rundle, 78 Wis. 150; McLagan v. Brown, 11 Ill. 528; Gaty v. Casey, 15 Ill. 189; Williams v. Chapman, 17 Ill. 428, 65 Am. Dec. 669; Smith v. Moore, 26 Ill. 392; Lomax v. Dore, 45 Ill. 879; Denmead v. Bank of Baltimore, 9 Md. 179; Farmers' Bank v. Winslow, 8 Minn. 86, 74 Am. Dec. 740; Knox v. Starks, 4 Minn. 20; Wentworth v. Tubbs, 68 Minn. 388; Monroe v. West, 12 Iowa, 121, 79 Am. Dec. 524; Welch v. Porter, 63 Ala. 225; Tritch v. Norton, 10 Colo. 337.

Were the appellant's theory correct, it has proved no such completed contract, prior to the mortgage, as would justify the court in referring the lien to its date.

Spruhen v. Stout, 52 Wis. 517.

The appellant is not entitled to date back its lien to the commencement of the building, but it begins with the commencement of the work of erecting or constructing such machinery so as "to be or become part of the freehold on which it is to be situated."

Phillips v. Stone, 25 Ill. 81; Hahn's Appeal, 39 Pa. 409.

In Dugan v. Scott, 37 Mo. App. 663, and McAdow v. Sturtevant, 41 Mo. App. 220, a statute which by its terms seemed to subject all prior encumbrances to liens, was construed inapplicable to mortgages so far as to affect their claim on the property as mortgaged.

Decisions which go upon statutes so different from ours are inapplicable. The words of our statute applicable to the subject of machinery bring it within a different class of cases.

Huttig Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Denny Hotel Co. 6 Wash. 122; Barber v. Reynolds, 44 Cal. 519; Root v. Bryant, 57 Cal. 48; Soule v. Davies, 7 Cal. 575; Welch v. Porter, 63 Ala. 225; Tritch v. Norton, 10 Colo. 337; Irvine v. Hovey, 3 Phila. 373.

Newman, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question is whether the appellant's lien for machinery supplied to Kennedy's mill after the date of the execution of the plaintiff's mortgage upon the mill property is prior and paramount to the lien of the mortgage. This question must be determined upon the proper interpretation of the statute which gives the lien. It is section 3314 of the Revised Statutes. So far as material to the question to be decided, it reads as follows: "Every person who, as principal contractor, architect, civil engineer, or surveyor, performs any work or labor, furnishes any materials, or prepares any plans or estimates for, in, or about the erection, construction, repair, or removal, of any dwelling house or other building, or any machinery erected or constructed so as to be or become a part of the freehold upon which it is situated, . . . shall have a lien thereupon, and upon the interest of the owner of such dwelling house, building, machinery, . . . in and to the land upon which the same is situated. . . . Such lien shall be prior to any other lien which originates subsequent to the commencement of the construction . . . or work aforesaid of, or upon such dwelling house, building, machinery, . . . and shall also attach to and be a lien upon the real property of any person on whose premises such improvements are made."

The object of the interpretation of a statute is to ascertain what the legislature intended to accomplish by it. When that intention is ascertained, that is the law. Statutes giving what are called "mechanics' liens" provide new remedies not given by the common law. They are supplementary to the common law, and remedial in their nature, and are to be fairly, even liberally, interpreted, so as to make the remedial purpose of the legislature effectual. The statute recited above, so far as relates to the question involved, gives liens in two classes of cases. It gives liens to persons who furnish materials for the construction of buildings, and to persons who erect machinery on the lands of others. The latter case is not included in the former, but is supplementary or additional to it. It provides for cases which are not within the former provision. The mechanics' lien statute, as at first enacted and in force, had only the former provision. The latter was subsequently added for the purpose of including within the benefits of the statute cases not already within it. While the statute as it now stands, with both cases included within it, was re-enacted as a whole in the revision of 1878, it no doubt bears the same interpretation as if the two provisions were contained in separate statutes. The case of one who furnishes the machinery for the construction of a new mill is the case of one who furnishes materials for the construction of a building. The machinery, when attached, becomes a part of the building, and is real estate. The building without the machinery is no mill. The building with the machinery attached becomes a mill, but still is described by the generic term "building." It is subject to the liens which the statute gives to such as furnish materials for the construction of a building. This seems to be elementary, and to require no amplification. But it may be confirmed by citation of authority. Phillips, Mechanics' Liens, 3d ed. § 177, says: "Fixtures, machinery, etc., when necessary to the original purposes of the structure, and erected with it, may become responsible to the lien, when they would not otherwise have been without express enactment, if put up independently. As between the owner and mechanic, everything put into and forming part of a building, or machinery for manufacturing purposes, and essential to the manufactory, is a part of the freehold, as wheels of a mill etc., . . . and are subject to the mechanics' lien law." In Summerville v. Wann, 87 Pa. 182, it was held that a statute which provides that "every building erected . . . shall be subject to a lien for the payment of all debts contracted for work done or materials furnished for or about the erection or construction of the same" gives a lien against the building for engines and machinery constituting a part of a new mill. In Dimmick v. Cook Co. 115 Pa. 578, it was held, under the same statute, that a lien was given on a new hotel for furnishing such articles for its construction as "heating, laundry, and cooking apparatus." In Dickey's Appeal, 115 Pa. 78, it was held that a battery of boilers, imbedded in brick and stone and mortar, a funnel chimney or stack, built on firm foundation, and extending through the roof, the engines, cranes, wire mills, furnace trains, and other fixtures firmly attached to the realty, all a part of the realty, and all together constituting one plant, are all part of the building, within the meaning of the law which gives a lien upon the building for materials furnished in its construction. So, it must be considered that the appellant has a right to a lien upon the mill building and the freehold, as one who has furnished materials for its construction. It is within the former class,—a lien upon the building itself. Being a lien upon the building itself, it is not a lien upon machinery otherwise provided for. This being established, there is little occasion to consider what cases come within that provision which gives a lien to the person who erects machinery on the lands of another. Probably it will be found that all are cases where the machinery erected does not become a constituent part of a building, upon which a lien might be had. The wind-mills found upon so many of the farms are samples. Where a lien is given on the building itself, there can be no lien upon the details or constituent parts of the building. The greater includes the less. This seems to be evident.

The appellant's lien, being upon the building itself, is prior and paramount to any other lien which has originated subsequently to the commencement of the construction of the mill, by express provision of the statute itself. It is prior and paramount to the plaintiff's mortgage, which was executed since the commencement of the building. The fact that the plaintiff had not begun to furnish the machinery for which his lien is claimed, at the mill, at the time when the plaintiff made his loan and took his mortgage, is irrelevant to the question. This was so decided in Lampson v. Bowen, 41 Wis. 484. That case was, in some of its features, very much like the present case. It can almost be said to be a precedent for this case. Granted that furnishing machinery is furnishing materials for the building, and it is on all fours with this case. It was a question between the holder of a mortgage executed while a dwelling house was in process of erection on the premises, and a line claimant for labor and materials furnished subsequently to the execution and recording of the mortgage. It arose on a motion of the mortgagee to be let in to defend against the lien claimant. The motion was based upon an affidavit which alleged that none of the work was done or materials were furnished prior to the execution or recording of the mortgage. The court says: "To construe the statute to mean that such lien should commence to run from the time the mechanic commenced work on the house, or the materialman commenced to furnish materials therefor, and should only be paramount to liens which originated after that time, but subject to liens which originated before that time and after the erection of the building was commenced, would be to pervert the language and plain meaning of the statute." The condition of the building, its unfinished state, was notice to the plaintiff, within the contemplation of the law, that further expenses for the completion of the building, for its original purpose as a mill, were in contemplation, which in some contingency, not remotely likely to happen, might eventuate in a lien which would be prior and paramount to the lien of his mortgage. Chapman v. Wadleigh, 83 Wis. 267.

That part of the judgment appealed from is reversed, and the cause remanded, with direction to modify the judgment in accordance with this opinion.

Cassoday, Ch. J., dissenting:

It is found by the trial court, and remains unchallenged, that on or about September 1, 1890, the defendant Kennedy commenced the erection of his mill in Ashland, and that the "building was practically completed" by him before he gave the note and mortgage to the plaintiff. It is conceded by my brethren that the mere "order or agreement," made about eight weeks prior to the execution of the plaintiff's mortgage, whereby the defendant company "agreed to manufacture the machinery and ship it as ordered," did not of itself create a lien upon the building or land in favor of the company. It is, moreover, conceded that the mere fact that, in pursuance of that order or agreement, the company commenced to manufacture at its shops in Eau Claire some of such machinery, and actually had some of it completed at such shops, prior to the making or recording of that mortgage, did not of itself create a lien upon the building or land in favor of the company. The trial court found, and it remains unchallenged, that the first machinery shipped by the company from Eau Claire to Kennedy, at Ashland, was on January 22, 1891,—twenty-two days after the plaintiff, relying upon assurances that there was no lien or encumbrance upon the property, loaned the money and took the mortgage, and twelve days after that mortgage had been recorded. From what has been stated, it logically follows, and must be conceded, that the lien in favor of the company was wholly created by what took place between January 22, 1891, and May 4, 1891, inclusive, as mentioned in the opinion filed.

This being so, the company is in no more favorable position than it would have been if the "order or agreement" for the machinery had been made after the recording of the mortgage, and the same had all been subsequently manufactured. It follows, as a necessary sequence, that, at the time the plaintiff loaned his money and took the mortgage, the building and land in question were free and clear from any encumbrance in favor of the company, and that the same continued to be true, not only up to the time of recording of the mortgage, but for several days thereafter. All this is, in effect, conceded by my brethren; but, as they construe our statute, they feel constrained to hold that, although the lien in favor of the company was wholly created after the recording of the plaintiff's mortgage, yet that, when so created, it related back to the commencement of the building, September 1, 1890; and thus became "prior and paramount to any other lien which has originated subsequently to the commencement of the construction of the mill, by express provision of the statute itself," and hence "is prior and paramount to the plaintiff's mortgage, which was executed since the commencement of the building." Under such construction of the statute, the company's lien would have so related back and become prior and paramount to the plaintiff's mortgage, even had the lien not been created for several months or even for several years after the recording of the mortgage; and this would be so even if Kennedy borrowed the money with the avowed purpose of paying for such machinery, and otherwise keeping out of debt. The decision is to the effect that the company and Kennedy were, by transactions which occurred wholly after the recording of the plaintiff's mortgage, enabled, by virtue of the statute, to divest the plaintiff's lien, and render the same subordinate and subject to the lien in favor of the company for machinery thereafter sold and delivered, to the amount of $5,259.25; and that, too, without the consent or knowledge of the mortgagee, and without any notice to him, actual or constructive. True, it is said in the opinion filed, in effect, that the completed building, without the machinery in it, was notice to the plaintiff, within the contemplation of law, that further expenses were in contemplation, which "might eventuate in a lien which would be prior and paramount to the lien of his mortgage." The fact that Kennedy had completed the construction of the building, and that the same and the land upon which it was situated were free and clear of all liens and encumbrances at the time he borrowed the $10,000 and gave the mortgage thereon, as security, would seem to indicate to the ordinary mind that he did not contemplate running in debt for the machinery. But the mortgagee was not bound to take notice of things which at the time of taking and recording his mortgage had no existence, except in the "contemplation" of the mortgagor; and there only, in the language of the opinion filed, in case of "some contingency not remotely likely to happen."

The statute, as construed by the majority 30 L. R. A.

of the court, is in my judgment repugnant to that provision of the Constitution of the United States which declares that "no state shall . . . deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." Amend. art. 14, § 1. That provision was ordained and established for the very purpose of taking away from every state and its legislature every one of the powers thus prohibited. A majority of this court have just held, in an opinion by my Brother Newman, that notice of forty days by publication in case of street assessments is not such due process of law as to conclude and bar the lot owner. Hayes v. Douglas County (Wis.) (not yet officially reported) 65 N. W. 482. But here, as indicated, the plaintiff is divested of substantial property rights without any notice. True, the validity of the statute, as thus construed, was not discussed at the bar, and is not mentioned in the opinion filed. Nevertheless, the effect of the decision is to divest the plaintiff of a vested right of property, without any notice, and by reason of transactions which occurred wholly after the recording of the mortgage, and which transactions had no existence at the time of recording the mortgage, except as mere contingent possibilities in the contemplations of the mortgagor and the company. But it is unnecessary to extend this discussion in a mere dissenting opinion on a point not mentioned, but necessarily decided, in the opinion filed. Besides, four years ago, my views upon a similar question were expressed, and numerous authorities cited in support of them, in dissenting opinion in Mallory v. La Crosse Abattoir Co. 80 Wis. 180-186. That decision gave a lien to a subcontractor without regard to the contract price or the sum due from the owner to the principal contractor. As there indicated, the validity of such legislation must finally be determined by the Supreme Court of the United States, and that, until so determined, the question is open to the expression of opinion. In addition to the authorities cited in that opinion in support of the views here expressed, see St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 158 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79; Wallace v. Georgia, C. & N. R. Co. 94 Ga. 782; State v. Julow (Mo.) 29 L. R. A. 257. The opinion in the case at bar, like all other decisions of this court in support of the validity of such legislation, fails to meet the objection upon which this dissent is based. It purports to be based upon the letter of the statute, assuming it to be a valid statute. The construction given is certainly far-reaching in its effects, and strikes at the fundamental right of parties to make their own contracts, and deal with property without being embarrassed by secret liens to be subsequently created. It frustrates and renders nugatory the salutary statute known as the "Recording Act." The plaintiff here had the right to rely upon the statute which made all prior and unrecorded conveyances void as against his mortgage, taken and recorded in good faith, and for full consideration paid. Rev. Stat. § 2241. A mortgage is a "conveyance," within the meaning of that section. Id. § 2242. Since that is so as to existing secret liens and conveyances, it must, for a much stronger reason, be so as to a lien not created until weeks after the plaintiff recorded his mortgage. In my judgment, the statute may be fairly construed as giving the lien only from the time the machinery began to be put into the building. And especially should it be so construed since the rule is well settled that where a statute is open to two interpretations, one of which would render it nugatory, and the other valid, that construction should be adopted which makes it valid. For the reasons given above and in my opinion in the Mallory Case, cited, I am compelled to dissent from the decision in this case.

J. F. FAUST, Appt.,

AMERICAN FIRE INSURANCE CO. of Philadelphia, Resp't.

(.....Wis.....)

1. A written special description of the subject-matter must control the printed clauses of an insurance policy whenever they are inconsistent.
2. Keeping a small quantity of benzine necessary for use in a furniture repair shop does not forfeit a policy of insurance thereon although the printed portion of it declares that it shall be void if benzine is kept on the premises, where the written portion of the policy insures the building as a "furniture store and repair shop."
3. An adjuster's visit to insured premises soon after a fire and his taking away a list of the property destroyed, which is not returned, with a denial of liability for the loss on the ground that the policy had been avoided, is a waiver of provisions of the policy requiring proofs of loss.

(October 22, 1895.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Dane County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on a policy of fire insurance. Reversed.

Statement by Marshall, J. :

This action was brought to recover loss sustained by the plaintiff under a standard insurance policy of the state of Wisconsin, issued by defendant. The written portion of the policy reads as follows :

"Joseph Faust: Four hundred dollars ($400) on his two-story frame, shingle-roof building and one-story frame addition thereto, occupied as a furniture store and repair shop, situated on the corner of East and River streets, village of Christiansa, Dane county, Wisconsin. Four hundred dollars ($400) on the stock of furniture, upholstery goods, and other merchandise, not more hazardous, usual to a retail furniture store, while contained therein."

The printed portion of the policy contained, among other things: "This entire policy, unless otherwise provided by agreement indorsed hereon or added hereto, shall be void . . . If (any usage or custom of trade or manufacture to the contrary notwithstanding) there be kept, used, or allowed on the above-described premises benzine . . ."

The policy also contained in the printed portion a provision requiring immediate notice in writing to the company in case of loss, and sworn proofs of loss within sixty days after date of fire. Also the following: "The company shall not be held to have waived any provision or condition of this policy, or of any forfeiture thereof, by any requirement, act, or proceeding on its part relating to the appraisal, or to any examination herein provided for. This policy is made and accepted subject to the foregoing stipulations and conditions, together with such other provisions, agreements, and conditions as may be indorsed hereon or added hereto; and no officer, agent, or other representative of this company shall have power to waive any provision or condition of this policy except such as by the terms of this policy may be the subject of agreement indorsed hereon or added hereto, and as to such provisions and conditions no officer, agent, or representative shall have such power, or be deemed or held to have waived such provisions or conditions, unless such waiver, if any, shall be written upon or added hereto; nor shall any privilege or permission affecting the insurance under this policy exist or be claimed by the insured unless so written or attached."

The answer alleged a breach of the condition prohibiting the keeping or use of benzine on the premises; also the failure on plaintiff's part to furnish proofs of loss as required by the policy. The evidence shows that the assured, at the time the policy was issued, and at the time of the fire, had a small amount of benzine on the premises, kept solely for use in the repair shop, and that it was necessary for such use. The evidence also shows that notice of the loss was given to the company the next morning after the fire; that soon thereafter the company's adjuster visited the scene, and was furnished by appellant with a list of the goods burned; that he then discovered that benzine had been kept on the premises, and thereupon notified the plaintiff that such fact rendered the policy void; that he took away with him the list of the property destroyed, furnished by plaintiff, and the same has ever since been retained by him or some one for the company. From that time on the defendant has refused to communicate with plaintiff with respect to the loss. The trial court granted defendant's motion for nonsuit upon the ground that the contract of insurance was rendered void by a violation of the provision prohibiting the keeping or use of benzine on the premises, and judgment was rendered accordingly.

NOTE.—In connection with the above case as to implied exceptions to condition against keeping hazardous articles on insured premises, see Marl v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. (Ga.) post, 895.

30 L. R. A.

Messrs. Burr, W. Jones and E. Ray Stevens, for appellant:

The fact that there were two gallons of benzine on the premises, used for the purposes stated in the testimony, was not a ground for forfeiture.

Hall v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 58 N. Y. 292, 17 Am. Rep. 255; Harper v. New York City Ins. Co. 23 N. Y. 441; Mears v. Humboldt Ins. Co. 92 Pa. 15, 87 Am. Rep. 647; Archer v. Merchants & Mfrs. Ins. Co. 43 Mo. 434; Vie's v. Germania Ins. Co. 26 Iowa, 9, 96 Am. Dec. 88; Collins v. Farmville Ins. & Rkg. Co. 79 N. C. 219, 28 Am. Rep. 822; Lounsbury v. Protection Ins. Co. 8 Conn. 459, 21 Am. Dec. 686; Rafferty v. New Brunswick F. Ins. Co. 18 N. J. L. 480, 88 Am. Dec. 525; Leggett v. Aetna Ins. Co. 10 Rich. L. 202; Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. DeGraff, 12 Mich. 124; Citizens' Ins. Co. v. McLaughlin, 58 Pa. 485; Moore v. Protection Ins. Co. 29 Me. 97, 48 Am. Dec. 514; Steinbach v. La Fayette F. Ins. Co. 54 N. Y. 90; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 5 Minn. 499; Bryant v. Poughkeepsie Mut. Ins. Co. 17 N. Y. 200; Com. v. Hyde & Leather Ins. Co. 112 Mass. 186, 17 Am. Rep. 73; Pindar v. Kings County F. Ins. Co. 86 N. Y. 648, 98 Am. Dec. 544.

If there is any inconsistency or conflict between the printed and the written clauses, the latter must prevail.

Harper v. New York City Ins. Co. supra; Benedict v. Ocean Ins. Co. 81 N. Y. 889.

The court is bound to construe the contract as strongly against the insurer and as favorably for the insured, as its terms will reasonably permit.

In order to work a forfeiture, a substantial breach must be established.

Kircher v. Milwaukee Mechanics' Mut. Ins. Co. 74 Wis. 470, 5 L. R. A. 779; Morse v. Buffalo, F. & M. Ins. Co. 80 Wis. 534, 11 Am. Rep. 587; Redman v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 47 Wis. 89, 82 Am. Rep. 751.

The defendant waived the alleged forfeiture. Wis. Rev. Stat. § 1977; Alkan v. New Hampshire Ins. Co. 53 Wis. 186; Schomer v. Hekla F. Ins. Co. 50 Wis. 575; Devine v. Home Ins. Co. 32 Wis. 471; Renier v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. 74 Wis. 94; Bourgeois v. Mutual F. Ins. Co. 86 Wis. 402; Palmer v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 44 Wis. 201; Oshkosh Gas-light Co. v. Germania F. Ins. Co. 71 Wis. 454; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Germania F. Ins. Co. 40 Wis. 446; Dohlantry v. Blue Mounds F. & L. Ins. Co. 88 Wis. 181; Jerde v. Cottage Grove F. Ins. Co. 75 Wis. 845; Wester v. Phenix Ins. Co. 86 Wis. 87, 17 Am. Rep. 479; Gans v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 43 Wis. 108, 28 Am. Rep. 535.

The proofs of loss were waived.

Zielke v. London Assur. Corp. 64 Wis. 442; Palmer v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. supra; Renier v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. 74 Wis. 89; Badger v. Phenix Ins. Co. 49 Wis. 896; Killins v. Putnam F. Ins. Co. 28 Wis. 472, 9 Am. Rep. 506; VanKirk v. Citizens' Ins. Co. 79 Wis. 627; Vangindertaelen v. Phenix Ins. Co. 82 Wis. 112.

The adoption of the standard fire insurance policy has not abolished the rule of law which holds that insurance policies are to be construed most strictly against the company.

Bourgeois v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. 86 30 L. R. A.

Wis. 606; Quilan v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 138 N. Y. 356; Wilcox v. Continental Ins. Co. 85 Wis. 193; Moore v. Hanover F. Ins. Co. 141 N. Y. 219; Germania F. Ins. Co. v. Home Ins. Co. 144 N. Y. 195, 26 L. R. A. 591; Parker v. Rochester German Ins. Co. 162 Mass. 479; Kyle v. Commercial Union Assur. Co. 144 Mass. 43.

Messrs. Bashford, O'Connor, & Aylward, for respondent:

The insurance was effected under the standard policy established by chapter 195, Laws of 1891; and the plaintiff was bound to know the conditions and contents of the contract accepted by him.

Wilcox v. Continental Ins. Co. 85 Wis. 193; Bonneville v. Western Assur. Co. 68 Wis. 293; Herbst v. Lowe, 65 Wis. 316; Sanger v. Dun, 47 Wis. 615, 82 Am. Rep. 789; Germania F. Ins. Co. v. Home Ins. Co. 144 N. Y. 195, 26 L. R. A. 591.

The prohibition in the policy against the keeping or use of benzine or other inflammable materials upon the premises affected the risk, and is to be more strictly enforced in favor of the insurer than the provisions relating to the mode of establishing and adjusting the loss. This is not a question of forfeiture, but what the contract really is, what risk the defendant assumed.

Binman v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 36 Wis. 159; McNally v. Phenix Ins. Co. 137 N. Y. 839.

The condition of the policy prohibiting the keeping or use of benzine or other inflammable materials was a part of the contract and in full force and effect, unless the provision in respect thereto was waived or modified in the manner prescribed in the policy.

Bourgeois v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. 86 Wis. 606; Wilcox v. Continental Ins. Co. supra; Carey v. German American Ins. Co. 84 Wis. 80, 20 L. R. A. 267; England v. Westchester F. Ins. Co. 81 Wis. 588; Stevens v. Queen Ins. Co. Id. 835; Knudson v. Hekla F. Ins. Co. 75 Wis. 198; Hankins v. Rockford Ins. Co. 70 Wis. 1; 1 Wood, Fire Ins. § 58, pp. 148-159; Steinbach v. Relief Ins. Co. 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 183, 20 L. ed. 615; Boulus v. Phenix Ins. Co. 133 Ind. 106, 20 L. R. A. 400; First Cong. Church v. Fitchburg Mut. F. Ins. Co. 158 Mass. 475; Kyle v. Commercial Union Assur. Co. 144 Mass. 43; Putnam Tool Co. v. Fitchburg Mut. F. Ins. Co. 145 Mass. 265; Porter v. United States L. Ins. Co. 160 Mass. 183; Parker v. Rochester German Ins. Co. 162 Mass. 479; Smith v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 60 Vt. 632, 1 L. R. A. 216; Tarbell v. Vermont Mut. F. Ins. Co. 68 Vt. 53.

The violation of this clause prohibiting the keeping or use of benzine or other inflammable materials avoids the policy, notwithstanding the fact that the fire which occasioned the loss may not have been caused by the presence of such materials. The contract of insurance became ipso facto void upon the breach of this condition, and from that time forward the company was no longer an insurer of the premises or property.

Morse v. Buffalo F. & M. Ins. Co. 80 Wis. 534, 11 Am. Rep. 587; Carey v. German American Ins. Co. 84 Wis. 80, 20 L. R. A. 267; Faulker v. Central F. Ins. Co. 1 Kerr (N. B.) 279; 1 Wood, Fire Ins. § 58, pp. 148-159; Plumer v. Phenix Ins. Co. 45 Wis. 622; Kircher v. Mil-

Waukees Mechanics' Mut. Ins. Co. 74 Wis. 470, 5 L. R. A. 779; O'Brien v. Home Ins. Co. 79 Wis. 899.

There was no waiver of any of the provisions or conditions of the policy.

Carey v. German American Ins. Co. supra; Baumgartel v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 136 N. Y. 547; Moore v. Hanover F. Ins. Co. 141 N. Y. 219; Parker v. Rochester German Ins. Co. and Knudson v. Hekla F. Ins. Co. supra.

The provision relating to proofs of loss is material and must be complied with.

Atina Ins. Co. v. People's Bank, 62 Fed. Rep. 222; Sagers v. Hawkeye Ins. Co. (Iowa) 68 N. W. 194; Quinlan v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 133 N. Y. 856; Carey v. Phenix Ins. Co. 84 Wis. 208; Burr v. German Ins. Co. Id. 78.

Marshall, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The main question presented on this appeal is whether the presence of a small amount of benzine on the premises for use in the repair shop rendered the contract of insurance void. Keeping in mind the undisputed evidence that the prohibited article was not kept as an article of merchandise for sale, but as an article usually and necessarily kept in operating the business of the repair department of the furniture store, which the policy expressly covered, we find abundant authority to support the general rule, which we adopt, that where a contract of insurance, by the written portion, covers property to be used in conducting a particular business, the keeping of an article necessarily used in such business will not avoid the policy, even though expressly prohibited in the printed conditions of the contract. To that effect are Mears v. Humboldt Ins. Co. 92 Pa. 17, 87 Am. Rep. 647; Viele v. Germania Ins. Co. 26 Iowa, 9, 96 Am. Dec. 88; Collins v. Farmville Ins. & Bkg. Co. 79 N. C. 279, 28 Am. Rep. 322,—cited by appellant's counsel, to which many may be added: Carrigan v. Lycoming F. Ins. Co. 53 Vt. 418, 38 Am. Rep. 687; Stout v. Commercial Union Assur. Co. 11 Biss. 813, 12 Fed. Rep. 554; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Updegraff, 48 Pa. 350, 353; Plinsky v. Germania F. & M. Ins. Co. 82 Fed. Rep. 47; Bryant v. Poughkeepsie Mut. Ins. Co. 17 N. Y. 200; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 5 Minn. 492 (Gil. 893); Whitmarsh v. Conway F. Ins. Co. 16 Gray, 859, 77 Am. Dec. 414; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago Ice Co. 36 Md. 102, 11 Am. Rep. 469; Carlin v. Western Assur. Co. 57 Md. 515, 40 Am. Rep. 440; Harper v. Albany Mut. Ins. Co. 17 N. Y. 197; Hall v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 58 N. Y. 293, 17 Am. Rep. 255, and many others. In the early case of Harper v. Albany Mut. Ins. Co. supra, it was held that the underwriters must be presumed to have been acquainted with the business and with the materials necessarily used in prosecuting it, and to have included such materials in the risk, the same as if each article had been particularly mentioned in the written portion of the policy; that the written portion in that regard will control the printed portion prohibiting the keeping of such articles. This case has been frequently cited and approved, and may be said to be strictly in line with the great weight of authority on the subject. In Hall v. Insurance Co. of N. A. supra, the court referred to Harper v. Albany Mut. Ins. Co. supra, and several others of like character, stating, in effect, that they were all cases where the use of the prohibited article was necessary in the business; while in the case then under consideration, it was only said to be usually used. It was sought by the insurance company to avoid the policy, notwithstanding, by distinguishing between necessary and customary use, but the court held that, under a policy covering a business, permission to use all articles ordinarily, as well as articles necessarily used, must be held to be given and covered by the contract of insurance. In Carlin v. Western Assur. Co. supra, the policy covered a factory and machinery, and prohibited the keeping or use of petroleum. The court held, in effect, that if the engine room and machinery were included in the description of the insured premises, the keeping of petroleum, although among the prohibited articles, would not avoid the policy if the evidence showed that it was an appropriate and customary article used in the assured's trade for lubricating machinery, and that he kept it solely for that purpose; that the insurance company, when it issued the policy, knew that the factory could not be run without machinery, and it must be supposed to have contracted with reference to such use as an ordinary incident of the business; that, if petroleum oil was usual and necessary, then such use must have been contemplated, though prohibited in the printed portion of the policy. The court concluded that the rule in respect to the question under consideration as stated is well settled. It must be recognized that there is some conflict in the authorities on this subject, but the great weight of authority fully sustains the rule as above stated.

In the light of the foregoing, obviously the contract of insurance which covered the building to be used as a repair shop in connection with the furniture store permitted all things necessary to the enjoyment of the property for such use. The clause in the written portion of the policy, "Four hundred dollars on the stock of furniture, upholstery goods, and other merchandise, not more hazardous, usual to a retail furniture store," must be construed to cover merchandise kept in the trade in the furniture store, and the words "not more hazardous" to refer to such merchandise only, and have no reference to the necessary articles kept for use in the repair shop. The words "any usage or custom of trade or manufacture to the contrary notwithstanding," contained in the printed portion of the policy, so far as they would otherwise prohibit the necessary use of benzine in the repair shop, must be held to be controlled by the written portion of the policy, which expressly insures the building in part as a repair shop; this upon the presumption, that must exist, that the parties intended that the repair shop as it was, and as it must necessarily continue to be if it continued at all, must be carried on with all usual and necessary incidents, and that as such it was protected by the contract of insurance; also by force of the well-established rule, that the written special description of the particular subject-matter, wherever inconsistent with the printed clauses of the policy, must control. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. McLaughlin, 58 Pa. 485; Cushman v. Northwestern Ins. Co. 34 Me. 487; Archer v. Merchants' & Mfrs. Ins. Co. 48 Mo. 484. The construction we thus give the policy renders the contract just and reasonable, and carries out the obvious intention of the parties to it. Any other construction would lead to the absurd result that the prohibitory clause of the policy would absolutely prevent the carrying on of the business expressly permitted in the written portion. No such absurdity can be held to have been contemplated by the parties, unless the terms of the contract are such as not to permit of any other reasonable construction. As said in Carlin v. Western Assur. Co. supra: "Where the contrary is not expressly made to appear it is not to be presumed that when an insurance is effected with reference to an established and current business, whose protection is really the object of the insurance, such a narrow and stringent construction of the provisions of the policy was intended as will necessarily cause its serious embarrassment or suspension."

The only other question which requires consideration is whether there has been a failure to comply with the condition requiring proofs of loss, so as to defeat a recovery on the policy. The circumstances of the defendant's adjuster's visit to plaintiff soon after the fire; his receiving and taking away a list of the property destroyed, furnished by plaintiff, and the retention of the same by the company or its agent; and the denial of liability for the loss on account of the presence of benzine on the premises,—are sufficient to constitute a waiver of the provisions of the policy requiring proofs of loss. Vankirk v. Citizens' Ins. Co. 79 Wis. 627; Zielke v. London Assur. Corp. 64 Wis. 442; McBride v. Republic F. Ins. Co. 30 Wis. 562; Parker v. Amazon Ins. Co. 84 Wis. 363; King v. Hekie F. Ins. Co. 58 Wis. 508; Harriman v. Queen Ins. Co. 49 Wis. 71; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Bachelder, 32 N. H. 490; Carson v. German Ins. Co. 62 Iowa, 433; Boyd v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co. 70 Iowa, 325; O'Brien v. Ohio Ins. Co. 52 Mich. 131.

In McBride v. Republic F. Ins. Co. supra, the court held that when the agent of the insurance company, after examining upon the spot the circumstances attending the loss, told plaintiff he could not recommend the company to pay the loss for certain reasons, it was a denial of all liability on the part of the company, and a waiver of its right to demand the usual proofs of loss. That substantially fits this case. The adjuster visited the premises, and when he discovered the presence of benzine, according to his testimony, he did very little further, and told the assured the policy was to all intents and purposes void; that he could do nothing for him; and that he, the assured, would have to present his claim to the company as provided by the policy. That, coupled with the refusal of the company to hold any communication thereafter with the assured, constituted a denial of liability by the company on the ground of a violation of the clause prohibiting the use of benzine on the premises, and effectually waived proofs of loss. It follows from the foregoing that the judgment of the circuit court must be reversed, and a new trial granted.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause remanded for a new trial.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT.

E. R. MERRIMAN, Respnt.,

v.

J. A. WALTON et al., Appls.

(105 Cal. 408.)

1. Relief will not be denied to one seeking to enjoin the execution of a judgment

NOTE.—Injunctions against judgments obtained by fraud, accident, mistake, surprise, and duress.

I. Equity jurisdiction.

II. Fraud in obtaining judgments.

a. By agreement.

1. Generally.
2. To dismit.
3. To give notice.
4. To abide by other matters.
5. To allow a defense.
6. To continue or delay.
7. To compromise.
8. Where complainant participated in fraud.

b. By concealment.

- c. In matters of record.
- d. In matters of party.
- e. In acts committed at the trial.
- f. By collusion.
- g. Other matters.

ment because he might have sought it under a different form of action, in a state where the various kinds of relief are administered by the same tribunal, and there is but one form of civil action for the enforcement or protection of civil rights.

2. The entering of a default judgment pending negotiations for a transfer of the

III. On account of accident.

a. Sickness.

1. Of party.
2. Of family.
3. Of witness.
4. Of attorney.

b. Death of attorney.

c. Other causes.

IV. On account of mistake.

a. Of law.

b. Of fact.

V. On account of surprise.

a. Generally.

- b. In matters of witnesses.
- c. In regard to perjury.

VI. On account of duress.

In MERRIMAN v. WALTON, an injunction was allowed against a judgment on account of fraud practiced by the attorney of the successful party with the co-operation of the justice, and which cause to another jurisdiction, which is concealed until the time for appeal has expired, followed by the justice's refusal to vacate the same, will entitle the defendant to have the execution of the judgment enjoined.

3. A defendant against whom a default fraud was not discovered until after time for appeal had expired, although relief had been denied in the justice's court, holding that where the relief was denied in matters of fraud, and there was no appeal, equity will relieve, and the complainant is not compelled to resort to the remedy of certiorari. This is in accord with the general doctrine.

I. Equity jurisdiction.

The rule is, that an injunction will not be granted unless the judgment was against conscience because the injured party had a just defense of which he could not avail himself at law, or had a legal defense of which he was ignorant, or was prevented from making by fraud, accident, mistake, or surprise, and that the failure to defend was unmixed with negligence of himself or his agent.

This rule seems universal and has been reiterated substantially in the above form, or conversely in an affirmative form. The following cases state the rule in a negative form: Abraham v. Camp, 4 Ill. 290; Buckmaster v. Grundy, 8 Ill. 626; Stetson v. Goldsmith, 81 Ala. 649; Weems v. Weems, 78 Ala. 462; Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 662, 24 L. ed. 216; Hendrickson v. Hinkley, 58 U. S. 17 How. 443, 15 L. ed. 123; Stein v. Benedict, 83 Wis. 603; Ableman v. Roth, 12 Wis. 81; Wright v. Eaton, 7 Wis. 595; Alleman v. Knight, 19 W. Va. 201; Braden v. Reitzenberger, 18 W. Va. 296; Knapp v. Snyder, 15 W. Va. 434; Rice v. Railroad Bank, 7 Humph. 39; Freeman v. Miller, 53 Tex. 372; Johnson v. Templeton, 60 Tex. 238; Nevins v. McKee, 61 Tex. 412; Burnley v. Rice, 21 Tex. 171; Plummer v. Power, 29 Tex. 6; Ratto v. Levy Bros., 63 Tex. 278; Clegg v. Darragh, Id. 367; Greenfield v. Frierson, 9 Helsk. 638; Morehead v. DeFord, 6 W. Va. 316; Richmond Enquirer Co. v. Robinson, 24 Gratt. 548; Goolsby v. St. John, 25 Gratt. 146; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Gates, 10 Or. 514; Thurmond v. Durham, 8 Yerg. 99; Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Burnet Mfg. Co., 36 N. J. Eq. 486; Wells v. Wall, 1 Or. 295; Quackenbush v. Van Riper, 1 N. J. Eq. 478; Cotton v. Hiller, 52 Miss. 7; Lebanon Mut. Ins. Co. v. Erb, 16 W. N. C. 113; Knox County v. Harshman, 128 U. S. 152, 33 L. ed. 586; Collier v. Easton, 2 Mo. 145; Brick v. Burr, 47 N. J. Eq. 189; Dunn v. Hansard, 37 Mo. 202; Tompkins v. Drennen, 56 Fed. Rep. 604, 18 U. S. App. 308; Davis v. Staples, 45 Mo. 567; Wood v. Lenox, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 318; Carolus v. Koch, 72 Mo. 645; George v. Tutt, 36 Mo. 141; Lieby v. Ludwig, 4 Ohio, 496; Miller v. Morse, 23 Mich. 366; Mack v. Doty, Harr. Ch. (Mich.) 366; Schrieker v. Field, 9 Iowa, 366; Morris v. Fristoe, 8 La. Ann. 646; Harding v. Hawkins, 141 Ill. 572; Kriebsbaum v. Bridges, 1 Iowa, 14; Briesch v. McCauley, 7 Gill, 189; Shelmire v. Thompson, 2 Blackf. 270; Webster v. Hardisty, 28 Md. 562; Cairo & St. L. R. Co. v. Holbrook, 92 Ill. 297; Walker v. Shreve, 87 Ill. 474; Tillman v. Becker, 65 Ill. 183; Smith v. Allen, 63 Ill. 474; Parker v. Morton, 5 Blackf. 1; Hickerson v. Raiguel, 2 Helsk. 829; Levan v. Patton, Id. 106; Kearney v. Smith, 8 Yerg. 127, 24 Am. Dec. 550; Gwinn v. Newton, 8 Humph. 710; Prater v. Robinson, 11 Helsk. 391; Garrett v. Lynch, 45 Ala. 204; Stinnett v. Branch Bank, 9 Ala. 120; Collier v. Falk, 66 Ala. 223; Duran v. Cureton, 1 Ark. 31; Andrews v. Fenter, Id. 186; Cummins v. Bentley, 5 Ark. 9; Bently v. Dillard, 6 Ark. 79; Garvin v. Squires, 9 Ark. 533, 50 Am. Dec. 224; Conway v. Ellison, 14 Ark. 300; Mastick v. Thorp, 29 Cal. 444; Day v. Wells, 31 Conn. 344; Carnall v. Looper, 25 Ark. 107; Robbins v. Mount, 3 Ga. 74; Pearce v. Chastain, Id. 223, 46 Am. Dec. 423; Booth v. Stamper 30 L. R. A. judgment has been fraudulently entered is not compelled to resort to certiorari for relief, rather than to apply for an injunction against its execution, where he would not thereby obtain as effective relief as he could by injunction.

6 Ga. 172; Stroup v. Sullivan, 2 Ga. 275, 46 Am. Dec. 390; Hoey v. Jackson, 31 Fla. 541; Williams v. Carr, 4 Colo. App. 386; Bellamy v. Woodson, 4 Ga. 175, 48 Am. Dec. 221; Kinney v. Orden, 3 N. J. Eq. 169; Scotfield v. State Nat. Bank, 9 Neb. 316, 31 Am. Rep. 412; Boley v. Griswold, 2 Mont. 447; Buntain v. Blackburn, 27 Ill. 406; Walker v. Kretzinger, 43 Ill. 502; Augusta Mut. L. Asso. v. McAndrew, 68 Ga. 490. See Simmons v. Martin, infra.

This principle is the law in Tennessee but has been modified by the statute of 1844 in regard to judgments containing usury. Brandon v. Green, 7 Humph. 180.

And the following cases state the rule substantially in an affirmative form: Moore v. Gamble, 9 N. J. Eq. 246; Goldsmith v. Stetson, 39 Ala. 153; Stetson v. Goldsmith, 81 Ala. 649; Leigh v. Armor, 35 Ark. 123; Fisher v. Greene, 5 Colo. 541; Pearce v. Olney, 20 Conn. 644; Stanton v. Embry, 46 Conn. 65, and 595; Carrington v. Holabird, 17 Conn. 530; Kersey v. Bash, 3 Del. Ch. 321; Dibble v. Truluck, 13 Fla. 185; Pollock v. Gilbert, 16 Ga. 398, 60 Am. Dec. 732; Dugan v. McGlann, 60 Ga. 363; Hibbard v. Eastman, 47 N. H. 507, 32 Am. Dec. 467; Robinson v. Wheeler, 51 N. H. 384; Bassett v. Henry, 34 Mo. App. 548; Wingate v. Haywood, 40 N. H. 437; Hutchins v. Van Winkle, 27 Ill. 334; Winchester v. Grosvenor, 43 Ill. 517; Ames v. Snider, 55 Ill. 496; Burke v. Gibson, 6 Kulp, 310; Jacobs v. Morange, 1 Daly, 523; Dobson v. Pearce, 12 N. Y. 156, 62 Am. Dec. 152; North Chicago Rolling Mill Co. v. St. Louis Ore & S. Co., 152 U. S. 596, 38 L. ed. 565; Truly v. Wanzer, 46 U. S. 5 How. 14, 12 L. ed. 88; Hiles v. Mosher, 44 Wis. 601; Barber v. Rukeyser, 39 Wis. 590; Taylor v. Fore, 42 Tex. 256; Wallace v. Richmond, 26 Gratt. 67; Ayres v. Morehead, 77 Va. 586; Green v. Masie, 21 Gratt. 356; Byars v. Justin, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) 686; Harrison v. Crumb, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (White & W.) 991; Emerson v. Udall, 13 Vt. 477, 37 Am. Dec. 604; Turley v. Taylor, 6 Baxt. 876; Jones v. Commercial Bank, 5 How. (Miss.) 43; Webster v. Skipwith, 26 Miss. 341; Powers v. Butler, 4 N. J. Eq. 465; Hiller v. Cotton, 48 Miss. 598; Cairo & F. R. Co. v. Titus, 27 N. J. Eq. 102; Beveridge v. Hewitt, 8 Ill. App. 467; Reeves v. Cooper, 12 N. J. Eq. 223; Barnes v. Dodge, 7 Gill, 100; Bateman v. Wilcox, 1 Soh. & Lef. 201; Little v. Price, 1 Md. Ch. 182; Blackburn v. Bell, 91 Ill. 424; McGehee v. Gold, 68 Ill. 215; Ridgeway v. Bank of Tennessee, 11 Humph. 523.

Georgia Rev. Code, § 3074, provides that equity will interfere to set aside a judgment of a court having jurisdiction, only where the party had a good defense of which he was entirely ignorant, or where he was prevented from making it by fraud or accident, or the act of the adverse party, unmixed with fraud or negligence on his part; and complainant must allege in addition to the above how the mistake or accident occurred. Simmons v. Martin, 68 Ga. 620.

The following cases state the rule both affirmatively and negatively: Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346; Dey v. Martin, 78 Va. 1; Holland v. Trotter, 22 Gratt. 133.

II. Fraud in obtaining judgments.

a. By agreement.

1. Generally.

If a defense is prevented by an agreement that is violated, and there is a valid defense to the action, and complainant is without fraud or negligence on his part, and there is no remedy at law, an

4. One of two codefendants against whom a default judgment is fraudulently entered may maintain a suit to enjoin the execution of the judgment against him, without joining his co-defendant in the action.

(January 8, 1896.)

injunction will generally be granted against the judgment.

So, a judgment against good conscience to execute, where a party had a good defense, and was induced to refrain from defending by acts and promises of his adversary, and which was rendered without any real adversary or trial, by reason of such representations or acts, if the complainant has been guilty of no negligence, will be enjoined. Lazarus v. McGuirk, 42 La. Ann. 194; Pelham v. Moreland, 11 Ark. 442; Goodsell v. Olmstead, 42 Conn. 354; O'Neill v. Browne, 9 Ir. Eq. Rep. 131; Pearce v. Olney, 20 Conn. 544; Hibbard v. Eastman, 47 N. H. 509, 32 Am. Dec. 467; Buchanan v. Griggs, 20 Neb. 165; Dudley v. Cole, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. 429.

So, an injunction will be granted where the plaintiff at law prevented a defense by representing to the complainant that he did not intend to take a judgment against him or molest him, where complainant was not negligent. Rowland v. Jones, 2 Heisk. 321; Union Bank v. Geary, 30 U. S. 5 Pet. 99, 8 L. ed. 60; Purviance v. Edwards, 17 Fla. 140; Brake v. Payne, 137 Ind. 479; Roberts v. Miles, 12 Mich. 297; Poindexter v. Waddy, 6 Munf. 418, 8 Am. Dec. 749; Holland v. Trotter, 22 Gratt. 188.

Although Iowa Code, § 2322, provides that judgment shall not be enjoined in equity, except for a defense which has been discovered since judgment was rendered. Baker v. Redd, 44 Iowa, 179.

And in Hayden v. Moore, 4 Bush, 107, it was said that if the prevailing party or his attorney had prevented a defense by deceiving the adverse party, an injunction against the judgment would be granted.

In Texas the justice of the peace must dispose of the matters pleaded, and where the judgment does not dispose of the issue in reconvention the judgment is not final and proceedings thereon will be enjoined when the defendant was prevented from being present by reason of the plaintiff violating an agreement. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Stephenson (Tex.) 28 S. W. 236.

Where a defense was prevented by deceit in representing that no judgment would be taken, and after it was obtained a motion to set the same aside was prevented by a promise to release and discharge the same, and the complainant was thereby prevented from proceeding at law to set the same aside, he may obtain an injunction against enforcing the judgment where there was a good defense to the action. Johnson v. Unversaw, 30 Ind. 485.

And in Gillett v. Booth, 6 Ill. App. 423, it was said that where the party in violation of an agreement induces his adversary to withdraw his attention, and then takes a decree, the same will be enjoined.

And in a suit to enjoin a judgment for purchase money on the ground that the defendant was prevented from making a defense by reason of an agreement of plaintiff which he did not keep, the injunction was denied in the lower court, but the court required the plaintiff to give a good bond of indemnity before he could enforce his judgment, and the plaintiff appealed, and the supreme court held that the injunction should have been granted, and refused to reverse the same. Jackson v. Elliott, 100 Ala. 669.

But an injunction against proceedings on a judgment and sale will not be granted on the ground of a contemporaneous agreement made at the time of the judgment, modifying its effect, where all the 30 L. R. A.

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Superior Court for Napa County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to enjoin the enforcement of a justice's judgment. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

parties were not parties to the agreement, and it was questionable whether the guardian ad litem, a party to the agreement, had the power to bind the wards, and there is no insolvency charged. West v. Cobb, 63 Ga. 841.

An injunction against an execution and judgment should not be allowed where it was claimed to have been in violation of an agreement made between the attorneys to take judgment for a less sum, where it was not alleged that such attorneys had authority to bind their client. Anderson v. Oldham, 33 Tex. 223.

And a defense prevented by statements of a third party will not authorize an injunction against a judgment. Walker v. Shreve, 37 Ill. 474.

And an injunction will not be granted against judgments obtained in violation of agreements where there is adequate remedy at law. Kidwell v. Masterson, 3 Cranch, C. C. 52; Bicknell v. Field, 3 Paige, 440.

See also Frauenthal's Appeal, and Knapp v. Snyder, 49 Pa. 11, g.

2. To Dismiss.

A judgment will be enjoined where a defense was prevented by the representations of the plaintiff or the court that the defendant need not appear and that the suit would be dismissed, and there is a valid defense to the action. Engle v. Soheuerman, 40 Ga. 206, 2 Am. Rep. 573; Butler v. Peyron, 4 Hayw. (Tenn.) 68; Chambers v. Robbins, 28 Conn. 582; Wierich v. De Zoya, 7 Ill. 385; Wagner v. Shank, 39 Md. 313; Jarman v. Saunders, 64 N. C. 387.

Although such statement was made on Sunday. Blakesley v. Johnson, 13 Wis. 531.

And will be enjoined for such a cause, where a justice of the peace cannot review a judgment, and has no equity jurisdiction to set the same aside. Greenwald v. May, 127 Ind. 511.

And will be enjoined although plaintiff at law was an infant but possessed discretion and had transacted business in his own name; and the remedy at law to vacate a judgment does not apply to a judgment rendered by a justice of the peace. Cadwallader v. McClay, 37 Neb. 359.

Where sureties were sued and the justice of the peace would not allow the principal to defend for them, and afterwards prevented an appeal by stating that the case had been settled, an injunction against the collection of the judgment on the ground that defense was prevented by the officer was allowed. Austin v. Carpenter, 2 G. Greene, 181.

Where a magistrate before trial informed the defendant's counsel and gave them a writing saying that the suits were dismissed, and afterwards entered judgment, which was not discovered until too late to appeal, an injunction was granted against proceedings thereon. Wagner v. Shank, 39 Md. 313.

But an injunction will not be granted on the ground that there was an understanding that the case was to be dismissed, where the complainant does not show with whom the contract for dismissal was made. Gamble v. Campbell, 6 Fla. 247.

Or where no defense is shown to the action, or that the result will be changed. Way v. Lamb, 15 Iowa, 79.

And where an agent took a note and mortgage in his own name, and was sued, and the plaintiff's attorney agreed to dismiss the action as to him, and that no judgment would be taken against him, but

News. Gesford & Thompson, for appellants:

If a judgment be void for want of jurisdiction, the remedy against any attempt to enforce it is by motion in the court rendering it, to quash the execution and to stay the judgment.

Judgment was taken against him, which fact he did not ascertain until the lapse of three years, it was held that his negligence in making a defense of the action and preventing a judgment will prevent an injunction against the execution. Noble v. Butler, 25 Kan. 645.

And where there is a conflict of evidence as to whether there was a verbal stipulation that a case was to be discontinued, but on the call of the cause the attorney of the defendant was notified by the officer and failed to attend, and notice of the entry of judgment was also served on him, his negligence will prevent an injunction against the judgment. Barber v. Rukeyser, 39 Wis. 500.

And an injunction will not be granted four years after judgment on the ground that after the suit was commenced the plaintiff agreed to dismiss it, but, contrary to such agreement, took judgment without defendant's knowledge, where such judgment was not taken until three years after the agreement to dismiss, during which time defendant was represented by counsel. Watrous v. Rodgers, 16 Tex. 410.

And that a defense was prevented by reason of an agreement to dismiss the suit at law will not entitle an injunction against proceeding on a judgment where the averments as to the agreement are indefinite and vague. Gamble v. Campbell, supra.

Or where the same are not proved. Ivey v. McConnell (Tex.) 21 S. W. 408.

An injunction will not be granted against a ca. ar. where complainant understood that the action was dismissed and judgment was thereafter taken, as the remedy of appeal or habeas corpus will prevent an injunction. Turner v. Norton, 81 Ill. App. 423.

As to whether or not complainant should not have moved to set aside a judgment obtained by fraudulent statements of the plaintiff's attorney that the case would be dismissed is not decided. Way v. Lamb, supra.

2. To give notice.

An injunction will be granted where a judgment was taken in fraud and in violation of an agreement not to try the case without giving complainant notice, and there is a valid defense to the action. Watkins v. Gray, 5 Mo. App. 562; How v. Mortell, 28 Ill. 478; Dobson v. Pearce, 1 Duer, 142.

Though relief might be had by motion to set aside. Footo v. Despain, 87 Ill. 23.

And an injunction will be granted against a judgment of a justice on the second trial, taken in violation of an agreement that the case should not be called for trial at that time, where a new trial could not be had, as Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 1623 prohibits granting more than one new trial and there is no appeal, but there is a valid defense to the action. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Klor, 80 Tex. 681.

An injunction was granted against a judgment in replevin obtained before the time set for trial, in absence of complainant's counsel, where the same was exorbitant, and the complainant sued for an accounting. The relief and retrial in equity were granted on the ground of fraud, as Iowa Code, § 2499, provides for relief for fraud practiced by the successful party in obtaining judgment. Reno v. Teagarden, 24 Iowa, 144.

And an injunction in an attachment suit was enjoined where there was a defense to that action, but such defense was prevented by the action of Comstock v. Clemens, 19 Cal. 77; Murdock v. DeVries, 37 Cal. 527; Gates v. Lane, 49 Cal. 286; Luco v. Brown, 73 Cal. 6.

The refusal of the court to arrest the execution was a special order made after final judgment, and as the Code provides that an appeal the attorney for plaintiff, who promised to furnish information as to the suit, but did not until it was too late to defend. Farmers' & Exch. Bank v. Ruse, 27 Ga. 391.

But that the attorney on the other side, in violation of an agreement, brought on a trial and obtained a judgment without notice, is not ground for an injunction where such facts are not established. Lawson v. Bettison, 12 Ark. 410.

And that a defense was prevented by an agreement on the part of the prevailing party or court to give notice of the trial, will not authorize an injunction against the judgment where the attorney of complainant was notified, although his client had no notice. Devlinney v. Mann, 24 Kan. 682.

And the statement of one of the plaintiffs that they would not press the case against complainant, and the fact that the title of the case was not correctly printed on the file list, will not be ground for enjoining a judgment where the party was negligent. Hetzell v. Bentz, 8 Phila. 261.

And the forgetfulness of the judge to notify counsel when a case would be tried is not fraud sufficient to entitle to an injunction. Morris v. Morris, 76 Ga. 733.

4. To abide by other matters.

An injunction will be granted against a judgment where there is a valid defense which was prevented by an agreement that the judgment should not be taken, but that the parties should await, and abide by the decisions in another case. Pelham v. Moreland, 11 Ark. 443.

Or should await the result of arbitration. Hale v. Bozeman, 60 Miss. 965; Branshean v. Price, 57 Mo. 422; Sneed v. Town, 9 Ark. 535.

And a judgment taken in violation of an agreement not to take the same until the amount realized from collateral could be ascertained, and afterwards agreeing that the judgment should be stricken off, and that it should not be enforced, will be enjoined, as the same is a fraud on the defendant. Kent v. Ricards, 3 Md. Ch. 322.

But a decree of a probate court entered without notice, preventing parties from obtaining a bill of exceptions, will not be enjoined where such decree was withheld on an agreement to await the decision of the supreme court in another case, where it was not shown that complainant was ignorant that such decision was made, and no showing was made that complainant was not negligent. Stein v. Burden, 30 Ala. 270.

5. To allow a defense.

An injunction will be granted where the judgment was taken in violation of an agreement by the plaintiff to allow the defense, thereby preventing the defendant from asserting such defense against the judgment. Markham v. Angier, 57 Ga. 43; Kelley v. Kriess, 68 Cal. 210; Dunnahoo v. Holland, 51 Ga. 147; Hentig v. Sweet, 27 Kan. 172; Allen v. Medill, 14 Ohio, 445; Newnan v. Stuart, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 78; Dickenson v. McDermott, 13 Tex. 242.

As, where a judgment was taken under an agreement that certain claims were to be paid by plaintiff, which he afterwards refused to pay, an injunction against so much of the judgment was allowed. Clow v. Merritt, 15 Tex. 184.

Or where a verdict was entered by mistake, and the party benefited agreed to make deductions, which was not done, an injunction was granted may be taken "from any special order made after final judgment," plaintiff's remedy was by an appeal from said order.

Code Civ. Proc. § 963, subsec. 2; Gilman v. Contra Costa County, 8 Cal. 52, 68 Am. Dec.

against proceedings on the judgment. Chase v. Manhardt, 1 Bland, Ch. 383.

Where the owner of a house refused to comply with an agreement to secure a party making advances for building, the latter on securing the title may have a sale under a mechanic's lien enjoined, where he had agreed with the contractor for the latter to file the lien for the total cost of the building for his benefit, but the contractor settled the same and the judgment was taken in violation of such agreement, and the injunction will not be denied on the ground that he is in part delicto. Hamilton v. Wood, 55 Minn. 482.

But an agreement to allow a defense will not authorize an injunction where complainant was negligent in asserting legal remedies.

So, negligence in not prosecuting a writ of error will prevent equitable interference with a judgment taken on the understanding that all rights of complainant were reserved. Rogers v. Kingsbury, 22 Ga. 60.

And sharp practice of opposing counsel in violating a verbal assurance that he would agree to a statement will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, where there is negligence in applying for a new trial. Phelps v. Peabody, 7 Cal. 50.

That the attorney for plaintiff gave the attorney for defendant to understand that when judgment should be rendered it should be for the just amount due, deducting credits, will not authorize an injunction against a judgment where the allegations as to credits, amounts, and dates are not specific. Shrieker v. Field, 9 Iowa, 306.

Or where the error is not established. Boone v. Poindexter, 12 Smedes & M. 640.

And an injunction will not be granted against a judgment on a note on the ground that it was agreed that it should not be collected or used, but should be kept subject to future settlement, where the complainant has sufficient indemnity in a debt of greater amount which he owes to the same party, and the equity of the bill was not proved. Graham v. Gray, 87 Ala. 446.

And an injunction will not be granted on the ground that a judgment was taken in violation of a promise not to take a judgment, where the bill of complaint shows that there was an appearance of complainant in the action, and such appearance is not repudiated. Knapp v. Snyder, 15 W. Va. 484.

And a judgment will not be enjoined on the ground that plaintiff's attorney failed to enter a credit on the execution as he had promised. Brown v. Wilson, 56 Ga. 534.

Fraud or misrepresentation of the judge, that he would render a judgment that would not bar a party's rights, where the counsel was not present at the judgment, will not authorize relief where no merit is presented, as the losing party made the judge his agent, and will be charged with negligence, and the conversation "must have been with a judge of the court, not the court." Green v. Dodge, 6 Ohio, 80, 25 Am. Dec. 738.

6. To continue or delay.

An injunction will be granted against a judgment taken in violation of an agreement to continue the case, where there is a good defense to the action. Beams v. Denham, 8 Ill. 58; Moore v. Lipscombe, 82 Va. 546; Sanderson v. Voelcker, 51 Mo. App. 328.

Where the court rendering the judgment had not power to grant a new trial, and the judgment was taken in violation of an agreement to transfer the 290; Comstock v. Clemens, 19 Cal. 76; Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 580.

No excuse is stated for not pursuing that remedy, and nothing to show that it would not have been speedy and adequate. Under such case to another court, and the judgment was not known until too late to appeal, and the consideration was a gambling debt,—an injunction was granted. Booth v. Stamper, 6 Ga. 172.

But where it was claimed that a judgment was taken in violation of an agreement to continue the case on account of sickness of complainant's counsel, an injunction should not be granted where the complainant was negligent in not providing another counsel. Landrum v. Farmer, 7 Bush, 46.

A judgment taken contrary to an agreement to continue will not be enjoined where no showing is made of a valid defense to that action. Poor v. Tuston, 53 Kan. 86; Ableman v. Roth, 12 Wis. 81.

But the failure to make a defense because the plaintiff's attorney informed the complainant that no judgment would be taken at that term will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, as Alabama Code 1876, § 794, requires that such agreements made by attorneys must be in writing. Norman v. Burns, 67 Ala. 248; Collier v. Falk, 66 Ala. 228.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment obtained in violation of an agreement to delay a trial on account of sickness of defendant, where adequate remedy could have been had by a motion for a new trial. Bryorly v. Clark, 48 Tex. 845.

And the fraud of opponent's attorney in trying a case after an agreement to continue is not shown where complainant's attorney appeared and defended at the trial. Lawson v. Bettison, 12 Ark. 401.

The ground for injunction of "an alleged agreement for delay upon certain conditions which have been complied with," not having been made as defense to the action, will not authorize an injunction. Bartlett v. Peck, 5 La. Ann. 670.

Taking a decree in violation of a stipulation to stay the same will not entitle an injunction against the sale where there is a remedy in the same action to control the writ, and complainant had not complied with the stipulation. Buell v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 65 Cal. 292.

7. To compromise.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment taken in violation of an agreement to compromise, where the same is established and complainant is not negligent, and there is no other adequate remedy.

So, a judgment obtained in violation of an agreement of compromise by which defense to the action was prevented, is such a fraud as entitles the party against whom judgment was taken to have it enjoined. Nealls v. Dicks, 72 Ind. 374; Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 318; Phillips v. Kuhn, 85 Neb. 18; Chambers v. Robbins, 28 Conn. 552; Porter v. Moffett, Morris (Iowa) 106; Turney v. Young, 2 Overt. 206.

A judgment obtained in violation of a settlement of a case, whereby complainant was prevented from defending, will be enjoined. Gates v. Steele, 58 Conn. 318; Cadwallader v. McClay, 37 Neb. 352; Dew v. Hamilton, 23 Ga. 414.

But that a defendant compromised a suit by note payable in notes of the republic will not be ground for injunction where there was a continuance for years thereafter before judgment was taken, and his attorney made no defense, and the judgment in effect is only for the amount due plaintiff. Watrous v. Rodgers, 16 Tex. 410.

An injunction will not be granted on the ground circumstances the plaintiff is not entitled to maintain a separate and distinct action.

Ketchum v. Crippen, 87 Cal. 228; Ede v. Hazen, 61 Cal. 380; Luco v. Brown, 73 Cal. 6; Moulton v. Knapp, 85 Cal. 885.

The plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, for he can apply to the superior court for a writ of certiorari.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1068; Comstock v. Clemens, 19 Cal. 78; Jones v. Los Angeles Justice's Ct. 97 Cal. 528.

When one of the defendants in a joint judgof fraud or surprise, where the attorney for the complainant consented to a trial and joined in the submission of the case after having been apprised of an understanding that it was to be settled out of the court,—especially where such agreement to settle the case was not sustained by the proof. Lawson v. Bettison, 12 Ark. 401.

That a judgment was obtained in fraud of a pending compromise whereby the defendant was prevented from making a defense, is not ground for an injunction against the judgment, where he cannot establish such defense in equity. Deaver v. Erwin, 7 Ired. Eq. 250.

A judgment and execution will not be enjoined on the ground that a defense was prevented by a settlement before judgment, and that the judgment was in violation of such settlement, where the complainant failed to keep his part of the agreement and has not paid the amount due from him. Lowry v. Sloan, 51 Ga. 688.

So, an appeal prevented by agreement for settlement will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, attempted to be enforced in violation of the agreement, where there is an adequate remedy in the supreme court to obtain relief at law, by motion to set aside the affirmance. Koebling Sons Co. v. Stevens Electric Co. 96 Ala. 39.

A defense prevented because plaintiff's attorney represented that a transfer of a security would settle the case and no further plea need be made in the action at law, will not authorize an injunction against proceedings on the judgment and the execution issued thereon, where the plaintiffs in the judgment are solvent and able to respond in damages. Harris v. Western & A. R. Co. 59 Ga. 830.

8. Where complainant participated in fraud.

A complainant guilty of fraud in participating in an agreement is not entitled to an injunction against a judgment, although the plaintiff at law violates the agreement.

So, a party guilty of a fraudulent arrangement to cover up his property and allow it to be foreclosed and purchased, in order that the title may be concealed, cannot obtain an injunction against the enforcement of the decree of foreclosure. Randall v. Howard, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 585, 17 L. ed. 209.

And a party conspiring to allow a fraudulent judgment against himself to defeat the rights of his wife in certain trust property cannot thereafter have such judgment enjoined on the ground that the plaintiff therein promised never to enforce it. Wells v. Smith, 18 Gray, 207, 74 Am. Dec. 681.

b. By concealment.

Fraud in concealing from the complainant a good and valid defense to the action will entitle an injunction against a judgment that is contrary to conscience, where complainant has not been guilty of negligence.

So, fraud in concealing from one party the payment on a claim in suit will entitle to an injunction against the judgment. Spencer v. Vigneaux, 20 Cal. 442.

Or on a discovery that the plaintiff had obtained a decree for a greater sum than he was entitled to, and of which he had knowledge and the complainant was ignorant, an injunction will be granted. Bayse v. Board, 12 B. Mon. 581.

Active fraud on the part of the plaintiff at law is not essential to the relief sought. It is enough 30 L. R. A.

that the judgment was the result of a mistake of fact on the part of the complainant and that he was prevented of his right of review by the failure seasonably to discover the real character of the judgment, which, though known to the other party, was purposely concealed from him, and without fraud or negligence on his part he was dispossessed of property without an opportunity to maintain his title. Currier v. Esty, 110 Mass. 539.

Fraudulent conduct of plaintiff, preventing defendant from contesting the claim, by representing that it was another one which was unpaid, will entitle to an injunction against the judgment. Hinckley v. Miles, 15 Hun, 170.

Where a judgment is procured on a fictitious cause of action against a sheriff for making a levy, and knowledge of his defense is prevented by the parties thereon, he may procure an injunction against proceedings on the judgment. Iglehart v. Lee, 4 Md. Ch. 514.

In Tomkins v. Tomkins, 11 N. J. Eq. 512, it was said that concealing from a court evidence that the claim in suit was fictitious will entitle to an injunction against the judgment.

But in order to obtain an injunction for relief against a judgment on the ground of fraudulent concealment of facts on the part of the plaintiff therein, and that the judgment was against conscience, it must be shown that the party seeking relief had used diligence. Glover v. Hedges, 1 N. J. Eq. 113.

The erasure of the name of one of the makers of a note is a legal defense, and the ignorance of one of the makers of such erasure is no ground for enjoining the judgment, where they were negligent in making their defense. Shelmire v. Thompson, 2 Blackf. 270.

c. In matters of record.

An injunction will be granted when the judgment is the result of fraudulent attention or use of records. Byars v. Justin, 2 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) 685; Smith v. Chandler, 13 Ind. 513; Gillett v. Booth, 6 Ill. App. 423.

So, the use of a judgment will be enjoined where the court commissioner drafted a decree and falsely inserted therein that the summons had been served, and became the purchaser under the decree. Martin v. Parsons, 49 Cal. 94.

And a third party may have the levy and sale of his personal and real property enjoined on a judgment which has been altered by the clerk, and enlarged so as to render it void. Hardy v. Broadus, 35 Tex. 668.

And proceedings on a judgment will be enjoined on the ground of fraud, where the execution after levy was returned by order of the plaintiff, and the record was fraudulently changed, and the amount of the judgment increased without consent of the debtor, and a second execution issued, even though the court could have corrected the judgment. Babcock v. McCamant, 58 Ill. 214.

Fraud in procuring a judgment, by abstracting bonds in a case in which judgment had been rendered, and obtaining another judgment on the same, will entitle the defendant to an injunction against proceedings on the judgment, where complainant was ignorant of such use, and was not negligent. Taylor v. Nashville & C. R. Co. 86 Tenn. 228.

But the wrongful retention by the adverse at-ment sues to have the judgment perpetually enjoined, his codefendants should be made parties to the action, or sufficient reasons for their omission should be stated.

Gates v. Lane, 44 Cal. 896; O'Connor v. Ir- vine, 74 Cal. 448; Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 621.

The judgment is a joint judgment, and the reason why Mulville is not made a party to this action is a matter of substance.

torney of the case made, in order to prevent complainant from prosecuting proceedings in error, will not be ground for injunction where complainant has himself been guilty of negligence, and has a remedy by petition in error. Muse v. Wafer, 29 Kan. 279.

And the fraudulent retention of papers by the opposing attorney, preventing a bill of exceptions, will not authorize an injunction against proceedings on the judgment, as the remedy of rule to file them in court is adequate. Smith v. Brownson, 19 La. 313.

An injunction will not be granted to restrain a judgment for want of service of process where there is no allegation of fraud, accident, or mistake, and the record shows proper service. Gillan v. Arnold, 36 S. C. 612.

d. In matters of party.

Where there is a fraudulent suit by a party, who is not the real party in interest, in order to prevent a defense, and it is not discovered until after judgment, an injunction will be granted. Hickerson v. Raiguel, 2 Heisk. 329; Stovall v. Northern Bank, 5 Smedes & M. 17; Davis v. Tlleston, 47 U. S. 6 How. 114, 12 L. ed. 366; Greenleaf v. Maher, 2 Wash. C. C. 893; Goad v. Hart, 8 Smedes & M. 787; Dady v. Brown, 76 Iowa, 528; Marchman v. Sewell, 98 Ga. 668.

But a bill of complaint charging fraud of the plaintiff at law in procuring the cause of action to be assigned to him must state the particulars of the fraud. Elston v. Blanchard, 3 Ill. 420.

Where it was claimed that a judgment for trespass was not prosecuted by the true party, and was fraudulently obtained and sought to be enjoined, relief in equity was denied on the assignment of the judgment to the other party claimed to have an interest therein. Yellow Pine Lumber Co. v. Carroll (Tex.), 21 S. W. 1002.

e. In acts committed at the trial.

A judgment in ejectment will be enjoined, where it was obtained by the fraudulent use of a forged deed, where the complainant has not been guilty of negligence and is unable to get relief at law. Dunn v. Miller, 96 Mo. 324.

And relief will be granted in the Federal court against a judgment obtained by the use of fraudulent and forged documents in the state court, where such fraud was not discovered in a court at law until after it was too late to appeal for relief in such court, and no negligence is shown, and the party obtaining such judgment will be prevented from using the advantage obtained therein. Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 35 L. ed. 870.

In Dundas v. Chrisman, 25 Neb. 495, where a claim was allowed for $583, on the misrepresentation that the estate was solvent, by an attorney of claimant, to the county judge, when it had previously been allowed for only $385, and the administrator had no notice of the change until after time to appeal had elapsed, it was enjoined on the ground of misapprehension and mistake and fraud.

In Stanton v. Embry, 46 Conn. 65, it was held that fraud in taking judgments in a greater amount by quantum meruit where there was a contract for a less amount for the claim will authorize an injunction in another state against proceedings on such judgment. (But see next case.)

But this was reversed in Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 8, 27 L. ed. 946, on the ground that no fraud was shown and complainant was negligent.

30 L. R. A.

But obtaining more relief than one is entitled to will not be held to be fraud so as to authorize another court to enjoin proceedings on a judgment or execution, there being a remedy by appeal. Murdock v. De Vries, 37 Cal. 527.

Where it was charged that the attorney for the plaintiff in a suit at law fraudulently presented but a part of the record upon which the judgment was recovered, while the attorney of the plaintiff was engaged in another court, and the charge of fraud was indefinite, and the record was not shown to have been prejudicial, an injunction was refused against proceedings on the judgment. Dinet v. Eigenmann, 96 Ill. 80.

And relief will not be granted in equity, against a sale under attachment rendered without notice, on the ground that the plaintiff had imposed a fictitious claim on the auditors, where this was not established, and a hearing had been had on the merits, and the case was properly submitted to them at parte. Tomkins v. Tomkins, 11 N. J. Eq. 512.

In Humphries v. Blevins, 1 Overt. 36, an injunction was granted against a judgment where the prevailing party had been guilty of improper conduct in influencing the jury amounting to embezzlement, but an issue was directed at law to ascertain how much the plaintiff was entitled to recover.

f. By collusion.

Collusion with complainant's attorney, or an unauthorized appearance, will entitle to an injunction against the judgment, but complainant must state the facts specifically and show a good defense to the action, and an injunction will not be granted where there is an adequate remedy at law.

So, collusion, fraud, or release of one of the members of the firm in order to obtain a judgment against the remaining members might authorize an injunction. Wills Point Bank v. Bates, 76 Tex. 329.

That a plea was filed in court by an unknown and an unauthorized attorney will not prevent an injunction against the judgment that is obtained by fraud of the prevailing party, as the plea by an unauthorized attorney is not an appearance. Sneed v. Town, 9 Ark. 585.

And fraud in obtaining a judgment by collusion and an unauthorized appearance, will entitle the defendant to an injunction against proceedings on the same. Truett v. Wainwright, 9 Ill. 418; Cheek v. Taylor, 22 Ga. 127; Nelson v. Rockwell, 14 Ill. 375.

Where the complainants had purchased mining property against which were pending suits for mechanics' liens, and their attorneys, defending the same in the name of their grantor, through fraud and collusion were discharged by the grantor on the day of trial, and the grantor employed others and confessed judgment, an injunction was granted against proceedings on the judgment. Oro Fino Co. v. Cullen, 1 Idaho, 113.

Where it was claimed that the party obtaining judgment was complainant's attorney although he was also a defendant sued as an indorser, and complainant failed to file a plea owing to a misunderstanding with his codefendant, the same was temporarily enjoined to submit the question to a jury. Hill v. Sledge, 51 Ga. 589.

But in an action to enjoin a judgment on the ground that it was obtained through unfaithfulness of complainant's attorney, the facts constituting the alleged defense must be alleged. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Meyer, 30 Neb. 135.

And in order to maintain a bill in equity to en-

The facts constituting plaintiff's cause of action must be alleged in the complaint.

Los Angeles v. Signoret, 50 Cal. 298; Curry v. Lackey, 85 Mo. 392; Baker v. Berry, 87 Mo.

806; Bowling v. McFarland, 88 Mo. 465; Burkett v. Griffith, 90 Cal. 532, 13 L. R. A. 707.

No loss could have been sustained by the sale under an execution issued upon a void join a judgment at law on the ground of fraud and collusion with complainant's attorney, the facts showing such fraud must be clearly set out or else the injunction will be denied. Conway v. Ellison, 14 Ark. 360.

And an injunction will not be granted against a judgment taken on a stipulation of complainant's counsel in violation of his client's desire or orders, where a remedy at law by a motion to vacate the judgment would have afforded relief. Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 48 Fed. Rep. 825.

And a party stipulating that there was no collusion cannot thereafter obtain an injunction for such cause where he was negligent. Andes v. Millard, 70 Fed. Rep. 515.

And in Lyon v. Bollwin, 7 Ill. 629, the remedy at law by motion prevented an injunction against the judgment, obtained on an unauthorized appearance, as the remedy in chancery was said to be too dilatory and expensive. But in Truett v. Wainwright, 9 Ill. 418, this case was distinguished as not holding that there was no concurrent remedy in equity and an injunction was granted against a judgment on a warrant of attorney procured by fraud.

The cases in regard to a fraudulent collusion where the injunction is sought by third party will be hereafter annotated in a note, Who may obtain an injunction against the judgment.

As to fraud in obtaining jurisdiction, see note to Texas Mexican R. Co. v. Wright, 81 L. R. A. —, Injunctions against judgments for want of jurisdiction, or which are void.

For fraud in trying case after statement by court that it would not be tried, see note to Gum-Elastic Roofing Co. v. Mexico Pub. Co. ante, 700, Injunctions for errors and irregularities.

g. Other matters.

A judgment will be enjoined that is obtained by fraud where complainant has not been guilty of negligence, and there is a valid defense to the action, and there is no adequate remedy at law. Payne v. O'Shea, 84 Mo. 129; Gainty v. Russell, 40 Conn. 450; Burpee v. Smith, Walk. Ch. (Mich.) 827; Davis v. Tilleston, 47 U. S. 6 How. 114, 12 L. ed. 366.

In Cromelin v. McCauley, 67 Ala. 542, it was said that in order to enjoin a judgment or decree on the ground of fraud, it must have been procured by fraud either in its original rendition, or by a subsequent fraudulent alteration, and this must be shown to be actual and positive.

And in Norman v. Burns, 67 Ala. 248, it was said that if the defense was prevented by fraud, accident, or surprise, or the act of the adversary, and the judgment is unjust, it would be enjoined.

And where the plaintiff obtained a judgment by fraud, and is a nonresident, he cannot plead the statute of limitations as a bar to the injunction. Hentig v. Sweet, 97 Kan. 172.

And the fraudulent withdrawal of a deposit on which a judgment for specific performance was obtained will authorize an injunction against such judgment. Hutchins v. Lockett, 99 Tex. 165.

And Ohio Rev. Stat. § 5354, providing for vacating judgments, does not exclude the right to obtain an injunction against a judgment obtained by fraud. Darst v. Phillips, 41 Ohio St. 514.

In Whitaker v. Wickersham, 5 Del. Ch. 187, it was said that equity will restrain the collection of a judgment on satisfactory proof of fraud, mistake, or accident, where it is clearly shown.

An injunction will be granted against a judgment where the defense was prevented by falsehood and 80 L. R. A.

fraud of the plaintiff at law, representing that judgment had already been taken. Burpee v. Smith, Walk. Ch. (Mich.) 827.

And fraud in obtaining jurisdiction in the Federal court over the original action at law will authorize an injunction to stay execution. Sawyer v. Gill, 8 Woodb. & M. 97.

But an injunction against a judgment obtained by fraud will not be granted where there is an adequate remedy at law.

As by a motion for a new trial, where a default was entered upon consent through fraud practiced upon the defendant, or entered by mistake without fraud on the part of the defendant. Chalmers v. Hack, 19 Me. 124.

Or where relief could have been obtained in the trial court. Furnald v. Glenn, 56 Fed. Rep. 373.

By a motion to set aside. Kidwell v. Masterson, 8 Cranch, C. C. 52; Bicknell v. Field, 8 Paige, 440.

Or a remedy of appeal then pending in another state where the judgment was rendered. Evans v. Taylor, 28 W. Va. 184.

Or where the defense should have been made in the original action. Metcalf v. Gilmore, 50 N. H. 417, 47 Am. Dec. 217.

And an injunction will not be granted against making a deed on execution sale, on the charge of fraud in obtaining the judgment, where there is no showing of meritorious defense to the action, and the fraud is not proved. White v. Crow, 110 U. S. 183, 28 L. ed. 113.

Whether complainant's remedy was not against the attorney for fraud, and whether he should not have moved to set aside the judgment, are not decided, as an injunction will not be granted where complainant fails to show any defense to the debt. Way v. Lamb, 15 Iowa, 79.

The failure to establish fraud in obtaining judgment at law will bar relief in equity. Devlin v. Boyd, 40 N. Y. S. R. 906; Hemphill v. Buckersville Bank, 3 Ga. 436; Bradley v. Richardson, 23 Vt. 720; Moer v. Polhamus, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. 442.

Or where the evidence is conflicting. Driskill v. Cobb, 66 Ga. 649.

In order to obtain an injunction on the ground of fraud in procuring a judgment, the same must be specified, and a general charge of fraud is insufficient. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Henderson, 83 Tex. 70; Burnley v. Rice, 21 Tex. 171; Devlin v. Boyd, supra; McCook v. Bernd Bros. 79 Ga. 391; Taylor v. Mallory, 76 Ind. 1; Ramsour v. Bronnell (Ark.) 12 S. W. 200; Patton v. Taylor, 48 U. S. 7 How. 132, 13 L. ed. 637.

And in order to enjoin a decree on the ground of fraud, it is necessary for the complainant to show that he was ignorant of the fraud, and that he had used reasonable diligence to inform himself of all the facts; and laches or negligence will prevent equitable relief. Osborn v. Gehr, 29 Neb. 661; Foster v. Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. 146 U. S. 88, 38 L. ed. 899; Williams v. Lumpkin, 86 Tex. 641; Hill v. Harris, 51 Ga. 623.

Where relief asked against a judgment is based upon the nonperformance of a condition inducing the rendition of the judgment, and fraud is not specifically charged, an injunction will not be granted. Raburn v. Shortridge, 2 Blackf. 480.

And a judgment will not be enjoined on the ground that it was "obtained through fraud and other illegal practices," as this allegation is too general. Rooks v. Williams, 13 La. Ann. 874.

A decree restraining proceedings under a fraudulent judgment will be recognized as valid and res judicata, between the parties or privies in a suit on judgment, as the title to the property sold would not thereby have been divested; and the property was repleviable by an action direct against the constable.

Richards v. Kirkpatrick, 53 Cal. 488; Gray

v. Hawes, 8 Cal. 568; Wells v. Stout, 9 Cal. 480; Smith v. Reed, 53 Cal. 345.

Messrs. Coghlan & Hutchinson, for respondent:

These facts show exactly and precisely a the original judgment in another state. Dobson v. Pearce, 12 N. Y. 156, 63 Am. Dec. 152.

So, a decision that a judgment and execution were not contrary or in fraud of an agreement is res judicata. Frauenthal's Appeal, 100 Pa. 280; Clopton v. Carlross, 42 Ark. 560.

Although an injunction will be granted against a judgment where the defendant was prevented from making any defense by promise of the plaintiff that he would not take judgment, and that he need not appear, if the record shows an appearance for him which is not repudiated, an injunction will not be granted. Knapp v. Snyder, 15 W. Va. 484.

An injunction will not be granted against proceedings on a judgment, claimed to have been procured fraudulently, where such judgment has been satisfied long before such bill was filed. Mexican Ore Co. v. Mexican Guadalupe Min. Co. 47 Fed. Rep. 361.

So, a decree will not be enjoined on the ground of fraud where the complainant has condoned the fraud by a compromise agreement after the decree. Bass v. Nelms, 55 Miss. 502.

See further, note to John V. Farwell Co. v. Hilbert (Wis.) 80 L. R. A. 235, Injunctions against judgments on confession.

As to fraud in service of process, see note to Texas Mexican R. Co. v. Wright, 81 L. R. A. —, Injunctions against judgments for want of jurisdiction, or which are void.

III. On account of accident.

a. Sickness.

1. A party.

Where there is no negligence or remedy at law, and a valid defense to the action, an injunction will be granted where complainant was prevented from defending on account of his sickness, but will not be granted on account of sickness in his family. An injunction has generally been denied where defense was not made on account of the attorney's sickness or death, but has been granted where there was no negligence. In other cases accidents have usually been held insufficient to obtain an injunction, although some cases have granted them where there was fraud on the part of the prevailing party, or no remedy at law.

So, sudden illness on the part of the defendant on his way to the trial, thereby preventing an affidavit that his original deeds were lost in order to allow the use of copies, will authorize an injunction against the judgment on the ground of accident. Hord v. Dishman, 5 Cal. (Va.) 279.

And an injunction was granted against a judgment on a covenant in a deed, where the complainant was sick at the time of service of the writ in the action at law, and was unable to attend court, and his personal presence was necessary in order to inspect the original deed to enable him to plead non est factum on the ground of quasi trust and fraud, where complainant was not guilty of negligence. Cummins v. Kennedy, 4 J. J. Marsh. 642.

And an injunction against a judgment was allowed where the defendant had a good defense and was so ill at the time of service of summons that he was not able to know until afterwards that the suit was pending. Rice v. Railroad Bank, 7 Humph. 32.

So, the failure to make a defense at law, occasioned by unavoidable necessity through no fault on the part of the complainant, as dangerous sickness, where his presence was required at the trial to verify a plea that the debt was on a forged note, 30 L. R. A.

will authorize relief by injunction. Watson v. Palmer, 5 Ark. 501.

And sickness of complainant at the time of service of process, preventing any attention to the case, where he had a good defense and was not negligent, will authorize an injunction against the judgment. Horn v. Queen, 4 Neb. 106.

Where a party was prevented by sickness from making his defense of fraud and failure of consideration in the action at law, and his counsel in his absence was refused leave for time to present an affidavit of defense, an injunction was granted against the judgment and a sale under foreclosure of a mortgage, where there was no remedy by appeal. Clifton v. Livor, 24 Ga. 91.

But an unavoidable accident, as sickness of complainant, preventing the use of a set-off available at law, will not be sufficient to enjoin the judgment where insolvency is not shown, as there is a remedy at law. Hudson v. Kline, 9 Gratt. 379.

And the sickness of defendant and the failure of his witnesses to attend court will not be ground for enjoining a judgment where there is a remedy of certiorari. Gatlin v. Kilpatrick, 1 N. C. Law Repos. 531, 6 Am. Dec. 557.

And sickness of a party, preventing him from attending trial, is not ground for enjoining the execution where his attorney should have obtained a continuance, and there was negligence on the part of complainant. Pharr v. Reynolds, 3 Ala. 521.

And sickness at the time of the service of process, so as to be unable to attend court or employ counsel, is not sufficient for relief against a judgment at law and a levy, where the failure to defend was the result of complainant's negligence, and it is not shown that such judgment is inequitable, or that the plaintiff was guilty of fraud. Kelleher v. Boden, 55 Mich. 295.

And absence of complainant from the trial, through sickness, will not authorize an injunction against an execution sale, where there is no meritorious defense or equitable ground, and his attorneys were negligent. Odell v. Mundy, 69 Ga. 641.

And sickness of complainant, preventing attendance at the trial, will not authorize an injunction against proceedings on a judgment where he has been negligent. Woodward v. Dromgoole, 71 Ga. 523.

Sickness of a party will not excuse failure to make a defense at law, where diligence is not shown in employing an attorney before he was sick or having his witnesses subpoenaed, and where a valid defense is not disclosed. Cole v. Hundley, 8 Smedes & M. 473.

So, sickness at the day of trial, preventing a party from making an affidavit for continuance on account of absent witnesses, will not be ground for enjoining the judgment where the party was not diligent in suing out process for his witnesses and there was ample time before he was sick. Robb v. Halsey, 11 Smedes & M. 140.

"That complainant was too sick and wholly unable to ride to said court" will not entitle to an injunction when the same is not proved. Lester v. Hopkins, 26 Ark. 63.

The sickness of a married woman during a term of court at which judgment was rendered against her by the consent of an attorney employed for her, by her husband acting as her agent, will not entitle her to an injunction where no fraud is shown, for, if injustice has been done, her remedy is against her husband, and the failure to defend was due to negligence of her husband. Newman v. Morris, 53 Miss. 402.

case in which courts of equity will interfere to stop the execution of a judgment so obtained by fraud.

United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 65, 25 L. ed. 95; Sanford v. Head, 5 Cal. 297; Bibb v. Kreutz, 20 Cal. 110; Martin v. Par- sons, 49 Cal. 94; Baker v. O'Riordan, 65 Cal. 368; Zellerbach v. Allenberg, 67 Cal. 296; California Beet Sugar Co. v. Porter, 68 Cal. 869; Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 818; Dunlap v. Steere, 92 Cal. 344; High, Inj. § 199.

Certiorari was not the proper remedy for the

The failure to make a defense on account of sickness preventing attendance will not authorize an injunction against the judgment and execution, in the absence of any showing that the party's presence was necessary or an excuse had been given for not applying for a new trial. Jamison v. May, 13 Ark. 600.

And a judgment will not be enjoined on the ground of accident through sickness of defendant and his witness, where the facts are not shown which could be proved, and no excuse is given for not obtaining a remedy at law, by a motion for new trial, and he was negligent. French v. Garner, 7 Port. (Ala.) 549.

So, sickness, bad roads, and bad weather, preventing attendance at court, will not excuse failure to defend in the absence of any attempt thereafter to apply for a new trial, where complainant was negligent in not employing counsel. Waldrom v. Waldrom, 76 Ala. 235.

And sickness and inability to attend court will not authorize an injunction unless complainant shows that he has no remedy by appeal, certiorari, or application to the court rendering judgment. Wingfield v. McLure, 48 Ark. 510.

And an injunction will not be granted against a judgment on the ground of accident caused by illness and mental inability preventing a defense, where there is no proof as to mental inability, and an affidavit for continuance could have been made. Alford v. Moore, 15 W. Va. 597.

Where the complainant was prevented from attending trial by sickness, and alleged that the claim was enlarged and excessive judgment obtained by the use of perjured witnesses, and that he could defeat the same by newly discovered evidence, an injunction against proceedings on the judgment was refused because he did not specify that the perjury was procured by the plaintiff in that judgment, and complainant and his attorney were negligent. Kersey v. Rash, 3 Del. Ch. 321.

2. Of family.

That a defendant at law was detained from court by sickness in his family and one attorney was also absent, preventing him from pleading a set-off, will not be ground for enjoining the judgment, where one counsel was present and no effort was made for a continuance. Griffith v. Thompson, 4 Gratt. 147.

And sickness in the family is not a sufficient excuse for not making a defense at law, where it is not shown that complainant's personal presence was necessary. Jamison v. May, 13 Ark. 600.

So, the illness of complainant's wife, preventing an attendance at court, will not authorize an injunction on a judgment on the ground that his nonattendance prevented a right of appeal intended to be reserved. Boetwick v. Perkins, 1 Ga. 136.

But in Brooks v. Whitson, 7 Smedes & M. 513, where complainant attended court at its first term for the purpose of defending, and the term was not held, and at the subsequent term he was detained from attending by the death of his wife and by high water, which rendered the roads impassable, and an attorney, a friend of the complainant, was prevented from entering a plea by misrepresentations of the other party that there was an agreement that no defense was to be made, an injunction was granted where there was a valid defense.

30 L. R. A.

3. Of witness.

Sickness of a witness, impairing his memory and testimony, will not entitle to an injunction against the judgment, where a continuance was not asked and there was a remedy at law. Gott v. Carr, 6 Gill & J. 809; Crim. v. Handley, 24 U. S. 652, 24 L. ed. 216.

4. Of attorney.

Absence of witnesses, and sickness of leading counsel for defendant in the trial at law, will not be ground for enjoining the judgment, where the same is not sustained by proof. Kearney v. Smith, 3 Yerg. 127, 24 Am. Dec. 550.

The sickness of counsel when the time to plead had extended over a month, which is known to the client, so that he might have employed another attorney, furnishes no ground for injunction against the judgment taken by default for want of plea. Clark v. Ewing, 93 Ill. 572.

The failure to make a defense at law, on the ground of sickness of the attorney, will prevent enjoining a judgment, as negligence, inattention, or mistake of an attorney without the fraud or interference of the adverse party will prevent equitable relief. Broda v. Greenwald, 66 Ala. 538.

And that a message was received from counsel by defendant in a civil suit that he was sick and that all his cases would be continued, is not ground for enjoining the execution on such judgment, where the petition for injunction does not allege that any part of such message was true. Sasser v. Oliff, 91 Ga. 84.

An injunction claimed on account of sickness of attorney for defendant was refused against a judgment where no motion for a new trial had been disposed of in the trial court. Gibson v. Cohen, 85 Ga. 860.

And sickness of counsel is not sufficient to authorize an injunction against a judgment where other counsel were present, and a continuance or new trial was not demanded in that case. McBroom v. Sommerville, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 515.

So, an injunction will not be granted where other counsel could have been employed, when complainant's attorney was sick. Landrum v. Farmer, 7 Bush, 46.

And sickness of attorney, preventing defense, is not ground for relief against a judgment where the bill does not show that such attorney had the set-off to be pleaded, or that witnesses had been summoned. Mock v. Cundiff, 6 Port. (Ala.) 24.

But the sickness of counsel employed by a non-resident defendant, which prevented his making a defense, will authorize an injunction on the ground of accident, and no laches will be imputed to the complainant where the lawyer was present at several terms and the case was not tried until three years after suit in his absence, when he was known to be sick. Hillier v. Cotton, 48 Miss. 563.

And where plaintiff and his attorney lived at a distance from the court, and the attorney was stricken down with sudden illness, which prevented him from communicating with complainant or any attorney, it is such accident as will authorize a new trial and an injunction against the judgment. Triplett v. Scott, 5 Bush, 81.

In DeGraffenreid v. Donald, 2 Hen. & M. 10, an injunction was granted against a judgment where defense was not made owing to the sickness of defendant's attorney and defendant's absence from the state; but the question was not discussed, and reason that there was an appeal from the judgment of the lower court, and a writ of certiorari will not lie where there is an appeal.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1068; Miliken v. Huber, 21 Cal. 166; People v. Shepard, 28 Cal. 115; Dennett v. Wallace, 43 Cal. 25; Faut v. Mason, 47 Cal. 7; Hoke v. Perdue, 63 Cal. 545; Golden Gate Consol. H. Min. Co. v. Yuba County

Super. Ct. 65 Cal. 187; Slavonic Illyric Mut. Ben. Asso. v. Santa Clara County Super. Ct. 65 Cal. 500; Stuttmeister v. San Francisco City & County Super. Ct. 71 Cal. 323; McCue v. Marin County Super. Ct. 71 Cal. 545; Re McConnell's Estate, 74 Cal. 217; Gibson v. San Francisco City & County Super. Ct. 85 Cal. 216.

the supreme court only passes on the question of costs.

b. Death of attorney.

Death of counsel, and unfamiliarity of his successor with the matters, are not sufficient reason to enjoin a judgment at law, where no application for further time was made. Howell v. Stewart, 17 Ala. 719.

So, the death of counsel, who made no defense, will not authorize an injunction against a judgment, where complainant has used no diligence and neglected the case for three years. Callaway v. Alexander, 8 Leigh, 114, 81 Am. Dec. 640.

But an injunction was granted in a bill to impeach a decree of settlement on the ground of fraud and surprise, where a suit was brought solely to construe a will, and complainant's counsel was killed in the war at an interval between two terms, and he was not represented at the decree, and the condition of the country excused the executor from ascertaining the condition of the suit, and an account and settlement were rendered, which were oppressive. Kincaid v. Conly, Phill. Eq. 270.

c. Other causes.

Injunctions have been generally denied for other causes,—as the loss or miscarriage of letters or papers, or the prevention of a defense by storm or other causes, or that the court was not held through accident; and they have been denied on the ground of failure to show diligence or a good defense, or that there was no remedy at law. But there are exceptional cases granting injunctions where the party injured was not guilty of negligence, and there was no other remedy, and the judgment was unjust.

That a letter miscarried, preventing a defense at law, will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, where the judgment is not shown to be unjust. Essex v. Berry, 2 Vt. 161.

Or where complainant was negligent. Stanard v. Rogers, 4 Hen. & M. 438.

But in Huebschman v. Baker, 7 Wis. 542, where a letter from the superintendent of Indians to the district attorney, asking him to attend to an action relating to a tort committed by the Indians, failed to reach the attorney in time, an injunction was granted on the ground of accident and that it was the duty of the United States district attorney to attend to such cases.

Where the original papers have been lost by fire, and appeal has been prevented, the execution of the judgment may be enjoined, but not where complainant has been negligent and could have perfected his appeal long prior to the fire, and material error in the judgment is not shown. Bailey v. Stevens (Utah) 80 Pac. 823.

The restoration of a lost record without notice will not entitle to an injunction in the absence of proof that it is not correct. Fuller v. Little, 69 Ill. 229.

The loss of the record or papers for appeal will not authorize an injunction against proceedings on the judgment, where complainant was negligent. Palmer v. Gardiner, 77 Ill. 143; State v. Judge of Dist. Ct. 18 La. 542.

That a record needed in a case was lost will not entitle to an injunction, where such record would not have changed the result. Beadle v. Graham, 66 Ala. 102.

30 L. R. A.

Or where there is a remedy at law. Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 632, 24 L. ed. 216.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment on the ground that the answer filed was lost, and that there was no remedy by appeal, where a good and valid defense is not disclosed. Chinn v. First Municipality, 1 Rob. (La.) 522.

And the loss of a decree of sale by accident will not entitle the purchaser to an injunction against a judgment for purchase money, as the title may be perfected in chancery. Garrett v. Lynch, 45 Ala. 204.

But in Vathir v. Zane, 6 Gratt. 246, where a writing was lost at the time of the judgment preventing a defense at law, an injunction was granted against a judgment where there was a good defense to the action.

And in Cyrus v. Hicks, 20 Tex. 488, an injunction was granted where the record of the judgment was lost, but the defendant in equity was allowed the right to have the record renewed.

The accident arising from the resignation of a justice preventing an appeal within the time allowed by law will not entitle to an injunction, unless the defense is just and complainant was not negligent. Galbraith v. Barnard, 21 Or. 67; Smith v. D'Lashmunt, 4 Mo. 103.

Where a motion for new trial was prevented by accident in that the term of court was not held, or through sudden adjournment, an injunction might be obtained; but where the judgment is not shown to be unjust, an injunction will not be granted. Ratto v. Levy Bros. 63 Tex. 278; Harkey v. Tillman, 40 Ark. 551; Whitehill v. Butler, 51 Ark. 343; Johnson v. Branch, 48 Ark. 535.

But where the judgment is unjust an injunction will be granted. Foushee v. Lea, 4 Cal. (Va.) 273; Kulfont v. Hendricks, 2 Gratt. 212, 44 Am. Dec. 386; Leigh v. Armor, 35 Ark. 123.

The abandonment of a case by the attorney before the trial, requiring the employment of another attorney who was not prepared, will not constitute accident sufficient to authorize an injunction against proceedings on the judgment. Winchester v. Grosvenor, 48 Ill. 517.

An injunction against the enforcement of a judgment will be denied to a defendant who had his day in court, and an opportunity to avail himself of his equities, where no ground of interference is shown, although one attorney did not arrive at the trial until after verdict, but the defendant was ably represented. Waldo v. Denton, 135 Pa. 181.

An unsuccessful application to set aside a judgment at law on account of inability to reach court on account of the trains, where such courts had full power to give adequate relief, will prevent an injunction against an execution sale. Holmes v. Steele, 28 N. J. Eq. 173.

And inability to attend court on account of an epidemic will not entitle a party to an injunction against the judgment where he was negligent in employing counsel to defend. Stinnett v. Branch Bank, 9 Ala. 120.

And casualty of flood, preventing attendance at court, is not ground for relief in equity against a judgment, where it is not shown that the flood continued until after adjournment of court. English v. Savage, 14 Ala. 342.

Presence at a trial before a justice being prevented by a terrible storm will not authorize an injunc-

Harrison, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant Walton commenced an action against the plaintiff and another in a justice's court, and, after the defendants therein had answered the complaint, the justice set the case for trial on the 28th of February; but on the morning of that day it was agreed between the attorneys for the respective parties that the trial should be postponed and that the cause should be transferred to another township. On the next day the attorneys for the plaintiff herein received a letter from the justice, purporting to have been written the previous day, in which he stated that the case was to be transferred to tion against an execution sale, as there is a remedy by appeal. Hunter v. Hoole, 17 Cal. 418.

But in Brooks v. Whitson, 7 Smedes & M. 513, it was held that where a valid defense was prevented by a violent storm and flood obstructing intercourse with the court-house from defendant's residence until after court adjourned, an injunction should be granted against the judgment where the plaintiff fraudulently prevailed upon an attorney not to interpose or enter a plea.

The refusal of a witness to attend court, or his failure to testify to the truth, is not accident or mistake which will entitle to an injunction against the judgment. Tallman v. Becker, 65 Ill. 183.

IV. On account of mistake.

a. Of law.

The general rule is that an injunction will not be granted against a judgment on the ground of mistake of law, but there are exceptional cases where injunctions have been granted,—especially where the practice under a doubtful statute has been general.

Where the circuit judge made a mistake in remanding the case to the common pleas instead of allowing it to remain in the circuit court, and the chief justice on a rule to open the case remanded the case to the common pleas, when it ought to have been remanded to the circuit court, and the defendant did not know of this until the time to take out a writ of error had expired, an injunction will not be granted where no merit is shown. Stout v. Slocum, 52 N. J. Eq. 83.

Mistake of a judge of probate court in assigning claims to improper classes, whereby an unfair superiority is given, is not ground for an injunction, as there is a remedy in the court to correct the same. Jillett v. Union Nat. Bank, 56 Mo. 303.

That a judgment was rendered by a mistake of law will not entitle an injunction where there is a remedy by appeal. Moeschler v. Lochte, 12 N. Y. S. R. 855.

And overruling an application for a continuance through a mistake of law will not entitle to an injunction. Risher v. Roush, 2 Mo. 95, 22 Am. Dec. 442.

And a mistake of law in the decision of rulings of a court will not be ground for enjoining a judgment. Barr v. Carpenter, 16 R. I. 724 (1890).

For injunctions against judgments for errors of law, see ante to Gum-Elastic Roofing Co. v. Mexico Pub. Co. ante, 700.

Under Iowa Code, § 2522, providing that judgments at law cannot be annulled in equity except for causes arising or discovered subsequent to their rendition, a judgment for defendant will not be enjoined where he pleaded in that case a judgment in bar rendered in his favor by mistake where it should have been a judgment of dismissal, as the subject-matter and parties were within the jurisdiction of the court rendering the judgment sought to be enjoined. Lowery v. Greene County, 75 Iowa, 538.

So, an injunction was refused where at the time of confessing judgment it was the intention to enter appeal, and one of the defendants was sent to enter an appeal within four days, but the clerk supposed that it was an injunction bond which was desired to be executed, and not being familiar with the form, requested the defendant to return home and send it afterwards, stating that that would be all sufficient, and the defendant, being ignorant of the necessity of entering an appeal at that time, failed to do so, which was unknown to the other complainants until the time for entering an appeal had elapsed. Robbins v. Mount, 3 Ga. 74.

A mistake of law made by a garnishee in not moving for a stay of proceedings in one suit until another suit for the same debt was terminated will prevent him from enjoining a judgment, and is not ground for relief. Danaher v. Prentiss, 22 Wis. 311.

So, the mistake of law by a judge in overdrawing his salary and giving his note to a judge pro tem. for the amount due such judge, will not be ground for enjoining the judgment on such note, although the appointment of a pro tem. judge was void. Hubbard v. Martin, 8 Yerg. 496.

And the mistake of law as to the rights of the wife in community property will not authorize an injunction restraining the husband from disposing of such property, under a decree of divorce which was not resisted through such mistake, where no fraud was practiced. Champion v. Woods, 79 Cal. 17.

In Kearney v. Sasser, 37 Md. 224, it was held that relief will not be granted for negligence or mistake of law, unless the alleged mistake is conclusive as to the existence of a legal right.

And an injunction will not be granted on account of a mistake of law by a surety in confessing a judgment for debt barred by limitation. Harner v. Price, 17 W. Va. 523.

Or where he was released by an extension granted to the principal, and was ignorant of the legal effect. Meek v. Howard, 10 Smedes & M. 502.

And an injunction will not be granted against a judgment at law on the ground of mistake of law, where the bill is to correct an error in an instrument, which error was occasioned by ignorance of law. Cockerell v. Cholmeley, 1 Russ. & M. 418.

And will not be granted for a mistake of law as to the effect of a summons. Meem v. Rucker, 10 Gratt. 506.

And a mistake of law that the court could not enter judgment at the first term after the commencement of the action will not entitle to relief by injunction. Shricker v. Field, 9 Iowa, 366.

Mistake in believing that a defense was not necessary, where there was an unauthorized appearance, and the defendant was in court, and protested against the judgment, but no effort was made to obtain a new trial, will prevent an injunction against the judgment. Dunn v. Hansard, 37 Mo. 190.

A judgment will not be enjoined on the ground of mistake at law as to the fact that a defense of usury could not be made at law. Jones v. Watkins, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 81.

The mistake of law as to the right to use a set-off at law will not authorize an injunction against the judgment. Pearce v. Winter Iron-Works, 32 Ala. 68.

And a mistake of law in paying money before judgment, where such judgment was afterwards reversed, will not authorize an injunction against an execution sale in another case to maintain a set-off. Beard v. Beard, 25 W. Va. 426, 52 Am. Rep. 219.

And a mistake of law as to the duty of an officer on a defective execution will not be ground for injunction against a judgment obtained against him on account of his neglect of duty. Pettes v. Bank of Whitehall, 17 Vt. 425.

another township, and thereupon the attorneys for Walton agreed to take such steps as would be necessary to effect the transfer. Instead of so doing, however, they had on the previous day, without any knowledge on the part of the plaintiff herein or of his attorneys, appeared before the justice, and caused judgment by default to be entered by the justice against the defendants therein for the full amount asked for in the complaint. At the time that the justice wrote the above letter, and at the time of the agreement on

And a judgment in trespass for procuring a levy of attachment will not be enjoined on the ground of mistake of law, in that the decision of the supreme court of the state holding the attachment void for want of authority on the part of the officer to issue it had not been decided and was contrary to general practice. Stetson v. Goldsmith, 81 Ala. 649; Goldsmith v. Stetson, 80 Ala. 183.

But see Tomkies v. Downman, 44/74.

And that a judgment was recovered against complainant on account of mistake in pleading by his counsel, or through erroneous advice as to the defense, will not entitle to an injunction against the same.

Mistake of counsel upon a point of law is not ground for an injunction against a judgment, and the case of Ambler v. Wyld, 2 Wash. (Va.) 87, which granted an injunction for errors at trial is not recognized as authority. Fentress v. Robins, N. C. Term Rep. 177, 7 Am. Dec. 104.

So, ignorance or mismanagement of the case by the attorney will not authorize relief by injunction against the judgment at law. Burton v. Hynson, 14 Ark. 82.

The mistake of counsel in advising complainant not to present a set-off will not be ground for equitable relief by injunction against the judgment. Duckworth v. Duckworth, 35 Ala. 70.

That complainant's attorney gave her advice, which was erroneous, will not be ground for enjoining the judgment. Winchester v. Grosvenor, 48 Ill. 517.

The mistake of counsel in advising a bail that after surrender of his principal he need not defend against a sci. fa. will not authorize an injunction against the judgment. Allen v. Hamilton, 9 Gratt. 255.

Misapprehension and mistake on the part of defendant's counsel, by which judgment was rendered on default, will not authorize an injunction against the same, especially where the motion has been made in a court at law for a new trial, and has been denied, and there is no special ground for equitable interference shown. Railroad Co. v. Neal, 1 Woods, C. C. 353.

The mistake of an attorney in pleading will not authorize an injunction against the judgment. Green v. Robinson, 5 How. (Miss.) 80; Hambrick v. Crawford, 55 Ga. 335; Stephenson v. Wilson, 2 Vern. 825.

Where the attorney could have obtained permission to amend. Graham v. Stagg, 2 Paige, 321.

The mistake of an attorney in advising a particular defense is not such a mistake as will entitle to an injunction, or the fact that the attorney abandoned the defense and the complainant was compelled to employ other counsel to try the case. Winchester v. Grosvenor, supra.

And a mistake of law by attorneys on both sides will not be ground for relief by enjoining a judgment. Richmond & P. R. Co. v. Shippen, 2 Patton & H. (Va.) 327.

So, a mistake of law as to the effect of a stipulation referring a case to the circuit judge for decision, whereby a review of the same was prevented, will not authorize an injunction against the judgment on the ground of surprise, where it is not shown that complainant had not a fair trial. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Walworth County Bank, 23 Wis. 249.

In Owens v. Ranstead, 22 Ill. 161; Lawson v. Bet-
30 L. R. A.

tison, 12 Ark. 401; Blackhall v. Combs, 2 P. Wms. 75; and Ware v. Horwood, 14 Ves. Jr. 31,—it was said that equity will not relieve against judgments on the ground of mistake in pleading.

But in Drew v. Clarke, Cooke (Tenn.) 374, 5 Am. Dec. 698, it was held that a mistake of law produced by the representations of the adverse party, as to the title of land under an Indian treaty, would entitle one to relief against a judgment on a purchase-money bond, where the consideration had failed, as under act of Congress of 1806, providing that no purchase, lease, or conveyance contrary to the Indian treaty shall be made, this conveyance was void, and it is doubtful if a defense could have been made at law.

Where an appeal was taken, according to the practice at that time, from the marine court to the court of common pleas, and the case reversed, and judgment was not entered because the appellee paid the costs, and it was afterwards decided by the court of appeals that in such case the appeal should be to the general term of the marine court, and therefore the common pleas court had no jurisdiction, acquiescence for nine years will not prevent enjoining the enforcement of the judgment below, and the same will be enjoined where it is erroneous and the complainant was without fault or negligence. Jacobs v. Morange, 1 Daily. 523.

Mistake of law as to the remedy by certiorari will authorize an injunction against the judgment where, after its rendition, the supreme court has decided that the act in regard to certiorari is unconstitutional. Cobbs v. Coleman, 14 Tex. 504.

Where the defendant had a remedy at law and attempted to pursue it, but, on account of the misapprehension of the law by the court, he had been deprived of the same, an injunction against a judgment that was void for want of jurisdiction will be granted in an action for assault and battery. Connell v. Stelson, 33 Iowa, 147.

In Oliver v. Pray, 4 Ohio, 177, 19 Am. Dec. 600, where the clerk of a court made a mistake of law as to the amount of an appeal bond, thereby preventing an appeal, and there was a good defense, and it would be inequitable to enforce the judgment, it was enjoined.

A mistake of a clerk in drawing an appeal bond from a justice's judgment, producing a dismissal of the appeal, will authorize an injunction against the judgment; and in such a case the chancellor should retain the case for trial, as the circuit court had no jurisdiction on the dismissal and the justice could not try it. Saunders v. Jennings, 2 J. J. Marsh. 518.

In Tomkies v. Downman, 6 Munf. 537, an injunction was allowed against excessive fines, for a sheriff not returning an execution, where defense was not made at law owing to mistake of law, and a general delusion among the citizens as to the construction of a statute.

In Bierne v. Mann, 5 Leigh, 364, the case of Tomkies v. Downman was distinguished, as the delusion extended to the legislature, and every judgment after the first was against the law. But see Stetson v. Goldsmith, 81 Ala. 649.

Relief may sometimes be granted for a mistake of law, and an error of counsel in directing a note to be made by an assignor in a greater amount than he was liable for may authorize a relief against a judgment on the note which was given on a mistake as to what he was to pay. Fitzgerald v. Peck 4 Litt. (Ky.) 123.

the part of Walton's attorneys to effect the transfer to another township, it was known to them that such judgment had been entered. Other interviews were subsequently had between the attorneys for the respective parties regarding the transfer of the cause, in which Walton's attorneys, for the purpose of misleading and deceiving the attorneys of the plaintiff herein, represented that they were seeking to effect the transfer of the cause, and in which they concealed the fact that the judgment had been entered; and by reason of

In Pollock v. Gilbert, 16 Ga. 398, 60 Am. Dec. 732, it was held that in a suit to compel the execution of a deed needed as a defense in a suit in ejectment, an injunction against the judgment in ejectment may be granted, where complainant was ignorant that his defense could not be made available at law, believing that the destruction of an unrecorded deed would reveal title, and he did not know that he could maintain a bill for relief until after the judgment; holding that Paterson v. Bangs, 9 Paige, 627, requiring a discovery before judgment, was overruled, and that the opinion in that case was qualified by the fact that the complainant must know that his defense was not available at law in order to require him to proceed before judgment.

In Cochran v. Street, 1 Wythe, 69, 1 Wash. (Va.) 79, it was held that the mistake of four jurors that they were bound by a majority to render a verdict contrary to their own judgment was held sufficient to enjoin a judgment at law, where it was discovered too late to apply for a new trial; but this case was overruled in Howard v. McCall, 21 Gratt. 206, as to allowing a juror to impeach his verdict.

In Bull v. Com. 14 Gratt. 613, which was a criminal case, it was said, referring to Cochran v. Street, 1 Wash. (Va.) 79, that if the question was new it is at least doubtful, but it must rest entirely on the ground of an innocent mistake clearly proved, showing that the verdict was never assented to by all the jurors, and was not in truth their verdict.

For Injunctions against judgments for errors and irregularities, see note to Gum-Elastic Roofing Co. v. Mexico Pub. Co. ante, 700.

b. Of fact.

Injunctions have been granted against judgments on the ground of mistake as to facts, where complainant was not negligent and the judgment was unjust; but where the mistake is not established, or complainant was negligent, or there was a remedy at law, and no fraud on the part of the prevailing party, injunctions have been refused.

So, where a wrong entry was made on the docket, thereby preventing a good defense, an injunction was granted against the judgment. Seymour v. Miller, 32 Conn. 402; Brewer v. Jones, 44 Ga. 71.

Or where the counsel was misled by a statement of the court and prevented from making a good defense, and there is no remedy at law. Metcalf v. Williams, 104 U. S. 39, 26 L. ed. 665.

And where the complainant was under a mistake in regard to the employment of his attorney, where the practice in relation to employment was that the procure facias was to be treated as a new case, requiring a new employment and for that reason a defense was not made, an injunction was granted. Day v. Welles, 31 Conn. 344.

So, an injunction was granted against a judgment of condemnation against a garnishee, rendered by a justice in attachment on a judgment more than three years prior to the issuing of the attachment, where the judgment was rendered by mistake, it having been agreed that no judgment should be entered until the decision of another case. Welkel v. Cate, 58 Md. 106.

And where a garnishee gave a certificate to the sheriff showing that he was indebted to the defendant, when in fact he was not, and the mistake was not discovered until after judgment, he was entitled to an injunction against the same, although he had applied to the court at law for relief, which 30 L. R. A.

had been refused presumably because too late. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Gates, 10 Or. 514.

Or where he made full disclosure, and judgment was taken by mistake. Freeman v. Miller, 53 Tex. 372.

A decree of distribution in a probate court, obtained by using the names of distributees without their knowledge, will be enjoined as a fraud on the jurisdiction of the court, where the executor through mistake inventoried slaves which had already been given by the testator to the distributees as an advancement. Fairly v. Thompson, 34 Miss. 101.

The defendant in ejectment may have the judgment enjoined where, by a mistake in the description in a grant, a part of the tract was incorrectly described. Dunlap v. Stetson, 4 Mason, 349.

Mutual mistake of facts as to boundary line, incorporated in a decree in ejectment, but not discovered until too late to obtain review, will authorize an injunction against the judgment. Currier v. Esty, 110 Mass. 536.

So, a mistake in the clerk's certificate of record of a deed will authorize an injunction against the judgment in ejectment on the ground of quieting title. Haitt v. Calloway, 7 B. Mon. 178.

And proceedings in ejectment after verdict will be stayed where complainant's deed by mistake did not describe the land sold under the judgment, and the defendant with knowledge permitted him to take possession and make valuable improvements. De Kiemer v. De Cantillon, 4 Johns. Ch. 85.

And a mistake in inserting the penalty in a deed will authorize an injunction against the judgment on a covenant in the deed for the penalty. Yelton v. Hawkins, 2 J. J. Marsh. 2.

An injunction was granted against prosecuting an action in England on a judgment obtained in Ireland, on the ground of reformation of a mistake in an instrument upon which such judgment was obtained, although an injunction had been previously denied in the Irish courts, as such action on an interlocutory order is not binding. Ball v. Storie, 1 Sim. & Stu. 211, 1 L. J. Ch. 214.

And an injunction will be granted against a judgment obtained by mutual mistake in regard to a house overlapping a lot. Anglesey v. Colran, 44 N. J. Eq. 203.

Where a verdict was had on an executor's letter confessing a mortgage to the testator, a judgment was enjoined where it was obtained through a mistake and the mortgage was worth nothing. Robinson v. Bell, 2 Vern. 146.

And mistake and miscalculation on the part of the jury, which if discovered in time would have furnished a good ground for a new trial, will entitle to an injunction against the judgment. Rust v. Ware, 6 Gratt. 50, 52 Am. Dec. 100.

Mistake of fact in supposing a suit was upon a note against which there was no defense, when it was upon a forged note, will entitle the defendant to relief by injunction against the judgment. Young v. Morgan, 9 Neb. 169.

And mistake in dating a bill of exceptions preventing a review will be relieved against in equity where there is merit, and to prevent injustice. Kohn v. Lovett, 43 Ga. 179.

A judgment obtained upon an erroneous transcript under seal, where the clerk had inserted parts of two cases incorrectly, will be enjoined on the ground of fraud, as a defense could not be made at law. Collier v. Easton, 2 Mo. 145.

their statements and deceptions the plaintiff herein did not learn that the judgment had been entered until more than thirty days after its entry, and when the time for an appeal therefrom had expired. Upon learning this fact, the plaintiff herein moved the justice to set aside the judgment, and recall an execution that had been issued thereon; and on the 18th of April this motion was granted, but on the next day the justice, without any notice to the plaintiff herein or his attorneys, vacated this order. Thereupon the plaintiff

But a mistake in a bill of exceptions will not be ground for enjoining prosecution of a writ of error where there is no charge of fraud. Ford v. Weir, 24 Miss. 563.

Or where complainant had been negligent and could have corrected the same. Smith v. Fouché, 55 Ga. 120.

And that the amount of a judgment at law is too large on account of mistake which is not indicated, will not authorize an injunction against the enforcement of such judgment, where the mistake occurred through negligence on the part of complainant, and the remedy exists at law to appeal to the court rendering the judgment for relief. Muscatine v. Mississippi & M. R. Co. 1 Dill. 536.

And where an executrix in good faith confesses a judgment against the estate, the subsequent discovery of a receipt for the debt, of which she had no knowledge at the time of confession, entitles her to an injunction against the same. Gardiner v. Hardey, 12 Gill & J. 365.

Giving a draft of a judgment adjudging all costs against a party to the clerk, where only part of the costs should have been assessed against such party will not entitle to an injunction against the judgment where there is no showing that the party was injured or the court was deceived or misled, or that such judgment could not have been rendered, and there is neglect to move to set aside the same. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Henderson, 38 Tex. 70.

A mistake caused by a miscalculation of executors as to the sufficiency of assets, and not merely by a misconception of the effect of their entering a plea of fully administered and confessing an unconditional judgment, will not authorize an injunction against an action on the judgment confessed, where the confession was founded on a consideration of gaining time. Freelands v. Royall, 2 Hen. & M. 575.

In Brenner v. Alexander, 16 Or. 349, it was said that an administrator confessing judgment admits there are assets, and he cannot thereafter have such judgment enjoined on ascertaining subsequently that there is a deficiency; but if he had not confessed judgment it was said that he would not have been estopped.

A judgment in the justice's court in California will not be enjoined on the ground of mistake, inadvertence, and excusable neglect, where defendant made a mistake as to the return day of the summons, being unable to read, but applied, as provided under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 869, to the justice for relief against such judgment, which was denied; and a court will not review the judgments of other courts by a suit in equity. Reagan v. Fitzgerald, 75 Cal. 220.

A statement by a clerk in the attorney's office as to the object of a suit contrary to the allegations of a complaint against the party on file will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, as the mistake is to be accounted the misfortune of the parties rather than the wrong of his adversary. English v. Aldrich, 132 Ind. 500.

And the claim that there is a mistake in the account on which judgment was rendered, which is not discovered until too late to obtain a new trial, is not ground for injunction where the mistake is apparent on the face of the account. Falls v. Robinson, 5 Md. 385.

And the dissolution of an injunction will not be set aside on account of mistake of attorney causing his absence, where the party was not present, and 30 L. R. A.

was negligent, and could have asked for a continuance or employed another attorney, where complainant was in the parish at that time. Dwight v. Richard, 4 La. Ann. 240.

The mistake of counsel in stating the facts in a plea will not authorize an injunction against the judgment, where the party was himself present at the trial. Jamison v. May, 13 Ark. 600.

So, a mistake in not defending, which mistake is due to negligence, will not authorize an injunction against the judgment. Ross v. Holloway, 60 Miss. 558.

Or where the clerk of the court made a loose declaration that no such suit was pending. Hanna v. Morrow, 43 Ark. 107.

The consent of complainant's attorney to a judgment at law under a misapprehension of facts will not authorize an injunction against the judgment in the absence of misrepresentations or fraud of prevailing party. Gibson v. Armstrong, 23 Ark. 438.

The enforcement of a judgment for partition will not be enjoined on the ground of mistake or accident, where it is claimed that under a prior judgment quieting title in plaintiff against the defendant by mistake and omission the description of the land was omitted from the decree, which was not discovered for eighteen years, but after discovery there has been such a delay and conduct as constitute a waiver of the right to appeal to equity to correct the judgment; besides, there was a remedy at law in the defense to the partition suit, when it was disclosed that the former decree was defective. Ratliff v. Stretch, 180 Ind. 222.

If in serving the summons the constable by mistake entered a less amount on the copy served than in the original summons, the judgment in excess is only voidable and the judgment in excess of the amount indorsed cannot be enjoined. (Reversing the former opinion in the same case.) Bassett v. Mitchell, 40 Kan. 549.

Where a judgment has been entered by mistake, thereby preventing a review, an injunction will not be granted against the same where a valid defense to the action is not shown. Farmers' Bank v. Vanmeter, 4 Rand. (Va.) 566.

And an injunction will not be granted against a judgment on the ground that the complainant was prevented from making a defense by mistake, where he does not state how the alleged mistake, oversight, unintentional, undiscovered, and accidental omission occurred, so that the court may see that there was no fault or want of diligence on his part. Simmons v. Martin, 53 Ga. 620.

For mistake as to matters arising after judgment generally, see note to Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Welles (Ark.) ante, 590, Injunction against judgments for matters arising subsequent to their rendition.

V. On account of surprise.

a. Generally.

Surprise will not be ground for an injunction against a judgment unless a showing is made that the judgment was not obtained by reason of complainant's negligence or from circumstances beyond the control of the complainant. But surprise will be cause for injunction where complainant was not negligent, and the pleadings were amended at the trial in his absence, or the docket was not made as required by law, and injustice has been done.

So, surprise will not be ground for enjoining a brought this action to perpetually enjoin Walton from enforcing the said judgment against him or his property. A demurrer to the complaint was overruled, and, the defendants declining to answer, judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff, from which this appeal has been taken.

The complaint shows that the judgment in the justice's court was obtained by a fraud practiced upon the plaintiff herein by the attorneys of Walton, with the assistance of the justice, in a manner which entitles the plaintiff to the equitable relief sought; and the appellant does not attempt to controvert the judgment at law, unless the judgment was not occasioned by negligence of complainant. Cunningham v. Caldwell, Hardin (Ky.) 123.

And a judgment will not be enjoined on the ground of surprise although defendant's attorney left court on an erroneous announcement that there would be no more jury trials during that term, if no valid defense was shown to the action. Phillips v. Samuel, 76 Mo. 657.

A party served in attachment process cannot obtain an injunction against the judgment of condemnation on the ground of surprise. Peters v. League, 18 Md. 68, 71 Am. Dec. 623.

But an amendment to the pleadings, made without knowledge of counsel for defendant, which authorized a judgment without evidence for $5,000 instead of about $50, where the attorney for the plaintiff had just offered to dismiss, on payment of costs and fees, will authorize an injunction against the judgment. Webster v. Skipwith, 26 Miss. 841.

And where foreigners being residents abroad go to trial upon a declaration having a good defense, and new counts are filed covering another claim after the trial commences, and a delay of a short period only is allowed before the trial is again resumed, and the foreigners have no notice of such counts,—an injunction will be granted on the ground of surprise where there is a good defense to such action. Bell v. Cunningham, 1 Sumn. 69.

So, where the rules of court required a new calendar each month, and the call of the docket was at the time when a new calendar should have been made, and the attorney for defendant, learning that no new calendar was to be made, gave no further attention to the case for that month,—a judgment obtained in the absence of such attorney and his client should be enjoined where there was a good defense. Beveridge v. Hewitt, 3 Ill. App. 467.

b. In matters of witnesses.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment obtained by the assignee of a bond on the ground that the obligee of the bond was absent from the country and the defendant was unable for that reason to obtain evidence for his defense. Martlett v. Pettus, 3 Mo. 345.

And that the plaintiff was absent from the trial, and the defendant was therefore unable to use him as a witness, will not be ground for an injunction against the judgment. Wilder v. Lee, 64 N. C. 50.

The mere fact of the absence of a material witness at the time of trial is not of itself a sufficient ground for an injunction, because the court of law who tried the cause was fully competent to give relief by a continuance or a new trial. Chapman v. Scott, 1 Cranch. C. C. 302.

Surprise as regards evidence will not entitle to an injunction against a judgment where there is a remedy at law. Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 58 U. S. 17 How. 443, 15 L. ed. 123.

So, where it is not shown that the evidence of the witness whose testimony is the ground for a new trial can be overthrown on a subsequent trial, an injunction will not be granted. Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 187.

And surprise is not sufficient ground for relief against the enforcement of a judgment where a witness did not testify, as expected, as to usury, there being no diligence shown in the attempt to ascertain what could be proved. Williams v. Lockwood, Clarke, Ch. 172.

In Post v. Boardman, Clarke, Ch. 523, which does not show that it was an injunction suit, it was held that surprise by a witness's unexpectedly refusing to testify as to usury on the ground of his being interested and that a defense could not be made at law, will authorize equitable relief against the judgment, as N. Y. act May 15, 1867, gives chancery courts jurisdiction in such cases if relief could not be had at law.

While neither a court of law nor a court of equity will grant a new trial to enable the party to get new witnesses, yet where the admission of a material fact necessary at law for a defense comes from the adverse party in equity, an injunction will be granted against the judgment at law. Hankey v. Vernon, 3 Cox, Ch. Cas. 12.

c. In regard to perjury.

An injunction will not be granted on the ground of surprise in that the judgment was obtained by perjury, where complainant was negligent, or there is not a showing that the judgment would be changed on another trial, or there is a remedy at law; but where the only material witness committed perjury, and it is clearly shown, an injunction will be granted.

Surprise at what is claimed to be false evidence will not be ground for enjoining a judgment where the complainant has not been diligent, and the evidence is not material and no fraud is shown. Turley v. Taylor, 6 Baxt. 376.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment on the ground of perjury where it was not shown but what the judgment might be based upon other evidence. Neelson v. First Nat. Bank, 70 Fed. Rep. 528.

And an injunction will not be granted on the ground of the alleged perjury of a witness on a question as to the amount of damages, where an application for a new trial has already been denied at law, and complainant was negligent in not attending court. Smith v. Lowry, 1 Johns. Ch. 819.

As a general rule equity will not interfere with a judgment at law or the enforcement of the same, on the ground that a witness was mistaken as to the fact upon which the defense turned, or that he swore corruptly, and negligence in not searching the records to ascertain whether a judgment existed, which was allowed to be proved by parol to complainant's prejudice, will bar relief. Vaughn v. Johnson, 9 N. J. Eq. 173.

So, proceedings on a judgment will not be enjoined on the ground that it was procured by perjury, where a defense was not made to the action at law. Cairo & St. L. R. Co. v. Holbrook, 22 Ill. 297.

And an injunction against a judgment and the execution, on the ground of newly discovered evidence to prove perjury of the prevailing party in obtaining the judgment, or misconduct of jury, will not be allowed where the complainant has not used due diligence. Gray v. Barton, 62 Mich. 186; Kersey v. Rash, 8 Del. Ch. 321.

So, false evidence shown on a trial will not be sufficient in equity to enjoin a judgment at law. Gaiona & S. W. R. Co. v. Ennor, 116 Ill. 55.

An injunction will not be granted against a judgment on the ground of perjury of witness, where complainant fails to show that he has other witnesses than himself by whom he can prove the testimony is false, as it would not avail simply to grant a new trial. Ames v. Snider, 55 Ill. 493.

power of a court of equity to afford the relief sought by the plaintiff, but rests his defense upon the proposition that the plaintiff is not entitled to equitable relief if he could obtain the same relief at law. It is a familiar rule that a separate action to restrain the enforcement of a judgment will not be sustained when the same relief can be obtained through a motion or other proceeding in the action in which the judgment was obtained; and, in a jurisdiction in which legal and equitable relief is dispensed in different tribunals, a court of equity will not grant relief against a judgment when the same relief can be obtained by the aid of the court that rendered the judgment. But under the system of procedure which obtains in this state, where the various kinds of relief are administered by the same tribunal, and where there is but one form of civil action for the enforcement or protection of civil rights (Code Civ. Proc. § 307), a party who presents a complaint showing his right to the relief asked is not to be denied that relief because he might have sought it under a different form of action. See Thompson v. Laughlin, 91 Cal. 318.

When the plaintiff learned that the judgment had been entered against him, the time for an appeal had expired; and, even if the justice had the power to grant his motion to open the judgment, his subsequent action vacating this order was equivalent to a denial of the motion, and from this order there was no appeal to the superior court. The rule under which a court of equity declines to interfere until after the application for relief has been made to the court in which the judgment was rendered has no application when relief has been sought and denied in that court. The denial of that court to grant relief gives to the court of equity the same authority to interfere as if the other court was powerless to render aid. Even if the plaintiff could have had the judgment annulled upon certiorari, he was not compelled to resort to that remedy; especially where he would not thereby obtain as effective relief as by the course herein pursued.

The objection that the codefendant of the plaintiff is not a party to this action is without merit. The judgment in the justice's court is restrained only so far as it affects the plaintiff herein and his property, leaving the judgment against his codefendant in full effect, to be enforced at any time.

The judgment is affirmed.

We concur: Garoutte, J.; Van Fleet, J.

And proceedings on an execution and judgment will not be enjoined on the ground that the same was obtained by perjury, where there is no showing made that on a new trial the result will be different. Miller v. Morse, 23 Mich. 355.

Where an injunction was obtained in a decree for alimony, proceedings on this decree will not be enjoined on the ground that it was obtained by perjury as it would be a renewal of the original litigation. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 86 Ga. 203.

So, an action on a judgment claimed by the defendant therein to have been obtained by perjury will not be enjoined, as it would be granting a new trial, for which there is a remedy at law. Cotzhausen v. Kerting, 29 Fed. Rep. 821.

In Burgess v. Lovengood, 2 Jones, Eq. 457, which was an action to enjoin a judgment on an award made by state commissioners, it was held that a judgment would not be enjoined for perjury where no particular falsehood is proved either by deed, writing, or conviction of perjury, and it is a question of doubt as to whether the commissioners' decision could be reviewed, as they are functi officii.

But new evidence of perjury of the only material witness will be ground for enjoining a judgment. Peagram v. King, 2 Hawks, 206.

So, a judgment obtained upon the testimony of one witness who was afterwards contradicted clearly in equity, was held sufficient to authorize relief by injunction where such witness was a partner of the plaintiff at law and proved the demand, and the debt was a gambling one. Verdier v. Hume, 4 Hen. & M. 479.

And where the defendant in an action for rent relied upon the plaintiff to prove a surrender, and he testified falsely, an injunction was granted against such judgment where complainant was able to establish the perjury and discovered a written authority executed by plaintiff at law authorizing such surrender, which could not have been found by the use of reasonable diligence. Stowell v. Eldred, 26 Wis. 504.

For injunctions for surprise in rendering judgments prematurely, see note to Gum-Elastic Roofing Co. v. Mexico Pub. Co. (Ind.) ante, 700. Injunctions against judgments for errors and irregularities, VI. On account of duress.

Duress in obtaining a judgment will not usually be ground for an injunction,—especially where there was negligence on the part of complainant or a remedy at law; but an injunction was granted in an exceptional case.

So, an injunction will not be granted against a judgment where complainant was prevented from attending court by the danger incidental to reorganizing courts after the war, where he was negligent and had time to prepare for his defense. Prater v. Robinson, 11 Helsk. 391.

Fear of personal safety, preventing attendance at court on account of war, will not authorize an injunction against proceedings on a judgment where no effort was made to employ counsel. George v. Tutt, 36 Mo. 141.

And a failure to make a defense at law on account of fear of personal injury at the court from his adversary will not authorize an injunction against the judgment. Holt v. Graham, 2 Bibb, 192.

In order to enjoin a judgment the complainant must show that he had a good defense and used diligence, and fear of bodily harm in attendance on court will not excuse. Duncan v. Gibson, 45 Mo. 352.

And that a judgment was obtained by influence and threats of plaintiff over referee, will not be ground for enjoining a judgment or execution sale, as there is a remedy by appeal. Nichols v. Snow, 42 Tex. 72.

A judgment will not be enjoined in an action by the wife on the ground that the debt was her husband's and that the judgment was obtained by fraud and marital influence, where the debt was one for which she should be held liable. Bell v. Francke, 23 La. Ann. 599.

But in Holcomb v. Canady, 2 Helsk. 610, a judgment in ejectment was enjoined where complainant, who was old and infirm and lived in another county, had title bonds from the defendant for the land in controversy and his defense was prevented by the disorganized conditions of the court owing to circumstances of war, and an unconscientious advantage was taken in the absence of complainant and his counsel.

For injunction against judgment on the ground of ignorance, see By concealment, supra, II, b, and Mistake of fact, supra, IV, b.

L. T.

MONTANA SUPREME COURT.

William F. FITZGERALD et al., Respts.,
v.

William A. CLARK et al., Appts.

(.....Mont.....)

1. The construction of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322, defining the rights of a mining locator in a vein of which the apex is within his location, should be such as to give him a length on the strike equal to the length on the apex within the boundary lines of his location, regardless of the direction of the dip or the depth to which it is followed.
2. The owner of a mining claim located on the apex of a vein which enters on an end line and passes out of a side line is entitled, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322, to so much of the strike of the vein on the dip extending beyond such side line as is comprehended between a vertical plane let fall into the earth through such end line extended and a parallel vertical plane let fall through the point of intersection of the apex and the side line.
3. The existence between two veins of such material or indications as a practical miner would follow with the expectation of finding ore does not establish such connection between them as entitles the owner of the older vein to the ore in the portion of the other vein lying within his location, but which in the absence of a connection between the two veins would belong to the owner of the other vein, by virtue of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322; but the connection to accomplish such result must be a continuous streak or body of ore or vein matter.
4. An instruction making the basis for estimating the value of ore extracted from a claim the market value of such ore on the dump after deducting the cost of mining and hoisting the same in effect allows a party liable the reasonable expense of treating the ore.
5. The existence of a fault in one vein cannot be proved by showing faults in other veins which are claimed to be a continuity of the vein in question, in the absence of a showing of a continuity in the fault.
6. The accidental absence of the attorney of a party when the verdict is received, not due to any order or action of the court or any conduct by the counsel or parties on the other side, is not cause for reversal.
7. A juror's affidavit impeaching his verdict in an equity case, which is merely advisory, is properly disregarded.

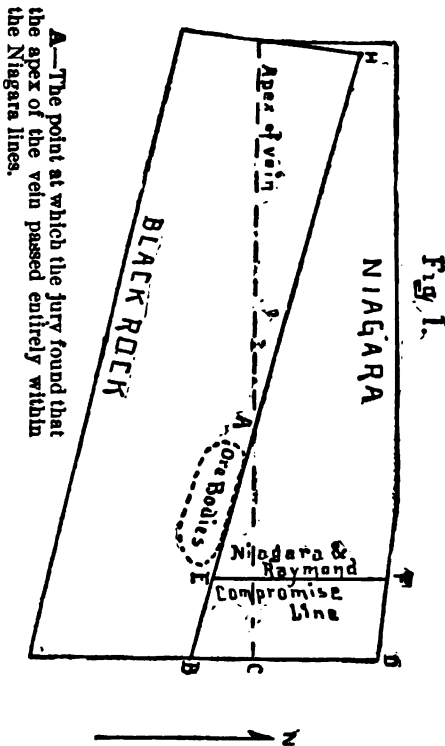

(November 11, 1895.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the District Court for Silver Bow County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover the value of certain mineral ore taken from a vein having its apex within the plaintiffs' mining location and the title to which was alleged to be in the plaintiffs. Affirmed.

NOTE.—The above case presents a point of great practical importance in mining law, as to which there is no decision of the Supreme Court of the United States that is exactly applicable. While the Montana court evidently disapproves of the doctrine
30 L. R. A.

Statement by De Witt, J.:

The respondents own an undivided two-thirds interest in the Niagara quartz lode mining claim. The defendant William A. Clark owns the other one third in said claim. The appellants own the Black Rock quartz lode mining claim. The surface relations of the two mining claims are indicated upon the annexed diagram, marked "Figure 1".

It will be more convenient in this statement and in the opinion to sometimes speak of the parties to this appeal as the "Black Rock" and the "Niagara," instead of using their names, or the terms "appellants" and "respondents."

The north side line of the Black Rock claim is the south side line of the Niagara claim. We do not purport to exactly indicate on the diagram the position of the apex of the vein as it traverses the two claims. The dotted line simply indicates the general course of the vein, and, as far as the purposes of this decision are concerned, is correct. The apex moves across the Black Rock claim from west to east, and crosses the boundary line between the two claims at a point marked A on the diagram, which is, as the jury found, 513 feet westerly of the former court in the Amy Case, it is believed that the correctness of the present decision does not necessarily involve any disapproval of the doctrine of the Amy Case.

from the northeast corner of the Black Rock, which corner is marked B on the diagram. The east end line of the Niagara was originally at the place marked B D. In some controversy between the Niagara and the Raymond claim to the east a compromise was made by which the boundary between those two claims was placed at a point about 224 feet westerly from the original Niagara east end line. This was called the "compromise line," and would be at about the place as marked on the diagram E F. This, however, is not important in the present suit. The parallelism of the end lines of the Niagara was not disturbed by the Raymond compromise. The apex and strike of the vein, having crossed into the Niagara ground at the point marked A, continue easterly, and pass wholly out of the Niagara ground through the easterly end line thereof. It is immaterial whether that end line is the line B D or E F. The strike and apex pass through each of them. The vein dips to the south. The portion of the apex which is represented by the line A G is wholly within the Niagara surface lines. The portion of the vein below this part of the apex, in its downward course into the earth,—that is to say, on its dip to the south,—passes under the line H B, which is the north side line of the Black Rock, and the south side line of the Niagara. We call this line a side line at present simply for convenience, and not as a prestatement of our views as to whether it must be considered a side line or an end line. On this portion of the vein on the dip lying under the apex A G the ore was found (marked on the diagram "Ore Bodies") which was the subject of this action. The defendant the Black Rock owner entered upon this portion of the vein, and extracted the ore from the place as marked on the diagram. There was a contention in the case that these ore bodies were upon a vein other than that which apexed (if we may invent this verb) at A G; that is to say, upon another vein, the apex of which was on the Black Rock ground. But the findings were adverse to the Black Rock in this matter. We will not review that contention. For the purposes of this decision the ore bodies in question were upon the vein the apex of which is indicated by the line A G, which lies wholly within the Niagara surface lines. The plaintiffs, being the owners of an undivided two-thirds interest in the Niagara, brought this action against the defendants to recover the two-thirds value of the ores so taken from the place above described. Plaintiffs obtained judgment for $27,242.54. The jury also found that the apex of the vein in controversy passed entirely within the lines of the Niagara lode at the point marked A. Judgment was to this effect, and for the amount of money named above. A motion for a new trial was denied. The Black Rock people appeal from the judgment and from the order denying the new trial.

Messrs. George Haldorn, Robinson & Stapleton, and Smith & Word for appellants.

Mr. John F. Forbis, for respondents:

Plaintiffs have the extralateral rights claimed by them under the facts in this case.

Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co., 157 30 L. R. A.

U. S. 695, 89 L. ed. 864; Del Monte Min. & M. Co. v. New York & L. C. Min. Co. 66 Fed. Rep. 212; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 61 Fed. Rep. 557; Consolidated Wyoming Gold Min. Co. v. Champion Min. Co. 63 Fed. Rep. 540.

The action of the court in striking out that portion of the instruction in regard to the method of determining the connection between veins which was eliminated, was highly proper.

Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Chasman, 116 U. S. 529, 39 L. ed. 712.

Defendants were as much trespassers as if they had not owned any interest in the property in question, and must account as any other trespasser.

Hazard v. Albro, 17 R. I. 181; Almy v. Daniels, 15 R. I. 312; Fulmer's Appeal, 123 Pa. 24.

There are different rules laid down for ascertaining the damages for ores or coal mined by a trespasser. In some cases the trespasser is not allowed for the costs of extraction, but the true rule and the one most favorable to defendants was set forth in the instructions.

Baker v. Wheeler, 8 Wend. 505, 24 Am. Dec. 77, note, et seq.; McLean County Coal Co. v. Long, 81 Ill. 359, 10 Min. Rep. 193; Robertson v. Jones, 71 Ill. 405, 10 Min. Rep. 190; Re United Merthyr Collieries Co. L. R. 15 Eq. 46, 10 Min. Rep. 153; Illinois & St. L. R. Co. v. Ogle, 82 Ill. 637, 25 Am. Rep. 842, 10 Min. Rep. 198; Ege v. Kille, 84 Pa. 333, 10 Min. Rep. 212; Clowser v. Joplin Min. Co. 4 Dill. 469, note, 10 Min. Rep. 222; Trotter v. Maclean, L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 574, 10 Min. Rep. 263; Austin v. Huntsville Coal & M. Co. 73 Mo. 535, 37 Am. Rep. 446, 9 Min. Rep. 115.

The law makes it the duty of the counsel to be present, and that whether the court is actually in session or in recess awaiting the verdict of a jury.

Strouger v. Sample, 44 Kan. 298; Reilly v. Bader, 46 Minn. 212; Seaton v. Smith, 45 Kan. 48; Torque v. Carrillo, 1 Ariz. 386; Walker v. Dailey, 87 Iowa, 375; People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 341; Code Civ. Proc. § 269.

What a travesty on law it would be to say that after leaving the jury room, and after falling into the hands of the opposite party and their counsel, a juror could come into court and impeach his own verdict.

Thompson & Merriam, Juries, § 441; Thompson, Trials, § 2613.

De Witt, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was tried in the district court after the decision of King v. Amy & S. Consol. Min. Co. 9 Mont. 543, and before the reversal of that decision on appeal to the United States Supreme Court (152 U. S. 322, 38 L. ed. 419). The case was tried upon the assumption that the law as attempted to be declared in 9 Mont. was correct. The district court instructed the jury upon this theory, and the judgment gave to the Niagara people the two-thirds value of the ore taken by the Black Rock east of the point where the apex of the vein passed entirely into the Niagara ground, namely, point A on the diagram. No exceptions to these instructions were preserved or specified so that they can now be reviewed. But since the trial of the case at bar, and perfecting the appeal to this court, the United States Supreme Court has reversed our decision in the Amy & Silversmith Case. The Black Rock people argue that, although they are not now in a position to urge error in the instructions (that is to say, that which they now claim to be error by reason of the United States Supreme Court decision of the Amy & Silversmith Case), still they can raise the same point upon the ground that the pleadings do not support the judgment. Their argument to this effect is that the pleadings, alleging the facts as detailed in the statement above, do not warrant the judgment under the law as decided by the United States Supreme Court in the Amy & Silversmith Case. In other words, the Black Rock contends that under that decision, if the Niagara apex leaves the Niagara claim through a side line, as it does, the Niagara is limited, in following down the dip of the vein, to a perpendicular plane drawn downward through that side line,—the line H B on the diagram; whereas the district court did not so limit them, but held in its judgment that the Niagara could take the ore on the dip of the vein under the apex A G, and east of the point A, although such vein on its dip extended southward under the Black Rock north side line. That is to say, the district court gave judgment in accordance with the law of the Amy & Silversmith Case, in 9 Mont. which was declared not to be the law in the Amy & Silversmith Case in 152 U. S. We will concede to the Black Rock that this question is raised by the pleadings, and we shall proceed to determine whether the Niagara or the Black Rock owns the ore in dispute taken from the place marked "Ore Bodies" on the diagram.

We shall not renew the discussion of the cases upon this question decided by the United States Supreme Court prior to May 21, 1890, the date of our decision of the Amy & Silversmith Case. Our best construction of those decisions is found in our opinion in that case. We there met the problem which had for years engaged the earnest attention of lawyers who had to do with mining litigation,—i. e. the preservation of the intent of the mining statutes when they are applied to a location in which exploration has demonstrated that the apex and strike of the vein do not pass through both end lines of the location. We gave our best endeavor and research in that decision, and arrived at a result which we were willing to concede was not wholly in accord with the decisions of the United States Supreme Court upon that subject, but which we believed could, with a very little effort, be reconciled with those decisions, and which we were wholly satisfied was the only practicable working solution of the problem in all its phases, and which we were also wholly satisfied was fully within the intent of the United States mining laws. Even with the profound respect which we, in common with all courts, entertain for the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, we think that there is no impropriety in saying, and that it is due to ourselves to say, that, the longer we observe the daily operation of the mining laws in practical affairs, the more satisfied are we that our decision of the Amy & Silversmith Case was correct. We are strengthened in this opinion by the views of other courts, to which we shall hereinafter refer. But the United States Supreme Court is the court of last resort upon this subject, and our opinions, as a rule of decision, must be abandoned if they are in conflict with the declarations of the superior tribunal. If that court had given no further utterance upon this subject since its decision of the Amy & Silversmith Case, we should feel that we must, however reluctantly, desert the principle which we sought to maintain in that case. But, as will be seen in the review of the cases below, that distinguished tribunal has given a hint that it is willing to reconsider the principle involved. Upon that hint we feel that we are justified in approaching the subject much as if it were res integra, and without subjecting ourselves to the criticism of judicial insubordination.

But to the subject in hand. As noted above, we shall not go to the decisions back of our Amy & Silversmith opinion. 9 Mont. 543. We are satisfied with that discussion of the subject, and the review of the authorities up to that date. We shall take up the subject as it has been developed since our decision in that case. The history of the discussion is found, chronologically, in the following cases: King v. Amy & S. Consol. Min. Co. (May 21, 1890) 9 Mont. 543; Tyler Min. Co. v. Sweeney (Jan. 16, 1898) 4 C. C. A. 329, 54 Fed. Rep. 284, 7 U. S. App. 463; King v. Amy & S. Consol. Min. Co. (March 5, 1894) 152 U. S. 223, 38 L. ed. 419; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. (April 9, 1894) 9 C. C. A. 613, 61 Fed. Rep. 557; Del Monte Min. & M. Co. v. New York & L. O. Min. Co. (March 13, 1895) 66 Fed. Rep. 212; Last Chances Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. (April 15, 1895) 157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859. The cases cited above in 4 C. C. A., 54 Fed. Rep., 7 U. S. App., 9 C. C. A., 61 Fed. Rep., and 157 U. S., are different appeals and discussions of the same case. In the Amy & Silversmith Case the apex of the vein crossed the claim as indicated in the diagram used in that opinion, and which is reproduced here, marked "Figure 2":

The vein dipped to the north. We held that the right of the Amy & Silversmith to follow the vein on the dip was bounded by a perpendicular plane extending into the earth at the point where the apex crossed the Amy & Silversmith north sideline, the point marked e on the diagram, Fig. 2, and which plane was parallel to the end lines of the Amy & Silversmith claim, and extending north of the Amy & Silversmith north side line. We quoted section 2822, U. S. Rev. Stat., which is as follows: "The locators of all mining locations . . . shall have the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all . . . veins, lodes, and ledges throughout their entire depth, the top or apex of which lies inside of such surface-lines extended downward vertically, although such veins, lodes, or ledges may so far depart from a perpendicular in their course downward as to extend outside the vertical side lines of such surface locations. But their right of possession to such outside parts of such veins or ledges shall be confined to such portions thereof as lie between vertical planes drawn downward as above described, through the end lines of their locations, so continued in their own direction that such planes will intersect such exterior parts of such veins or ledges." We then said: "As said by Mr. Justice Field (Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & S. Co. 118 U. S. 206, 80 L. ed. 101): 'This section appears sufficiently clear on its face. There is no patent or latent ambiguity in it. . . . The difficulty arising from the section grows out of its application to claims where the course of the vein is so variant from a straight line that the end lines of the surface location are not parallel, or, if so, are not at a right angle to the course of the vein.' We may add to these words that further difficulties arise when we are obliged to apply the statute to facts not wholly within its contemplation. If a mining location be made regularly,—made so that the strike of the vein crosses the location from end line to end line, and at right angles to said end lines,—there is nothing in the statute to construe or interpret. Flagstaff Silver Min. Co. v. Tarbet, 98 U. S. 469, 25 L. ed. 259; Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & S. Co. 118 U. S. 205, 80 L. ed. 101; Argentine Min. Co. v. Terrible Min. Co. 123 U. S. 485, 80 L. ed. 1142. 'There is no patent or latent ambiguity.' But when veins or their strike cross the side lines, or a side line and end line, at all conceivable angles, difficulties confront the courts that can best be fully met by legislative aid. Until such aid is invoked, the courts must follow the statute and previous construction as closely as the varying facts permit. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & S. Co. 118 U. S. 208, 80 L. ed. 102. The history of mining has proved that the law of May 10, 1872, and amendments thereto, do not afford clear, adequate, and simple solution for some of the practical conditions that arise in the developing of the mining industry. The case at bar is a notable instance. It is a first impression in this court, and all other appellate courts." After stating what we understood to be the meaning of the words "dip," "strike," etc., as used by miners and in the decisions, we further said: "The United States mineral law gives to the miner the whole of every vein the apex of which lies within his surface exterior boundaries, or which lies within perpendicular planes drawn downward indefinitely on the lines of those boundaries. The miner may follow the dip . . . wherever it goes, provided he has the apex as a basis of operation, and that he does not cross the vertical planes of the end lines. The intent of the statute is to give the miner a section or block of the vein of a length on the strike which is equal to the length of the apex lying within the exterior vertical bounding planes of the location, and of a depth as far as he desires, or is able to work downward; and that at the most remote depth attained he shall have the same number of feet on the strike as he had at the apex. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & S. Co. 118 U. S. 205, 80 L. ed. 101." We have always been of opinion that this is the keynote of the interpretation of section 2822, U. S. Rev. Stat., that is to say, if the miner has the apex in his location, he is to have the vein, and he has as much length of the vein on the strike, no matter how deep he may go in the dip, as he has length of apex within his surface lines, whether that apex reaches the surface or is found beneath the same, within the planes of his exterior boundary lines extending downward perpendicularly. This, in our opinion, is what section 2822 says in plain language.

Continuing further in the Amy & Silversmith Case, we said: "It seems that such grant by the statute to the miner, in view of the geological facts and history of veins, and particularly their almost universal tendency to depart from a perpendicular in their course downward, was deemed to secure to him a more satisfactory title than he would obtain if he were compelled to locate a parallelogram on the surface of the earth, as under the Spanish mining law, and take all and only that portion of the solid contents of the earth included in a parallelepipedon formed by dropping vertical planes downward on the line of each side of such parallelogram; and the intent of the statutory grant of section 2822 is that the miner may follow his vein on the dip, but not on the strike, if it departs from the parallelepipedon indicated. Therefore, if the miner locates his claim regularly,—that is, as the statute contemplates that he will,—he has all that the statute intends to give him. See cases cited supra. If he 'will not or cannot make the explorations necessary to ascertain the true course of the vein, and draws his end lines ignorantly, he must bear the consequences' (Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & S. Co. 118 U. S. 207, 80 L. ed. 102); that is, he takes less of the apex and strike than he would obtain by a regular location, and consequently less of the dip." We are still of opinion that the loss which a miner should suffer if he is obliged to make his location before he can trace the apex and strike of the vein for its whole distance, and thus makes his location irregularly, should be the loss of so much length of the vein on the strike as by his irregular location he has failed to observe the length on the apex. If this be the consequence which he is to suffer by reason of his irregular location, he loses simply that which he failed to locate, and he does not lose the vein of which he has located the apex. That he is to have the vein when he has the apex, we believe is the intent of the mining law. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2822. We said further in the Amy & Silversmith Case: "But in order for the miner to make his location in exact conformity with the intent of the law, he must know when he fixes his exterior boundaries, what the true strike of the vein is. If he knows this, he will locate so that the strike shall pass through the middle of each end line, leaving 300 feet of surface ground on each side of the vein. But the true strike is often ascertainable only after immense sums of money are expended in development. He has twenty days, under our statute, to determine this important matter, which may take years to fully demonstrate. If in this helpless condition the prospector commits an error of geological judgment, and upon such error he expends the toil of years, and that toil has wrought its reward, we are of the opinion that the statute should be so construed as will come the nearest to giving him that whole section or block of the vein which we have above indicated that it is the intent that he shall have, as is consistent with the amount of apex which he has happened to secure by his surface lines, and their planes extended downward." We then proceeded to review the contentions of counsel in the case, and to discuss, as we understood them, the three leading cases in the United States Supreme Court, namely: Flagstaff Silver Min. Co. v. Tarbet (The Flagstaff Case), 98 U. S. 463, 25 L. ed. 253; Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & S. Co. (The Horseshoe Case), 118 U. S. 196, 30 L. ed. 98; Argentine Min. Co. v. Terrible Min. Co. 123 U. S. 478, 30 L. ed. 1140. We then offered the following solution of the problem, and decided the case upon the principle as found on page 575 of 9 Mont. as follows: "These three United States cases have compelled that court to endeavor to cast into the Procrustean bed of the statute individuals that strained the mould into which they were forced. But we believe that we may legitimately conclude from those cases that, in the facts now before us, the principle is that the north side line of the Amy terminates the strike of the vein, and that the dip must be controlled by the planes of the original end lines. The Amy people may follow their dip north of their north side line, but only as it lies between the planes of their end lines, as below considered. The object of parallelism in the end lines is that the locator may have his full section of the lode in its entire depth. But the determination of the strike of the Amy at a point on the side line deprives them of the dip northwest of that point, because the dip in that portion lies under the apex of the Non-Consolidated. The law intends that the plane of the end line shall operate as a boundary to the dip, and so operate at the point where the strike is ended. If the strike reached the original end line, as in a regular location, the bounding plane would there operate upon the dip. If the strike, by reason of its going out of a side line, falls short of reaching the original end-line plane, that plane must take effect where the strike in fact ends; that is, at a point on the side line (point e. Fig. 1), and, if it takes effect there, its parallelism must not be destroyed. We therefore have the bounding plane operating at the point where the apex leaves the north side line, and operating parallel to the east end line, and retaining its parallelism as originally marked on the ground. It is not a new line or plane, or one judicially constructed. It is determined by the location lines on the surface. There is never any readjustment according to subsequent developments. The parallelism of the end-line planes is fixed by location, and never varies. The point of departure of the strike from the surface lines fixes the point where the end-line plane is to perform its functions, whether that departure be at an end line, as contemplated by the statute, or whether accident has fixed it at a point on a side line. Complications are soluble upon this theory. The intent of the statute seems to be secured." As noted in the Amy & Silversmith Case, the difficulties arise in applying the United States mining statutes to accidentally irregular locations; that is, locations where it is developed in time, and by explorations, that the apex and strike pass through the side lines, or a side line and an end line (as in the case at bar), or enter and pass out of the same side line. We essayed in that case a solution of this difficulty which could be applied to every irregularity, and which would secure absolute uniformity in all complications, and give to every mining location, as the statute intended and declared, the whole vein, in its whole depth, to the extent of the length of the apex which was located. We thought that we had accomplished that result. With due deference to those who have differed from us, we think so still.

The principle which we sought to maintain in the Amy & Silversmith Case found its first approval in an appellate court in Tyler Min. Co. v. Sweeney, 4 C. C. A. 329, 54 Fed. Rep. 284, 7 U. S. App. 463. In that case the United States circuit court of appeals, ninth circuit, discussed the extralateral rights of a location where the apex and strike passed through a side line and an end line. The situation differed from that of the Amy & Silversmith Case, as in that case the apex and strike passed through both side lines. But we understood that the circuit court of appeals approved the principle of our decision in the Amy & Silversmith Case, for the opinion by Judge Hawley, a veteran lawyer and judge in the mining regions, says: "Here the location of the Tyler was properly made in the form of a parallelogram along the course of the lode or vein. The lode extends from the northwesterly end line for a distance of nearly 1,100 feet within the side lines of the surface location, and then so changes its course as to cross the southerly side line into the Last Chance location. The learned justice who wrote the opinion in The Horseshoe Case (Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & S. Co. supra), when he said that the parallelism of the end lines 'is essential to the existence of any right in the locator or patentee to follow his vein outside of the vertical planes drawn through the side lines,' did not mean that it was essential to such right that the lode should extend in its length from one end line to the other of the location. If the lode in question, instead of extending into the Last Chance location, had abruptly broken off within the surface lines of the Tyler near the point where in fact it crossed the line, there could certainly be no question as to the right of the Tyler to follow the lode or vein in its downward course for its entire depth outside of the vertical planes drawn through the side lines. The fact that it continued its course and crossed the side lines does not in any manner change this principle. In either case the locator is entitled to the same rights. In such cases the end lines are not necessarily those which are marked on the ground as such. An end line may be drawn at the point where the lode abruptly terminates within the surface lines, or at the point where the apex of the lode crosses the side line of the surface location. This, upon principle, justice, and authority, it seems to us, is the only reasonable construction that can be given to the statute. Whenever, and in whatever manner, this point has been presented by any similar facts, the rulings of the courts have been substantially in accordance with the views we have expressed. Golden Placer, G. & S. Min. Co. v. Cable Consol. G. & S. Min. Co. 12 Nev. 818; Doe v. Sanger, 83 Cal. 208; Kahn v. Old Teleg. Min. Co. 2 Utah, 174; King v. Amy & S. Consol. Min. Co. 9 Mont. 548. In the case last cited the lode crossed the surface lines without reaching either end line as marked on the surface, and the court held that, where a lode or vein crosses the side line of a location, the strike is terminated by the plane of such side line, and the right to follow the vein on its dip is determined by a vertical plane, parallel to the end lines, drawn downward, and which takes effect at the point where the apex intersects the side line. The court, in its opinion, after reviewing the Flagstaff Case, 98 U. S. 463, 25 L. ed. 258; The Argentine Case, 123 U. S. 478, 30 L. ed. 1140, and the Horseshoe Case, 118 U. S. 208, 30 L. ed. 102,—and pointing out the differences existing between them and the Amy Case, and stating the various contentions of counsel, said: . . . The opinion of Judge Hawley then quotes the Amy & Silversmith Case (9 Mont.) as to the principle therein announced. That case went back for trial and appeared again in the circuit court of appeals as Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. (April 9, 1894) 9 C. C. A. 618, 61 Fed. Rep. 557, and in the opinion the court adhered to the principle of the Amy & Silversmith Case. In the meantime the Amy & Silversmith Case had been reversed by United States Supreme Court, March 4, 1894 (153 U. S. 225, 38 L. ed. 420). But that decision is not mentioned in the Last Chance Case (9 C. C. A. and 61 Fed. Rep.), and does not seem to have been considered by the circuit court of appeals. That court said: "The right of each party to follow the lode on its strike or true course lengthwise is terminated at the point where the lode crosses the side line of the Tyler and Last Chance locations: but each company would have the right to follow the lode, the top or apex of which is within its surface lines, on its dip, not upon its strike, upon a vertical plane drawn downward parallel to the end line, at the point where the strike of the lode ended; that is, at the point where the lode, in its lengthwise course, intersects the side lines of the claims. The Tyler would be entitled to all that portion of the lode that lies westerly of such vertical line drawn downward and the Last Chance would be entitled to all that portion of the lode easterly of said line."

As the United States Amy & Silversmith decision was not mentioned in 9 C. C. A. and 61 30 L. R. A.

Fed. Rep. although preceding it in time, we may treat the United States decision as being subsequent. In that case, after stating the facts and the contentions, the United States Supreme Court said: "Section 2322, cited above, declares that the locators of all mining locations shall have the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of their location; and also the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all veins, lodes, and ledges throughout their entire depth, the top or apex of which lies inside of such surface lines extended downward vertically, although such veins, lodes, or ledges may so far depart from a perpendicular in their course downward as to extend outside the vertical side lines of said surface location. The surface side lines, extended downward vertically, therefore determine the extent of the claim, except when in its descent the vein passes outside of them, and the outside portions are to lie between vertical planes drawn downward through the end lines. The difficulty in the present case arises from the course of the vein or lode upon which the Amy location was made. It is evident that what are called side lines of the location, as shown in the diagram, are not such in fact, but are end lines. Side lines, properly drawn, would run on each side of the course of the vein or lode distant not more than 300 feet from the middle of such vein. In the Amy claim the lines marked as side lines cross the course of the strike of the vein, and do not run parallel with it. They therefore constitute end lines. It is true the lines are not drawn with the strict care and accuracy contemplated by the statute, and which could only have been done with more perfect knowledge of the true course or strike of the vein from further developments. But, as was said by this court in Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min. & S. Co. 118 U. S. 196, 207, 30 L. ed. 98, 103. 'If the first locator will not or cannot make the explorations necessary to ascertain the true course of the vein, and draws his end lines ignorantly, he must bear the consequences.' The court cannot become a locator for the mining claimant and do for him what he alone should do for himself. The most that the court can do, where the lines are drawn inaccurately and irregularly, is to give to the miner such rights, as his imperfect location warrants, under the statute. It cannot relocate his claim, and make new side lines or end lines. Where it finds, as in this case, that what are called side lines are in fact end lines, the court, in determining his lateral rights, will treat such side lines as end lines and such end lines as side lines; but the court cannot make a new location for him, and thereby enlarge his rights. He must stand upon his own location, and can take only what it will give him under the law. Acting upon this principle there is no lateral right to the holder of the Amy claim by which he can follow its vein into the Non-Consolidated claim. Mistakes in drawing the lines of a location can only be avoided, as said in the case cited, by postponing the marking of the boundaries until sufficient explorations are made to ascertain, as near as possible, the course and direction of the vein. Even then,' the court added, 'with all the care possible, the end lines marked on the surface will often vary greatly from a right angle to the true course of the vein, but, whatever inconvenience or hardship may thus happen, it is better that the boundary planes should be definitely determined by the lines of the surface location than that they should be subjected to perpetual readjustment according to subterranean developments subsequently made by mine workers. Such readjustments at every discovery of a change in the course of the vein would create great uncertainty in titles to mining claims.' Applying this doctrine to the case before us, it follows that the vein in controversy, the apex of which was within the surface lines of the Amy claim, did not carry the owner's right beyond the vertical plane drawn down through the north side line of that claim. The Amy claim had no lateral right by virtue of the extension of the vein through what was called the north side of its claim, as that side line so called was, in fact, one of its end lines."

We understand that the United States Supreme Court not only reversed our judgment, but discarded as untenable the principle upon which we pronounced it. This decision was received with regret, not only by the bench and bar in the mining regions, but by both practical and scientific miners. The regret was greater in that the decision emanated from, as we said in the Amy & Silvermith Case, "Mr. Justice Field the judicial father of the mining law of the United States," a jurist who has illuminated this topic of the law by not only his profound learning, but by his practical experience in mining affairs. As an indication of the reluctance with which courts inferior to that of the United States Supreme Court have accepted the reversal of the principle of the Amy & Silvermith Case, we notice the case of Del Monte Min. & M. Co. v. New York & L. C. Min. Co. 66 Fed. Rep. 212. In that case the court had before it the conditions of an apex and strike passing through an end line and side line. Judge Hallett, District Judge, to whom courts and counsel in the mining regions are greatly indebted for his learning, which has been applied to this class of litigation, said: "If the strike of the lode in the New York location kept its course from end to end of the location, the right to follow the lode outside the location would not be denied. As, however, it departs on its strike from the location on the east side, and not from the north end, it is said that the claim has no end lines, or, at all events, none that can be recognized as limiting the right to any part of the vein outside of the exterior lines of the claim. This is asserted as a proposition of law deducible from several decisions of the supreme court that the lines of a location crossed by the apex of a vein on its strike shall, as to such vein, be regarded as end lines, whatever their position may be; and, if this proposition be accepted, the south end line and east side line, intersected by the outcrop of this lode, are not parallel to each other, as demanded by section 2320 of the Revised Statutes. This, however, has not been the interpretation of law in the supreme court, or in any court, so far as we are advised. It is true that in the Flagstaff Case, 98 U. S. 463, 25 L. ed. 253, and recently in the Amy & Silvermith Case, 152 U. S. 223, 38 L. ed. 420, the supreme court declared that the side lines of a location shall be end lines whenever the lode, on its strike, crosses such lines; but these decisions do not affirm that all lines of a location crossed by a lode on its strike shall be end lines. The most that can be deduced from them is that opposite lines, parallel to each other, when crossed by the lode, shall be end lines. The case presented is not within the principle of these decisions. We have a lode extending on its strike on the general course of the location, and within its side lines a distance of 1,070 feet. It is conceded that the south end line of the location is well placed, and all parts of the lode covered by the location are within the end lines as fixed by the locator. The difficulty arises from the circumstance that the location extends in a northerly direction about 280 feet beyond the point where the lode diverges from the side line. No reason is perceived for saying that this mistake in the length of the location should defeat the right to follow the vein on its dip outside the location. It is said that we cannot make a new end line at the point of divergence or elsewhere, because the court cannot make a new location, or in any way change that made by the parties. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. E'gin Min. & S. Co. 118 U. S. 196, 30 L. ed. 98. This, however, is not necessary. We can keep within the end lines fixed by the locator in respect to any extralateral right that may be recognized without drawing any line; and, if there be magic in the word 'line,' it will be better not to use it. In this instance, as in most controversies between adjacent owners, it is necessary to ascertain what part of the lode is within the New York location, and this, according to the map, appears to be 1,070 feet. At all points on the dip of the lode into the mountain westwardly we can ascertain the length of the lode within the end lines by measuring the same distance from the south end line produced. In this proceeding there is no departure from the end lines of the New York location as fixed by the locator, and there is no new line of location drawn for any purpose whatever. We keep entirely within the end line of the location as required by the statute, and the circumstance that we are somewhat short of the north end line does not in any way affect the principle to be followed in construing the statute. The same rule would be adopted if the lode were physically shorter than the location. Let it be assumed that upon a lode of the length of 1,000 feet (which is not an extraordinary occurrence) a location shall be made of the length of 1,500 feet, extending 250 feet in each direction beyond the ends of the lode. Would any one deny the right of the locator to follow the lode within his end lines, upon the ground that the lode did not come to either of such lines? I think not. The case is not different when the lode intersects one end line and not the other, but keeps within the location for a considerable distance. In that case, as in the accepted case of a lode traversing the location from end to end, the locator ought to be allowed to follow his lode into adjoining territory, so far as he may within his end lines, and so far as he holds the outcrop in his location. Upon this construction of the statute respondent is entitled to so much of the lode upon its dip as lies between the south compromise line and the point of divergence of the apex of the vein from the New York location." It is also true that in Judge Hallett's case the facts differed from the Amy & Silversmith, in that the apex crossed a side line and an end line, instead of two side lines, as in the Amy & Silversmith Case. But Judge Hallett applied the principle of the Amy & Silversmith, and he so applied it after, as we understand, the United States Supreme Court had repudiated it.

One month after Judge Hallett's decision—that is, on April 15, 1895—appeared the decision in the United States Supreme Court in Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co., the case which we have formerly encountered in 54 Fed. Rep., 4 C. C. A., 7 U. S. App., and 61 Fed. Rep., 9 C. C. A. See 157 U. S. 688, 89 L. ed. 859. The case was decided in the United States Supreme Court without it being necessary to treat the question of the apex and strike passing through an end line and a side line. But as to this matter the court said: "Our conclusions in this respect obviate the necessity of considering another very interesting and somewhat difficult question presented by counsel. It will be seen from the diagram that according to the original location of the Tyler claim the vein enters through an end and passes out through a side line, while by the amended location it passes in and out through end lines. Of course, if the latter is a valid location the owner of the claim would unquestionably have the right to follow the vein on its dip beyond the vertical plane of the side line. But if it were not, and the original location was the only valid one, has the owner the right to follow the vein outside any boundaries of the claim extended downward? It has been held by this court in the cases heretofore cited that where the course of a vein is across instead of lengthwise of the location, the side lines become the end lines and the end the side lines; but there has been no decision as to what extraterritorial rights exist if a vein enters at an end and passes out at a side line. Is that a case for which no provision has been made by statute? Are the parties left to the old rule of the common law that the owner of real estate owns all above and below the surface, and no more? Or may the court rely upon some equitable doctrine and give to the owner of the vein the right to pursue it on its dip in whatever direction that may go, within the limits of some equitably created end lines? If the common-law rule as to real estate obtains in such a case, then, of course, on the original location the owners of the Tyler claim would have no right to follow the dip of their vein outside the vertical plane of any of its boundary lines; and even if the amended application was perfectly valid the question would arise whether the rights acquired under it related back to the date of the original location, or arose simply at the time of the amendment, in which case there would be no doubt of the fact that the owners of the Last Chance had by years a prior location. However, in the view we have taken of the other question, it is unnecessary to consider this." Mr. Justice Brewer wrote the opinion. There was no dissent. We assume that Mr. Justice Field concurred. The fact that the United States Supreme Court said in this case (with the justice concurring who wrote the Amy & Silversmith decision) that it had never given any decision as to what extraterritorial rights exist if a vein enters at an end line and passes out at a side line, we think is a sufficient warrant to us to reopen the discussion as to what principle of decision should apply in these regular locations.

We can see but two solutions of the difficulty presented in this case: One is to say that when the apex and strike cross a located side line, such side line becomes an end line, in accordance with what we understand to be the decision in the Flagstaff Case and in the Amy & Silversmith Case in the United States Supreme Court. The other is to apply the Amy & Silversmith doctrine as announced in 9 Mont. We will examine what seems to us to be the legitimate results of the first proposition. Turning again to the diagram, Fig. 1, the located east end line of the Niagara claim must still remain an end line. It was located as such, if that means anything; and the apex and strike pass through it, which fact, under any view, means everything. So this line is, and must remain, an end line. Then we have the south side line of the Niagara, also an end line, because the apex and strike pass through it. So we have two end lines not parallel to each other but at an angle to each other not far from a right angle. But the end lines must be parallel. The result is that the Niagara cannot follow its dip at all. But the statute says it may follow the dip. These difficulties do not come to us at all as a surprise. We clearly foresaw them, and pointed them out in the Amy & Silversmith Case, 9 Mont. 571. Thus we find that the Niagara claim, under these views, must be relegated to the common law. It owns downward inside of the perpendicular planes of its surface lines. But this result is not the intent of the law. U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322. The intent is that the locator shall have the right to the vein throughout its entire depth if the apex lies within its surface liens, although the vein, on its dip downward, departs from the perpendicular so as to extend outside of the side lines. By calling this side line an end line the whole intent of the statute is destroyed, and we go back to the system of the Spanish law (9 Mont. 567), which was deserted in the adoption by Congress of the American mining laws. For example, again, in this case, reverse the direction of the dip, and assume that it goes north, then the Niagara people would take all of the vein between the downward planes of the end line and side line,—the lines E F and E H on the diagram. They would get a fan-shaped section of the vein, rapidly increasing in size with every foot downward. That is to say, such would be the result, unless we adhere to the common-law rule, and have no extralateral rights at all. The plain fact is that to call the side line an end line in this case leads us into consequences that totally upset the whole intent of the law. We cannot subscribe to any such doctrine." These conten-plations are not at all new to us. We pointed out the difficulties and absurdities in the Amy & Silversmith Case, and we then hoped that they would not again threaten the disturbance of the rights intended to be given by the mining statutes. We feel now, as we did in the Amy & Silversmith Case, that we are not able to take the responsibility of any such destructive construction. And why, indeed, should a located side line be converted into an end line by a court? The locator never so intended it. He made the side line the long line, 1,500 feet in length, intending it to be generally parallel to the vein. The law never intended that such a side line should be an end line. If the side line is to become an end line and the end line a side line, then the court working this readjustment of the lines puts the side lines at a distance from the center of the lode much greater than 800 feet. What would be done with those lines and this extra surface taken in by them? Shall they be left so that they will include 1,000, or 1,500 feet in width when the law intended the locator should have 600 feet only, or will these judicially created side lines be drawn in, and thereby new side lines made by the court? But "the court cannot become a locator for a mining claimant." Amy & Silversmith Case, 152 U. S. 228, 38 L. ed. 421. The further we follow this doctrine into its details, the more untenable it appears. We shall abandon its pursuit, and leave its reconciliation to reason, law, and the intent of the statute, and practical application to others, who may be more skillful in making a reasonable construction.

As we leave this confusion, and turn to the other solution,—that of the Amy & Silversmith Case in 9 Mont.—difficulties disappear, and there is light upon the whole path. We can, then, do, as the United States Supreme Court said in its decision in the Amy & Silversmith Case, on page 228, 152 U. S. and p. 421, 38 L. ed.: "The most that the court can do, where the lines are drawn inaccurately and irregularly, is to give to the miner such rights as his imperfect location warrants, under the statute;" that is to say, we can give to the miner, or rather the law, as we construe it, gives to the miner, as much length of strike, no matter how deep he goes upon the dip, as he has length of apex; and he loses in strike and dip only what he has failed to get in apex. That is what the district court, in this case, following the Amy & Silversmith Case, 9 Mont. 543, accomplished. It gave to the Niagara the ore on the dip east of the point where the apex and strike crossed the south side line of the Niagara. This is what the circuit court of appeals did in Tyler Min. Co. v. Sweeney, 4 C. C. A. 329, 64 Fed. Rep. 284, 7 U. S. App. 463, and Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 9 C. C. A. 618, 61 Fed. Rep. 557. This is what the circuit court of the district of Colorado did in Del Monte Min. & M. Co. v. New York & L. C. Min. Co. 66 Fed. Rep. 212. This is what we understand the United States Supreme Court suggested in Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859, that it might do. The language of Judge Hawley and Judge Hallett in those decisions is very apt when they suggest that, if the apex and strike broke off abruptly at the side line would any one contend that the dip could not be followed within the end lines? And why should it not also as well be followed if the strike, instead of physically ceasing to exist at all, simply ceased to further exist within the Niagara lines? We can think of no good reason which would allow the owner to follow the vein on the dip in the supposititious cases and deny him that right in the actual case. In the Amy & Silversmith Case we spoke of the end-line plane taking effect at the point where the strike in fact ended. By this use of the words "end line" perhaps we gave opportunity for the contention that we were moving an end line, and locating it in a place other than that fixed by the locator. We endeavored to make it clear that we were not moving an end line, but we were simply giving it effect at the only point where it could operate. But as Judge Hallett says, if there is any "magic" in the word "line," we will not use that word. Perhaps we can more effectively describe the principle for which we contend as follows: Put one side of a square on the located east end line of the Niagara (the line B D, Fig. 1), and let the other end of the square be long enough to reach the point where the strike and apex leave the Niagara ground (point A, diagram); then run this square up and down the east end line (line D B, diagram), and that line extended south, and run the square all over the perpendicular plane of this line; then the successive points which the long end of the square reaches will be the points beyond which, to the west, the Niagara people may not follow the vein on the dip, and beyond which, to the east, the Black Rock people may not come. Thus the Niagara is keeping upon the dip of the vein within its end lines, and it is not following the strike of the vein outside of any line. The principle might also be further illustrated by imagining a pair of draftsman's parallel rulers. One ruler is placed on the east end line of the Niagara (the line B D); its parallel is pushed out to the point where the apex crosses the side line (the point A), and set. The plane dropped perpendicularly from the westerly ruler would form the boundary between the Niagara and the Black Rock on the dip of the vein.

Of course we understand the difference between the doctrine of the United States Supreme Court, which commences with the Flagstaff Case and received its last treatment in the Amy & Silversmith Case, and our theory which we held in the Amy & Silversmith Case. The supreme court doctrine seems to be that the side lines which are marked as such on the ground, namely, the 1,500-foot lines as the side lines, and the 600-foot lines as the end lines, are not in fact the side lines and end lines; but what are the side lines and the end lines is to be determined by the subsequent demonstration of where the apex and strike cross the locator's lines. The trouble with the theory is that it leaves the determination of the boundaries to subsequent development, which may require years, and it calls that any end line which was never located as such, and it makes the side lines 600 feet long only when the statute says they may be 1,500 feet, and makes the end lines 1,500 feet long when the statute says they shall not be over 600, and it gives a surface of more than 800 feet on each side of the center of the lode. We cannot be persuaded to think that this is the intent of the statute. As we noted in the Amy & Silversmith Case, the difficulties of this construction did not fully appear in the Flagstaff and Argentine Cases, where, as we understand, the strike and apex of the vein were practically at right angles to the length of the location. 9 Mont. 574. But the theory meets great difficulty when applied to veins which have a general course lengthwise of the location, and which happen to slip out of the location by a side line before the end line is reached.

Again, we fully understand that the situation in the case at bar and the Tyler Case and the Del Monte Case differs slightly from that of the Amy & Silversmith Case. In the Amy & Silversmith the vein passed through two side lines. In the case at bar and the other cases it passes through a side line and an end line. But we contend that the same reasoning applies to both situations; that is, that the miner shall have as much vein in length on the strike, at all depths to which he may go on the dip, as he has length of apex within his surface lines. We cannot too strongly emphasize our opinion, even at the expense of tiresome reiteration, that this is the intent of section 2822, 2 U. S. Rev. Stat. and the true interpretation of the decisions thereunder. We believe that this doctrine should be applied to both situations. On the other hand, if the other doctrine is to be applied to one situation, why not to both? For it does not seem to us consistent to say that the dip of the Amy & Silversmith must be cut off at their north side line, and that the Niagara may go beyond their south side line, simply because the Niagara vein, on its eastward course on the strike, goes out through an end line instead of a side line. But when we undertake to apply the United States Flagstaff and Amy & Silversmith doctrine to the case at bar, we find that the Niagara cannot follow its dip out of any of its lines, and it is cut down to the common-law rule of "ad coelum et ad orcum." What we contend for is a uniform construction of the law; a construction which will give the vein on the dip to every locator who has the apex in his location, and not give it to one who has the apex, and withhold it from another who as fully has the apex; that shall give it to the Amy & Silversmith and the Niagara as well. Let us do this, and make estates in mines uniform under the law. This seems to us more reasonable than to apply a construction which will give to one locator the estate which the law contemplates and deny it to another.

The United States Supreme Court in Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859, observing the possibility or probability of being at some time obliged to apply its Flagstaff and Amy & Silversmith rule to the situation of a vein passing through a side line and an end line, seemed to shrink from the consequences of the doctrine (consequences which we pointed out in our opinion in the Amy & Silversmith Case, 9 Mont. at page 571), and stated that they had never decided what extraterritorial rights existed in such a situation. They also said: "May the court rely upon some equitable doctrine and give to the owner of the vein the right to pursue it on its dip, in whatever direction that may go, within the limits of some equitably created end lines?" We propose now just such an equitable doctrine, the same one that we proposed in the Amy & Silversmith Case, and one wholly within the intent of section 2822, U. S. Rev. Stat. We have hereinbefore, and especially in the Amy & Silversmith Case, given the reasons for our belief that such a doctrine can, by a slight effort, be reconciled with the former decisions of the United States Supreme Court and that, as Judge Hawley said in the Tyler Case, 4 C. C. A. 329, 54 Fed. Rep. 292, 7 U. S. App. 463, "this, upon principle, justice, and authority, it seems to us, is the only reasonable construction that can be given to the statute." We now feel at liberty to follow our convictions and our belief that our view of the law is correct, by reason of the indication given by the United States Supreme Court (157 U. S. 685, 39 L. ed. 860) that they are willing to reconsider (or, as the court puts it, consider) this important principle in the construction of section 2822, U. S. Rev. Stat. We shall accordingly adhere to the principle of our Amy & Silversmith decision, and hold in this case that the judgment of the district court was within the law when it gave to the Niagara people the ore found on the dip of the Niagara vein south of their south side line, and east of the point where the apex and strike of the Niagara vein crossed the bounding side line between the Niagara and the Black Rock.

The appellants also rely upon some alleged errors in the instructions. It is contended by respondents that the errors in the instructions are not properly excepted to. Respondents cite cases from this court upon that subject. But we think the proper contention should have been as to whether the errors were specified on the motion for new trial. We are not satisfied that the specification was insufficient. We shall not, however, pass upon that question, as it has not been clearly or fully argued, and the question of practice is a delicate and troublesome one; but will proceed to an examination of the instructions. Our doing so cannot be a matter of complaint to the respondents, for our examination of the instructions has satisfied us that there is no error therein. We will briefly review them. Appellants complain that the court instructed the jury in reference to following a vein on its dip beneath the surface, but did not in this instruction inform the jury as to the matter of the parallel end lines. If the appellants mean that the court did not instruct as to the parallelism of the end lines as located, it is sufficient to reply that no contention was made upon this point. The parallelism of the located end lines is conceded, and the court, having adopted the Amy & Silversmith doctrine of this court, proceeded, of course, upon the theory that the original end lines continued to be the end lines.

The Black Rock people contended upon the trial that the "ore bodies" in question were upon a vein the apex of which was wholly within the Black Rock ground. This was called the "Stoner vein." The apex of the Stoner vein, it appears, was on the Black Rock ground. One of the great contentions of fact in the case was that the Stoner vein from its apex down to the ore bodies, was a continuous vein. Upon this contention, as noted in the statement of the case, the Black Rock failed. It seems to have been established by the decision that the Stoner vein was not continuous to the "ore bodies." In instructing the jury upon this contention, the court gave them the following: "If you find from the evidence that what has been called in the evidence the 'Stoner vein' is a separate and distinct vein from what is called the 'Niagara Vein,' and that the apex of said Stoner vein is inside the boundaries of the Black Rock claim, and also find that said Stoner vein connects with said Niagara vein at some point below the surface of the ground, and that such connection is made by following a continuous streak or body of quartz or ore, or by passing through vein matter as defined in these instructions, or by following such material or indications as a practical miner would follow with the expectations of finding ore, then, in such case, defendants are entitled to and are the owners of all quartz, ore, mineral-bearing rock contained in such vein below the said point of intersection, and plaintiff cannot recover therefor; it being conceded that the Black Rock lode vein owned by defendants is older and was located and patented prior to the time when the Niagara claim was located or patented." This instruction as we have just quoted it was that submitted. The court, in giving it, struck out the portion which is in italics. Appellants complain of error in striking out that portion. We think in this the court was correct. The question was a geological one,—that is, whether the Stoner vein, in its downward course, connected with the Niagara,—and the court instructed how such connection would be made; that is, by following a continuous streak or body of quartz or ore, or by passing through vein matter, as defined in the instructions. This was a question of geology and of facts in nature. It would have left it to the jury entirely too indefinitely to have told them that they could find a continuous body of ore by following such indications as a practical miner would follow with the expectation of finding ore. We do not think that this is the method by which geological facts can be established. The application of such language as this which was stricken out of the instruction must not be confused with the use of similar language in reference to finding ore sufficient to support a location of a mine. When it is said that a location may be sustained by the discovery of mineral deposits of such value as to at least justify the exploration of the lode in the expectation of finding ore sufficiently valuable to work (Shreve v. Copper Bell Min. Co. 11 Mont. 309, and cases therein reviewed), it is a very different question from telling the jury that the geological fact of the continuity of a vein to a certain point may be determined by what a practical miner might do in looking for some hoped-for continuity.

Objection is made to instruction No. 15, in that, as it is contended by counsel, the court assumed that the respondents had established a right to recover. But the court did not make this assumption. The instruction opens with the following language: "Plaintiffs having the burden of proof, they must establish the material allegations of their complaint by a preponderance of evidence."

Another instruction objected to by appellants is as follows: "In estimating the value of the ore extracted from the Niagara claim you will take as a basis therefor the market value of such ores on the dump of the claim after deducting the cost of mining and hoisting the same." The objection which appellant makes to this instruction, as he states it in his brief, is that he was not a trespasser, and was entitled to his actual expenses in extracting and treating the ore, provided the expenses are reasonable, and as low as the work could be done. He cites us to a number of cases involving questions of accounting between cotenants when one tenant has made necessary improvements on premises, or has extracted ore therefrom. We are of opinion that the instruction places the appellant upon precisely the ground which he himself claims. The court says that the basis of computation shall be the market value of the ore on the dump after deducting the cost of mining and hoisting the same. By the instruction the appellant is given credit for the cost of mining and hoisting, just as he claims should be. Furthermore, we think that the instruction, by its only reasonable construction, gives the appellant the expense of smelting and reducing the ore. The court says that the basis shall be the market value of the ore on the dump. What is market value? It is certainly that price for which the ore could reasonably be sold on the market. That market value would, in the mind of a buyer, be necessarily determined by deducting the cost of reducing the ore; that is to say, if a purchaser compute what he would give for the ore he would figure the value of the same on the dump, and then he would deduct from that value the cost of reducing the ore to bullion, and, having deducted that cost, he would make a bid for the ore, and this would constitute the market value. No one could possibly contend that the market value of crude ore was the value of fine silver in such ore. On the other hand, the market value would be the value of fine silver, less the expense of getting such silver out of the ore. We are satisfied that the instruction was in fact precisely what the appellants claim it should be.

Appellants object to the refusal of the court to give the following instruction: "The jury are instructed that if they believe from the evidence that the side lines of the Niagara location are practically perpendicular to the vein, then the side lines of said location become the end lines, and the plaintiffs cannot claim the dip beyond the side lines." But there was no evidence whatever in the case, and no contention to support any such instruction. The side lines of the Niagara not only are not practically perpendicular to the vein, but they are practically not far from parallel to the same. There were no facts in the case to warrant the giving of such an instruction.

Appellants also urge error in the exclusion of certain testimony of a witness—William E. Hall—offered to be introduced. Mr. Hall was a practical miner. He testified to what is known as the "Rainbow lode" in the Butte district. He said that it was his opinion that the vein on the Black Rock was a part of or an extension of the Rainbow lode. He had examined the Black Rock mine. He saw a fault in that mine. Appellants then offered to prove by Mr. Hall that he had worked five claims on the Rainbow lode, and that the faults which he had found on the Black Rock are characteristic of the Rainbow vein. The testimony was objected to, the respondents stating that, if the appellants intended to prove that this fault in the Black Rock extends to the Alice mine, with which mine Mr. Hall was familiar, they would not object. Appellants stated that they did not intend to prove this. The court sustained the objection, remarking, "If it is for the purpose of attempting to show a condition of affairs here (that is, in the Black Rock) by comparison of what exists in the Alice, or in any other ground outside, unless it is shown that there is a continuity between the conditions which exist there and the conditions found in this ground," the evidence will not be admitted. The objection was sustained. We are of opinion that the learned judge of the district court stated the reasons for excluding the testimony as completely as we could set them forth. The subject under consideration in Mr. Hall's testimony was a fault in the Black Rock vein. One certainly could not prove the existence of a fault in one vein by showing that there were other and disconnected faults in another vein, which the witness claimed was a continuity of the vein under consideration, without showing any continuity in the fault.

Again, appellants contend that the judgment should be reversed because the appellants' counsel were not present when the verdict was rendered, and thus had no opportunity to poll the jury. Appellants' counsel had made arrangements with the bailiff that when the jury agreed upon a verdict, he, the bailiff, should call counsel. This was a matter wholly out of the court, and had no place in the proceedings in the court. It appears that the jury came in at a time when all the counsel were absent. The bailiff omitted to send for appellants' counsel. The counsel made the bailiff his agent for this purpose, and, if such agent omitted to do that which he had agreed to do, we are not prepared to reverse this case for that reason. When it is the fact that counsel had the privilege of being in the court, if he wished, when the verdict was received, and his accidental absence at that time was not owing to any order or any action of the court, or any conduct by the counsel or parties on the other side, we shall not reverse this judgment for any such reason.

Another ground set up for the granting of a new trial is the alleged misconduct by Juror Hess. Hess makes an affidavit that he was ill, and that he agreed to the verdict in order to get discharged from service. But this juror never made any complaint to the court of his illness. When the jury came in and rendered its verdict, he said nothing to the court, and there was no intimation that he was ill, or needed any medical attendance. His alleged illness, and thereby his alleged coercion into the verdict, never appeared until after his discharge and his making an affidavit for the benefit of the appellants. The case was an equity one, the findings were advisory, and the district court very properly disregarded this juror's affidavit given to impeach his own verdict. Gordon v. Trevarthan, 18 Mont. 387. It is also attempted to be shown in Juror Hess's affidavit that the bailiff in charge of the jury was guilty of misconduct. The story that Juror Hess tells about the conduct of the bailiff bears upon its face nearly all the appearances of absurdity. Perhaps the district court would have been perfectly justified in disbelieving Hess's statements in regard to the bailiff without any contradiction, but the affidavit was contradicted in many respects. The district court was perfectly justified in paying no attention to the showing attempted to be made by the Hess affidavit.

Having reviewed all the questions raised in this case, it is ordered that the judgment and the order denying a new trial be affirmed.

Pemberton, Ch. J., and Hunt, J., concur.

Affirmed in 43 L. ed. 87.

James H. PROSSER, Recept.

MONTANA CENTRAL RAILWAY COMPANY, Appl.

(.....Mont.....)

1. The contributory negligence of a brakeman and switchman in mounting a flat car coming toward him by grasping a brake staff which was loose and bent, when he did not know of its defects, is a question for the jury.
2. A switchman and brakeman who grasps a brake staff on the front of a flat car as it approaches him, for the purpose of mounting the car as his duties required him to do and in the manner that he was expected to mount, although the staff was loose in its socket and was bent but appeared to him to be straight as the bend was directly away from him, is not as matter of law guilty of contributory negligence.
3. Allowing a brake staff to remain loose in its socket and to be bent at an angle of 80 degrees from the perpendicular, when it is used by brakemen and switchmen for the purpose of mounting a flat car used in front of a road engine for switching purposes, is negligence on the part of a railroad company.
4. Evidence of the usual and customary way of mounting flat cars in front of a road engine when used in switching, offered to disprove contributory negligence, is not inadmissible on the ground that it is an attempt to excuse negligence by usage or custom, where it does not appear that the act in question was positively negligent.
5. A requested instruction that the jury may render a general verdict or a special one is properly refused in the absence of a request to submit any special findings upon any branch of the case.

NOTE.—As it appears in the above case that the brakeman was acting as the necessities of the case required and as he was expected to act, the case is in some respects analogous to those in which the employee acts in reliance upon orders of his superior, as to which see note to Orman v. Mannix (Colo.) 17 L. R. A. 602.

6. Testimony that flat cars were placed before a locomotive for the purpose of allowing brakemen and switchmen to mount upon the brake beam of a car by grasping the brake staff is not incompetent as an opinion of the witness or as a statement of fact, when made by a witness who is cognizant and observant of the conduct of the business.

7. An improper or insufficient modification of an instruction is not ground for a reversal if on the facts and evidence in the case it was not misleading.

8. The burden of proof as to contributory negligence is on the defense.

(December 21, 1895.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Cascade County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Arthur J. Shores, for appellant:

If, in the discharge of a dangerous duty, an employee voluntarily places himself in a dangerous position unnecessarily when there are other places that are safe or safer that he could have chosen, and is injured, he cannot recover.

Union P. R. Co. v. Estes, 87 Kan. 715; Cunningham v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 17 Fed. Rep. 882; Dowell v. Vicksburg & M. R. Co. 61 Miss. 518; Roul v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 85 Ga. 197.

The servant is bound to see for himself such risks and hazards as are patent to observation, and is bound to exercise his own skill and judgment in a measure, and cannot blindly rely upon the care and skill of his master.

3 Wood, Railway Law, p. 1456.

The act of the plaintiff could not be excused by showing that under similar conditions other brakemen are in the habit of taking the same chances of injury.

Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. Johnson, 91 Ga. 466 (1893); Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Robbins, 48 Kan. 145 (1890); Mayfield v. Savannah, G. & N. A. R. Co. 87 Ga. 374 (1891); Larson v. Ring, 48 Minn. 88 (1890).

An established usage or custom among men engaged in the same line of employment cannot justify or excuse the commission of an act negligent in itself.

Larson v. Ring, supra; Ferguson v. Central Iowa R. Co. 58 Iowa. 298.

The verdict is against law, for the reason that the jury disregarded the instructions of the court and declined to apply them to the evidence.

Emerson v. Santa Clara County, 40 Cal. 543; Karr v. Parks, 44 Cal. 47; Sweeney v. Central P. R. Co. 57 Cal. 15; Aguirre v. Alexander, 58 Cal. 30; Crane v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 74 Iowa, 830.

When one sues to recover damages for a negligent injury the gravamen of his complaint is that he has been damaged by the wrongful and negligent act of the defendant, without having contributed thereto by his own negligent conduct. The absence of contributory negligence is therefore a part of 30 L. R. A.

his case, and it is quite proper to say that he should show that he acted with due care.

Teipel v. Hilsendegen, 44 Mich. 461; Beach, Contrib. Neg. p. 432; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Foreman, 73 Tex. 811 (1892); North Birmingham Street R. Co. v. Calderwood, 89 Ala. 247.

Messrs. Largent & Huntben, for respondent:

In order to amount to contributory negligence the plaintiff's act must be the proximate cause of the injury, if not that defense will not lie.

Beach, Contrib. Neg. 2d ed. p. 28. §§ 24, 25.

It cannot be said that the act of the plaintiff was the proximate cause of the injury received.

Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Templeton, (Tex.) 25 S. W. 187; Eppendorf v. Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. 69 N. Y. 195, 25 Am. Rep. 171; Morrison v. Erie R. Co. 58 N. Y. 802; Wendell v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 91 N. Y. 420; Filer v. New York C. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 49, 10 Am. Rep. 827; Thurber v. Harlem Bridge M. & F. R. Co. 60 N. Y. 331; Northwestern P. R. Co. v. Egeland, 56 Fed. Rep. 200; New York P. & N. R. Co. v. Coulbourn, 69 Md. 360, 1 L. R. A. 541; Coates v. Boston & M. Railroad, 153 Mass. 297, 10 L. R. A. 769; Lowe v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 89 Iowa, 420.

Plaintiff had the right to assume that the staff was in proper condition and to act accordingly.

Goodrich v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 116 N. Y. 398, 5 L. R. A. 752; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Buck, 116 Ind. 566, 2 L. R. A. 520; Beach, Contrib. Neg. 2d ed. § 64, p. 90; Thompson, Trials, p. 1227; Fernandes v. Sacramento City R. Co. 52 Cal. 50; Buswell, Personal Injuries, § 93, p. 129, cases cited, and § 94, p. 131.

There were no special questions submitted to have the jury pass upon. And the court may give such special interrogatories or not as he sees fit.

American Co. v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 865; Thompson v. Gregor, 11 Colo. 534; Swift v. Mulkey, 14 Or. 65.

DeWitt, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought by plaintiff to recover damages for injuries received by him when in the employ of defendant as a brakeman and switchman. The plaintiff was engaged in switching cars at or near the station of Nelhart, on the defendant's railway. The engine used on this occasion was a road engine. The distinction between a road engine and a switch engine is this: The road engine has a pilot in front. A yard or switch engine has a footboard, both front and rear, upon which the brakemen and switchmen step and stand while switching cars. The engine in this case had been used on the work ordinarily performed by a yard or switch engine. It had no footboards in front or rear, and therefore no convenient or safe place for the switchmen to mount and ride while engaged in their duties. Furthermore, in making up trains and switching cars, it was inconvenient to use a road engine, for the reason that the cars would have to be attached to the engine by a pilot bar, which is too heavy for convenient use. To convert the road engine to the use of a switch engine, two flat cars were placed in front of the engine. The second flat car from the engine was so placed that the braking apparatus was at the end furthest from the engine. It was equipped with a double connected brake and brake staff. The purpose of placing these flat cars as they were was to enable brakemen or switchmen to mount the brake beam and hold by the staff, in moving about the yard while switching cars. The engine and these cars were moving down the track, and crossed a switch. Having crossed the switch, it was the duty of the plaintiff to throw the switch to let the train in on another track. As the last car passed over the switch, the engineer reversed his engine. The plaintiff threw the switch, and stepped into the middle of the track. The car approached him at the rate of 2 or 3 miles an hour. He stepped carefully upon the brake beam, and took hold of the brake staff carefully with both hands. The staff was loose in its socket, and was bent at an angle of about 30 degrees from the perpendicular. It bent away from the plaintiff, as he stood. He testified that for this reason it appeared straight to him, and he could not tell that it was bent, and that he did not see whether the brake wheel was tipped from a horizontal. Having carefully and firmly grasped the staff, it turned in his hands, swung around towards him, and caused him to lose his hold and fall under the trucks. The jury awarded him $2,500, which is not claimed by defendant to be excessive, if there is any liability. It appears further that, although the engine had already started when plaintiff threw the switch, he signaled the engineer to come on. He said that, at the rate the train was approaching, he could have gotten off the track if he had seen the defective condition of the brake staff at a distance of 6 or 10 feet. He did not see the defective condition, for the reason above mentioned. He had a right to signal the engineer to stop, if there was occasion to stop in the performance of the business in which the train was engaged. There were no means provided for mounting the car on the side. It was also impossible or dangerous to mount from the side, owing to the roadbed being washed out and depressed. He was obliged to get upon the train and ride in order to be at a point about 340 feet distant, where there was another car to be coupled. He could not have walked to that point, while the train was moving to it, and be there in time to make the coupling. These facts appeared by the testimony of plaintiff and two other witnesses. These two flat cars were equipped with air brakes, and while plaintiff was employed at this place he did not see the hand brakes used for braking the cars. These facts being shown, the defendant moved for nonsuit, upon the ground that no negligence had been shown on the part of the defendant, and that plaintiff appeared to be guilty of contributory negligence.

As to proof of negligence or contributory negligence sufficient to go to the jury, the writer of this opinion said in Wall v. Helena Street R. Co. 12 Mont. 61, as follows: "I am fully aware that negligence of the defendant or contributory negligence of the plaintiff is a matter for the jury, unless the evidence is such as to leave the matter clear and undisputed to persons of fair and sound minds. It is needless to cite authorities. Their name is legion. They are collected in the citations above made. I find their tenor to be that, if the question of negligence or contributory negligence is a fairly disputed question of fact, it must be resolved by the jury, but that if the evidence is perfectly clear the matter is for the court; and by 'perfectly clear,' the authorities say, is meant, not perfectly clear in the view of the particular court or persons composing the court which is reviewing the matter, but rather in the judgment of reasonable men of sound minds. That is, if different conclusions might be drawn by different men of fair, sound minds, then the matter must go to the jury; but if only one conclusion can be reached by men of fair, sound minds, the determination is for the court. This seems to be a settled doctrine, and with it I fully concur. But is it not, practically, somewhat illusive? For the court must determine what would be the judgment of men of fair, sound minds, and to arrive at that determination, the court must use its own sense and knowledge and judgment. And as long as courts are composed of finite men, with minds not all cast in the same mold, we cannot but expect some diversity of views in the application of the doctrine to particular facts. This may account for the confusion in the reported cases, and the fact that decisions may be produced, sustaining either side of a contention of this nature which is at all close." In the case before us we are perfectly satisfied that there was a sufficient showing of negligence on the part of the defendant to go to the jury. It was not perfectly clear that there was no negligence by defendant. The brake beam and brake staff being used for the purpose of mounting the car by the brakemen and switchmen, we do not hesitate to say that, to allow the apparatus to remain in the condition it was, was a showing of negligence sufficient to go to the jury.

The next question upon the decision of the court in denying the nonsuit is, Was it perfectly clear that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, so that that question should have been taken from the jury, and the court grant a nonsuit? We do not think that this was, by any means, perfectly clear. The plaintiff mounted the car with the utmost care. He mounted it just as it was intended he should. The cars were so arranged for this purpose. This was the only means by which he could mount and ride on the car in order to arrive at the car to be coupled in time to make the coupling when the train reached there. The facts in this case differ from those in Cunningham v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 17 Fed. Rep. 882, in which case Mr. Justice Miller used such strong language in granting a new trial, and in which case the learned justice said that this was not only a case of clear negligence on the part of the deceased, but a case of stupid negligence on his part. We are scarcely prepared to fully indorse the remarks in that case, even upon the facts which there existed. But the distinction between the facts in that case and this is that here, so far as the plaintiff could reasonably be expected to see, the apparatus of the car was in a proper condition for him to make a safe mount. In the Cunningham Case the deceased undertook to mount the footboard of a switch engine from which the hand railing had been torn away the night before. The case is not fully stated in the report, but, as far as it appears, it seems that the deceased could, by looking at the rear of the tank, have very readily perceived that the hand rail was missing. In this case, plaintiff could not see that the brake staff was bent, because it was bent directly away from him, and, so far as he could see, it might readily appear to be straight. And, seeing an apparently straight brake staff, it does not appear that he should also have looked at the brake wheel, to observe that it was tipped, for the brake wheel might easily have been tipped from causes other than the bending of the staff. Taking the facts altogether, we are not at all satisfied that contributory negligence was so clearly shown that the court should have removed that subject from the consideration of the jury, and ordered a nonsuit. We are therefore of opinion that in this respect there was no error committed by the court.

The treatment thus far brings us logically to the next assignment of error made by the appellant. We have discussed the question of nonsuit upon the ground, partly, that it was in evidence that the arrangement of the locomotive and cars shown was for the purpose of allowing the brakemen and switchmen to mount upon the brake beam by grasping the brake staff. There was an objection, however, to the introduction of evidence showing that this arrangement of the cars was made for this purpose. The plaintiff and two other competent witnesses testified that the cars were so arranged in order that employees might mount when moving, in the manner attempted by the plaintiff. The objection to this testimony was that it was an opinion of the witnesses that this arrangement was made for such purposes. The court admitted the testimony over the objection. We think this was not error. The witnesses did not give this testimony as an opinion. They, being employed in the business, and being cognizant and observant of the conduct of the business, stated, from this knowledge and observation, that as a fact the cars were arranged as described for the purposes mentioned. We think that their testimony was the statement of a fact which came under their observation. If they were mistaken, or if their testimony was not true, it could have been taken for simply what it was worth, and rebutted by testimony on behalf of defendant. But this testimony was not denied by the defendant.

The next question raised by appellant is its exception to the allowance of certain testimony. It may be stated as he puts it in his own brief, as follows:

Q. Mr. Ennis, the testimony in this case shows that there were two flat cars, with double connected brakes, with brake staff and brake beam on the further end of the second car from the engine, and this was a road engine; that this engine and the cars had passed out of the side track where the switch had been thrown by the plaintiff, and the engine and cars were going on up to another track, about 840 feet, to make a head end coupling with other flat cars, and that it was necessary for the plaintiff to be at the cars to make the coupling; that the engine and cars were approaching the plaintiff at the rate of about 8 miles an hour; that there were no hand holds, stirrups, or jaw straps, or other means of mounting the approaching cars from the sides; that these flat cars had double connected brakes on the end nearest the plaintiff; were attached to the engine for the purpose, among others, of allowing the brakeman to step upon the brake beam, and take hold of the brake staff and mount the car. It appears, also, from the evidence, that on the west side from the track upon which the plaintiff stood the embankment was low, and depressed from 2 to 3 feet below the track, the ties stuck out over the embankment, large rocks and bowlders were lying along the track, and that the east side of the track from where the plaintiff stood, the ground was low and depressed, and another track, known as the 'Main Track,' came into this side track where the plaintiff stood, and on which this train was running. The evidence further shows that the plaintiff had no right to stop the train for the sole purpose of mounting the car, and that the engineer should obey the plaintiff's signals. You may state, from your experience as a brakeman, what is the usual and customary way of mounting flat cars by brakemen experienced in the business, under those circumstances? (Defendant objects to the question upon the ground that the question assumes a state and condition of affairs not existing at the time the plaintiff received his injuries. Does not truly state the evidence, in matters material to be considered, if the question is to be answered at all. That it misdescribes the conditions of the car the plaintiff attempted to mount, and fails to state its condition in important particulars disclosed by the evidence. The question assumes that there was a necessity for mounting the car while in motion. The question is further objected to upon the ground that the evidence is not relevant or material; upon the further ground that it is incompetent as proof of the usage or custom among brakemen and men employed as the plaintiff was employed, and cannot excuse the plaintiff's conduct as disclosed by his own evidence, such conduct being negligent as a matter of law.)

We will examine the objections to the question as they were made. An examination of the record satisfies us that it is not the fact that the question did not truly state the evidence on matters material to be considered. The question gave a very fair statement of the facts. Furthermore, the objection in itself is open to criticism, in that it did not state wherein the question was defective, or wherein it did not state the facts in the case as a basis for the hypothetical question. Appellant's counsel elaborately argues the question that testimony as to how persons other than the plaintiff performed acts similar to that performed by the plaintiff is incompetent, and that proof that other persons did negligent acts under the same circumstances is not evidence to excuse the doing of a negligent act by the plaintiff. But the competency of evidence to show acts of carelessness by other persons is not the question here involved. From what we have said as to denying the motion for a nonsuit, it is apparent that the conduct of the plaintiff was not per se negligence. He carefully mounted the car in the way provided for him to mount in order to perform his duties. The question was not as to what other persons did in a careless manner. The question hypothetically stated the facts, and then asked the witness to state, from his experience as a brakeman, what was the usual and customary way of mounting flat cars, under these circumstances, by brakemen experienced in the business. Therefore the question involved what an experienced person would do, not what other persons generally did, or what careless persons did. We think that the word "experienced" is used here much in the sense of "prudent;" and the question, in effect, was put to a person experienced in the business, as to what experienced or prudent persons did under the circumstances. The matter of the competency of the question comes to this: Is it competent to prove what experienced or prudent persons do under the existing circumstances? We will concede that it is not competent, in endeavoring to excuse a negligent act, to show that there is a usage or custom by others, to perform said negligent act. 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 889 et seq. But, when it does not appear that the act is positively negligent, we are of opinion that it is competent to show the usage or custom of competent and prudent persons in performing the act. In the case at bar it did not appear that the act of plaintiff was negligence per se. He carefully performed his duties with the means supplied him for their performance, and we think it was competent to show, under those circumstances, that persons experienced in the performance of the same act, under the same circumstances, performed it as did the plaintiff.

It is said in Miller v. Illinois C. R. Co. 89 Iowa, 567: "The plaintiff introduced a witness who testified that it was usual and customary for brakemen, in going over the tender, to step on the lid of the manhole. We do not understand counsel to object to this line of evidence. It was surely proper for plaintiff to show that he was in the line of his duty when he received the injury, and that he pursued the course usually adopted by men in that employment under similar circumstances. Jeffrey v. K. & D. M. R. Co. 56 Iowa, 546; Whitsett v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 67 Iowa, 150. The objection of the defendant is that the witness was allowed to state what he would do under the same circumstances, and what was considered a safe course to pursue. We need not set out the questions and answers to which objection is made. When the whole testimony of the witness is considered, the objections do not appear to be well taken. The questions and answers show that the witness did not give his own opinion of the proper course to pursue."

As in the Iowa case, so in the case at bar, the witness did not give an opinion as to what he would do, but as to what experienced persons do. In Larson v. Ring, 48 Minn. 88, there was a question as to negligence of contractors in stretching a guy from the top of a derrick across the street. The supreme court said: "The court erred in permitting defendants to show at what height or distance above the public ways it was usual for contractors to stretch or suspend guys and ropes." The court, in speaking further of usages and customs, said: "It would depend largely, perhaps, on whether there had been adopted and used a way or means of fastening which time, usage, and long experience had demonstrated to be reasonably safe." It was upon this idea that the district court acted in admitting the testimony complained of. He did not admit testimony as to other persons doing careless acts, but, on the contrary, testimony as to what experience had demonstrated to be reasonably safe.

We find the following in Lawson on Usages and Customs (page 318): "Judge Story, in stating the degrees of negligence, and the measure of diligence in different relations, says: 'Indeed, what is common or ordinary diligence is more a matter of fact than of law. And in every community it must be judged of by the actual state of society, the habits of business, the general usages of life, and the dangers as well as the institutions peculiar to the age; so that, although it may not be possible to lay down any very exact rule applicable to all times and all circumstances, yet that may be said to be common or ordinary diligence, in the sense of the law, which men of common prudence generally exercise about their own affairs in the age and country in which they live.'" Further in the same volume, we find the following: "In Vaughan v. Menlove, 3 Bing. N. C. 468, Vaughan, J., said, speaking of the evidence of negligence: 'The conduct of a prudent man has always been the criterion for the jury in such cases; but it is by no means confined to them.'" See also, by the same author, section 171, p. 324. See also 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 902, with a large collection of cases.

We are satisfied that, under the circumstances of the case at bar, it was not error to admit this testimony.

The next error assigned by appellant is the modification of an instruction which it offered. The instruction offered was as follows: "An established usage or custom among men engaged in the same employment cannot justify or excuse an act negligent in itself." There does not seem to be an objection to this instruction as a matter of law, but, as noted in the treatment of the motion for a nonsuit, it did not appear clearly that the act of the plaintiff was negligent in itself. The court refused to give this instruction as it stood, and modified it by the following: "Unless known and acquiesced in by the defendant." This modification was not as full probably as it should be; but we are of opinion that error cannot be predicated upon it under the facts of this case, and in consideration of the fact that there was evidence in the case to the effect that, in the arrangement of the cars, the brake beam and brake staff were for the purpose of mounting as the plaintiff mounted.

The next question presented by appellant is that the verdict is against the law, for the reason that the jury disregarded the instructions of the court, and declined to apply them to the evidence. This is a proposition of law with which we fully concur,—a proposition which is fully discussed in the case of Murray v. Heinze (decided this term) (Mont.) 42 Pac. 1057. But the question here is, Was the verdict against the instructions? The first instruction contrary to which the appellant claims the verdict was rendered is as follows: "If, in the discharge of a dangerous duty, an employee of a railroad company voluntarily places himself in a dangerous position unnecessarily, when there is another place that is safer that he could have chosen, and he has time to exercise his judgment, and an injury results to him by reason of his position, he cannot recover for such injury." But it is to be observed that this instruction lays before the jury the conditions of an employee voluntarily placing himself in a dangerous position unnecessarily, when there is another place safer that he could have chosen, etc. But, as appears in the treatment of this case heretofore in this opinion, the evidence is not conclusive that the plaintiff voluntarily and unnecessarily put himself in a dangerous position when he might have chosen a safer one. That was an open and disputed fact in the case, and there was evidence, as before shown, sufficient to go to the jury upon this question; and the jury, in finding a verdict for the plaintiff, did not, by necessity, find against this instruction. The same reason applies to the other instructions contrary to which the appellant claims the verdict was rendered.

Appellant complains of the refusal of the court to give the following instruction: "In this case the jury may, in its discretion, render a general verdict or a special one. A general verdict is one by which you pronounce generally upon all the issues in favor of the plaintiff or in favor of the defendant. A special verdict must present the conclusions of fact as established by the evidence and not the evidence to prove them, and those conclusions of fact shall be so presented as that nothing shall remain to the court but to draw from them conclusions of law." In connection with this, the appellant complains that the court submitted to the jury two forms of verdicts only,—one a general verdict for the plaintiff, assessing the amount of the damages, and leaving the amount blank to be inserted by the jury. It is said in American Co. v. Bradford, 37 Cal. 865, and Swift v. Mulkey, 14 Or. 65, that it is discretionary with the court whether or not it submit special findings to the jury. But in the case at bar no findings were requested by the appellant. He did not ask that the court submit special findings upon any branch of the case. Not having made this request, he cannot complain of the action of the court. It certainly would have thrown the jury into inextricable confusion to instruct them, as appellant requested, that they might find special findings or special verdict, when not the slightest intimation was given to them upon what questions of fact they should find.

Appellant complains that the court refused to instruct the jury that there was no evidence tending to show that the defendant had failed to use proper care to keep its track and roadbed in proper condition; nor that there was any evidence that would justify the jury in finding that the defendant had failed to use reasonable care in keeping the ground on both sides of the track in proper condition for use by the employees. But if this instruction had been given it would have taken that question of fact wholly from the jury. We are of opinion that there was some evidence at least upon this question, and the treatment of this branch of the case seems to us to have been fully covered by other instructions which the court gave.

As to the exception to the refusal of the court to give instructions Nos. 7 and 12, requested by the appellant, without reciting them, we are satisfied to say that the questions there raised were covered by other instructions given by the court.

Appellant again complains of the refusal of the court to give the instruction requested by it, No. 15, as follows: "The undisputed evidence is that the plaintiff had the power to stop the engine and cars by a signal, and that it was the duty of the engineer to obey his signals." Following this was defendant's request 22, refused, as follows: "I charge you that the plaintiff had a right to stop these cars for the sole purpose of mounting them, if, in the proper discharge of his duties, it was reasonably necessary that he should mount the car on the brake beam, and if the act of mounting a flat car or the brake beam thereof, while moving at the rate of about 8 miles an hour, would ordinarily be attended by any considerable danger." It is true that the plaintiff had the power to stop the engine by signal for the purpose of mounting them, but his right to stop the train was only in the course of his business as brakeman, and it was all through the case a question whether his mounting the car while in motion was per se contributory negligence. We have determined that that was a question for the jury. If the court had given the instructions as charged, it would have taken that question away from the jury, and practically instructed the jury that it was contributory negligence per se to mount the cars as he did.

The appellant complains of the refusal of the court to instruct the jury as requested in Nos. 20 and 21, which are as follows: "It appears from the evidence that the plaintiff's injuries resulted from his own voluntary act in mounting the car as it was in motion. This being the case, it devolves upon the plaintiff to satisfy you by a fair preponderance of the evidence that he was not guilty of negligence contributing to his injury." "Under the circumstances of the case, the burden of proving that he was free from negligence contributing to his injury rests upon the plaintiff, and he must establish his freedom from such negligence by a preponderance of evidence." Counsel on both sides of this case have extensively argued the question of the burden of proof of contributory negligence. It is as unnecessary to review the law upon that topic in this opinion as it was to discuss it in the briefs, as it has long been settled in this state. Higley v. Gilmer, 8 Mont. 97, 35 Am. Rep. 450; Kennon v. Gilmer, 4 Mont. 433; Wall v. Helena Street R. Co. 12 Mont., at page 56; Nelson v. Helena, 16 Mont. —. Contributory negligence is a matter of defense, and plaintiff need not allege or prove its absence. The corollary to this rule is that, whenever the plaintiff's own case raises a presumption of contributory negligence, the burden of proving its absence is immediately upon him, and it devolves upon the plaintiff to clear himself of suspicion of contributory negligence which he himself has created. See cases last cited. The instructions refused were based upon the ground that the plaintiff had shown himself guilty of contributory negligence. As heretofore demonstrated, this was not the fact. The instructions were therefore inapplicable and properly refused. It did not appear by the testimony on the part of the plaintiff that there was a presumption of his contributory negligence.

Having reviewed the points raised upon this appeal, we are of opinion that the judgment and the order denying a new trial should be affirmed, which is accordingly done.

Pemberton, Ch. J., and Hunt, J., concur.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT.

James WHOLEY, Rept.,

v.

Leona J. CALDWELL et al., Appls.

(108 Cal. 96.)

1. A grant by a riparian proprietor of land bordering on the stream below that retained by him, and of the "water accustomed to flow in the stream," will not entitle the grantees to go upon the grantor's land to return to the stream waters suddenly diverted by an extraordinary freshet.

2. A riparian proprietor has no right to go upon another's land and restore to the old channel the water which has been suddenly

NOTE.—Rights in water of stream as affected by act of God or natural change of course.

Very few cases have dealt with this question directly, and WHOLEY v. CALDWELL seems to be the first in which the question of the right of a riparian owner above whose land the water has left the channel to restore it to its natural bed has been considered. The doctrine of Lord Hale as stated in WHOLEY v. CALDWELL, that if a river running between the lands of A. and B. leaves its course and sensibly makes its channel wholly on the land of A., the whole river belongs to A., is but remotely analogous, and cannot be regarded as settling the question of the right to restore the water to its ancient course. He bases the statement upon the maxim aqua cedat solo. Hargrave, Law Tracts, 5; 6 Cow. 537.

But the fact that the title to the water follows that of the land while it is upon the land does not conclusively establish that there may not be a right to prevent the water from going upon the land.

Consequently WHOLEY v. CALDWELL must rest upon its own reasoning and be regarded as the pioneer case upon the subject.

In Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Mason, 51 Miss. 234, it is said that the right of a riparian owner to the continued flow of the water in its natural channel could only be extinguished by operation of law, the act of God, or the act of himself, but it is not stated what act of God is necessary to effect such result.

There are some cases in which the right to remove deposits which have gradually accumulated has been considered. And such cases are quite closely analogous to that of a sudden change of the course of the stream, for the same reason which would permit one man to enter upon the land of another to clean out the channel for the purpose of preserving the ancient flow of the water, would justify his going there to return the water to its ancient channel.

Prescott v. White, 21 Pick. 341, 32 Am. Dec. 206, was a case of the exercise of an easement by the upper riparian proprietor in cleaning out his roadway over the land of a lower proprietor.

The owner of a mill has an easement in the land below for the free passage of the water from his mill, accompanied by a right to enter upon the land for the purpose of cleaning out the stream and removing obstructions to the free flow of the water. Prescott v. Williams, 5 Met. 429, 30 Am. Dec. 683.

But those cases probably depend more upon the Massachusetts mill acts for their determination than upon general principles of law. On the contrary, it was held in Blood v. Johnson, 28 Vt. 72, that the accumulation of a sand bar in a stream is ordinarily one of those natural results which neither party has a right to interfere with by direct removal.

In cases which have been decided under the doctrine of prior appropriation it has been held that an appropriator can go upon the land of an upper proprietor and remove obstructions such as sediment from the bed of the stream so as to permit the water to flow in its natural course to the head of the ditch. Crisman v. Heiderer, 5 Colo. 599; Ware v. Walker, 70 Cal. 591.

The fact that a freshet deposits debris in a stream so that it shuts off almost all of the water formerly flowing therein does not give a third person a right to enter upon the bed of the stream and construct a dam for the purpose of diverting the water of the stream to a different use of his own. Paige v. Rocky Ford Canal & I. Co. 53 Cal. 93.

There seems to be no question that the owner of the land at the point where the water left its channel may, if he acts promptly, return it to its bed.

The owner of the land where the break occurs may restore the water to its old channel. Tuthill v. Scott, 43 Vt. 535, 5 Am. Rep. 301.

The person on whose land the water leaves its banks may erect barriers to return it to its natural channel. Pierce v. Kinney, 59 Barb. 53.

So, one interested in the navigation of a stream may repair a break in its banks with the consent of the owner of the land, where the break occurs, although the effect is to cast the water against the banks of other riparian owners to their injury. Slater v. Fox, 5 Hun. 544.

But the upper proprietor may estop himself from returning the water to its natural channel by acts which will make it detrimental to the other proprietors if the water is returned. Smith v. Musgrove, 32 Mo. App. 241.

So, if the upper proprietor acquiesces for ten years in the changed course, he cannot restore the water to its ancient channel. Woodbury v. Short, 17 Vt. 337, 44 Am. Dec. 814.

H. P. F.

diverted by the act of God so as to flow elsewhere.

(July 12, 1896.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Superior Court for Siskiyou County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to compel defendants to permit the water of a certain watercourse to be returned to the channel from which it had been diverted by a freshet. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. L. F. Coburn, for appellants:

The granting to plaintiff of the right of way across defendants' said land and the right to such control over said creek is an invasion of the rights of private property; the taking of private property for, not public, but private use without just compensation.

Black's Pom. Riparian Rights, § 109; Cal. Const. art. 1, § 14.

Plaintiff cannot enter on defendants' land under the facts stated in the complaint and make any changes thereon.

Gould, Waters, § 231, note 5; Nevada Water Co. v. Powell, 34 Cal. 109, 91 Am. Dec. 685; Luz v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255.

It is a right of the riparian owner at common law to have the stream flow in its natural channel without diversion, but this right extends no further than the boundary of his own estate.

Black's Pom. Riparian Rights, §§ 7, 8; Gould, Waters, § 204; Angell, Watercourses, § 95; 3 Kent, Com. p. 489; Heath v. Williams, 25 Me. 209, 43 Am. Dec. 269.

A watercourse running between the lands of A. and B., which leaves its course and suddenly and sensibly makes its channel wholly on the land of A., belongs wholly to A.

Angell, Watercourses, § 57, and authorities therein cited; 3 Kent, Com. p. 525; Gould, Waters, § 160, note 5.

The findings of the court with regard to "well-defined streams emanating from towards the 'North channel of Parks creek' and flowing into the 'Spring Branch channel' are not sufficient to give a right to any of such percolating waters if such they are, or a right to have Parks creek continue to flow in said 'North' or any other channel."

Pom. Riparian Rights, § 63; Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303, 10 Am. Rep. 299; Civil Code, §§ 1, 410; Gould, Waters, §§ 229, 280-283; Southern P. R. Co. v. DeFour, 95 Cal. 615, 19 L. R. A. 92; 19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 28, and note 80; Fraser v. Brown, 19 Ohio St. 294; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. 523, 64 Am. Dec. 721; Painter v. Pasadena Land & W. Co. 91 Cal. 74.

Mr. James F. Farragher, for respondent:

The appropriator by his appropriation, and the riparianist by his acquisition of riparian lands, acquires the right to have the waters of a stream flow to his ditch or lands in its accustomed channels.

Lower Kings River Water Ditch Co. v. Kings River & F. Canal Co. 60 Cal. 410; Heilbron v. Kings River & F. Canal Co. 76 Cal. 12; Luz v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255; Rigney v. Tacoma Land & W. Co. 9 Wash. 576, 26 L. R. A. 425; Kay v. Kirk, 76 Md. 41; Black's Pom. Riparian Rights, §§ 8-10; Angell, Watercourses, 7th ed. § 96.

30 L. R. A.

This right is an easement.

Civil Code, § 801; Angell, Watercourses, 7th ed. § 142; Ware v. Walker, 70 Cal. 591.

It carries with it such secondary easements as are essential to its enjoyment.

Angell, Watercourses, §§ 158-160; Ware v. Walker, 70 Cal. 595.

Rights in water coming from a spring by percolation are acquirable by prior appropriation, and the appropriator cannot be divested of them by a subsequent owner of the soil.

Cross v. Kitts, 69 Cal. 222, 58 Am. Rep. 558; Hale v. McLean, 53 Cal. 578; Ely v. Ferguson, 91 Cal. 188; Willis v. Perry (Iowa) 26 L. R. A. 124; Civil Code, §§ 662, 1083; Vocco v. Conroy, 104 Cal. 468.

Mr. J. J. De Haven, with Mr. James F. Farragher, in support of petition for rehearing:

Ownership was based on a grant from appellants' testate predecessor of the waters of this Spring Branch channel, not as an appurtenant of the lands granted, or as a part of them, but as an independent right created by an independent covenant in the instrument of grant which conveyed said water specifically.

This grant vested the same title in respondent, to the waters of Spring Branch channel, as would a valid appropriation thereof, and created an easement in favor of respondent to have the flow continued through the usual channel to his ditch and lands.

Kinney, Irrigation, § 285, and cases cited; Black's Pom. Riparian Rights, § 61; Gould, Waters, § 209, and cases cited.

If the diversion is gradual, the rule stated by Sir Mathew Hale applies, but where it is sudden, as by avulsion, the diverted rights may be restored.

Angell, Watercourses, 7th ed. §§ 56-58; Gould, Waters, 2d ed. § 159; Rood v. Johnson, 26 Vt. 73; Tutill v. Scott, 43 Vt. 527, 5 Am. Rep. 301; Woodbury v. Short, 17 Vt. 337, 44 Am. Dec. 344; Paige v. Rocky Ford Canal & I. Co. 88 Cal. 93; Scriven v. Smith, 100 N. Y. 471, 53 Am. Rep. 224.

Henshaw, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiff is a lower, defendants are upper, riparian proprietors. Parks creek for many years had flowed over the land of defendants to a point on that land known as "Batterton Crossing," where it divided into two branches, called the "North channel" and the "South channel." About one third of the waters of the creek passed on to the plaintiff's land through the North channel, while the remaining two thirds flowed down the South channel. A third waterway, seemingly an ancient course of Parks creek, left the main stream about one half a mile above Batterton crossing, and entered upon and extended over the land of plaintiff in a direction parallel with that of the North channel. This last waterway was known as the "Spring Branch channel." There was no direct surface flow from Parks creek into it, the point of separation being dammed by gravel, bowlders, and debris, but its bed was lower than the bed of the North channel, and from North channel by percolation and by small but defined surface streams water rose in this Spring Branch channel and flowed over plaintiff's lands. The amount of water so rising bore direct relation to the amount of water flowing through the North channel. Plaintiff relied upon the waters of the Spring Branch and North channels for all beneficial purposes. Such were the conditions until the winter of 1890-91, when an extraordinary freshet deposited a bar of bowlders, gravel, and débris at the head of the North channel, and thus prevented the waters from flowing into it as had been their wont. At the same time the waters cut a new bed for themselves. This "new channel" (so named) left the original stream from the south about a mile above Batterton crossing, extended in a general course parallel with it, and joined the South channel, still on the lands of defendants, above the point where South channel entered plaintiff's property, and thence flowed on by the accustomed South channel. During the first year after this change some of the water passed down the old way to Batterton crossing. The rains of the following year deposited a bar in the main stream at the point where the new channel had been cut, and thereafter all the waters of the creek flowed down this new channel into the South channel, and so on to defendants' lands, leaving dry the original watercourse down to Batterton crossing, and, consequently, also the North channel and the Spring Branch channel. Plaintiff then commenced this action, averring that these changes were occasioned wholly by natural causes, and asserting the right to enter upon defendant's land, and to take such necessary and proper steps as might be required to return the water to the channels wherein it flowed prior to the year 1889, and asking that defendants be enjoined from preventing him from entering upon their land and doing such proper and necessary acts. He also pleaded a grant to himself, from defendants' predecessor, of his land and of "the waters accustomed to flow in the Spring Branch channel." Defendants denied the asserted rights, and by cross-complaint pleaded the construction and maintenance for thirty years last past of a dam across the head of the North channel sufficient to divert all the water thereof, during ordinary low stages, from the North to the South channel, and also their prescriptive right to divert two thirds of the water of the creek by ditches. They pleaded defendants' interference with these rights, and asked damages accordingly. Plaintiff was denied an injunction, but as riparian proprietor and as grantee under the deed above mentioned, was decreed the right of "restoring and restraining the waters of Parks creek to the following channels: First, from the point where the new channel cut from and left the former channel (original bed of the stream) down said former channel in a single body to the Batterton crossing; second, from the Batterton crossing in two channels in the following proportions, to wit: One third through the said North channel, and the remainder through said South channel."

We cannot see that the rights of the parties in this action are in any way affected by the grant to plaintiff "of the waters accustomed to flow in the Spring Branch channel." Aqua cedit solo. This grant accompanied the grant of the land bordering upon that channel.

Whether the waters which flowed in it came from the North channel by percolation and seepage, or by well-defined subterranean or surface channels, can here make no difference. For, in either case, the utmost that could be claimed for the grant would be that it gave plaintiff full right to the waters against any asserted right of the defendants to them, and protected him from any use which defendants might make of the waters of the creek after the grant to the injury of their right in these waters. But the complaint of plaintiff does not declare upon any such invasion or infringement by defendants. It asserts the right to go upon the land of an upper riparian proprietor, and return a stream to its original channel which has been diverted therefrom suddenly and sensibly by natural causes. And plaintiff's warrant in doing this rests, not upon any contractual relations with defendants, but upon his prerogatives as a lower riparian proprietor. We do not attach importance to the contention of appellants that the right of the lower riparian proprietor is merely to have the water enter his land by its accustomed channels, without regard to the quantity which these channels are wont to carry. The lower proprietor, as against the unwarranted acts of the upper, is entitled, not only to have the water enter his land by its accustomed channels, but to have each channel carry its due amount of water. Any other rule would lead to untold hardship and oppression.

But we are here concerned only with the rights of the lower proprietor where the change in the channel has been caused, not by the act of man, but by the act of God. Does the right of the riparian proprietor to have the water enter his land by its accustomed channels stand superior to changes wrought in the flow of a stream by the act of Providence? Has such a proprietor a paramount right over the forces of nature, as well as over the acts of man, to insist that water which has once flowed upon his land shall always flow upon it? A somewhat extended examination leads to the conclusion that the assertion of such a right is new to jurisprudence. The right finds no recognition by the commentators of either the civil or common law, and no case has come under our observation in which the question is considered. Even Sir Matthew Hale, whose De Jure Maris is declared by Chancellor Kent to have exhausted the learning on the subject, makes no mention of so important a topic. This silence is itself significant; for it is not easily to be believed that if this important right exists it would not have been asserted and announced in numerous instances. While thus lacking in authority, it is certain that the contention cannot find better support from principle or reason. The foundation of the riparian proprietor's rights rests upon the universally accepted maxim, adopted by the common law from the civil law, Aqua currit, et debet currere ut currere solebat ex jure nature. These rights thus draw their support from the laws of nature, but they do not rise superior to those laws. When, by their operation, the flow is lost the right is lost with it. The new channel itself becomes the natural channel. Otherwise a riparian proprietor would hold all lands above him in extraordinary and perpetual servitude. If, by the forces of nature, the stream should change its course at a point miles above him, he would still be empowered to subject any and all of the intermediate territory to operations requisite to enable him to turn the water back upon his own premises, and this power would be his to the very fountain head of the stream. Such a doctrine could not be tolerated. If it be needed, however, the reasoning of the foregoing finds abundant support in analogous principles of the law which are firmly established. Says Sir Matthew Hale (De Jure Maris, chap. 1): "A water-course running between the lands of A. and B., which leaves its course and suddenly and sensibly makes its channel wholly upon the land of A. belongs wholly to A." This rule has been reannounced by all the later text-writers, and has been adopted by the courts without suggestion of dissent. 3 Kent, Com. 428; 2

Bl. Com. 262; Angell, Watercourses, § 57; Gould, Waters, § 160, and cases thereunder. True, it has usually been invoked in cases of boundaries and of the accretion and reliction of land, but nevertheless, by necessary implication, it defines the riparian proprietor's right in the matter under consideration. Because, if the stream belongs wholly to A., thus depriving B. of all his riparian rights, this can only result because B. has no right to go upon another's land and restore to the old channel the water which has been diverted therefrom ex jure natura.

For the foregoing reasons the judgment is reversed, and the case remanded.

We concur: McFarland, J.; Temple, J.

Rehearing in banc denied.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, FOURTH CIRCUIT.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY,
Appt.,
v.

Joseph H. BOUKNIGHT, Intervener, Appellee.

(70 Fed. Rep. 442.)

1. A mortgagee of a railroad by accepting the mortgage subsequent to the passage of a statute giving judgments against the railroad company for personal injuries recovered in actions commenced within twelve months from the injury precedence over any mortgage or security for bonds assents to the priority.
2. A railroad mortgage is not entitled to priority over a judgment for personal injuries subsequently recovered, under S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1522, providing that such judgment shall take precedence over any mortgage, because of the further provision that they shall relate back to the date when the cause of action arose, and the fact that the injury was subsequent to the mortgage.
3. A judgment for personal injuries is not deprived of its priority over a railroad mortgage, under S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1522, by the fact that the mortgage was executed by a consolidated company formed from companies organized in South Carolina and other states, and the entire property was sold as a unit, as against a purchaser who agreed as part of the price to satisfy all claims adjudged prior in lien to the mortgage.
4. A purchaser on foreclosure of the property of a railroad company, who has covenanted to discharge all liens held prior to the mortgage, is not entitled to assert an equity for the revival of prior mortgages executed before the passage of S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1522, giving judgments for personal injuries priority over railroad mortgages, so as to destroy the precedence of such a judgment over the mortgage upon which the sale was made, or to claim a proportionate reduction by reason thereof.

5. The record of a judgment against a railroad company for personal injuries is admissible as against a purchaser on foreclosure sale who agreed as part of the price to satisfy all claims held prior in lien, not simply to establish the fact of its rendition, but as proof of when the action was brought, for what, and the amount, for the purpose of showing that such judgment is prior to the mortgage under the South Carolina statute giving judgments for personal injuries precedence over railroad mortgages.
6. A railroad company which, under the lease of another road, is conducting it wholly in the interest of the lessor, occupies the position merely of operating agent, and the lessor is liable for injuries from the negligence of the lessee.
7. A personal injury in another state for which judgment is recovered in South Carolina is within S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1522, giving priority to a judgment recovered on a cause of action against a railroad company for personal injuries over any railroad mortgage.
8. A consolidated railroad company may be held responsible for the acts and neglects of its constituent members as done by it as a whole.
9. The priority of a judgment recovered against a consolidated railroad company over a mortgage made by such company, under S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1522, cannot be defeated on the theory that the mortgagor was in fact three corporations of different states, and that the injury was inflicted in the exercise of the franchises of a separate domestic corporation of another state.

(November 7, 1895.)

NOTE.—As to liability of consolidated railroad company for obligations of its predecessors, see note to Chicago & I. C. R. Co. v. Hall (Ind.) 23 L. R. A. 231.

30 L. R. A.

A PPEAL by the purchaser of the Charlotte, Columbia, & Augusta Railroad Company from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Caro-was directing it to pay to intervenor the amount of his claim against the company for damages for personal injuries, it being a claim prior to the mortgage under which appellant purchased the road. Affirmed.

Before Fuller, Circuit Justice, Goff, Circuit Judge, and Hughes, District Judge.

Statement by Fuller, Circuit Justice:

The Charlotte & South Carolina Railroad Company was incorporated by the states of North Carolina and South Carolina, and the Columbia & Augusta Railroad Company by the states of South Carolina and Georgia. These companies were consolidated under the name of the Charlotte, Columbia, & Augusta Railroad Company, in accordance with an act of the general assembly of South Carolina approved March 19, 1869, which provided: "That the Charlotte & South Carolina Railroad Company and the Columbia & Augusta Railroad Company shall, upon the consent of the stockholders of each company, be consolidated, and form one and the same body corporate, under the name of the Charlotte, Columbia, & Augusta Railroad Company, possessing all the rights, powers, privileges, immunities, and franchises conferred upon said companies, by the several acts heretofore passed and now of force, incorporating said companies, and amending the charters thereof," and that "the affairs of the said consolidated company shall be managed and directed by a general board, to consist of eighteen directors, to be elected by the stockholders from among their number: provided, that four of the directors shall be elected from amongst the stockholders residing in the state of North Carolina, and four amongst the stockholders residing in the state of Georgia." S. C. Laws 1868-69, p. 232. And an act of the legislature of Georgia, approved February 20, 1869 (Laws 1869, p. 154), and of the legislature of North Carolina, approved April 12, 1869 (N.C. Pub. Laws 1868-69, p. 598), to the same effect.

The consolidated company owned a road extending from Charlotte, N. C., to Augusta, Ga., which passed across the state of South Carolina, in which by far the largest part of the track was situated. On July 1, 1883, this company executed to the Central Trust Company of New York a mortgage upon the whole road, together with equipment, appurtenances, and franchises, to secure its coupon bonds, which were issued and negotiated to the amount of $500,000. The mortgage recited that its execution was authorized at a meeting of the board of directors of the company, held at the city of Columbia, S. C., June 1, 1883, and ratified by the stockholders of that company at a meeting held in said city on July 26 of that year. In 1886 the company leased all its franchises and property, including the whole line of railroad from Augusta to Charlotte, to the Richmond & Danville Railroad Company; and thenceforward all the rolling stock of the road was owned, and all its operations were controlled and managed, by the latter company, whose agents, without interference on the part of the lessor, were in charge of all of the business of the road. The Richmond & Danville Railroad Company and all its property and leased lines went into the hands of a receiver in June, 1892. The interest falling due July 1, 1893, on the bonds secured by the consolidated company's mortgage, was not paid; whereupon the trustee in the mortgage, the Central Trust Company, filed its bill to foreclose July 31, 1893, and receivers were appointed under order dated July 28, 1893. April 7, 1894, a final decree of foreclosure was entered, ordering the sale of the road. This decree provided: "The purchaser or purchasers at said sale shall, as part of the consideration for such sale, take the property purchased upon the express condition that he or they, or his or their assigns, approved by the court, will pay off and satisfy any and all outstanding and unpaid receivers' obligations having priority over the lien of the mortgage hereby foreclosed, and all other claims filed in this cause, but only when the court shall allow such claims, and adjudge the same to be prior in lien to the mortgage foreclosed in this suit, and in accordance with the order or orders of the court allowing such claims and adjudging with respect thereto; and the purchaser or purchasers or their approved assigns shall be entitled to appeal from any and all orders or decrees of the court in respect to such claims or any of them, and shall have all the rights in respect to such appeals which the complainant, Central Trust Company of New York, would have in case such appeals had been taken by it. The purchaser or purchasers at said sale shall also, as part of the consideration, in addition to the payment of the sum or sums bid, take the property purchased upon the express condition that he or they, or his or their assigns, approved by the court, will pay off and satisfy all debts or obligations incurred or to be incurred by the receivers having possession of such property, which have not been or shall not be paid by said receivers or out of the proceeds of the sale or sales herein ordered or otherwise, and which shall be adjudged by the court to be debts or obligations properly chargeable against the property purchased, and to be prior or superior to the lien of the mortgage foreclosed in this suit. The court reserves the right to retake and resell said property in case of the failure or neglect of the purchaser or purchasers, or his or their assigns, approved by the court as aforesaid, to comply with any order of the court in respect to payment of prior lien claims above mentioned within twenty days after service of a copy of such order upon said purchaser or purchasers, or his or their assigns." And also that the fund arising from the sale should be applied among other things "to the payment of all outstanding and unpaid debts and obligations of the receivers incurred since their appointment in and about the actual operation of the railroad, and all such claims as are decreed by the court to be prior in lien, or equity to the lien of the mortgage foreclosed in this suit."

The road and franchises were thereupon sold, July 10, 1894, to the Southern Railway Company, and the sale confirmed, and conveyance executed. The order of confirmation contained this clause: "And the court further reserves full power from time to time to enter orders binding upon the said Southern Railway Company, as such purchaser, under its decree, requiring it to pay into the registry of this court all such sums as have been or may be ordered by this court, for the payment of any and all receiver's debt or claims adjudged or to be adjudged by it as prior in lien or equity to the mortgage foreclosed in this cause, or entitled to preference in payment out of the proceeds of sale prior to such mortgage bonds."

On the same July 10, Joseph Bouknight filed a petition of intervention in the cause, alleging that on November 24, 1891, he was injured by the negligence of the employees of the Danville Company, then operating the Charlotte road as lessee; that he sued the Charlotte Company therefor within twelve months thereafter in the circuit court of common pleas of Edgefield county, S. C., and recovered judgment in March, 1898, for $10,000, which judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state; that this judgment was superior to the lien of the mortgage of July 1, 1883, and was entitled to priority of payment out of the proceeds of sale or by the purchasers at such sale; and praying for relief accordingly.

The petition was referred to a special master, before whom the judgment roll was exhibited, from which it appeared that petitioner claimed that on November 24, 1891, he purchased from the Danville Company, at Trenton, S. C., a station on the Charlotte Company's road, a ticket from Trenton to Augusta and return, and on this ticket proceeded to Augusta, Ga., and that on his return, before the train had gone out of the Augusta station, he was injured in his person by the negligence of the agents of the Danville Company; that he brought his action against the Charlotte Company within twelve months thereafter, and subsequently, on issues joined, obtained a verdict and judgment, which judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of South Carolina. The master reported in favor of the priority of the judgment over the mortgage, and the Southern Railway Company filed exceptions, which were overruled, and a final decree entered January 9, 1895, awarding priority and ordering payment by the Southern Railway Company, as purchaser, of the intervenor's judgment, with interest and costs, from which decree this appeal was prosecuted. The opinion of the circuit court (Simonton, J.) is reported in 65 Fed. Rep. 267.

Messrs. Henry B. Tompkins and Henry Crawford for appellant.

Messrs. Sheppard Brothers and E. F. Verdery, for appellee:

A railroad corporation, accepting and operating under its charter, assumes duties to the public. Among these, perhaps the chief of them, is the safe carriage of passengers and freight.

It cannot escape from responsibility for the acts of its lessees.

National Bank v. Atlanta & C. A. L. R. Co., 5 S. C. 222; Harmon v. Columbia & G. R. Co., 28 S. C. 406; Singleton v. Southwestern Railroad, 70 Ga. 471, 48 Am. Rep. 574; Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Brown, 84 U. S. 17 Vall. 450, 21 L. ed. 677; Patterson, Railway Accident Law, p. 122; 2 Wood, Railway Law, 345.

The question of the lessors' liability, as applicable to this case, is settled by the judgment of the supreme court of South Carolina.) L. R. A.

8 Abbott, Nat. Dig. 417, subd. 24; Galpin v. Page, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959; Cocks v. Halsey, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 71, 10 L. ed. 891; Parker v. Kane, 63 U. S. 22 How. 1, 16 L. ed. 286.

Section 1528 of the General Statutes of South Carolina is a part of the general law regulating railroad corporations.

All contracts are made with reference to the law of the state in which the subject-matter of the contract is, and in which the contract is made.

Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §1120; Brins v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 96 U. S. 634, 24 L. ed. 961; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. ed. 643; Provident Inst. for Savings v. Jersey City, 113 U. S. 506, 28 L. ed. 1102; Toledo, D. & E. R. Co. v. Hamilton, 184 U. S. 296, 33 L. ed. 905.

The rights of the purchaser are not higher than those of the mortgagee.

Bank of United States v. Longworth, 1 McLean, 35; Hand v. Savannah & C. R. Co. 12 S. C. 335.

Although the Charlotte, Columbia, & Augusta Railroad Company held a charter from three states, and was incorporated by each, for the purpose of contracting, suing, and being sued, it is a single corporation in fact and in law.

14 S. C. Stat. p. 232; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 996; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636; Graham v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co. 118 U. S. 161, 30 L. ed. 196.

The action is for a tort, a transitory action, and could be brought wherever the defendant could be served.

Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 18, 26 L. ed. 441; Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 196, 38 L. ed. 960; Pennsylvania Finance Co. v. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. 61 Fed. Rep. 369.

The priority according to judgments for personal injuries, under the provisions of section 1528 of the General Statutes of South Carolina, over mortgages executed subsequently to the enactment, should be recognized and enforced.

Hassall v. Wilcox, 180 U. S. 493, 32 L. ed. 1001.

The court has no authority to re-examine the validity of the contract, or the propriety of the original judgment—those questions have been finally adjudicated.

Louisiana v. Police Jury, 111 U. S. 721, 28 L. ed. 576.

Fuller, Circuit Justice, delivered the opinion of the court:

The main track of the Charlotte, Columbia, & Augusta Railroad Company, extending from the city of Augusta, in the state of Georgia, to the city of Charlotte, in the state of North Carolina, its other tracks, its bridges, depots, workshops, and other buildings, its rolling stock, equipment, and right of way, and its corporate rights and franchises, were sold to the Southern Railway Company as a unit, under a decree which provided that the purchaser at said sale should, as part of the consideration for the sale, pay off and satisfy all claims held and adjudged by the court to be prior in lien to the mortgage foreclosed in the suit; and the order of conaffirmation reserved full power from time to time to enter orders binding the Southern Railway Company as purchaser under the decree, requiring it to pay into the registry of the court such sums as might be necessary for the payment of such claims.

Section 1528 of the General Statutes of South Carolina of 1882 (being section 117 of an act approved February 9, 1882) is as follows:

"Whenever a cause of action shall arise against any railroad corporation, for personal injury, or injury to property, sustained by any person or persons, and such cause of action shall be prosecuted to judgment by person or persons injured, or his or their legal representatives, such judgment shall relate back to the date when the cause of action arose, and shall be a lien as of that date, of equal force and effect with the lien of employees for wages, upon the income, property, and franchises of said corporation, enforceable in any court of competent jurisdiction, by attachment or levy and sale under execution, and shall take precedence and priority of payment of any mortgage, deed of trust, or other security given to secure the payments of bonds made by said railroad company: provided, any action brought under this section shall be commenced within twelve months from the time that said injury shall have been sustained."

Section 1416 declared the provisions of the general law regarding railroad corporations to be amendments of the charters of all railroad corporations created in the state. The date of the mortgage was July 1, 1883. Bouknight was injured November 24, 1891, and commenced his action in the circuit court of common pleas for Edgefield county, S. C., September 30, 1892.

The circuit court was of opinion that all contracts are made with reference to the law of the state in which the subject-matter of the contract is, and in which the contract is made. This certainly is true with regard to mortgages by a railroad corporation. The law enters into and becomes a part of the contract, as if it were there in express terms. Brine v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 96 U. S. 634, 24 L. ed. 861; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. ed. 648; Provident Inst. for Savings v. Jersey City, 118 U. S. 506, 28 L. ed. 1102; Toledo, D. & B. R. Co. v. Hamilton, 134 U. S. 801, 33 L. ed. 908. In this particular case the section which is under consideration is a part of the general law regulating railroad corporations. The provisions of the chapter are declared to be amendments of the charters of all railroad corporations theretofore created in this state. Section 1416. This section restricts the power of railroad corporations to execute mortgages of the franchises and property, to the extent that they cannot create a lien superior to that of judgments obtained against them for personal injuries incurred in the exercise of their franchises. And the court considering that the mortgage of July 1, 1883, was subject to the law of 1882, further held that as that law provided that judgments for personal injuries recovered in actions commenced within twelve months from the time the injury was sustained should take precedence of any mortgage, deed of trust, or other security given to secure the payment of bonds made by railroad companies, and as this provision entered into the mortgage contract, and in accepting the mortgage the mortgagee gave his assent thereto, Bouknight was entitled to priority of payment.

These views are in accordance with those expressed by the supreme court, and regarded as obnoxious to no constitutional objection.

In Provident Inst. for Savings v. Jersey City, supra, the supreme court ruled that an act making water rents a charge upon land in a municipality prior to the lien of all encumbrances gave the water rents priority over mortgages on such land made after the passage of the act, whether the water was introduced on the lot mortgaged before or after the giving of the mortgage, and that such act did no violation to that portion of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution which declares that no state shall deprive any person of property without due process of law. And Mr. Justice Bradley, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "What may be the effect of those statutes, in this regard, upon mortgages which were created prior to the statute of 1852, it is unnecessary at present to inquire. The mortgages of the complainant were not created prior to that statute, but long subsequent thereto. When the complainant took its mortgages, it knew what the law was; it knew that, by the law, if the mortgaged lot should be supplied with Passaic water by the city authorities, the rent of that water, as regulated and exacted by them, would be a first lien on the lot. It chose to take its mortgages subject to this law; and it is idle to contend that a postponement of its lien to that of the water rents, whether after accruing or not, is a deprivation of its property without due process of law. Its own voluntary act, its own consent, is an element in the transaction."

In East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Frazier, 139 U. S. 288, 35 L. ed. 196, a law of Tennessee, enacted in 1877, provided that no railroad company should have power to give any mortgage or other kind of lien on its property which should be valid and binding against judgments for damages done to persons and property in the operation of the road. A mortgage was given by the company in 1881, and certain judgments were recovered subsequent to that time; and, there having been a foreclosure and sale in a state court, the judgment creditors filed petitions for the satisfaction of their judgments. Relief was accorded, and the decrees sustained by the supreme court of Tennessee. Frazier v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 88 Tenn. 138. On writ of error the judgment of that court was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, which said:

"The law in force at the time the mortgage was executed, with all the conditions and limitations it imposes, is the law which determines the force and effect of the mortgage. That law in this case was the law of 1877, which subordinated the mortgage to the lien of subsequent judgments for claims of the nature of those held by appellees."

Conceding the general doctrine, appellant nevertheless insists that priority should not have been awarded, because by the statute the lien of the judgment related only to the date of the injury, which was long subsequent to the mortgage, and because the priority operated on property and mortgages in Georgia and North Carolina, and also on mortgages in South Carolina, given before the passage of the act; that as the mortgagee was not a party to the action against the railroad company, the judgment therein was res inter alios acta, and did not in itself establish the existence of the conditions necessary to obtain priority; that the recovery against the Charlotte Company was not justified, because the Danville Company was the intervener's carrier at the time of the injury; that the cause of action accrued in Georgia, and, if the Charlotte Company was liable at all, the liability was that of the Georgia corporation of that name, and not of the South Carolina corporation, and that the statute applied only to corporations of South Carolina and judgments recovered on causes of action arising in that state.

1. In order to settle priority between conflicting liens, the statute declared that the judgments referred to should be a lien as of the date when the cause of action arose; but this had no relation to the precedence over railroad mortgages specifically provided for in respect of such judgments, and in contemplation of the parties in entering into the mortgage contract. That priority was stipulated for by the consolidated company, whose entire property was mortgaged, and sold as a unit at the instance of the mortgagee; and the decree and the order of confirmation of the sale required the payment out of the fund produced by the sale, or paid into the registry by the purchaser, of all claims which might be adjudged to be entitled to precedence. The consolidated company had been clothed with the powers and franchises of the original companies, and was in reality for the purposes of acting, contracting, suing, and being sued, but a single corporation, formed to carry on business in a corporate capacity in three different states. Under these circumstances, it does not lie in the mouth of the purchaser to object because the proceeds of sale might be enhanced by reason of property situated in other states than that of the forum.

Nor are we impressed with the suggestion that priority awarded against the consolidated mortgage was equivalent to priority over mortgages executed prior to 1882. It is true that the bill to foreclose avers that the proceeds of part of the bonds issued under the consolidated mortgage were used to take up and cancel bonds to the amount of some $195,500, secured by outstanding mortgages of the Columbia & Augusta and Charlotte & South Carolina Railroad Companies, but we do not preceive that the purchaser occupied a position entitling it to assert an equity for the revival of indebtedness canceled by means of the consolidated mortgage of 1882, so as to destroy the precedence existing in respect of that instrument, or to claim a proportionate reduction by reason thereof.

2. The judgment roll showed the date of suit brought, the cause of action, and when it arose, and the amount of the damages. The mortgagee was not, and could not have been, made a party to that action at law; nor is this 80 L. R. A.

intervention a proceeding against the mortgagee to recover over in personam. To what extent third parties may go in impeaching judgments collaterally need not be discussed. There is no pretense here of want of jurisdiction, or of fraud, collusion, or gross neglect in obtaining the judgment, or of any irregularity invalidating it. The only way in which the judgment was questioned was by exceptions to the master's report, which raised objections to its admission in evidence, to its sufficiency as proof of the allegations of the petition, to the award of priority, and that the master erred in not reporting that Bouknight, on the face of his petition, was guilty of contributory negligence, and not entitled to recover. The date of the mortgage appearing, the judgment record was sufficient to make out petitioner's case, if admissible in evidence; and we are clear that it was admissible under the statute, not simply as establishing the fact of its rendition, but as proof of when the action was brought, what for, and the amount. Being conclusive as to each of these matters as between the parties, it was certainly not less than prima facie against the mortgagee in respect of them, and that is enough to dispose of the inquiry here.

In Hassall v. Wilcox, 180 U. S. 493, 82 L. ed. 1001, the judgment in controversy was rendered on a complaint, counting on a note, the consideration of which appeared on its face to be in part for services which were not, and in part for labor claims which were, entitled to preference under the statute of Texas involved in the case; and this being so, it was held by the supreme court that the bondholders had the right to compel the plaintiff to prove affirmatively the amount for which he was entitled to a lien. The case is peculiar, and does not rule the point before us.

8. In Bouknight v. Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. 41 S. C. 415 (being the case in which this judgment was affirmed), the liability of the Charlotte Company was contested, on the ground that the company had previously leased its property, franchises, etc., to the Danville Company, which latter company, if any, it was claimed, was liable. But the contention was overruled by the supreme court of South Carolina, which remarked: "After the repeated decisions of this court upon this subject, we can hardly think that it is necessary for us to go again into the argument."

National Bank v. Atlanta & C. A. L. R. Co. 25 S. C. 216, and Harmon v. Columbia & G. R. Co. 28 S. C. 405, were cited, in which the supreme court of South Carolina held that "when a railroad or other corporation receives its charter from the state, conferring certain franchises, rights, and privileges, it is upon the consideration that such corporation shall perform the duties and fulfil the obligations which it at the time incurs. The fact that the corporation chooses to perform those duties and fulfil its obligations to the community through another, whether as lessee or otherwise, cannot release it from the obligation which it has assumed by the acceptance of its charter."

And the court was of opinion that there was no ground for a distinction between the liability of a railroad company which had leased its line to another in actions ex delicto and actions ex contractu, nor for the distinction, often laid down in judicial decisions, between the liability of the lessor for an injury sustained by reason of some omission of duty resting upon it—as, for example, from the defective condition of its track or of a bridge existing at the time of the lease—and an injury arising from the mere negligence of the lessee's servants in running the trains.

In Singleton v. Southwestern Railroad, 70 Ga. 471, 48 Am. Rep. 574, the same doctrine is announced, although there the railroad was operated by the lessee in the name of the lessor.

But if we could go behind the judgment, and were at liberty to disregard the settled rules in South Carolina and Georgia, still we should not reverse the order appealed from on this ground. The lease, which we assume must have been part of the record below, and which is referred to by the circuit court, disclosed that the Danville Company was conducting the road wholly in the interest of the Charlotte Company, its covenants providing that the receipts, income, and revenues derived from the use and operation of the lines should be applied to operating expenses, cost of new rolling stock, improvements, payment of all claims or charges growing out of the use of the property prior to the lease, insurance, and taxes, the payment of the necessary expenses (not exceeding $1,500) to keep up the corporate organization of the Charlotte Company, the payment of interest on certain enumerated bonds; and that "any and all residue of said receipts, income, and revenues remaining after each and every of the above mentioned and specified payments have been made shall be paid over to the said party of the first part [the lessor], and be by it applied to the payment of dividends upon its capital stock, as its board of directors may direct." As held by the circuit court, the Danville Company occupied the position of operating agent, and the decisions of the Supreme Court in Washington, A. & G. R. Co. v. Brown, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 445, 450, 21 L. ed. 875, 877, and Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jones, 155 U. S. 338, 350, 39 L. ed. 176, 181, are in point and are decisive.

4. The cause of action upon which judgment was rendered arose in Georgia, and it is insisted that it so arose against the Charlotte Company, if at all, as a corporation of Georgia, and that the statute did not apply to causes of action arising in, or against a corporation of, any other state than South Carolina. As the judgment must be a judgment recovered in South Carolina, so it is said the words "whenever a cause of action shall arise against any railroad corporation for personal injury" must be held to mean arising in South Carolina, and that this construction is strengthened by the reference of the lien of the judgment to the date of the accruing of the cause of action; furthermore, that section 1528 is one of many sections prescribing regulations for the prevention of accidents and concerning responsibilities therefor, all of which constitute a purely local statute, and, like all other legislation of the kind, could have no application to accidents or injuries save only those occurring within the state. And it is also urged that, so far as the mortgagee is concerned, the statute was not a mere regulation of the remedy, but created a new liability conditioned on the action being "brought under this section" within twelve months of the injury, and that such liability could not exist in respect of causes of action arising elsewhere. But the action was transitory, and brought as for a tort at common law, which it would be presumed, prevailed where the injury occurred, as it did where suit was brought. And that this was so in fact is not denied. Even if the cause of action had been a Georgia statutory delict, it would have been justifiable in South Carolina, since it was not inconsistent with the statutes or public policy thereof. Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 11, 26 L. ed. 439; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 598, 36 L. ed. 829; Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 190, 38 L. ed. 958. And see Union P. R. Co. v. Wyler, 156 U. S. 285, 39 L. ed. 983.

The objection really is that recovery should have been denied by the state court, because the injury was not inflicted by the South Carolina corporation, but by the Georgia corporation, while it was the South Carolina corporation only that was sued. Granting that, when a consolidated corporation is created by the legislation of three states, each state retains its control over its own charters, and the company exercises its powers in each state by virtue thereof, yet it does not follow that the consolidated corporation may not be held responsible for the acts and neglects of its constituent members as done by it as a whole. Petitioner was a citizen of South Carolina, who suffered injury through negligence when on carriage from South Carolina to Georgia and back; and the courts of South Carolina have adjudged his right of recovery against the consolidated company. The mortgage was executed by that company, as a single corporation, in South Carolina, and authorized and ratified in that state, under powers of consolidation derived from the legislation of three states. The mortgage was foreclosed in South Carolina, and the property sold there as a unit; and neither the mortgagee, nor the purchaser under it, can rid itself of the adjudication of liability on the theory that the mortgagor was not in fact and in law a single corporation, but three corporations, or claim that no judgment could come within the statute, although recovered against the consolidated company, if for a personal injury incurred in another state than that of the forum, on the ground that it was inflicted in the exercise of the franchises of a separate domestic corporation of such other state. In short, as the judgment was rendered on a cause of action cognizable in South Carolina, and as the language of the statute is general, we perceive no adequate ground for the exception contended for, notwithstanding the ingenuity of the argument, in the way of construction, in its support.

The statute did not create a new legal liability, as in The Harrisburg, 119 U. S. 199, 30 L. ed. 858, cited for appellant, but made provision for priority in respect of judgments for personal injury in actions brought in view of the statute within twelve months; and that priority, which was the legal consequence of the recovery in actions so brought, must be held to have been in contemplation of the parties when the mortgage was made. If the property of the company had not been in the custody of the law, then this judgment would have been enforceable by attachment or by levy and sale under execution; and the intervening petition was nothing more than a different mode of collection, rendered necessary by the circumstances.

The Circuit Court was right, and its decree is affirmed.

MISSISSIPPI SUPREME COURT.

UNION MORTGAGE, BANKING, &
TRUST COMPANY et al., Appts.,

PETERS & TREZEVANT et al.

(73 Miss. 1058.)

1. One who advances money at the instance of a debtor to be used by the latter in payment of a prior security is not a stranger or intermeddler in his affairs within the rule which denies to such persons a remedy by way of subrogation.

2. The relief by subrogation to earlier liens which have been paid off with money advanced by a subsequent mortgagee under agreement that he shall have a first lien is not destroyed by the fact that the early liens have been actually paid off and canceled in pursuance of the agreement that this should be done, since equity will consider them alive so long as justice requires.

3. The holder of an intermediate mortgage, who is not placed in any worse attitude by the subrogation of a subsequent mortgagee to the first lien on the property, which was paid off with money advanced by the last mortgagee on a promise that he should have the first lien, cannot defeat such subrogation, even if he has not waived or become estopped to assert his priority.

4. One who fraudulently obtains money on a mortgage by representing that his property is unencumbered is estopped to contest the mortgagee's right of subrogation to earlier liens on the ground that they are barred by the statute of limitations.

5. The representative of a deceased person, who stands in his shoes, is bound by an estoppel raised by the fraud of the decedent.

6. A mortgagee is not bound by election of remedy in selling land under his mortgage and attempting to defend his title thus acquired, so as to preclude his subsequent claim of subrogation to earlier securities.

(June 10, 1895.)

APPEAL by complainants from a decree of the Chancery Court for Coahoma County in favor of defendants in an action brought to restrain defendants from prosecuting an ejectment suit to recover possession of certain real estate which defendants claimed under a mortgage foreclosure, which decree awarded the property to defendants in accordance with the prayer of their cross-bill. Reversed.

The Union Mortgage, Banking, & Trust Company and C. M. Reynolds were plaintiffs, and NOTE.—For right of subrogation on payment of mortgage debt, see note to Crumlish v. Central Imp. Co. (W. Va.) 23 L. R. A. 131.

30 L. R. A.

Peters & Trezevant, trustees under a deed of assignment from Thomas H. Allen & Company, Thomas H. Allen & Company, and J. H. Peace, as administrator of the estate of J. A. Peace, deceased, were defendants.

The bill alleged, in substance, that "on May 15, 1883, J. A. Peace borrowed from the American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, Limited, $26,000 for which he gave four promissory notes of equal amounts due in May 15, 1885, 1886, 1887, and 1888 respectively, bearing interest at 8 per cent. He secured them by deed of trust on lands. On November 23, 1885, L. M. Hopson recovered a decree against Peace for $6,608.63 with interest at 10 per cent which became a lien on the mortgaged land but subject to the prior trust deed. This decree was purchased for the Corbin Banking Co. On June 1, 1885, Peace executed a deed of trust for the benefit of Thomas H. Allen & Company on the lands covered by the American Freehold Land Mortgage Co., and other lands. Peace failed to pay his notes to the latter company and the Hopson judgment, and was pressed for payment upon both claims; he thereupon attempted to negotiate a new loan sufficient to satisfy them, and to enable him to do so Allen & Co. agreed to waive the priority of their trust deed from him over new security on the same land by canceling their deed and taking a new one after the deed securing the new loan should be executed. Allen & Co. were largely interested in procuring the new loan thereby preventing a foreclosure of the prior deed of trust. An application for the loan was forwarded to the Corbin Banking Company for $38,000, the application stating that Peace was the owner of the land and that there were no pending suits against him and no liens of any kind except as stated therein. That application was accepted by the Union Mortgage, Banking, & Trust Co., the repayment to be secured by first mortgage on the lands of Peace described in the application. On April 29, 1889, Peace executed a trust deed to secure the loan, and on the next day a deed of trust to Allen & Co., who at once canceled their old deed and filed the new one for record supposing that the deed to the Union Company had been duly recorded. But that deed had not been recorded and record was not made of it until September, 1889. The Corbin Banking Company applied the money it received from the Union Mortgage Company to the Hopson decree held by it and the Freehold Company's claim. These satisfied securities were not in fact delivered to Peace but were retained in the hands of the agent who negotiated the mortgage loan, and in 1891 they were sent by him to the attorney of the Union Company. Peace died in 1890 and the Union Company began a foreclosure proceeding; Allen & Co. always recognized the priority of the Union Company's debt and in August, 1891, agreed to pay off so much of it as was in arrears, but failed to do so. On January 15, 1892, the lands were sold under the Union Company's deed of trust and bought in for it, and were afterwards sold to complainant Reynolds in trust for the Union Company, and he has since been in possession. In December, 1890, Allen & Co. filed a bill to foreclose their trust deed making Peace's only heir sole defendant. Pending this suit they assigned to J. M. Peters and M. B. Trezevant. This suit resulted in a decree of foreclosure and the land was sold and purchased by Peters & Trezevant as trustees. They brought ejectment to recover possession of the land," and the bill in this case was then filed.

The bill sought to enjoin the further prosecution of the ejectment suit on the ground that plaintiffs were estopped by the agreement of Allen & Co. as stated in the bill from asserting their priority, and asked to be subrogated to the liens of the prior securities which had been paid by the money advanced by complainant.

Allen & Co. answered denying all knowledge at the time their security was taken of a loan made by the Union Company to Peace, and denying any agreement with any one to give the Union Company priority over their trust deed. They denied that they had any interest in securing the loan from the Union Company, and denied the right of the Union Company to be subrogated to the prior liens, and claimed a priority: first, because the freehold notes were paid off and extinguished; second, because all these notes were barred by the statute of limitations. The other defendants adopted this answer and the answer was made a cross bill with a prayer for possession of the lands and for rents and profits.

Evidence in the case tended to show that Allen & Co. were cotton factors at Memphis and that Peace had been for many years a customer of their house; he was always largely in their debt which was secured by trust deeds upon his property. The Allens claimed that about the time their new trust deed was executed the old debt being past due and Peace desiring new advances for the coming year the Allens requested him to meet them for the purpose of placing the matter on a satisfactory basis. The result of this conference was that the Allens agreed to take a new mortgage to cover notes for a renewal of the old indebtedness and the sum of $5,000 to be added for the coming season, that they could not get a satisfactory description of the land at the time, so for more accurate description they inserted in the trust deed a reference for description to the mortgage made to the American Freehold Land Mortgage Company, "now of record in Coahoma county;" that Peace remarked that the name of the mortgage company was not correct and Allen sent him to Mr. Martin of Memphis, agent for the Corbin Banking Company, to learn the correct name of the mortgagee and that the name given was that of the Union Company, and that that name was substituted by Mr. Allen under the supposition that that company was the holder of the mortgage.

In reference to the claim for subrogation defendants' testimony tended to show that the Union Company never at any time knew of the existence of the prior securities; that, on the contrary, that company was intentionally kept in ignorance of their existence, and that they never had any agreement with Peace that such securities should be kept alive for the benefit of the Union Company. Martin, complainants' agent, stated that these securities were forwarded to him by F. W. Dunton, the cashier of the Corbin Company and agent of the Union Company, to be by him canceled and delivered to Peace, and that Martin of his own motion neglected to surrender the notes or deliver the release which had been executed by the Freehold Company, but held the same in his possession until about the time of the institution of the foreclosure suit on the Union Company's mortgage, when he returned these securities to the Corbin Banking Company.

Further facts appear in the opinion.

Measrs. J. H. Watson and J. A. P. Campbell for appellants.

Mr. D. A. Scott, for appellees:

The doctrine of subrogation is broad enough to include every instance in which one party pays a debt for which another is primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter, but it is not to be applied in favor of one who has, officiously and as a mere volunteer, paid the debt of another, for which neither he nor his property was answerable; and it is not allowed where it would work any injustice to the rights of others.

Sheldon, Subrogation, § 1.

The doctrine of subrogation is, that one who has been compelled to pay a debt which ought to have been paid by another is entitled to exercise all of the remedies which the creditor possessed against that other, and to indemnify from the funds out of which should have been made the payment which he has made.

Sheldon, Subrogation, § 11.

It will not be applied to relieve a vendee from the consequences of his own wrongful act, or of the wrongful act in which he has participated, or of the wrongful act of one under whom he claims, etc.

Sheldon, Subrogation, § 44.

The mere loaning of money to a debtor to be applied by him in or towards the payment of a debt which was a lien upon his action does not itself subrogate the lender, in whole or in part, to this lien, even though it was understood between the parties to the transaction that it should have this effect, unless there was such an agreement as to operate as a conventional subrogation.

Sheldon, Subrogation, § 243; Bunn v. Lindsay, 95 Mo. 250; Wade v. Beldmeir, 40 Mo. 456; Wolff v. Walter, 56 Mo. 295; Woodbridge v. Scott, 69 Mo. 669; Price v. Courtney, 87 Mo. 337, 36 Am. Rep. 453; Sandford v. McLean, 3 Paige, 122, 23 Am. Dec. 773; Slaton v. Alcorn, 51 Miss. 72; Freem. Judgm. §§ 446, 466; Stevens v. Morse, 7 Me. 88, 20 Am. Dec. 337; Story, Eq. Jur. § 1327; Staples v. Fox, 45 Miss. 667.

A person not a party to an execution may advance money upon it and by agreement have it assigned to himself and thus kept alive; but if he pay the execution in whole or in part, without an agreement that it is not to operate as a discharge, or without taking an assignment, the execution will be pro tanto satisfied and cannot be enforced afterwards.

Morris v. Lake, 9 Smedes & M. 521, 48 Am. Dec. 724; Banks v. Evans, 10 Smedes & M. 85, 48 Am. Dec. 734; Rollins v. Thompson, 13 Smedes & M. 522.

The same principle is applied where a tax-collector pays taxes for a delinquent taxpayer. Griffing v. Pintard, 25 Miss. 175.

One who advances money to pay the debt of another in the absence of an agreement, express or implied, for subrogation would not be entitled to succeed to the rights and remedies of the creditor so paid, unless there is some obligation, interest, or right, legal or equitable, on the part of such person in respect to the matter concerning which the advance is made.

24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 281; Suppiger v. Garrels, 20 Ill. App. 625; Binsford v. Adams, 104 Ind. 41; Flannery v. Utley (Ky.) 8 S. W. 412 (1887); Re Schaller, 10 Daly, 57; Halselead v. Westerfelt, 41 N. J. Eq. 100.

A voluntary payment by a stranger of the debt due to the vendor of land, which is a charge thereon, extinguishes the debt and the lien.

Rodman v. Sanders, 44 Ark. 504; Nichol v. Dunn, 25 Ark. 129; Kline v. Ragland, 47 Ark. 111; Woodbridge v. Scott, 69 Mo. 669; Griffin v. Proctor, 14 Bush, 571; White v. Curd, 86 Ky. 191; Skinner v. Tirrell, 159 Mass. 474, 21 L. R. A. 678 (1893); Bank of United States v. Winston, 2 Brock. 252; Douglass v. Fagg, 8 Leigh, 602; Adams, Eq. 611, and note; 1 Jones, Mortg. 874 a; Holt v. Baker, 58 N. H. 276; 1 Pingrey, Mortg. § 1095.

The doctrine of subrogation will not be exercised in favor of a volunteer or stranger, who officiously intermeddles, such as a person who pays without any obligation so to do, or one who, without any interest or contract, liquidates the debt of another.

1 Pingrey, Mortg. §§ 1090, 1091, and cases cited in note 8, § 1092.

The loan of money to a debtor to discharge his obligation does not cause the lender to be subrogated to the securities which the creditor held for the enforcement of the obligation.

Riggin v. Hillard, 56 Ark. 476; Fidelity Ins. T. & S. D. Co. v. Shenandoah Valley R. Co. 86 Va. 1; Wilton v. Mayberry, 75 Wis. 191, 21 L. R. A. 61; Elina L. Ins. Co. v. Middleport, 124 U. S. 584, 81 L. ed. 537.

A party who claims the ownership of a note secured by mortgage and the subrogation of the mortgage by means of purchase, must be held to his pleadings, and be denied the right of proving his right to subrogation by some other mode.

Weil v. Enterprise Ginnery & Mfg. Co. 42 La. Ann. 492; Nicholls v. His Creditors, 9 Rob. (La.) 476; Grady v. O'Reilly, 116 Mo. 846; Opp v. Ward, 125 Ind. 241; Kline v. Ragland, 47 Ark. 111.

One loaning money to be applied to a lien on land is not thereby subrogated to the lienor's right, when the amount of the lien is so paid with the money thus furnished.

Kline v. Ragland, and Fidelity Ins. T. & S. D. Co. v. Shenandoah Valley R. Co., supra; Mosier's Appeal, 56 Pa. 76, 98 Am. Dec. 788.

The right of subrogation may be expressly waived, and the waiver may be implied from the acts of the claimant. Negligence and laches in the enforcement of a claim to subrogation will sometimes be held a waiver, especially so where such enforcement would result in injury to the rights of others.

28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 820; Cornwell's Appeal, 7 Watts & S. 805; Re Goswiler's Estate, 8 Penn. & W. 200; Gring's Appeal, 89 Pa. 336; Noble v. Turner, 69 Md. 519; Smith v. Thompson, 7 Gratt. 112, 54 Am. Dec. 128; Buffington v. Bernard, 90 Pa. 63; Forest Oil Co.'s Appeal, 118 Pa. 138.

A second mortgagee who has foreclosed and bought in the property can plead the limitation against the first mortgagee seeking to foreclose, though the mortgagor has waived his right and the first mortgage was not barred when the second was given.

Dunn v. Smith (Tex.) 28 S. W. 449; Scott v. Sloan, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 302.

Appellees were not estopped from asserting any rights in this controversy by reason of alleged acts in pais by Thomas H. Allen, Sr., and other members of that firm.

All such acts on the part of said Allen & Co., or any member of said firm, were done by them when they were in total ignorance of the facts and of their legal rights.

Turnspeed v. Hudson, 50 Miss. 429, 19 Am. Rep. 15; Kelly v. Wagner, 61 Miss. 299; Madden v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. 66 Miss. 258; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 418; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 7, 8, and notes 12; Blodgett v. Perry, 97 Mo. 263; Henshaw v. Bissell, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 255, 21 L. ed. 835; Brant v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 98 U. S. 826, 23 L. ed. 927; Stevenson v. McReary, 12 Smedes & M. 9; Den, Brinegar v. Chaffin, 8 Dev. L. 108, 32 Am. Dec. 711; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 26.

Messrs. Smith & Trezevant, also for appellees:

The rule of estoppel is never applied unless it is shown that the party to be estopped had full knowledge of the facts.

2 Pom. Eq. Jur. 809.

If the law of estoppel is to be applied anywhere in this case it is against the Union Company, for with full knowledge and after deliberating and considering advice as to the true situation, they have elected a remedy, the opposite of subrogation.

2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 810.

The Hopson decree is shown to have been paid off and canceled, and the greater part of the Freehold debt was also paid off by the rents received from Peace after he surrendered the possession to the Freehold trustee.

Therefore, if the Freehold Company, a mortgagee in possession, permitted these rents to go to Corbin, and not to their debt, they are bound nevertheless to exonerate the land from the mortgage to that extent.

1 Jones, Mortg. § 732; 2 Jones, Mortg. § 1116.

The Allens, being second mortgagees, were entitled to the benefit of the legal consequences of this possession, and could not be deprived of it, even by Peace's consent.

Ibid.

Under no sort of reasoning from the facts of this case can the rule of equitable subrogation be applied.

The Corbin Banking Company, and not the Union Company, paid off the old debts, and afterwards charged the amounts to the account of the Union Company.

Complainant, having failed to establish conventional subrogation, is therefore driven to subrogation by operation of law.

Upon this question Howell v. Bush, 54 Miss. 438, is conclusive.

This doctrine has never been applied to the case of a party who originally had a right to choose his position and avoid the difficulty in which he may become subsequently involved (Howell v. Bush, supra; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 282, note), nor against a party who has acquired intervening rights.

Being the creature of equity, it will not be enforced where it will work an injustice to the rights of those having equal equities.

24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 191, note 5; Sheldon, Subrogation, § 245.

It will be denied to one who, but for his own negligence, would not have been compelled to resort thereto, if the enforcement of such right would result in injury to others.

Moore v. Holcombe, 8 Leigh, 597; 24 Am. Dec. 683; Conner v. Welch, 51 Wis. 431; Wall v. Mason, 103 Mass. 818; Bussey v. Page, 18 Me. 459.

The Union Company is a volunteer. Prior to the alleged payment of its money to Peace, it had no interest in the property.

Sheldon, Subrogation, § 248; Downer v. Wilson, 88 Vt. 1; Woods v. Gileon, 17 Ill. 218; Wilson v. Soper, 44 Me. 118; Wolff v. Walter, 86 Mo. 293.

Subrogation only takes place in favor of a third party who has satisfied a prior mortgage, where such third party was himself a creditor at the time of the payment.

24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 282, notes; Sandford v. McLean, 3 Paige, 117, 23 Am. Dec. 773; Kitchell v. Mudgett, 87 Mich. 82; Stearns v. Godfrey, 16 Me. 158; Woolen v. Hillen, 9 Gill, 185, 52 Am. Dec. 690; Com. v. State, 32 Md. 501; Guy v. Du Uprey, 16 Cal. 195, 76 Am. Dec. 518; Dingman v. Randall, 18 Cal. 512.

Where a mortgage has been discharged and satisfaction acknowledged, and a new security taken upon the same land for the same debt, the lien of the old mortgage is gone once for all and the new security must be postponed to such encumbrances as are prior to itself, though junior to the old mortgage.

Westfall v. Hintze, 7 Abb. N. C. 236; Woolen v. Hillen, and Stearns v. Godfrey, supra; Hinchman v. Evans, 1 N. J. Eq. 100; Iowa County v. Foster, 49 Iowa, 676; Kitchell v. Mudgett, supra; Ohlids v. Stoddard, 130 Mass. 110; Belcher v. Wickersham, 9 Baxt. 119; Narr v. Ellis, 6 Johns. Ch. 396; Gardner v. Astor, 3 Johns. Ch. 55, 8 Am. Dec. 465.

Ex post facto intention will not do.

Molloy v. Harris, 1 Lea, 577; Dixon, Subrogation, p. 167; Nolle v. Their Creditors, 7 Mart. N. S. 603; Sheldon, Subrogation, § 241; Bunn v. Lindsay, 95 Mo. 250.

The party having taken one security, the reasonable inference is that he does not intend to rely on or claim another.

Pridgen v. Warn, 79 Tex. 588; Small v. Stagg, 95 Ill. 89.

Subrogation is never applied to one who could make terms for himself and choose his position and say whether he would or would not be bound.

Sheldon, Subrogation, § 240.

To these parties, the rule that the facts and circumstances at the time of the transaction must show that the parties intended to keep the securities alive for their benefit or there can be no subrogation, applies.

Howell v. Bush, 54 Miss. 438; Belcher v. Wickersham, 9 Baxt. 111; Greenlaw v. Pettit, 87 Tenn. 483.

If a party once deliberately elects his remedy he cannot come into a court of equity and ask to be allowed to make a different determination and to be restored to the right which he has once voluntarily waived.

Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 58 U. S. 17 How. 443, 15 L. ed. 123; Barker v. Elkins, 1 Johns. Ch. 465; Greene v. Darling, 5 Mason, 201.

Mr. Edward Moyes also for appellees.

Cooper, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Repeated examination of the record has failed to satisfy us that Allen & Co. agreed that the mortgage executed by Peace to the appellant was to have priority over the one he executed to them. There is much in the record suggesting that they did, but the fact is not stated to be true by any witness having personal knowledge thereof. Martin, who was a party to the negotiations, is not clear, and seems to have made contradictory statements. Peace is dead, and the Allens both testify that they thought the debt having precedence over their security was that secured by the mortgage to the Freehold Company, as to which there is no controversy in reference to their waiver. The whole correspondence between the senior member of the firm while in New York with his firm in Memphis strongly supports his testimony that, in his negotiations with attorneys in New York, he thought the attorney was the representative of the Corbin Banking Company; that that company represented the creditor; and that the Freehold Company was the creditor. Strangely enough, the fact was not mentioned during these interviews that the debt to the Freehold Company had been paid, and a new loan secured by Peace from another company, the appellant. Mr. Allen spoke of the debt as a renewal, expressed surprise that the amount had been so greatly augmented by accumulated interest, and, though always recognizing the priority of the security over that of his firm, seems to have labored under the impression, not corrected by the attorney of the appellant, that the debt was that due to the Freehold Company. We do not understand how the junior member of the firm could then have been of the same opinion, for the year before he had been approached by Martin, and requested to consent for his firm that appellant's security should have precedence, and had declined, stating that if the Corbin Banking Company, in preparing the papers, had made a slip, by reason of which his firm had secured an advantage, it would not be waived. But it does appear that he, in all the correspondence with his father, recognized the priority of right of the claim asserted by the attorney with whom his father was negotiating, and we cannot understand why he should do so if at the time he remembered or recalled the fact that, by reason of mistake in preparing the new securities, his firm had secured priority. So, too, the recitals in the new security taken by Allen & Co., while suggestive of a distinct recognition of the mortgage to appellants, is not, in our opinion, so nearly conclusive as counsel for appellants contend. As originally written, it referred to a prior mortgage to the Freehold Company, which fact strongly supports the contention of the Allens that they were referring to the old mortgage. The name of the Freehold Company was, upon the suggestion of Peace, stricken out; and appellants contend, and with force, that this was for the purpose of recognizing the priority of the new mortgage. But the Allens reply that the change was not made for such purpose, but because Peace told them the name as written was not the full name of the creditor company, the company making the original loan, as they understood, and that the change was made, not to recognize the superior right of a new party, but to correctly name the old creditor; and in this the Allens find support in the fact that a part of this recital refers to the mortgage as "now of record," which the mortgage to the Freehold Company was, and which that to appellants was not. Considering the sums involved, the business seems to have been very loosely transacted. We cannot say, on the whole evidence, that the parties on one side were not referring to one thing, and those on the other to another, and so their minds never met. We can see no other explanation which does not impute perjury to some one, and in that view the testimony may be reasonably harmonized. We therefore are of opinion that no contract of waiver is established against Allen & Co., either in fact or by estoppel. But it is entirely certain that appellants or their representative understood from Peace that Allen & Co. had agreed to waive their priority in favor of the new mortgage to be given by him to secure them in the large loan they were to make. Peace's application for the loan states that the property to be mortgaged was unencumbered. The Freehold mortgage, for the payment of which a larger part of the money was desired, was unquestionably superior to that of Allen & Co., and there is nothing to suggest the improbable purpose of the lender to pay off the first mortgage, let in the second, and itself accept a third. Peace unquestionably agreed to give to the appellants similar security to that held by the Freehold Company; i. e. a first mortgage on the property. It is true that he did not agree to give the identical security,—the old mortgage, kept alive for the benefit of the new lender,—but the very essence of his agreement was to give a mortgage which should primarily bind the property. This, on the developed facts, he has failed to do.

The first question presented is whether, as between Peace and the appellants, the case made would entitle the appellants to relief by 30 L. R. A.

the remedy of subrogation. If this be answered in the affirmative, the next inquiry will be whether, by reason of the intervening rights of third persons (Allen & Co.), this relief should be denied. Cases may undoubtedly be found which would deny subrogation under the circumstances, even as between the appellants and Peace. Our dissenting brother will collect them in his opinion. They are cited in the briefs of appellees' counsel, and need not be here again set down. But there are other cases holding a different view, and we think with better reason. The principle of equitable subrogation does not arise from contract (for that is conventional subrogation), but is a creation of the court of equity, and is applied in the absence of an agreement between the parties, where otherwise there would be a manifest failure of justice. It is never enforced for the protection of mere strangers and intermeddlers in the affairs of others, nor can it be invoked to override and displace the real contract of the parties; that is, where the security contracted for is in fact given but its legal effect is not that expected, as in Howell v. Bush, 54 Miss. 437, equitable subrogation is in some of its characteristics nearly related to the principle of equitable estoppel, and may in a sense be called the acting and moving, while equitable estoppel is the obstructive, member of the same family.

The objections made by counsel for the appellees, (1) that appellants were strangers to the property, and therefore cannot invoke the rule of subrogation; and (2) that, since it was agreed that the securities to which subrogation is now sought should be paid off and discharged, there is nothing to which appellants can be subrogated,—are answered by many authorities.

1. One who, at the instance of the debtor, advances money to be used by the debtor in the payment of a prior security, is not a stranger or intermeddler in his affairs. Sheldon, Subrogation, § 247; Willon v. Mayberry, 75 Wis. 191, 6 L. R. A. 61; Emmert v. Thompson, 49 Minn. 386; Johnson v. Barrett, 117 Ind. 551; Gilbert v. Gilbert, 89 Iowa, 657; 8 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1212.

2. The fact that the mortgage was paid and intended to be paid is immaterial. Equity will consider it as yet alive so long as the rights of parties require. Walker v. King, 45 Vt. 525; Cobb v. Dyer, 69 Me. 494; Wheeler v. Willard, 44 Vt. 640; Barnes v. Mott, 64 N. Y. 397, 21 Am. Rep. 625; Texas Land & L. Co. v. Blalock, 76 Tex. 85; Crippen v. Chap-pel, 85 Kan. 495, 57 Am. Rep. 187; Cansler v. Sallis, 54 Miss. 446.

In Whitecell v. Texas Loan Agency (Tex.) 27 S. W. 818, precisely the same questions here presented were decided. We have not had access to the report, but doubt not the quotations of counsel from the opinion are correct. The present case is, as to the matters hereinbefore referred to, fully covered by the decision of this court at the April term, 1894, in the case of McMullen v. Investment Co. in which no opinion was written. That case and Cansler v. Sallis, 54 Miss. 446, are decisive, also, that since Allen & Co. are, by applying the principles of subrogation, placed in no worse attitude than they originally were, the fact that they have a mortgage upon the same property cannot defeat the right of subrogation invoked by the appellants. The fact that the debts protected by the securities to which subrogation is sought are now barred by limitation cannot avail. Peace's representative will not in equity be permitted to invoke the statute of limitations to defeat the security to which subrogation is sought. The fraud of Peace in representing that the property was unencumbered, and of accepting from the appellants the large sum of money they advanced on the faith of his representations, would preclude him, if alive, from invoking the lapse of time as a bar to the remedy by which the injury he has sought to inflict can be avoided. He would be estopped to interpose the defense, and his representative, who stands in his shoes, is bound by the same rule. Staton v. Bryant, 55 Miss. 261; Barnett v. Nichols, 56 Miss. 622; Kelly v. Wagner, 61 Miss. 299.

We see nothing inconsistent in the conduct of appellants in claiming under the mortgage executed by Peace, selling thereunder, entering into possession of the land, and attempting to defend their title thus acquired, and, falling in that aspect of the cause, invoking the right of subrogation to the securities the money they loaned has paid. They had reason to believe from the interviews with Mr. Allen that his firm recognized the priority of its security. Indeed, it appears that no other idea was entertained by Allen & Co., until long after the appellants had caused the mortgage they held to be executed, and after they had foreclosed their own mortgage, to which proceedings the appellants were not made parties, because it was then thought that they were the senioren encumbrancers, and therefore not necessary parties to the suit. The status quo ante the cancellation of the securities should be restored; the appellants held to account as mortgagees in possession of the land, entitled to charge against it all prior encumbrances discharged by the money they loaned.

The decree is reversed, and cause remanded, to be proceeded with in accordance with this opinion.

Whitfield, J., dissenting:

I dissent from the judgment of the court.

First. The case, as to subrogation, may be condensed thus: Peace, the common debtor of the Freehold Company, and Allen & Co., owed the former, say, $26,000, and the latter $25,000; the Freehold Company having the senior, and Allen & Co. the junior, mortgage. Peace wanted more money to pay off the Freehold Company, and to farm on. He applied to the Union Company, through its agent, the Corbin Banking Company, for a loan of $38,000; the Corbin Banking Company intentionally and fraudulently keeping off the application the Freehold mortgage and all the Allen & Co. mortgages, and the Corbin Banking Company being the agent of the Union Company. The Union Company, through its said agent, and Dr. Peace, agreed expressly that the Freehold Company's mortgage should be paid off, satisfied, and forever extinguished,—not kept alive. It was so paid off. The said mortgage was actually sent by the Corbin Banking Company, from New York, to Martin, at Memphis, to be delivered up to Peace, and, in the eye of the law, was as effectually in his hands as if actually delivered. Allen & Co. were entirely ignorant of all this; never knew or supposed there was any new creditor, but understood that the Freehold Company's debt was being renewed and continued. The Freehold Company's debt being thus paid off and satisfied by express agreement of the Union Company, through its agent, the Corbin Banking Company, and Peace, and in exact accordance with their actual intention, the Allen & Co. trust deed stood first, in legal priority; Allen & Co. having had nothing whatever to do with the dealings between Peace and the Union Company. My brethren do not differ from me as to Allen & Co.'s not knowing. They are driven from the ground of estoppel by the clear shining of manifest truth from the face of this record. The reason why the Corbin Company did, as the agent of the Union Company, so agree that the Freehold Company's mortgage should be paid and satisfied and not kept alive, is obvious. That company wanted to shift a bad debt from its shoulders to those of its principal, and secure, besides, to itself, the $8,000 it was already out in the purchase of the Hopeon claim, and $3,700 it charged as commissions for negotiating—as it puts it—the loan of $38,000; and it purposely concealed from its principal the fact of the existence of the Freehold mortgage, by paying it, and discharging it, and sending it accordingly to Martin, to be delivered to Peace. The Union Company, through its agent, the Corbin Banking Company, finding out that Allen & Co. stood upon their legal rights (the Union Company's mortgage not having been executed for some months after the payment of the Freehold mortgage and the execution and recording of the Allen & Co. mortgage), that company asks this court not to apply the principles of subrogation to the facts as they were at the time of these occurrences,—not to the real case as thus made by the actual agreement and intent of the parties at the time,—but to a state of facts which it alleges, but signally fails to prove; to a case conjured up to suit the desperate exigency of its genuine situation. In short, it is an effort to work out subrogation by ex post facto intention,—precisely that; nothing more, nothing else. I have not so learned the law of subrogation. So to hold on the facts of this record is plainly to hold that in no case (where intervening rights do not appear), under any circumstances, where a prior mortgage is paid off by a new lender, can a junior mortgagee maintain his accruing legal priority; but that in all cases payment, and payment merely, payment only, payment without any qualification, entitles the lender to subrogation. This may be something else, it is not the creature of equity known as "subrogation." Sheldon, Subrogation, 2d ed. p. 364. §§ 240, 241, notes 8, 9; Id. p. 371, § 247, note 8, with the authorities therein cited; especially Gardenville Permanent Loan Ass. v

Walker, 52 Md. 452. I refer especially, also, to Hewell v. Bush, 54 Miss. 437, within the principle of which case this case, in my judgment, falls precisely. With all deference, I think the opinion of the court overrules that case. It is impossible for me to distinguish it in principle from the case at bar, and, in my judgment, it is controlling and decisive here.

But, secondly, the Union Company elected its remedy. It repudiated the "Freehold" mortgage as a basis of its claim. It allowed it actually, as to Peace, to run past maturity, perhaps the full statutory time, without selling under it. It did sue under its own mortgage; bought under it; is in possession under it, and is sued in ejectment as so in possession. It is estopped now to change its election.

GEORGIA SUPREME COURT.

Joseph MARIL, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CONNECTICUT FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

(55 Ga. 804.)

- *1. Under a policy of insurance which covers a stock of material used in a particular business, and which contains a printed condition prohibiting the keeping and use of certain inflammable substances upon the premises in which such business is conducted, a recovery may be had in case of loss, even though it should appear that such inflammable substances were in fact kept and used upon the premises, provided it shall further appear that the business in the conduct of which the stock of material insured was used is of such a character as that the use of such inflammable substances is a necessary, usual, and customary incident to said business, and that such substances were kept only in such quantities, and used only in such manner, as, in view of the subject of the insurance, must have been in contemplation of the parties at the time the policy was issued.
2. If the business in question be of such a character as that some of the inflammable substances against the keeping of which provision is made in the printed conditions of the policy themselves constitute component parts of the stock of material used in such business, the policy would cover such inflammable substances, and a recovery could be had for loss thereof, notwithstanding the printed condition against the keeping of such inflammable substances.
3. If in the stating clause of a policy of insurance the thing insured be described in general terms as a stock of "watchmaker's materials," and there be nothing in the policy itself indicating with exactness what articles were embraced in and intended to be covered by such general terms, parol evidence is admissible to explain the ambiguity, and to apply the policy to the subject of the insurance.

(February 18, 1893.)

ERROR to the City Court of Savannah to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on a policy of fire insurance. Reversed.

*Headnotes by ATKINSON, J.

NOTE.—See also Faust v. American F. Ins. Co. (Wis.) ante, 783.

30 L. R. A.

The official report sent up with the case for the consideration of the supreme court was as follows:

The policy was written upon "watches, jewelry, diamonds, silver and plated ware, clocks, musical instruments, fancy goods, bric-a-brac, and other merchandise usual to a jewelry stock in and out of safes," and "watchmaker's material; all while contained in the three-story brick, metal-roofed building situated at number 24 Barnard street, in Savannah, Ga." The policy on its face provides that it shall be void "if the risk be increased by any means within the control of the assured, or if . . . benzine, gasoline, petroleum, or crude earth or coal oils are kept or used on the premises without written consent." There is this further clause in the policy: "Kerosene oil, if of the legal standard, may be used for lights; lamps to be filled by daylight only. One barrel may be kept on the premises for this purpose, and may also be kept for sale in stores, in quantities not exceeding five barrels at any one time. If kept in greater quantities, without written consent, this policy shall be void."

The plaintiff's testimony was: "On the 7th day of June, 1892, a fire occurred on the premises covered by this policy. The value of my stock was at that time $9,200. I was engaged in the jewelry business. Four thousand five hundred dollars of this stock was in my safe. An appraisal was made on the stock, which appraisal placed the damage at $3,440. I have never been paid that amount, or any part of it. The loss on my stock by the fire was $3,440. I am twenty-six years old. I have been in Savannah ten years in November next. I was born in Russia. Lived there until I was fourteen years old, when I went to New York, where I lived two years; since which time I have lived in Savannah. The fire occurred between three and four o'clock in the morning, and started on the north side of the store. Mr. Sack, my watchmaker, had the key to the shop. He did my repairing in consideration of which I allowed him bench room. I do not know the cause of the fire, and have no idea what caused it. It looked as if the fire started under the counter. There was paper there. The fixtures were burned up. They were a total loss. A good deal of the stock could not be used. The fixtures were of wood. The walls and sides were badly charred. I do not know whether it looked like a flash fire or not, and to this day I have no theory as to how the fire started. The store was lighted by gas. I never kept kerosene oil or benzine or naphtha for sale. None of these belong to a jewelry stock. I had a demijohn, with kerosene oil in it. I do not know how big it was. It may have been a three-gallon demijohn, but my opinion is that it was not less than two nor more than three. Six or eight weeks before the fire, I bought the kerosene. I cannot tell the exact date. The kerosene in this demijohn was bought and used for the purpose of cleaning clocks. I never used it myself. I am not a watchmaker. I had it there for that purpose. I am positive it was used for cleaning clock movements, and maybe, if the movements were rusty, it was used for watches too. It was my oil, but Mr. Sack used it. I saw him use it for cleaning clock movements. After he would use it, he would pour it back in the demijohn. I looked at the demijohn the morning after the fire. I testified at the former trial that it looked as if this demijohn had as much kerosene in it after the fire as it had before the fire. There must have been two quarts or a half gallon, in it. I do not know how much was in it before the fire. I presume there was the same amount in it after the fire as there was before. After the fire I did not see any cork. I swore on the last trial that it was uncorked, and my memory was fresher then than it is now. I was probably right then. The demijohn was sitting on a shelf in the rear of the store, on the south side. It was in a safe place. It had been sitting there for three months, and had never fallen off. That was the place we always kept it. On this occasion there was one lamp that had oil in it, that I know of. That was a student lamp Mr. Sack used. It was on the bench, and fell off, I presume. Kerosene was used in it. Then there was a piano lamp. It was one that I had sold, and it was brought back. It had some oil in it. It was a large lamp I presume which would hold a quart. It was not nearly half full, but there was some kerosene in it. There was about a pint or a little more of benzine on hand. It was in a bottle that might hold a quart. I saw one can of oil on hand. There were two cans there. One had very little in it, and the other was about full. I had no turpentine there. On the morning after the fire the insurance gentlemen and the firemen showed me some paper, which they said was saturated with turpentine. I do not know whether it was or not. I do not know whether the paper was wet with kerosene or benzine. Maybe it was water. Maybe there was some kerosene on the paper. I do not know. I do not know how kerosene got there if it was there. Maybe I said at the time that I did not know how it got there. On January 1, 1892, in making my tax returns, I swore that the market value of my stock was $1,000. Mr. Sack used the student lamp on his bench for night work. The benzine and kerosene that were there were used for cleaning purposes, cleaning the movements of clocks and watches. Benzine is used for cleaning watches. The amount of kerosene purchased was ten cents' worth. The benzine was kept near Mr. Sack's bench. I had nothing whatever to do with it. It was kept in a glass bottle. The benzine had nothing whatever to do with the fire as far as I could see. The kerosene can that was full, or nearly full, would hold about two or three quarts. That kerosene was used by Mr. Sack, and was kept near Mr. Sack's bench, on his side. He used it to put in his lamp. Maybe he used it for cleaning purposes, too. The fire did not start near that can of kerosene. The other kerosene can was one that Mr. Sack said leaked, and we did not use it much. If there was kerosene on the paper there, I presume that the lamp must have turned over, and some kerosene reached the paper. The piano lamp was turned over. At the time I made my tax return I owed about $5,000. I did not think that I should pay taxes on my debts. My idea was to deduct the amount of purchase money, and the balance represented what was liable for taxes. I counted that $9,200 less $5,000 would make $1,800. I simply owed the money, but owned the stock. The lamp that was upset was on the same side the paper was lying, on the north side. The paper was not right at the lamp. The oil might have spread there. The paper was under the shelving and the lamp was on the other side of the shelving. I do not know what quality of kerosene was in the demijohn. I just sent out and got ten cents' worth of kerosene. This oil was in the demijohn. I got it for cleaning purposes. The can which Mr. Sack used for his lamp maybe was a gallon can."

Defendant moved for a nonsuit. Plaintiff offered to testify that at the time the insurance was effected he was carrying on a jewelry business, selling and repairing watches and clocks; that he intended to continue such business, and this fact was known to defendant; that in this business, and as a part of the watchmaker's materials, and as incidental, necessary, usual, customary, and naturally pertaining to the stock and business, the kerosene and benzine were used in small and reasonable quantities for such business in cleaning the works of watches and clocks, the kerosene being used in part in the student's lamp; and that said kerosene and benzine did not cause the fire, nor contribute to it, and were not even consumed, in whole or in part, by the fire. The court refused to admit this testimony, and granted the nonsuit.

Messrs. Garrard, Meldrim, & Newman for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Denmark & Adams for defendant in error.

Atkinson, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

With the addition that evidence was introduced, showing that proofs of loss were submitted to the defendant company within the time prescribed, and a demand for payment made in writing; that the demand was never complied with; that suit was brought within the time limited by the policy; and proof made that from $300 to $350 would be a proper allowance for counsel fees for the prosecution of this litigation,—the facts as stated in the official report are sufficiently full for the determination of the questions made in this record. It will be seen from an examination of the official report, as amended, supra, that the plaintiff proved his loss, the submission of proofs of loss, a demand for payment in accordance with the terms of the policy sued on, and the value of counsel fees, and closed. A motion for nonsuit was made,—upon what special ground does not appear in the record,—but we may presume from the line of argument pursued here, and the fact that the plaintiff made such a case as would undoubtedly have authorized a finding for him, that the motion for nonsuit was predicated upon the ground that the plaintiff had rendered void his policy of insurance by keeping and using upon the premises occupied by him benzine and kerosene contrary to the conditions of his policy of insurance, which prohibited the same. The evidence showed that in his store the assured kept a small quantity each of kerosene and benzine,—of the former all told, including that in lamps, about one gallon; of the latter about one pint or a little more. None of either was destroyed by fire. After the court had signified its intention to grant a nonsuit, but before the order to that effect had been taken, the plaintiff offered to prove, in addition to the evidence already submitted, that at the time the insurance was effected he was carrying on a jewelry business, selling and repairing watches and clocks; that he intended to continue such business, and this fact was known to the defendant; that in the conduct of this business, and as a part of a watchmaker's material, and as incidental, usual, customary, and naturally pertaining to the stock and business, kerosene and benzine were used in small and reasonable quantities in cleaning the works of watches and clocks, the kerosene being used in part in a student's lamp (kept in the store); and that said benzine and kerosene did not cause the fire, nor contribute to it, and were not even consumed, in whole or in part, by the fire. This testimony was repelled by the court as being inconsistent with the contract as expressed in the policy, whereupon the court granted a nonsuit, and to this judgment exception is taken.

We are not now to consider whether, in view of the very trifling and inconsiderable quantities in which the prohibited inflammable substances were used and kept, and the fact that they were so kept as not materially to have affected the risk of the insurer, or in any manner to have contributed to the loss, the court would, in the first instance, have been authorized to grant a nonsuit; but whether, with the supplemental evidence offered, it should have done so. The first question to consider is whether the testimony offered was competent. The contract of insurance was in writing, and the rule of law is that parol evidence is inadmissible to add to, take from, or vary the terms of an unambiguous written contract; and the kindred rule to this is that, if the written agreement appears from its terms to be so ambiguous as not fully to express the contract between the parties, parol evidence is admissible to explain such ambiguity. If the written agreement is full, explicit, and unambiguous, it must be taken as conclusively representing the real contract between the parties, and neither will be permitted by parol to in any manner vary its terms. If for want of fullness of statement, the contract be indefinite or uncertain, parol evidence is admissible, not to vary, add to, or take from the contract, but to explain and so illuminate it as to make the real intention of the parties apparent. It will be seen by an examination of its provisions that the policy of insurance covers a number of articles specifically, including watches, diamonds, clocks, etc., and finally by the use of the words "watchmaker's materials," such articles as would be comprehended within that general descriptive term. In order to determine what was covered, or by the parties intended to be covered, by that general term, it is necessary to inquire somewhere what it means. No index to its meaning is afforded by any other expression contained in the policy. There is nothing in that instrument to indicate what the parties intended should be its meaning. It is therefore an expression which must be classed as ambiguous, and, being ambiguous, parol evidence is admissible to explain its meaning. The plaintiff offered to prove that both kerosene and benzine in reasonable quantities were used in his business as a part of a watchmaker's material, and that their use as such was necessary, customary, and usual in the conduct of such business; that he was engaged in the conduct of this business at the time this insurance was effected, and that the defendant knew such to be the fact. Had he proven these facts to the satisfaction of the jury then he would have shown that the very articles for the keeping and use of which he was nonsuited were in fact themselves made, by the terms of his policy, the subject of the insurance; and the jury would have been authorized to find that the policy was written with reference to the continuance of such a business. If they were a part of a watchmaker's material, they were as much covered by the policy of insurance as the springs, hands, dials, tools, glasses, or any other articles used by a watchmaker in the conduct of his business. If, then, by the staling clause of the policy itself, an article were insured, it surely could not be seriously insisted that the policy would be avoided because of the printed conditions thereafter appearing, to the effect that the keeping and use of the very article insured in the manner contemplated by the parties should render the policy void. One of the elementary rules for the construction of policies of insurance is, that if there be a conflict between the written statement of the subject of insurance and the printed conditions of the policy, the former must prevail. A contrary doctrine would present the strange anomaly of an insurance company issuing to another a policy of insurance containing such conditions, as that, under no circumstances could payment of a loss be thereunder legally demanded. A rule which permitted the printed conditions to control the written statement of the subject upon which the insurance was issued, would place the insurance company in the peculiar condition of saying, in effect: "I issue you this policy. I accept your money in satisfaction of my demand for premiums. I insure your property to be used in your business, but if you use it your policy is void." A parallel case, and one which alone adequately expresses the peculiar paradox in the case supposed, is to be found in the sage advice given to her youthful daughter when an affectionate but overcautious mother, in reply to the simple request:

"Mamma, may I go out to swim?"

—said to her:

"Yes, my darling daughter;
Hang your clothes on a hickory limb,
But don't go near the water."

Even if the inflammable substances, the keeping and use of which it is claimed avoided the policy of insurance, were not of themselves a subject of the insurance, yet, if the articles were employed by the assured in the conduct of the particular business, and the use of such article is a necessary incident to the conduct of such a business, the parties will be presumed to have contracted with reference thereto, and at the time the insurance policy was issued the insurer will be presumed to have had in contemplation the use of such substances by the assured when he assumed the risk; and, under such circumstances, will be presumed to have waived the condition under which the use of such substance would render the policy void. For instance, if he insured a powder manufactory, he must have contracted with reference to the use of combustible materials necessary to be employed in its manufacture. Thus, where a policy covered property described as a "stock such as is usually kept in a general retail store," and the keeping of gunpowder was prohibited by the printed portions of the policy, it was held that, if gunpowder formed a part of the general stock usually kept in a retail store, then the keeping of the powder was not a violation of the conditions of the policy. Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Hall, 12 Mich. 202. So, if the insurance be upon a printing establishment, and the keeping or use of camphene was prohibited, as the policy covered a printer's stock and materials, and it was shown that camphene was necessary to clean the type, and was usually employed by printers for that purpose, the prohibition was held not to apply. Harper v. New York City Ins. Co. 23 N. Y. 441. So, also, the use of kerosene was prohibited, but, as the policy covered a photographer's stock, materials, etc., and it being shown that kerosene was usually employed in the business for heating paper and other purposes, it was held that the prohibition did not apply, even though gas could have been used equally as effectually for that purpose. Hall v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 58 N. Y. 292, 17 Am. Rep. 255.

Those cited are a few of the many cases illustrating the principle which we here announce. We have seen that parol evidence was admissible to explain the meaning of the term "watchmaker's materials," as employed in the policy, and therefore the court erred in repelling the testimony offered by the plaintiff to the effect that benzine and kerosene in the quantities in which he kept and used them, were necessary to be used in the conduct of that business; and the testimony so excluded, coupled with such testimony as was already introduced, makes such a case as that, whether we treat the kerosene and benzine in question as included among those articles insured under the general term "watchmaker's materials," or whether we treat them as simply inflammable substances used in connection with and as a part of the business in which the assured was engaged, the property employed by him in which business was covered by this insurance, — in either event the jury would have been warranted in finding in his favor against the company. We therefore conclude that the court erred in granting a nonsuit, and the judgment is accordingly reversed.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT.

SUPREME LODGE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS, Plff. in Err., v.

Ernestine LA MALTA et al.

(35 Tenn. 187.)

1. The holder of a benefit certificate who agrees to be bound by all laws of the order "now in force or that may hereafter be enacted" will be subject to a subsequent rule regularly passed destroying liability on certificates in case of the suicide of their holders.

2. The adoption, certification, promulgation, and printing as one full and complete instrument, of a constitution by the proper body of a benefit society, will cause that instrument to annul and supersede all portions of former constitutions which are not embodied in it.

3. Power given by the supreme lodge of a benefit association to the board of control of the endowment rank to have "entire charge and full control" of such rank does not authorize the board to enact laws.

4. The supreme lodge of a benefit society cannot delegate to a board of control its power to enact general laws affecting the whole endowment rank of the order, without express authority in the charter.

(June 15, 1895.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Shelby County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to enforce defendant's liability on a benefit certificate which had been issued to Frederick Schuman, deceased. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frank P. Poston for plaintiff in error.

NOTE.—As to some of the questions in the above case, it is said to be one of first impression. Considering the growth of great organizations similar to that involved in this case, their constitutional law 80 L. R. A.

must be regarded as important. For somewhat similar questions in case of religious bodies, see Krecker v. Shirey (Pa.) 20 L. R. A. 478.

Messrs. Smith & Tresevant, for defendants in error:

The charter of a corporation, or incorporated society of any sort, is the fundamental law; and by laws not made in accordance with it are void.

1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 494; 1 Bacon, Ben. Soc. §§ 48, 71, 72, 91; Niblack, Ben. Soc. pp. 41, 210; Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Asso. 2 Coldw. 418.

The charter does not confer on the supreme lodge the right to confer the lawmaking power on the board of control of the endowment rank.

1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 145, 534 et seq.; Niblack, Ben. Soc. pp. 11, 60, 61, 254, 255.

It was not intended to reserve to the association the power to change or avoid its contracts, or lessen its responsibilities. This is not the proper office of the by-law; and from the stipulation it cannot be presumed that it was intended to apply to any by-law other than such as it was in the competency of the association to make.

Niblack, Ben. Soc. § 25, pp. 58, 59; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 491-501; Ang. & A. Corp. last ed. chap. 10; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 178, notes.

If the board of control had the power to make this amendment, it had no power to make it retroactive.

Sedgw. Stat. & Const. L. pp. 407, 408; Horne v. Memphis & O. R. Co. 1 Coldw. 72; Hannum v. Bank of Tennessee, Id. 398; Collins v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 9 Heisk. 841; Gap & C. R. Co. v. Murrell, 11 Heisk. 715; Niblack, Ben. Soc. pp. 61-65.

A by-law which violates the obligation of a contract is invalid.

1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 496; People v. Fire Dept. of Detroit, 81 Mich. 458; Ang. & A. Corp. 11th ed. §§ 382, 383; Niblack, Ben. Soc. pp. 41, 126.

The certificate being silent as to suicide, the insurer was bound to pay, even though the insured commit suicide.

Phadenhauer v. Germania L. Ins. Co. 7 Heisk. 567, 19 Am. Rep. 628; Niblack, Ben. Soc. p. 305.

The remedy or means of enforcing a contract is a part of that "obligation" of a contract which the Constitution protects against being impaired by any law passed by the state.

Walker v. Whitehead, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 814, 31 L. ed. 857; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Pounds, 11 Lea, 127; Sedgw. Stat. & Const. L. p. 188; Hannum v. Bank of Tennessee, 1 Coldw. 399.

These orders have been all the while attempting to take these certificates out of the rules of life insurance; but the courts have been all along inclined to treat them as other life policies.

Weil v. Trafford, 3 Tenn. Ch. 108; Tennessee Lodge v. Ladd, 5 Lea, 716; Cent. L. J. Aug. 4, 1893.

Caldwell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 14th day of May, 1889, the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias of the World issued to Frederick Schuman, of Memphis, Tenn., a "Certificate of Membership" in the 30 L. R. A.

endowment rank of that order, whereby it bound itself to pay to his children, Lotta S. and Frederick E. Schuman, the sum of $3,000 upon his death in good standing. The children so named as beneficiaries died on the 30th of January, 1893, and Schuman himself died the next day. By the terms of the certificate and the laws of the order, all interest of the children ceased and determined upon and in consequence of their death in the father's lifetime, and upon his death without having nominated some other beneficiary all rights under the certificate passed to his next of kin and legatees under his will. Upon refusal to pay, Frederick Schuman's executrix and next of kin brought this suit in the circuit court of Shelby county to recover from the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias the full sum named in the certificate. Verdict was returned and judgment pronounced in favor of the plaintiffs, and the defendant appealed in error. The only real defense made in the court below was that Schuman, the assured, took his own life, and thereby, under the laws of the order, forfeited and annulled his certificate of membership, and absolved the defendant from all obligations to pay the same; and the rulings of the trial judge, in his charge as given, and in his refusal to instruct the jury as requested, upon the question of suicide, are in this court assigned as error.

It was admitted on the trial in the court below "that on the morning of the 30th of January, 1893, the two children of Fred Schuman were found in bed with him, dead, and that he was then insensible, and died on the 31st of January, 1893, and that his death and that of his children was caused by opium, or morphine, given by him to the children and taken by himself." It was also admitted that "Fred Schuman was much attached to these children and treated them very tenderly," that he died in good standing, and that payment of his certificate was refused alone upon the ground that he committed suicide."

The order of Knights of Pythias is not a regular life insurance company; but it is a benevolent association, with life insurance as one feature, to be enjoyed or not by each particular member at his own election, and upon certain terms and conditions. The laws of this order, as of other benevolent associations, when applicable and not in conflict with Federal and state laws, or contrary to public policy, are to be taken as parts of its contracts with its members, and as such are of great moment in the determination and enforcement of their respective rights and obligations under those contracts. Bacon, Ben. Soc. §§ 161, 185; Tennessee Lodge v. Ladd, 5 Lea, 720, 721; Catholic Knights of America v. Kuhn, 91 Tenn. 216. At the time Schuman applied for and obtained the certificate in suit, the order of Knights of Pythias had no law against suicide, but the defendant insists that such a law was enacted before his death, and that it became binding upon him at once, and upon those who should claim under him. His written application for membership in the endowment rank contains this statement: "I hereby agree to conform to and obey the laws, rules, and regulations of the order governing this rank, now in force or that may hereafter be enacted, or submit to the penalties therein contained," and the certificate of membership recites upon its face that the consideration upon which it is issued is, among other things, "the full compliance," by Schuman, "with all the laws governing this rank, now in force or that may hereafter be enacted." These stipulations in the application and certificate were binding upon Schuman while he lived, and they are equally binding upon the plaintiffs since his death, and in consequence thereof the anti-suicide law, relied upon as a defense to this action, though enacted subsequent to the filing of the application and issuance of the certificate, became operative against him and them from the time it was passed, provided, only, that its passage was accomplished in such a manner as to make it a valid law of the order. Supreme Commandery K. of G. R. v. Ainsworth, 71 Ala. 486, 46 Am. Rep. 832. The law in question was passed by the Board of Control of the Endowment Rank, Knights of Pythias, in regular quarterly session, on the 12th and 18th of January, 1898, as an amendment to article 6, section 1 of the general laws of said rank, and it is as follows: "If the death of any member of the endowment rank heretofore admitted into the first, second, third, or fourth classes, or hereafter admitted, shall result from self-destruction, either voluntary or involuntary, whether such member shall be sane or insane at the time, or if such death shall be caused or superinduced by the use of intoxicating liquors, narcotics, or opiates, or in consequence of a duel, or at the hands of justice, or in violation or attempted violation of any criminal law, then in such case the certificate issued to such member, and all claims against said endowment rank on account of such membership, shall be forfeited."

Had the board of control legal authority and power to pass such a law? His honor, the trial judge, instructed the jury in effect that it had not, and that, for that reason, the supposed law was invalid, and without force or virtue in this case, and, entertaining that opinion, he also refused to instruct the jury, upon the request of the defendant, that such law was operative against the plaintiffs, and, upon the admitted facts, a complete answer and bar to their action. Undoubtedly, such a provision against self-destruction is reasonable, and, being so, it is, as previously stated herein, binding upon Schuman and upon those claiming under him, if validly enacted. The fact that its enactment was subsequent to the date of his certificate is rendered unimportant by the stipulations in the application and in the certificate itself, whereby he bound himself irrevocably to full obedience and submission to all legislation, then in existence or thereafter enacted for the government of the endowment rank, of which he was becoming a member. Those stipulations, however, though in the broadest terms, must be construed as relating to and embracing only such laws as the order had the legal right to make, and as it should make in a legal and binding form.

The Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias of the World was incorporated, under an act of the Congress of the United States, on the 5th day of August, 1870. As then existing, the fundamental and general laws of the order contemplated one supreme lodge for all its membership in the world, one grand lodge for each state and territory of the Union, etc., and subordinate lodges for different towns and cities in those states, etc. All the powers of grand and subordinate lodges emanated from the supreme lodge. The grades of membership or of advancement in the subordinate lodges are three in number, called "Ranks;" and a member of the first rank is designated as a "Page," of the second rank as an "Esquire," and of the third rank as a "Knight." Representatives from all the subordinate lodges of any given state or territory compose the grand lodge of that particular jurisdiction, and representatives from all the grand lodges make up the membership of the supreme lodge. By the ninth and last section of its charter, obtained in 1870, the supreme lodge was granted ample "power to alter and amend its constitution and by-laws at will." Through an amendatory act of incorporation, obtained October 5, 1875, the charter of 1870 was changed in many particulars. One change was the complete annulment of section 5, and another was the appropriate substitution and diminution of the numbers of all succeeding sections until section 9 of the charter of 1870 became section 8 of the amended charter of 1875. The other amendments have no relation to the subject now under consideration, and hence will not be stated. On the 24th day of May, 1883, the charter of 1875 was amended, and among the changes made was the addition of a new section, at the end, as follows: "9. That the said supreme lodge shall have power to establish the Uniform Rank and the Endowment Rank upon such terms and conditions, and governed by such rules and regulations, as to the said supreme lodge may seem proper." This last amendment of its fundamental law undoubtedly conferred upon the supreme lodge plenary power to establish, maintain, and control the endowment rank (which was, in fact, established several years prior to 1883); and if, in the exercise of that power, that body had enacted the law invoked by the defendant in this case, there could be no serious question as to its validity. But the truth is that only the board of control, and not the supreme lodge, passed that law. Had that board the requisite legal power for the enactment of such a law?

At its regular biennial session in April, 1884, the supreme lodge enacted a code of "General Laws" and adopted a "Constitution for the Government of Sections of the Endowment Rank." The endowment rank was not intended to be, and under the power granted to the supreme lodge could not have been, established as a separate organization, with full power to make its own laws. "Sections" of the endowment rank are intimately related to and connected with subordinate lodges. Only members of subordinate lodges, having obtained the rank of knight, and continuing in good standing as such, can have and maintain membership in sections of the endowment rank. The establishment of the endowment rank only introduced into the order of Knights of Pythias a means of mutual insurance among knights desiring such a benefit and willing to bear the additional burdens thereof. Knights are not all members of the endowment rank, but all members of endowment rank must be knights. By article 6 of the general laws enacted by the supreme lodge in 1884 for the endowment rank, a "Board of Control" was created, with general powers of supervision of the business of that rank; and by article 7 of those laws, as well as by article 15 of the constitution adopted at the same time, the supreme lodge expressly reserved to itself full power of alteration and amendment of those laws and of that constitution, at any regular session. Amendments of both were made in 1886, and again in 1888. The constitution, as amended in the latter year, was very lengthy and consisted of sixteen articles. Article 8 comprised 19 sections, relating especially to the board of control, its composition, and powers. Section 5 is in these words: "The board shall have entire charge and full control of the endowment rank subject to such restrictions as the supreme lodge may from time to time provide." Section 9 is as follows: "The board is hereby authorized to enact general laws, rules, and regulations in conformity with this constitution, for the government of sections and the membership of the endowment rank, and alter and amend such general laws, rules, and regulations, when in their judgment the needs of the rank require such action."

Here, for the first time, was it attempted to transfer the power of making laws for the endowment rank from the supreme lodge to the board of control; and this was done, not by an amendment of the charter of the supreme lodge, but only by legislation of the supreme lodge, passed in the ordinary way. That constitution continued in force until 1892, when the supreme lodge adopted another one of only six articles in its stead. Section 5 of article 8 of the constitution of 1888, as quoted above, became the fifth and last section of article 1 of the constitution of 1892; but section 9 of article 8 of the constitution of 1888, supra, was entirely omitted from the constitution of 1892, and no like provision was substituted for it. The constitution of 1892 was the one in force on the 12th and 13th of January, 1893, when the board of control passed the anti-suicide law, interposed by the defendant in this case.

Henry B. Stolte, a member of the board of control at that time, testified in this case, and, among other things, he said, in effect, that the said section 9 of article 8 of the constitution of 1888 was still in force when the anti-suicide law was passed in January, 1893; but that is only the opinion of the witness upon a legal question. The constitution of 1892 was adopted, certified, and promulgated as the "Constitution of the Endowment Rank, Knights of Pythias of the World," and it was published by proper authority in pamphlet so entitled, as had been all former constitutions. Each of the instruments so adopted and promulgated was, for its time, the complete and only constitution of the 80 L. R. A.

endowment rank; and no part of the former constitution became a part of the latter one, unless embodied in it. The constitution of 1892 was adopted, certified, promulgated, and printed as one full and complete instrument, and as the only constitution of the endowment rank so long as it should remain unchanged by the supreme lodge. It superseded the constitution of 1888 entirely, and left only such parts of it in force as were reproduced in the new instrument. This follows as a matter of law. No provision found in the constitution of 1892 conferred, or seems to have been intended to confer, upon the board of control power to make laws, as did section 9, article 8, of the constitution of 1888. Section 5, article 1, of the constitution of 1892, which is but a reproduction of section 5, article 8, constitution of 1888, did not bestow legislative power, as is readily seen by reference to its terms, which are as follows: "The board should have entire charge and full control of the endowment rank, subject to such restrictions as the supreme lodge may from time to time provide."

Obviously, this provision relates alone to the administration of laws, and not to the enactment of them. The words, "entire charge and full control," as there employed, import executive, rather than legislative, functions. Section 9, article 8, of the constitution of 1888, whose terms were unmistakable, and ample in scope for the purpose contemplated, contained the only provision to be found in any constitution of the endowment rank or elsewhere, intended to authorize the board of control to pass general laws for that rank; and it is evident that the members of that board believed that provision to be still in force, and that they thought they were acting under its authority when they passed the law involved in this case. As has already been observed, however, that provision ceased to exist, and had no further force or vitality, when it was omitted from the constitution of 1892, which completely superseded the constitution of 1888 with all its provisions. It follows that the board of control was without even the appearance of the requisite legislative power when it passed that law in January, 1893, and, consequently, that the law was invalid ab initio. Even the authority granted by the supreme lodge to enact laws had been withdrawn from the board.

But if it were conceded that the witness Stolte, and the other members of the board of control, were right in their belief that the ninth section of article 8 of the constitution of 1888 was of the same virtue after, as before, the adoption of the constitution of 1892, the result in this case would be the same; because the supreme lodge had no power to confer general legislative functions upon the board of control, and its effort to do so was ineffectual and void. Section 9 of article 8 of the constitution of 1888, whereby the supreme lodge attempted in plain and comprehensive language to clothe the board of control with authority to enact general laws, was itself ultra vires, and without legal efficacy, and, if embodied in the constitution of 1892, it would have afforded no legal authority for the passage of the anti-suicide law. The ninth section of the second amended charter of the supreme lodge vested in that body alone the power to legislate with respect to the endowment rank, and the supreme lodge could not legally delegate that power to another. That provision of the fundamental law fully authorized the supreme lodge to enact all such reasonable laws as it might deem proper for the establishment and government of the endowment rank, and, in the exercise of that broad authority, it might well create a board of control, or any other like agency, for the management of the business of that rank, but it could not abdicate its high position and transfer its lawmaking power to such board, or other agency. Though the supreme lodge may have had the fullest power, under its charter, to pass the law in question in this case, as we think it had, we have no hesitation in holding that it could not bestow such power upon the board of control. Under the existing charter, a general law of that character could be passed by the supreme lodge alone.

We do not hold that the supreme lodge may not lawfully authorize subordinate lodges and sections to pass by-laws for their local government, nor that the board of control may not be empowered to adopt mere rules and regulations to facilitate the transaction of the business of the endowment rank. On the contrary, we think the supreme lodge may well grant such authority and power, and that they may be lawfully exercised, such grant and exercise not being inconsistent with the terms of the charter. 1 Bacon, Ben. Soc. new ed. § 80. Our holding is that only the supreme lodge has power to pass a general law affecting the whole endowment rank, such as that against self-destruction, and under consideration in this case. The rulings of the trial judge with respect to that law were correct for two reasons—First, because the supreme lodge had no power to authorize the board of control to enact that, or any other general law; and, secondly, because the authority to pass such laws, attempted and intended to be granted by section 9 of article 8 of the constitution of 1888, was withdrawn by the adoption of the constitution of 1892, which embraced no such provision.

Affirm the judgment, with costs.

VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

W. B. GOODE & COMPANY, Plffs. in Err.,
v.
GEORGIA HOME INSURANCE COM-PANY.

(.....Va.....)

1. The acts of clerks or employees of insurance agents to whom they delegate authority to discharge their functions, within the scope of their agency, bind the insurer to the same extent as the acts of the agents.
2. Failure to mention encumbrances and other insurance in an application for insurance cannot be set up by the insurer when the omission was made by advice of the solicitor, who issued the policy in the name of the agent and had full knowledge of the facts.
3. A person authorized to accept risks, to agree upon and settle the terms of insurance, and to carry them into effect by issuing and renewing policies, must be regarded as the general agent of the insurance company.

(December 19, 1896.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Fauquier County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on a policy of fire insurance. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Jeffries & White, for plaintiffs in error:

Any acts, declarations, or course of dealing

NOTE.—For acts of clerks or agents of insurance agents, see also Steele v. German Ins. Co. (Mich.) 18 L. R. A. 85, and Arrif v. Star F. Ins. Co. (N. Y.) 10 L. R. A. 609, and brief note thereto.
30 L. R. A.

by the insurer, with knowledge of the facts constituting the breach of a condition in the policy, recognizing and treating the policy as still in force, will amount to a waiver.

Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. Kinnier, 28 Gratt. 88; Manhattan F. Ins. Co. v. Weill, 28 Gratt. 396, 26 Am. Rep. 364; Southern Mut. Ins. Co. v. Yates, 28 Gratt. 595; McLean v. Piedmont & A. Life Ins. Co. 29 Gratt. 372; Lynchburg F. Ins. Co. v. West, 76 Va. 578, 44 Am. Rep. 177; Titus v. Glens Falls Ins. Co. 81 N. Y. 419.

Robert E. Harris was the agent of the appellee when he secured this risk.

Whatever these appellants said to Robert E. Harris as a matter of law was said to Thomas B. Harris and to the corporation, the Georgia Home Insurance Company.

Whepatrick v. Hartford Life & A. Ins. Co. 56 Conn. 116.

The acts of clerks of insurance agents, who solicit insurance, make out applications and policies, and generally attend to the business of such agent, are as binding as though done by the agents themselves.

Steele v. German Ins. Co. 93 Mich. 81, 18 L. R. A. 85.

Robert E. Harris was a general agent.

Howard Ins. Co. v. Owens, 94 Ky. 197; Stickley v. Mobile Ins. Co. 37 S. C. 56; Lynchburg F. Ins. Co. v. West, 76 Va. 575, 44 Am. Rep. 177; Bodine v. Exchange F. Ins. Co. 51 N. Y. 117, 10 Am. Rep. 566.

The maxim delegatus non potest delegare does not apply.

Story, Agency, § 14.

The acts of agents of the company are binding upon the company.

Meyers v. Lebanon Mut. Ins. Co. 156 Pa. 420; 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 334.

And this is true of a subagent or solicitor appointed by the local agent.

Commercial Ins. Co. v. Ives, 56 Ill. 402; Woodbury Sav. Bank & Bldg. Assn. v. Charter Oak F. & M. Ins. Co. 81 Conn. 517.

That Robert E. Harris was not "a mere broker" in connection with this insurance, is a proposition too plain to admit of argument.

Arff v. Star F. Ins. Co. 125 N. Y. 57, 10 L. R. A. 609.

A general agent of insurance companies may delegate his power to the clerk, assistant, or subagent to the extent of authorizing the latter to agree that a policy to be issued shall contain a permission permitting the building insured to remain vacant for a period not exceeding thirty days without notice to the insurer.

Bodine v. Exchange F. Ins. Co. 51 N. Y. 117, 10 Am. Rep. 586; Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman, 127 Ill. 864; Arff v. Star F. Ins. Co. supra; Deite v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 38 W. Va. 528; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Ward, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 18; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Jacey, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 290; May, Ins. p. 158, § 154; 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 820, 821.

Mr. Eppa Hutton, Jr., with Messrs. W. W. Crump and B. T. Crump, for defendant in error:

This insurance was negotiated by Robert E. Harris, a son of T. B. Harris. The Georgia Home, so far as this record discloses, had no knowledge of the existence of this young man. It certainly never appointed him its agent. He was an utter stranger to its business.

Whether the appellants were aware that he was not the agent, or whether they thought he was, cannot change the fact that he was not.

Buchanan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Upon the trial of this cause, which is an action of assumpsit upon a fire insurance policy, the court excluded from the jury certain evidence offered by the plaintiffs in error. The court also gave judgment in favor of the defendant upon its demurrer to the evidence.

The action of the court, both in excluding evidence and in giving judgment in favor of the defendant, is assigned as error in this court.

The propriety of the rulings of the court in refusing to allow the rejected evidence to go to the jury depends upon the question whether the defendant company was affected by the knowledge of certain material facts which came to the subagent or employee of the agents of the company through whom the insurance was effected.

The defense relied on by the defendant was that the plaintiffs, in making out their application for insurance, had stated that there was no lien and no other insurance upon the property insured, when in fact there was a deed of trust upon it for $390, and insurance in another company to the extent of $1,200, and that by reason of these false statements the policy was void.

The plaintiffs sought to show that Robert E. Harris, through whom their insurance was effected, had full knowledge of both the deed of trust and the other insurance upon the property, and that it was by his advice that their application did not disclose these facts, 30 L. R. A.

and that the defendant was estopped from relying on such facts to avoid the policy. The defendant denied that Robert E. Harris was its agent, or that it was affected by his knowledge.

The plaintiffs' evidence showed that Thomas B. Harris & Son were the agents of the defendant company for Culpeper and its vicinity, and that they were authorized "to receive proposals for insurance against loss or damage by fire; fix rates of premium; receive moneys; countersign, issue, and renew policies duly signed by the president and secretary; and grant permission of transfer of policies on behalf of said company,—subject to the rules and regulations of the company, . . ." It also tended to show that while the plaintiffs were taking an inventory of their goods, in order to have them insured, Robert E. Harris came to their store, "representing himself to be the son of T. B. Harris, of Culpeper, Va., who were the agents" both of the defendant company and the Virginia Fire & Marine Insurance Company; that this was the first time they had ever seen him; that after three trips to their store, soliciting their insurance, they insured their property in both of the companies; that their applications for insurance were signed "by the hand of Robert E. Harris, signing the firm name of Thomas B. Harris & Son; and that the measurement of the storehouse was made and diagrams drawn by him."

Thomas B. Harris was called by the plaintiffs, and testified that Robert E. Harris was his son, but was not a member of the firm of Thomas B. Harris & Son, and was not at any time the agent of the defendant; that the son who was a member of his firm was at Richmond College, Va., when the insurance of the plaintiffs was taken; that he often had more than one of his sons working for him in the insurance business; that Robert E. Harris had solicited a great deal of business for the firm of Thomas B. Harris & Son; that he (Robert) solicited, with his knowledge, the insurance of the plaintiffs, took the applications therefor, and that in pursuance thereof the two policies were issued through himself (T. B. Harris), as a member of the firm of Thomas B. Harris & Son, agents of the defendant, but that he had no knowledge of the facts and circumstances attending the soliciting and placing of the insurance, except what appeared in the application and policy of insurance, until after the loss occurred; that the special agent and adjuster of the defendant had frequently been in his insurance office at Culpeper, Va., and had there seen his several sons at work.

The trial court was of opinion that the evidence introduced by the plaintiffs did not show that Robert E. Harris occupied such a relation to the defendant company that it could be affected by knowledge acquired or declarations made by him while engaged in soliciting and taking the applications for the insurance in controversy, and refused to allow such evidence to go to the jury.

In this, we are of opinion the trial court erred.

This question has been much discussed, but the better view now seems to be that the insurer is not only responsible for the acts of its general agents, but also for the acts of the clerks or employees of the agents to whom they delegate authority to discharge their functions within the scope of their agency.

Insurance companies know, or ought to know, when they appoint general agents, that, according to the ordinary course of business, they have clerks and other persons to assist them, and that their agents, in many instances, could not transact the business intrusted to them if they were required to give their personal attention to all of its details. It being necessary, therefore, and according to the usual course of business, for their agents to employ others to aid them in doing the work, it is just and reasonable that insurance companies should be held responsible, not only for the acts of their agents, but also for the acts of their agents' employees, within the scope of the agents' authority.

It is no sufficient answer to this view to say that the insurers did not authorize their agents to delegate their authority to others. It may be that they did not do so expressly, but they appointed agents whom they knew, or ought to have known, would, according to the usage or the necessities of the business, engage the services of others in doing the work intrusted to them; and, having this knowledge, they will be held to have impliedly authorized their agents to do what was usual or necessary in the business.

The general rule, it is true, is that, when it is intended that agents shall have power to delegate their authority, it should be given them by express terms, but there are cases in which such authority may be implied, as where it is indispensable by the laws to accomplish the end, or it is the ordinary custom of trade, or it is understood by the parties to be the mode in which the particular business would or might be done. Story, Agency, 9th ed. § 14.

"Generally," says May in his work on Insurance, "agents of insurance companies, authorized to contract for risks, receive and collect premiums, and deliver policies, may confer upon a clerk, or subordinate, authority to exercise the same powers. The service is not of such a personal character as to come under the maxim, delegatus non potest delegare. 1 May, Ins. 8d ed. §§ 154, 154a.

Wood, in his work on Insurance, says that "not only is the insurer responsible for the acts of its agent, but also for the acts of the agent's clerks, or any person to whom he delegates authority to discharge his functions for him. Of course, the act must be done by some person authorized expressly, or impliedly by the agent, and under such circumstances that the insurer knew, or ought to have known that other persons would be employed by and to act for the agent." 2 Wood, Ins. 2d ed. § 433.

It was held in the case of Bodine v. Exchange F. Ins. Co. reported in 51 N. Y. 117, 10 Am. Rep. 566, that an insurance agent can employ a clerk, and authorize him to contract for risks, to deliver policies and renewals, to collect premiums, and to give credit therefor, and the act of the clerk in such cases is the act of the agent, and binds the company. In 30 L. R. A.

that case the clerk of the agent waived the prepayment of a premium, and the company was held bound by it, although there was a condition in the policy of insurance that no insurance, whether original or continued, should be considered as binding until the premium was actually paid.

In the case of Arff v. Star F. Ins. Co. reported in 125 N. Y. 57, 10 L. R. A. 609, the court of appeals of New York held (Judge Peckham delivering the opinion of the court) that "an ordinary agent of a fire insurance company has the power to employ such clerks as may be necessary to discharge the usual business of his agency, and a waiver which the agent himself could make is to be attributed to him when made by his clerk."

In that case a policy of insurance issued by the company required the insured to notify the company of any other insurance upon the property, and declared the policy void in case of neglect to comply with that condition.

It also provided that "only such persons as shall hold the commission of this company shall be considered as its agents in any transaction relating to this insurance."

The plaintiff, having obtained other insurance on the property, informed the person upon whose solicitation he made the application for the policy, and he said it was all right. That person, at whose solicitation he applied for the policy, was employed to solicit insurance by a firm who were commissioned agents of the defendant company, having authority to give permits for further insurance. He had a desk in their office, and was paid for his services by a commission on the business he procured. He testified that he worked for no one except the defendant's agents. The plaintiff was nonsuited. The court held that to be error, and said that, if he was exclusively employed by the agents of the company, he was not an ordinary insurance broker, but one of the clerks or employees of the company's agents, and as such was authorized to receive notice, and to consent to other insurance, and the testimony as to his exclusive employment being contradictory, the case should have been submitted to the jury.

In a later case decided by the same court the two cases above referred to were cited with approval, and the doctrine laid down in them reaffirmed. In that case the policy of fire insurance in question contained a condition that if the insured were not the sole owners of the property insured, or did not have title to the land on which it was situated in fee simple, and this fact was not expressed in the policy, it should be void. The assured held the land under an agreement to purchase. This fact was not expressed in the policy but had been communicated to the clerk of the general agent of the insurer, who had been sent to make an examination of the premises preparatory to the risk. In an action on the policy it was held that notice to the subagent, while so engaged in soliciting the insurance, was notice to the company, and bound it to the same extent as though it had been given directly to the agent himself, and, this being so, the policy was not avoided by the condition in the policy. Carpenter v.

German American Ins. Co 185 N. Y. 298.

See Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman, 127 Ill. 364; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Joney, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 290; Duluth Nat. Bank v. Knoxville F. Ins. Co. 85 Tenn., at page 81.

The authority conferred upon the firm of Thomas B. Harris & Son constituted them general agents of the defendant company; for it is settled that a person authorized to accept risks, to agree upon and settle the terms of insurance, and to carry them into effect by insuring and renewing policies, must be regarded as the general agent of the company. 1 May, Ins. 3d ed. § 126; Manhattan F. Ins. Co. v. Weill, 28 Gratt. 889, 26 Am. Rep. 364; Continental Ins. Co. v. Ruckman, 127 Ill. 364.

The evidence introduced by the plaintiffs tended to prove a state of facts which entitled the plaintiffs to prove any act or declaration of Robert E. Harris while engaged in negotiating with the plaintiffs in reference to their insurance, which they would have had the right to prove if the act or declaration had been made by Thomas B. Harris & Son, the agents in person; and, if it appeared from the whole evidence that Robert E. Harris was the employee of Thomas B. Harris & Son, agents of the defendant, and was in the habit of soliciting insurance for them, and that he solicited the plaintiffs' insurance with the knowledge and assent, or by authority of said agents, then his acts and declarations while negotiating the plaintiffs' insurance were the acts and declarations of the agents, and bound the defendant company to the same extent that they would if done or made by such agents in person.

It is unnecessary to consider in detail the several bills of exceptions taken by the plaintiffs to the action of the court in excluding evidence. It will be sufficient to say that any material evidence which tended to prove the acts or declarations of Robert E. Harris while negotiating the plaintiffs' insurance was admissible against the defendant, to the same extent that the acts or declarations of Thomas B. Harris & Son, the commissioned agents of the defendant, would have been admissible if they had negotiated the insurance in person.

Neither is it necessary to consider whether the court erred in sustaining the defendant's demurrer to the evidence, as the judgment must be reversed, the verdict set aside, and a new trial awarded, for the reasons hereinbefore stated.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

James B. CANTERBURY, Appt.,

v.

BANK OF SPARTA, Resp't.

(.....Wis.....)

A bank which at its customer's request mails its own draft to his creditor in payment of the creditor's draft on him cannot defeat the creditor's right to its draft by intercepting it in the mail although it extended credit for the amount of the draft to its customer in ignorance of the fact that he was insolvent.

(September 23, 1895.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Monroe County in favor of defendant in an action brought to NOTE.—Right to stop payment of check.

CANTERBURY v. BANK OF SPARTA is decided on the theory that the draft had been delivered to the payee and that after such delivery payment of the draft could not be stopped so as to defeat the payee's rights. The decisions are not numerous as to the right to stop payment of a check as against the payee. The few decisions upon the subject seem to agree that as between the bank and the drawer the latter may countermand the check at any time before the bank has committed itself to its payment.

In Dykens v. Leather Mfrs. Bank, 11 Paige, 612, it is said that all the witnesses agree that it would have been contrary to the usages of banks to have accepted and paid any of the checks after the drawer had directed the bank not to pay them.

A check, being simply a written order of the depositor to his banker to make a certain payment out of his fund, is executory and of course revocable at any time before the bank has paid it or committed itself to its payment. Kahn v. Walton, 46 Ohio St. 196.

In Egerton v. Fulton Nat. Bank, 43 How. Pr. 216, the court in considering the liability of a bank which had paid a note contrary to the depositor's orders said, in dealings between a depositor and a bank, whatever may be their legal relations, they act substantially upon the principles of agency.

30 L. R. A.

Having received the fund of the depositor, it pays his draft, and is bound to obey all his directions for the disposal of his fund. It cannot disobey his orders either wilfully or innocently, and then claim a new and different relation with rights inconsistent with such as before existed. In paying a draft after payment has been stopped, a bank cannot be protected without an essential change in the accustomed common-law understood duty which it owes to its depositors, or a total disregard of its obligations to them.

In Schneider v. Irving Bank, 80 How. Pr. 190, it is said that the check was but an order upon the bank which it had not accepted, and upon which therefore it was not liable. It was perfectly competent, therefore, for the drawer to revoke the authority which he had given to the bank to apply the funds to the payment of the check. The bank had not accepted or promised to pay the check, and therefore owed no duty in the premises except to the drawer.

A check upon a bank in the usual form, not accepted or certified, does not constitute a transfer of the money nor create any lien on the money which the holder can enforce against the bank. It is simply an order which may be countermanded before paid, and does not of itself operate as an equitable assignment. Florence Min. Co. v. Brown, 124 U. S. 385, 31 L. ed. 424.

recover the value of a draft which defendant had mailed to plaintiff's assignor but intercepted in the mail before it reached its destination. Reversed.

Statement by Cassoday, Ch. J.:

It appears from the record, in effect: That January 6, 1892, W. E. Coats & Co., of Sparta, were indebted to James B. Canterbury, of La Crosse, in the sum of $2,250 or thereabouts. That on that day the plaintiff made his draft, of which the following is a copy:

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 6, 1892.

Pay to the order of State Bank, \$700.70 (seven hundred and $\frac{70}{100}$ dollars,) with exchange, value received; and charge to the account of James B. Canterbury.

To W. E. Coats & Co., Sparta, Wis.

That thereupon the plaintiff discounted

In Jacks v. Darrin, 3 E. D. Smith, 557, it appears that payment of a check had been stopped, but the court does not pass upon the question of the right to do so further than to say that, as against a person who stopped the payment, presentment and notice were unnecessary.

In Lunt v. Bank of North America, 40 Barb. 321, it is said as an argument to support the conclusion that a check does not constitute an assignment of funds, that it is always revocable by the drawer until payment or acceptance.

In Louisville Bkg. Co. v. Paine, 67 Miss. 673, the court held that there was no trust which the payee of a note could enforce against the assets of a bank which had failed after sending its draft in payment of a note of its customers in accordance with the directions in a check of the maker of the note, on the ground that the maker of the note had a legal right to revoke the check, and that therefore the bank had not become a trustee for the payee.

If the bank pays the check after notice not to do so it is liable to the drawer for the amount so paid. Schneider v. Irving Bank, 1 Daly, 500.

If payment of a check is stopped, notice of presentment and nonpayment is not necessary in order to hold the drawer liable upon the debt for which it was drawn. Purchase v. Mattison, 6 Duer, 587.

The drawer of a check on a bank can countermand its payment before the same is paid, he being liable for the consequences of his act in so doing. Albers v. Commercial Bank, 35 Mo. 173, 55 Am. Rep. 355.

But although the drawer of the check may require the bank not to pay it, he cannot change his relation to his creditor by such act. He still remains liable upon the old debt, and in case he is insolvent, with a fund to his credit in the bank, it frequently makes a vast difference to the creditor whether he can compel payment of his check or must look to the general assets of the drawer for his claim. In states where it is held that the check constitutes an assignment of the account pro tanto, and that the payee may maintain an action against the bank, there is no difficulty. There it is held that after a check has passed into the hands of a bona fide holder, the drawer cannot countermand the order of payment. Union Nat. Bank v. Oceana County Bank, 80 Ill. 212, 22 Am. Rep. 185. And the doctrine of that case was referred to with approval in National Bank v. Indiana Bkg. Co., 114 Ill. 463.

So, in Roberts v. Corbin, 20 Iowa, 315, 36 Am. Dec. 146, it is held that an assignee for creditors cannot stop payment of a check that had previously been given, so as to make the fund against which it was 30 L. R. A.

that draft at the State Bank of La Crosse and that bank thereupon indorsed thereon, "Pay Bank of Sparta or order for collection account of State Bank of La Crosse," and thereupon sent the draft by letter to the defendant. That the draft was received by the defendant in the forenoon of January 7, 1892. That W. E. Coats & Co. then had an account with the defendant bank, which was then overdrawn. That W. E. Coats & Co. then accepted the draft, and requested the defendant to pay the same. That the defendant then made its draft on the Atlas National Bank of Chicago, in favor of J. M. Holley, cashier of the State Bank of La Crosse, for $700.70, and inclosed the same in a letter, of which the following is a copy:

Sparta, Wis., Jan. 7, 1892.

J. M. Holley, Esq., La Crosse, Wis. :—

Dear Sir: Your favor of the 6th is redrawn applicable to his use rather than to the benefit of the person in whose favor the check was given.

In other jurisdictions also it would seem that the power to defeat the payee's right to the amount represented by the check is not unlimited.

In Wienholt v. Spitta, 3 Camp. 376, it is said: "If I give a draft upon a condition, and I find the condition is to be eluded, I may stop payment. This is a conditional delivery of the draft."

Of course that ruling is limited to the case of a conditional delivery, but the very fact that the ruling was so limited, and not made generally, would indicate that the right might not be a general one.

So, in Wisconsin it has been held that the drawer cannot arbitrarily stop payment. Pease v. Landauer, 63 Wis. 29, 53 Am. Rep. 247. In that case the court admits that the decided weight of authority is in favor of the proposition that the drawer might before presentation stop payment so that the bank would have no authority to make payment, but states that the question is whether, in equity as between the holder of a check for value and the drawer the bank standing indifferent, the check holder should be paid in preference to the drawer, and it holds that upon equitable principles the drawer is estopped from stopping payment except for some good cause, and that if he does so, he is guilty of a fraud which a court of equity will not sanction.

The question of the general liability of the bank after sending a draft to pay a customer's note is not considered in CANTERBURY v. BANK OF SPARTA, so that subject is not appropriate to this note, but attention is called to two cases in which the question has been considered.

In Whiting v. City Bank, 77 N. Y. 363, payment of a draft sent in payment of a note was stopped, and the court without discussing the right of stoppage held that unless the draft was sent by mistake the bank had assumed liability for the note so as to render it liable for the amount.

By way of contrast, in Steinhart v. National Bank, 94 Cal. 362, a bank which had mailed its check to pay the note of a customer recovered possession of it from the postoffice and canceled it. In much the same way as was done in CANTERBURY v. BANK OF SPARTA. The decision of the case does not turn upon the right to stop payment of the check as much as upon the question whether the customer's note was to be considered paid or not, and the court held that it was not to be so considered, and that therefore there could be no recovery against the bank.

H. P. F.

ceived, with the stated inclosures. I inclose our draft on Chicago for $700.70 in payment of draft on W. E. Coats & Co.

Respectfully yours,
E. H. Canfield, Cashier,

—and posted the same about half-past 4 o'clock in the afternoon of January 7, 1892, and entered the plaintiff's draft as paid on the books of the defendant. That the defendant, having ascertained that W. E. Coats & Co. had failed, attempted to get the letter containing the draft back out of the post-office, but found it had gone to La Crosse. That by telephoning the defendant succeeded in getting the letter and draft out of the post-office at La Crosse, and the next morning destroyed the draft and the letter, and erased all entries respecting the payment of the draft in defendant's books, and protested the plaintiff's draft for nonpayment, and returned it to the State Bank of La Crosse, and that bank thereupon assigned to the plaintiff its cause of action against the defendant by reason of the facts stated. Upon these facts the plaintiff brings this action to recover the value of the draft so taken from the postoffice. At the close of the testimony the court directed a verdict in favor of plaintiff and against the defendant for the amount of that draft and interest. Upon a motion for a new trial the court directed judgment in favor of the defendant, notwithstanding the verdict. From such judgment, entered accordingly, the plaintiff brings this appeal.

Messrs. Winter, Esch, & Winter, for appellant:

If the Bank of Sparta intentionally, relying on the credit of Coats & Co., the drawee, paid the Canterbury draft, it releases Canterbury, the maker, and the payee, the State Bank, has a right of action.

Whiting v. City Bank, 77 N. Y. 863; Pratt v. Foote, 9 N. Y. 463; Oddie v. National City Bank, 45 N. Y. 785; Levy v. Bank of United States, 4 U. S. 4 Dall. 284, 1 L. ed. 814; Pacific Bank v. Mitchell, 9 Met. 297.

If this payment was made through mistake, then the bank of Sparta can rescind its action, unless the State Bank would, by its rescission, be put in a worse condition.

Irving Bank v. Wetherald, 86 N. Y. 835.

The bank, having cashed the check on the credit of the maker supposing he had ample funds, cannot rescind owing to a mistake as to the amount of those funds deposited.

Boylston Nat. Bank v. Richardson, 101 Mass. 287.

But here the cashier knew that the account of Coats & Co. was overdrawn, and hence made no mistake in paying the Canterbury draft and in charging the amount to Coats.

When the draft had been deposited in the postoffice to be carried, that was such a delivery of the draft to the State Bank as to vest the title to the draft in it.

Johnson v. Sharp, 81 Ohio St. 611, 27 Am. Rep. 529; McKinney v. Rhoads, 5 Watts, 843.

If the sender made use of the mails either from custom of the parties or in obedience to the instructions of the addressee, the loss of the draft or thing sent falls on the addressee.
30 L. R. A.

Buell v. Chapin, 99 Mass. 594, 97 Am. Dec. 58; Morgan v. Richardson, 18 Allen, 410.

Steinhart v. National Bank, 94 Cal. 862, is a case directly in point both in respect to the acts of the defendant in canceling the Canterbury draft and marking it paid, and in respect to the delivery of the Atlas draft to the mails. Mailing the paper is sufficient delivery.

I Randolph, Com. Paper, § 218, and cases cited; Tiedeman, Com. Paper, § 84a; United States v. Jackson, 29 Fed. Rep. 503; United States v. Jones, 31 Fed. Rep. 725.

Any act which clearly shows the intention of the maker to deliver the instrument and to consider it as delivered is sufficient.

Williams v. Galt, 95 Ill. 172; Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 812.

The delivery of merchandise to a common carrier, not for the purpose of transportation, but to be shipped to a third person, terminates the right of stoppage in transitu.

1 Parsons, Notes & Bills, *606, and note a; Bowley v. Bigelow, 12 Pick. 307, 23 Am. Dec. 607; Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 453, 5 Am. Dec. 68; Treadwell v. Aydlott, 9 Helsk. 388; Guyn v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 85 N. C. 429, 39 Am. Rep. 708; Eaton v. Cook, 32 Vt. 58.

Messrs. Morrow & Masters, for respondent:

It is the rule and regulation of the postoffice department that any letter may be recalled or recovered by the sender before it is delivered to the person to whom it is addressed.

Official Postal Guide, last ed. pp. 847, 848.

A letter, and of course its contents, is subject to the control of the writer and sender until it is actually delivered to the addressee.

18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 855; United States v. Tanner, 6 McLean, 128.

Marking this draft paid, and the entries in its books by defendant, did not make it liable to plaintiff or the State Bank.

Aetna Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 82, 7 Am. Rep. 314; Indig v. National City Bank, 80 N. Y. 107; Irving Bank v. Wetherald, 86 N. Y. 835; Waterdriet Bank v. White, 1 Denio, 608; Steinhart v. National Bank, 94 Cal. 362; Buell v. Chapin, 99 Mass. 595, 97 Am. Dec. 58; Gurney v. Howe, 9 Gray, 408, 69 Am. Dec. 299; Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Nevell, 71 Wis. 309; 7 Wait, Act. & Def. p. 888; 1 Edwards, Bills & Notes, §§ 232-237.

A valid delivery is necessary to give legal existence to negotiable instruments.

Chipman v. Tucker, 88 Wis. 48, 20 Am. Rep. 1; Leonard v. Lent, 48 Wis. 88; Furriance v. Jones, 120 Ind. 162; Steinhart v. National Bank, supra.

Defendant might recover back its draft before it came to the possession of the State Bank under the principles of the doctrine of stoppage in transitu.

2 Kent, Com. 542, 548; 1 Parsons, Notes & Bills, 6th ed. 600; Muller v. Pondtr, 55 N. Y. 825, 14 Am. Rep. 259; Wait, Act. & Def. 212; Smith v. Bowles, 2 Esp. 578.

Cassoday, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It may be conceded that the vendor of negotiable paper has the right of stoppage in transitu to the same extent as the vendor of other species of personal property. Here the La Crosse bank discounted the plaintiff's draft on W. E. Coats & Co., and forwarded the same to the defendant for collection. The defendant was under no obligation to pay that draft, especially as the account of W. E. Coats & Co. at the defendant bank was then considerably overdrawn. Nevertheless, the defendant, on the request of the managing agent of W. E. Coats & Co., whose authority is not questioned, made its own draft on the Chicago bank for the amount, payable to the cashier of the La Crosse bank, and sent the same in a letter by mail to the cashier of the La Crosse bank "in payment of draft on W. E. Coats & Co.," and that letter, with the draft inclosed, reached La Crosse in the regular course of mail. Undoubtedly, the defendant, in making its draft on the Chicago bank, gave a corresponding credit to W. E. Coats & Co. on the faith of their solvency; but it did so voluntarily, and for their accommodation, and without being induced to do so by any fraud or mistake of fact. While the defendant retained the actual or constructive possession of that draft, it could undoubtedly, withhold its application in payment of the draft on W. E. Coats & Co.; but if, by sending the draft by mail to La Crosse, it parted with such possession, and vested the title to the draft in the La Crosse bank, then, manifestly, it lost all rightful authority to take the same from the mail. In thus mailing and sending the draft the defendant acted as the agent of the La Crosse bank. Such mailing of the letter inclosing the draft was in legal effect a delivery of the draft to the La Crosse bank. 1 Randolph, Com. Paper, § 218; 1 Dan. Neg. Inst. § 67; Buell v. Chapin, 99 Mass. 594, 97 Am. Dec. 58; Kirkman v. Bank of America, 2 Coldw. 397; Mitchell v. Byrne, 6 Rich. L. 171; Sichel v. Borch, 2 Hurlst. & C. 954; Punk v. Lawson, 12 Ill. App. 239. The mere fact that after the draft was so sent by mail the defendant ascertained that W. E. Coats & Co. had failed, and hence that it had injudiciously given them further credit to the amount of the draft, did not authorize the defendant to stop payment of the draft, or take it from the mail. The draft was not transmitted to W. E. Coats & Co., but was transmitted by them through the defendant, to the bank at La Crosse. In support of the views expressed, see Boylston Nat. Bank v. Richardson, 101 Mass. 287; Pacific Bank v. Mitchell, 9 Met. 297; Pratt v. Foote, 9 N. Y. 468; Whiting v. City Bank, 77 N. Y. 363; Eaton v. Cook, 82 Vt. 58.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause is remanded, with direction to enter judgment against the defendant for the amount of the verdict directed in favor of the plaintiff, with interest and costs.

Newman, J., took no part.

SOUTH DAKOTA SUPREME COURT.

HURON WATERWORKS COMPANY,
Resp't.,

v.

City of HURON, Appt.

H. Ray MYERS et al., Appts.,

v.

City of HURON et al., Resp'ts.

(.....S. D.....)

*1. The waterworks of a city, constructed under a power conferred upon the city by its charter "to construct and maintain waterworks" for protection against fires and for furnishing the inhabitants thereof with a supply of pure water for domestic purposes, and constructed and maintained at the expense of the inhabitants of such city, are held as the property of the municipal corporation, for public use, and charged with a public trust, of which the inhabitants of such city are the beneficiaries.

2. The power to construct a waterworks system for a city is not a necessary incident of its incorporation, but must, like all its other powers, be derived directly from the legislature of the state; and the power "to construct and maintain" such a system implies a duty of the municipality, through its corporate authorities, to maintain and preserve possession for the benefit of the public.

*Headnotes by CORSON, P. J.

3. When a municipality is vested by its charter with power to construct and maintain a system of waterworks at the public expense and for the public use, and accepts such charter, and proceeds to exercise this authority in the manner designated, by the construction and maintenance of such waterworks at the expense of the citizens of the municipality, the waterworks so constructed and maintained are clothed with a public trust and are devoted to a public use.

4. The waterworks of a city, constructed and maintained by the municipality at the expense of its citizens and for the public use, being held by such municipality charged with a public trust, such trust, and the duty of the municipality under it, cannot be discharged and devolved upon another, by a sale by the city's common council, without legislative authority, of such waterworks, and the right and duty of the city to maintain and use them in execution of such public trust.

NOTE.—The above case, in which opinion and briefs present a very valuable discussion of the subject, is believed to be one of first impression on the power of a city to sell its waterworks, although it is held in Terre Haute v. Terre Haute Waterworks Co. 94 Ind. 306, that a city may sell shares of stock which it owns in a water company.

On the question of the right to claim a return of the consideration paid on the ultra vires sale by the city, see Nashville v. Sutherland (Tenn.) 19 L. R. A. 619, and note.

80 L. R. A.

5. Power was conferred upon the city of Huron, by its charter, "to construct and maintain waterworks." Said city accepted the charter, and proceeded to erect, at the expense of about $45,000 to the citizens of said city, waterworks for preventing fires and furnishing the inhabitants of said city with a supply of pure water. These works were kept and maintained for several years, when the city council of said city, without legislative authority, assumed to sell and dispose of the entire plant and franchise. Held, that the waterworks of said city were held for public use and charged with a public trust, and that such attempted sale was void.

6. Upon such attempted sale by the city council, the purchasers paid into the city treasury the sum of $45,000 as the purchase price of said waterworks, but it was not found that said purchase money was appropriated by the common council to any lawful purpose of the corporation, or was in any manner used by the corporation. Held, that the payment of the consideration into the city treasury was unauthorized, and that its receipt by the city treasurer did not estop the city from recovering possession of its waterworks system without repayment of the sum so paid into the city treasury.

(April 20, 1895.)

A PPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Beadle County in favor of plaintiff in an action to enjoin defendants from interfering with its property. Reversed.

A PPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Beadle County in favor of defendants in a proceeding brought to have a sale of property by defendant city to defendant waterworks company adjudged to be void and of no effect. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. A. W. Wilmarth and H. Ray Myers, for appellants:

Waterworks are property of a public nature and held for a public use.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 508.

Bonds may be issued therefor.

It is unlawful to issue bonds in aid of private industrial enterprises.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1240; Citizens' Sav. & L. Assn. v. Topeka, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 655, 23 L. ed. 455; Opinion of Judges, 58 Me. 590; Allen v. Jay, 60 Me. 124, 11 Am. Rep. 185; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Iola, 2 Dill. 353; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 1114.

The business of constructing and maintaining waterworks by a city under special legislative grant for the purpose of supplying itself with water for the extinguishment of fire, and furnishing the people with pure and wholesome water for domestic use, is not an ordinary business that every individual may be engaged in. It is a business of a public nature.

Rochester v. Rush, 80 N. Y. 810; Smith v. Nashville, 88 Tenn. 464, 7 L. R. A. 469; Hanpen v. Albina Light & W. Co. 21 Or. 411, 14 L. R. A. 426; Olmsted v. Morris Aqueduct Proprs. 47 N. J. L. 388; West Hartford v. Hartford Water Comrs. 44 Conn. 880; Thompson & H. Electric Co. v. Newton, 42 Fed. Rep. 725; Daggett v. Colgan, 92 Cal. 58, 14 L. R. A. 474; Tiedeman, Mun. Corp. ed. 1894, § 144a. 30 L. R. A.

The nature of the business of furnishing water for fire protection and for domestic use to the inhabitants of a city cannot be distinguished in principle from the business of gas companies, railroads, street railways, public wharves, electric lights, canals, toll bridges, and other works of immediate and general utility.

These are matters within the scope of the functions which have by general consent been attributed to the government, and all of which are for public uses and public purposes.

State v. Toledo, 48 Ohio St. 112, 11 L. R. A. 729; Reddall v. Bryan, 14 Md. 444, 74 Am. Dec. 550; Burden v. Stein, 27 Ala. 104, 62 Am. Dec. 758; Lumbard v. Stearns, 4 Cush. 60; New York v. Bailey, 2 Denio, 488; Hildreth v. Lowell, 11 Gray, 345; Re Central Park Comrs. 63 Barb. 282; Opinion of the Justices, 150 Mass. 596, 8 L. R. A. 487; Crawfordsville v. Braden, 180 Ind. 149, 14 L. R. A. 268; Fellows v. Walker, 89 Fed. Rep. 651; Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. v. People's Gaslight & Coke Co. 121 Ill. 530; Western U. Tele. Co. v. American U. Tele. Co. 65 Ga. 160, 83 Am. Rep. 781; Detroit v. Moran, 44 Mich. 602; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. & P. Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 29 L. ed. 510; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. ed. 525; People v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 180 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 497; Citizens' Sav. & L. Assn. v. Topeka, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 661, 22 L. ed. 460; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 1114.

The power of eminent domain can only be exercised for public purposes.

The power of eminent domain is always granted for the purpose of supplying cities with water for the extinguishment of fires and for domestic purposes.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 566; Cooley, Const. Lim. 1665, and cases cited in note 2 and note 4; Talbot v. Hudson, 16 Gray, 417; Land, Log, & Lumber Co. v. Brown, 78 Wis. 294, 3 L. R. A. 473; Ross v. Davis, 97 Ind. 79; O'Reilly v. Kankakee Valley Draining Co. 82 Ind. 169; Riche v. Bar Harbor Water Co. 75 Me. 91; State v. Hibernia U. R. Co. 47 N. J. L. 48; Bloomfield & R. Nat. Gaslight Co. v. Richardson, 68 Barb. 437; Oheabrough v. Putnam & Paulding Counties Comrs. 87 Ohio St. 508; State v. Toledo, 48 Ohio St. 112, 11 L. R. A. 738; Wayland v. Middlesex County Comrs. 4 Gray, 501.

The words "public use" mean public utility, or what is of public benefit.

Olmstead v. Camp, 33 Conn. 532, 89 Am. Dec. 221; Cooley, Taxn. 189; Seely v. Sebastian, 4 Or. 26; Lewis, Em. Dom. 165; Taylor v. Thompson, 42 Ill. 9; Broddhead v. Milwaukee, 19 Wis. 625, 88 Am. Dec. 711; Gilmer v. Lime Point, 18 Cal. 251; Stockton & V. R. Co. v. Stockton, 41 Cal. 172; Booth v. Woodbury, 83 Conn. 118; West Chicago Park Comrs. v. McMullen, 184 Ill. 170, 10 L. R. A. 215; Tiedeman, Mun. Corp. § 234, note 2; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 597.

Waterworks owned by cities cannot be sold on execution for the reason that waterworks are property charged with a public use and trust.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 575; 15 Am. &

Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1068; New Orleans v. Morris, 105 U. S. 600, 26 L. ed. 1184; Merritt v. Garrett, 103 U. S. 473, 26 L. ed. 197; Chicago v. Hasley, 25 Ill. 595; Foster v. Fowler, 60 Pa. 27; Leonard v. Brooklyn, 71 N. Y. 498, 27 Am. Rep. 80; Birmingham v. Ramsey, 68 Ala. 852; Palestine v. Barnes, 50 Tex. 538; Curry v. Savannah, 64 Ga. 290, 37 Am. Rep. 74.

The waterworks property cannot be sold.

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 586; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 1114; Cooley, Const. Lim. pp. 668, 664; 26 Am. L. Rev. 1892, p. 679; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 89; Tiedeman, Mun. Corp. § 144a; Roberts v. Louisville, 92 Ky. 95, 18 L. R. A. 844; Lord v. Oconto, 47 Wis. 386; Illinois, St. L. R. & Canal Co. v. St. Louis, 2 Dill. 84; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 239; Taggart v. Detroit, 71 Mich. 92; McCullough v. San Francisco Bd. of Edu. 51 Cal. 418; Com. v. Rush, 14 Pa. 191; San Francisco v. Itell, 80 Cal. 57; New Orleans v. Morris, 105 U. S. 600, 26 L. ed. 1184.

A corporation cannot sell, or lease, or in any manner transfer, the property necessary to perform its obligation and duties imposed by its charter to the public, without special legislative authority.

2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 1120-1129; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 30 L. ed. 83; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 887; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 748; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 130, 24 L. ed. 85; York & M. L. R. Co. v. Winans, 58 U. S. 17 How. 80, 15 L. ed. 27; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 84, 29 L. ed. 785; Gue v. Tide Water Canal Co. 65 U. S. 24 How. 257, 16 L. ed. 635; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 271, 41 Am. Rep. 221; Middlesex R. Co. v. Boston & C. R. Co. 115 Mass. 347; Abbott v. Johnstown, G. & K. Horse R. Co. 80 N. Y. 27, 36 Am. Rep. 572; Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. v. People's Gaslight & Coke Co. 121 Ill. 530; Balsley v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 119 Ill. 68, 59 Am. Rep. 784; State v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co. 29 Conn. 538; Peoria & R. I. R. Co. v. Coal Valley Min. Co. 63 Ill. 489; Roper v. McWhorter, 77 Va. 214; Kenton County Ct. v. Bank Lick Turnp. Co. 10 Bush, 529; Louisville Water Co. v. Hamilton, 81 Ky. 517; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 623, 71 Am. Dec. 291; Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 590; Black v. Delaware & R. Canal Co. 22 N. J. Eq. 180.

Enumerated powers exclude all others.

Farmers & M. Nat. Bank v. School Dist. No. 53, 6 Dak. 259; Goodnow v. Ramsey County Comrs. 11 Minn. 81; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 139 U. S. 64, 35 L. ed. 70; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 236.

It being necessary for municipal governments to obtain special power to construct and maintain waterworks, and waterworks of a city being of so much importance to it, it is incredible of belief that the power to sell the Huron waterworks plant and franchise could be implied from the first section of the charter, especially when we consider that all the powers granted to municipal corporations are granted 30 L. R. A.

for the special benefit of the people, and not for the benefit of the corporation.

15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1047, § 6; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co. 51 U. S. 10 How. 511, 13 L. ed. 518; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 887; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55; Branch v. Jensep, 106 U. S. 469, 27 L. ed. 279.

Corporations organized for public purposes cannot by contract of sale, lease, or otherwise, render themselves incapable of performing their duties to the public, or in any way absolve themselves from the obligation which forms the main consideration for giving them a corporate existence.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. supra; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 30 L. ed. 284; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 887; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 748; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Morris, 67 Tex. 692; Black v. Delaware & R. Canal Co. 22 N. J. Eq. 180; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 1120, 1129; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 271, 41 Am. Rep. 221; Middlesex R. Co. v. Boston & C. R. Co. 115 Mass. 347; Abbott v. Johnstown, G. & K. Horse R. Co. 80 N. Y. 27, 36 Am. Rep. 572.

One gas company cannot transfer to another gas company.

Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. v. People's Gaslight & Coke Co. 121 Ill. 530; Balsley v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 119 Ill. 72, 59 Am. Rep. 784; State v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co. 29 Conn. 538; Peoria & R. I. R. Co. v. Coal Valley Min. Co. 63 Ill. 489; Roper v. McWhorter, 77 Va. 214; Kenton County Ct. v. Bank Lick Turnp. Co. 10 Bush, 529; Gue v. Tide Water Canal Co. 65 U. S. 24 How. 257, 16 L. ed. 635; Louisville Water Co. v. Hamilton, 81 Ky. 517.

Lots dedicated for public purposes cannot be sold.

Alton v. Illinois Transp. Co. 12 Ill. 59, 59 Am. Dec. 479; Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 590.

Acceptance of the franchise involves the duty to maintain it and use it for the public welfare.

Taggart v. Detroit, 71 Mich. 92; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Morris, 67 Tex. 692; Mullarky v. Cedar Falls, 19 Iowa, 21; Ottawa v. People, 48 Ill. 239; Lord v. Oconto, 47 Wis. 386.

The general powers usually granted in a city charter are not sufficient for a city to confer a franchise for owning and operating waterworks.

National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Co. 52 Fed. Rep. 29; Webb v. Demopolis, 95 Ala. 116, 21 L. R. A. 62; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 1128; Tiedeman, Mun. Corp. 144a. p. 255.

The property being held in trust by the city council for public purposes, the city council was incapable of selling and transferring the same, and the waterworks company, knowing, and being by law charged with the duty of knowing, that it was trust property, and obtaining the same in violation of said trust, is an involuntary trustee for said property, for the benefit of the city of Huron.

Comp. Laws, § 3920; 1 Perry, Tr. 3d ed. § 217;

Perry, Tr. 3d ed. § 828; Mechanics' Bank of Alexandria v. Seton, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 299, 7th ed. 152; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 250; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 575-577, and note; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 1064, 1068; Ransom v. Boal, 29 Iowa, 68, 4 Am. Rep. 195; Brockman v. Oreston, 79 Iowa, 587; Alton v. Illinois Transp. Co. 12 Ill. 88, 52 Am. Dec. 479; Meriwether v. Garrett, 103 U. S. 477, 26 L. ed. 197.

It would be contrary to all principles of justice and equity, to permit a party who, in violation of law, purchased the property from the officers of such corporation, to hold and retain the same from the people, until the money claimed to have been paid for it, and the money claimed to have been expended on it, had been returned and to insist on reimbursement of such expenditures before the people could recover back the property.

Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132; Evans v. Hughes County, 8 S. D. 244; Herzo v. San Francisco, 88 Cal. 184; Agawan Nat. Bank v. South Hadley, 128 Mass. 507.

Fraud may be imputed to the principles either by co-operation in the original design or constructive co-operation from notice of it, and then carrying the design into operation with such notice.

Stovall v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 8 Smedes & M. 316, 47 Am. Dec. 85; Perry, Tr. 3d ed. § 828; Bump, Fraud. Conv. p. 594; Bleakley's Appeal, 66 Pa. 187; Brooks v. Caughran, 8 Head, 467; Allen v. Berry, 50 Mo. 91; How v. Camp, Walk. Ch. (Mich.) 436; Holland v. Cruft, 20 Pick. 387; Goodwin v. Hammond, 13 Cal. 169, 78 Am. Dec. 574; Borland v. Walker, 7 Ala. 269; Pettibone v. Stevens, 15 Conn. 25, 38 Am. Dec. 57; Sands v. Codwise, 4 Johns. 385, 4 Am. Dec. 805.

On rehearing.

Where there is an absolute want of power to make a contract or to do an act, and money is paid upon such contract or obligation, in law it is a voluntary payment of money, and money so paid cannot be recovered back, even if it has been appropriated by the party receiving it to a legitimate and lawful purpose.

Evans v. Hughes County, 8 S. D. 244; Thomas v. Richmond, 79 U. S. 349, 20 L. ed. 453; Clark v. Dutcher, 9 Cow. 674; Johnson v. McGinness, 1 Or. 292; Harper v. Rowe, 53 Cal. 233; Mays v. Cincinnati, 1 Ohio St. 268; M. Adams & E. P. T. R. Co. v. Cincinnati, 23 Ohio L. J. 68; Brumagim v. Tillinghast, 18 Cal. 265; Onondaga County Supers. v. Briggs, 2 Denio, 26; 2 Deasy, Taxn. pp. 791, 792.

Where an officer receives more money than he is entitled to, it is in law a voluntary payment, and the money cannot be recovered back.

Onondaga County Supers. v. Briggs, 2 Denio, 26; Snyder v. Laframboise, 1 Ill. 268, 12 Am. Dec. 187; Owings v. Thompson, 4 Ill. 502; Harper v. Rowe, 53 Cal. 233.

The principle of law upon which money voluntarily paid under a mistake of law cannot be recovered back is that no cause of action can arise out of an unlawful act, as no court will lend its aid to a man who founds his cause of action upon an immoral or illegal act whether the same is knowingly or ignorantly done.

Ribbans v. Crickett, 1 Bos. & P. 264; Light-
30 L. R. A.

foot v. Tenant, 1 Bos. & P. 552; Parkin v. Dick, 11 East, 503; Langton v. Hughes, 1 Maule & S. 596; Aubert v. Mase, 2 Bos. & P. 873; Cannan v. Bryce, 8 Barn. & Ald. 179; Mitchell v. Smith, 4 U. S. 4 Dall. 269, 1 L. ed. 828; Maybin v. Coulton, 4 U. S. 4 Dall. 298, 1 L. ed. 841; Bank of United States v. Owens, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 527, 7 L. ed. 508; Hannay v. Eze, 7 U. S. 3 Cranch, 242, 3 L. ed. 437; Armstrong v. Toler, 24 U. S. 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. ed. 468; Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 57 U. S. 16 How. 334, 14 L. ed. 961; Mayer v. Whyte, 65 U. S. 24 How. 317, 16 L. ed. 657; Middleton v. Arnolds, 18 Gratt. 469.

The court justly held that "it would be manifestly unjust and inequitable to require the city of Huron to refund the consideration paid for these waterworks, before it can be restored to the possession of the same, because the same was paid to, and received by, an officer of the city unauthorized to receive it."

Herzo v. San Francisco, 88 Cal. 184; Agawam Nat. Bank v. South Hadley, 128 Mass. 508; Atkinson v. Minot, 75 Me. 192.

Mr. John N. Pyle, for respondent:

The property in controversy in this action is property which the city has purchased for her own exclusive use, and is that class of property which could be sold and alienated.

Alton v. Illinois Transp. Co. 12 Ill. 88, 53 Am. Dec. 479; Bailey v. New York, 8 Hill, 531, 38 Am. Dec. 669; Western Sav. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 31 Pa. 175, 72 Am. Dec. 780; Adams v. Memphis & L. R. R. Co. 2 Coldw. 645; Detroit v. Corey, 9 Mich. 163, 80 Am. Dec. 78; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 19, 21-23; Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; People v. Detroit, 23 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 209; Small v. Danville, 51 Me. 363; Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. 180; Western College of Homeopathic Medicine v. Cleveland, 12 Ohio St. 375; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Oliver v. Worcester, 102 Mass. 489, 3 Am. Rep. 485; Webb v. New York, 64 How. Pr. 10; Richland County v. Lawrence County, 13 Ill. 1; Touchard v. Touchard, 5 Cal. 806; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44, 9 Am. Rep. 108; Terrett v. Taylor, 13 U. S. 9 Cranch, 43, 3 L. ed. 650; Paulet v. Clark, 13 U. S. 9 Cranch, 292, 3 L. ed. 785; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 694, 4 L. ed. 678; New Orleans, M. & O. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 478.

While they had power to "erect waterworks" and the power to "maintain waterworks," there is no duty imposed upon the city council to do either, and like all of the other powers conferred upon them it is a discretionary one, to be exercised or not according to the judgment of the city council.

The municipal corporation cannot be required to exercise these legislative or discretionary powers.

Grant v. Erie, 69 Pa. 420, 8 Am. Rep. 278; Wheeler v. Cincinnati, 19 Ohio St. 19, 2 Am. Rep. 368; Fair v. Philadelphia, 83 Pa. 309, 33 Am. Rep. 455; Mills v. Brooklyn, 32 N. Y. 489; Smith v. New York, 66 N. Y. 295, 23 Am. Rep. 53; Carr v. Northern Liberties, 35 Pa. 324, 78 Am. Dec. 342; Rivers v. Augusta, 65 Ga. 376, 38 Am. Rep. 787; Forsyth v. Atlanta, 45 Ga. 152; Freeport v. Isbell, 83 Ill. 440, 25 Am. Rep. 407; Joliet v. Verley, 85 Ill. 58, 85

Am. Dec. 342; Hill v. Charlotte, 75 N. C. 55, 21 Am. Rep. 451; Tainter v. Worcester, 123 Mass. 811, 25 Am. Rep. 90; Vanhorn v. Des Moines, 68 Iowa, 447, 50 Am. Rep. 850.

Even though it should be held that the city had no authority to convey this property, it is still estopped from setting up its right to convey the property until it has returned to the waterworks company the consideration received for such conveyance.

West Carroll Parish v. Gaddis, 84 La. Ann. 928; Grant v. Davenport, 18 Iowa, 179; Louisville v. Com. 1 Duv. 295, 85 Am. Dec. 624; Vanarsdall v. State, 65 Ind. 176; Sturgeon v. Daviess County Comrs. 65 Ind. 802; Branham v. San José, 24 Cal. 585; Adams v. Memphis & L. R. R. Co. 2 Coldw. 645; Adams v. Rome, 69 Ga. 765.

Where the consideration received by a corporation under an ultra vires contract can be restored, equity will not relieve a corporation from a performance of the contract without a restoration of the consideration.

Turner v. Gruen, 70 Iowa, 202; Pratt v. Short, 58 How. Pr. 506; Leonard v. Canton, 85 Miss. 189; Argenti v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 282; Moore v. New York, 78 N. Y. 288, 29 Am. Rep. 184; Lucas County Comrs. v. Hunt, 5 Ohio St. 438; Montgomery v. Montgomery Waterworks, 79 Ala. 238; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 715, 1084, 1102, 1116; Hackensack Water Co. v. Hoboken, 51 N. J. L. 220; Atlantic City Waterworks Co. v. Atlantic City, 48 N. J. L. 878; Livingston v. Pippin, 81 Ala. 542; Indianapolis v. Indianapolis Gaslight & Coke Co. 66 Ind. 396; Nichol v. Nashville, 9 Humph. 268; Grant v. Davenport, 86 Iowa, 402; Memphis v. Memphis Water Co. 5 Heisk. 528; Warren v. Chicago, 118 Ill. 329; Sherlock v. Winnetka, 59 Ill. 398; Goodrich v. Chicago, 20 Ill. 445; East St. Louis v. East St. Louis Gaslight & Coke Co. 98 Ill. 415, 38 Am. Rep. 97; Touchard v. Touchard, 5 Cal. 806; Coopers v. San José, 55 Cal. 599; State Board of Agriculture v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 47 Ind. 407, 17 Am. Rep. 702; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 167; First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699, 25 L. ed. 750; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258, 24 L. ed. 698; 1 Story, Cont. § 610; White v. Franklin Bank, 29 Pick. 181; Taylor v. Weld, 5 Mass. 109; Warren County Supers. v. Patterson, 66 Ill. 111; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 458; Steam Nav. Co. v. Weed, 17 Barb. 378; Heyward v. New York, 7 N. Y. 814.

Railroads have always been held to be of public utility, and in a sense for the use of the public, and it is upon that ground alone that municipal aid bonds have been sustained in very many cases, but it has always been held that such property is private and in the property itself the public has no concern whatever.

Bussell v. Michigan S. & N. I. R. Cos. 22 N. Y. 258; Chicago R. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 9 West. Jur. 347; People v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 28 Hun, 547; Rogers Locomotive & Mach. Works v. Erie R. Co. 20 N. J. Eq. 879; Messenger v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 36 N. J. L. 409, 18 Am. Rep. 457; Roper v. McWhorter, 77 Va. 218; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 1114; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 680; Olcott v. 80 L. R. A.

Fond du Lac County Supers. 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. ed. 382; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 37, 80 Am. Dec. 718.

While, then, it may be true that ownership of property may sometimes bear upon the question whether the uses of the property are public, it is not the test.

Re Fay, 15 Pick. 248; New Orleans v. New York Mail S. S. Co. 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 387, 22 L. ed. 354; Putnam v. Grand Rapids, 58 Mich. 416.

In some of the aspects of the case at bar, it may be regarded as an action to rescind or set aside a contract upon the ground of fraud.

Merrill v. Wilson, 66 Mich. 252; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258, 24 L. ed. 698; Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Flaming Co. 23 Cal. 620; Morris & E. R. Co. v. Sussex R. Co. 20 N. J. Eq. 542; Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62, 20 Am. Rep. 504; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 748; Thomas v. Richmond, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 349, 20 L. ed. 453; Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 108 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347; Story, Eq. Jct. 298; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 684.

The mere usurpation of corporate authority does not confer upon the individual the right to bring suit to restrain the unlawful exercise of authority or to raise it collaterally.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 47 Fed. Rep. 15; Cooper v. Detroit, 42 Mich. 584; People v. Hurbit, 24 Mich. 86, 9 Am. Rep. 108; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 202; Detroit v. Corey, 9 Mich. 164, 80 Am. Dec. 782; Detroit v. Moran, 44 Mich. 602; Niles Waterworks v. Niles, 59 Mich. 324; Darlington v. New York, 81 N. Y. 164, 88 Am. Dec. 248; Petz v. Detroit, 95 Mich. 166; O'Rourke v. Sioux Falls, 4 S. D. 47, 19 L. R. A. 789; Huron v. Campbell, 3 S. D. 309.

In one aspect of this case, the defendant undertakes to impugn the motives of the members of the city council in passing the ordinance and in making the conveyance. This cannot be done.

Soon Hing v. Crowley, 118 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1146; Fletcher v. Peck, 10 U. S. 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; People v. Batchellor, 53 N. Y. 128, 13 Am. Rep. 480; Western San. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 81 Pa. 185, 72 Am. Dec. 730; Bailey v. New York, 3 Hill, 531, 38 Am. Dec. 669; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140, 40 Am. Dec. 274; Newport v. Newport Light Co. 84 Ky. 163; Searcy v. Yarnell (Ark.) 1 S. W. 319; Louisville v. Wilde, 84 Ky. 290; State v. Crete, 23 Neb. 568; Merrill Railway & Lighting Co. v. Merrill, 80 Wis. 358; Burlington v. Burlington Water Co. 86 Iowa, 266; Smith v. Dedham, 144 Mass. 177; Atlantic City Waterworks Co. v. Atlantic City, 48 N. J. L. 473; Des Moines Street R. Co. v. Des Moines Broad-Gauge Street R. Co. 78 Iowa, 513; Grant v. Davenport, 18 Iowa, 179; Whitney v. New Haven, 58 Conn. 450; Capital City Water Co. v. Montgomery, 92 Ala. 366; East St. Louis v. East St. Louis Gaslight & Coke Co. 98 Ill. 415, 38 Am. Rep. 97; Carlyle Water, Light, & Power Co. v. Carlyle, 81 Ill. App. 825; Atkins v. Randolph, 31 Vt. 226; Reynolds v. Stark County Comrs 5 Ohio, 204; Newark v. Elliott, 5 Ohio St. 113; Beach v. Haynes, 12 Vt. 15; Memphis v. Mem- this Water Co. 5 Heisk. 495; Valparaiso v. Gardner, 87 Ind. 1, 49 Am. Rep. 416; Vincennes v. Collender, 86 Ind. 484; Indianapolis v. Indianapolis Gaslight & Coke Co. 66 Ind. 396; Wells v. Atlanta, 48 Ga. 67; New Orleans, M. & O. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 478.

Mr. Americus B. Melville, in support of petition for rehearing:

Klemme, the city treasurer of the city of Huron, had the possession of the money in question by virtue of an act of the city.

By an act of the city of Huron, which Klemme could not oppose, which could not be attacked collaterally, this money was paid into the city treasury. Therefore the city was bound to account for it before it could recover the property.

Chapman v. Douglas County Comrs. 107 U. S. 351, 27 L. ed. 380; Mittenberger v. Cooke, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 421, 21 L. ed. 864; Thomas v. Richmond, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 349, 20 L. ed. 453; Pollock, Cont. 264; Johnson v. Meeker, 1 Wis. 436; Morville v. American Tract Soc. 123 Mass. 129, 25 Am. Rep. 40; Hitchcock v. Galveston, 96 U. S. 341, 24 L. ed. 659; Clark v. Saline County Comrs. 9 Neb. 516; Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 862; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1081; Paul v. Kenosha, 22 Wis. 256, 94 Am. Dec. 598; Thomas v. Port Huron, 27 Mich. 822; Brown v. Atchison, 39 Kan. 37; State Board of Agriculture v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 47 Ind. 407, 17 Am. Rep. 702.

Corson, P. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

These two actions were consolidated and tried together in the court below, as they involved substantially the same question. Judgments were rendered in both actions in favor of the Huron Waterworks Company, and from the judgments the city of Huron and H. Ray Myers and Henry Schaller have appealed to this court.

A few paragraphs from the complaint of H. Ray Myers and Henry Schaller and three findings of fact by the court will sufficiently present the case for the purposes of this decision.

It is alleged in the complaint: "(3) that heretofore, and during the years 1888 and 1884, under and by virtue of the power conferred by said charter of the city of Huron, the city of Huron did construct, and cause to be constructed, a system of waterworks, consisting of engine, boiler, pumps, water mains, pipes, hydrants, sewers, and all other appurtenances necessary to a complete system of waterworks, at a great expense, to wit, as informed and believed by the plaintiffs, to be the sum of $40,000; and to pay for said waterworks and sewer, said city council issued the bonds of the city of Huron, for said $40,000 payable fifteen years after date, bearing interest at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, having first been directed to issue said bonds by vote of the people, at an election duly called and held for that purpose, as provided by said charter. (4) that heretofore, and during the year 1886, the said city of Huron caused to be bored and constructed a large 6-inch artesian well, as part of an addition to the aforesaid system of waterworks, and, as informed and believed, at an expense of $4,600." "(6) That said city of Huron, from the year 1888 to July 21, 1890, through its city council, operated, controlled, and maintained said waterworks, and made all needful rules and regulations concerning the distribution and use of water supplied by said waterworks for the prevention and extinguishment of fires, and to supply the citizens and taxpayers at a moderate and reasonable rate, in accordance with the provisions of section 7, subd. 9, of the charter of said city." "(8) That at the time of the commission of the grievances hereinafter mentioned said waterworks were owned by, and were of great value to, said city and taxpayers of said city of Huron, amounting, as informed and believed by the plaintiffs, to at least $100,000." "(12) That "the mayor and city council of said city of Huron, on or about the 21st day of July, 1890, did unlawfully and wrongfully, and in violation of the city charter and their high and legal duties and trust reposed in them by the taxpayers and corporators of the city of Huron, execute and deliver to the defendant, the Huron Waterworks Company, a deed in terms conveying to said defendant, the Huron Waterworks Company, the entire valuable waterworks system of and belonging to the city of Huron, including all machinery, buildings, grounds, engines, boilers, water mains, hydrants, artesian well, pumps, and all property and effects of every description appertaining to said waterworks system, and placed the said defendants the Huron Waterworks Company in full possession and control of the same, without the consent and to the great injury of the taxpayers and corporators of the city of Huron."

30 L. R. A.

The plaintiffs conclude with a prayer that the sale and conveyance might be declared null and void; that the officers of said city be enjoined from paying over to the Huron Waterworks Company the rents for the use of water for the city purposes contracted to be paid by the common council of the city; and that the possession of said waterworks property be restored to the city.

The court, among others, found the following facts: "Fourth. That the city of Huron made said conveyance in pursuance of an agreement to make the same, entered into on the 16th day of July, 1890, at which time $10,000 was paid into the city treasury by the Dakota Farm Mortgage Company, for the use of said Huron Waterworks Company, and on the 21st day of July, 1890, the balance of $35,000 of the purchase price was paid into the city treasury by the Dakota Farm Mortgage Company for the use of said Huron Waterworks Company, and on that day the city executed said deed of conveyance, and delivered the same to said Huron Waterworks Company, and placed said company in possession of said waterworks." "Seventh. That said waterworks plant was constructed and used by said city of Huron for the convenience of the citizens of the compact community embraced within the corporate limits of said city, for furnishing water to private consumers, for domestic and power purposes, and for the protection of said city and its inhabitants from the ravages of fire, and the same has at all times been used for those purposes, both by the city before the sale, and by said waterworks company since said sale." "Tenth. I find that neither the city, nor the taxpayers of the same, have ever paid or tendered back to said waterworks company any part of the purchase price of the said waterworks, or any part of the sum paid out for the repairs or extensions of said waterworks system, and no effort has been made on the part of the city or taxpayers to place the waterworks company in the same condition as they were before the sale and delivery of the said property."

The material facts in the action of Huron Waterworks Co. v. Huron are stated in the opinion delivered in that case on a former appeal, reported in 8 S. D. 610, and, it is sufficient to say, its object was to obtain an injunction against the officers of the city, restraining them from interfering with the waterworks property.

It will not be necessary to notice the numerous assignments of error, as we shall confine ourselves to the discussion of only two questions raised by the record, which are: First. Did the common council of the city of Huron possess the power, unaided by state legislation, to sell and transfer the Huron waterworks system to the Huron Waterworks Company, a private corporation? Second. If the city council did not possess the power to dispose of the waterworks property, can the city of Huron regain possession of the same, without refunding to the Huron Waterworks Company the money advanced or paid by it as consideration for the same?

The learned counsel for the appellants the city of Huron, H. Ray Myers, and Henry Schaller, contend: First. That the waterworks system of the city of Huron, having been constructed, by virtue of a power conferred upon the city, at the expense of the corporation, became the property of the city, for public use, and was charged with a trust, and that the common council of said city, without the sanction of state legislation, did not possess the power to sell or dispose of the same. Second. That the waterworks system of the city of Huron, having been constructed, kept, and maintained for public purposes, namely, for the supply of water for the extinguishment of fires within the corporate limits of the city, and for the supply of the inhabitants of said city with pure and wholesome water for domestic purposes, was clothed with a public trust of which the inhabitants of said city were the beneficiaries, and the common council of said city could not, without the consent of the legislative power of the state, divest said city of the trust. Third. That the only power conferred upon the city of Huron by its charter was the power to "construct and maintain" waterworks for the city, and that the power to "construct and maintain" does not include the power to sell or dispose of the same. Fourth. That the attempted sale and transfer of the said waterworks by the mayor and common council was without authority and void; and that such sale being void, the city of Huron, in its corporate capacity, is entitled to the possession of said waterworks property, without refunding to the pretended purchasers, the Huron Waterworks Company, the amount paid by it as the consideration of said purchase.

The learned counsel for the respondents insists: "First. The city had power under its 80 L. R. A.

charter to dispose of this property, because it was erected for the private advantage of the people of the compact community of which the municipality was composed, and is not charged with any public trust for the general public. Second. That the property was not devoted to a different use from that for which it was erected, and the city had the power to contract with a private corporation, and for such purpose, and for its maintenance, the location of the legal title is a matter of no concern whatever. Third. That, even if the city has made a contract in excess of its powers, it cannot be relieved from the effects of such contract until it has placed the plaintiff in the same position as it was before the contract was entered into. Fourth. That if the city has exercised a power beyond its charter, only the state can complain of such action in an appropriate proceeding instituted by the state. . . . Sixth. The city, while it was authorized to, was not bound to maintain these waterworks, and the court cannot compel it nor its officers to do so. . . . Eighth. All the contracts and deeds, taken together, are only an appropriate means of carrying out the powers conferred upon the city. They are only an appropriate means of providing for the maintenance of the waterworks system and for extensions to the same. . . ."

The city of Huron was incorporated under a special charter, and there are only three sections called to our attention as bearing upon the question, which are as follows:

Section 1 provides: "That the city of Huron . . . shall have power to make all contracts necessary to the exercise of its corporate powers, to purchase, hold, lease, transfer, and convey real and personal property for the use of the city. . . . and to exercise all the rights and privileges pertaining to a municipal corporation."

Section 7, pt. 8, provides as follows: "The city council shall have power . . . to organize and support fire companies, hook and ladder companies, and provide them with engines and all apparatus for extinguishment of fires. . . . to construct and furnish reservoirs, wells, cisterns, aqueducts, pumps, and other apparatus for protection against fires, and to establish regulations for the prevention and extinguishment of fires."

Section 7, pt. 9, provides as follows: "The city council shall have power . . . to construct and maintain waterworks and make all needful rules and regulations concerning the distribution and use of water supplied by such waterworks."

The waterworks of said city, as found by the court, were constructed and used by said city of Huron for protection against fire and for domestic purposes, and it had been so maintained and used for a number of years prior to said alleged sale. They were constructed by the corporation and at the expense of the same. No express power to sell or convey said property has been conferred upon the mayor and common council of said city, nor upon the corporation itself, unless such power is included in the powers conferred upon the city by section 1, which, as we have seen, provides "that the city of Huron . . . shall have power . . . to purchase, hold, lease, transfer, and convey real and personal property for the use of the city . . . and to exercise all the rights and privileges pertaining to a municipal corporation." The counsel for the respondents concedes that there is a class of property owned by a city that the common council of a city do not possess the power to sell, and he admits that public parks, squares, commons, cemeteries, etc., come within this class; but he insists that the waterworks of a city, though constructed by the city at the expense of the corporation, and used for protection against fire, and for the purposes of supplying pure and wholesome water to the citizens, do not belong to this class. It is necessary therefore, to determine the nature and character of waterworks properly held by a city. The grounds upon which municipal corporations are denied the power to sell and convey the class of property above referred to are that such property is held by the corporation for public use, and is therefore charged with a public trust of which the corporation cannot divest itself, except by the express authority of the lawmaking power of the state.

The duties imposed upon municipal corporations for governmental purposes purely need not be considered, as it cannot be claimed that the exercise of the power to create and maintain city waterworks is strictly a governmental purpose, so far as it relates to the state at large. Neither are public squares, parks, wharves, cemeteries, landing places, fire apparatus, etc., held for governmental purposes, in the sense that they relate to the general public of the state; but they are governmental in the sense that they exist for public use,—that is, for that portion of the public embraced within the limits of the city. This distinction is well stated by Judge Dillon in his work on Municipal Corporations. That learned author says: "As respects the usual and ordinary legislative and governmental powers conferred upon a municipality, the better to enable it to aid the state in properly governing that portion of its people residing within the municipality, such powers are in their very nature public, although embodied in a charter, and not conferred by laws general in their nature and applicable to the entire state. But powers or franchises of an exceptional or extraordinary or nonmunicipal nature may be, and sometimes are, conferred upon municipalities, such as are frequently conferred upon individuals or private corporations. Thus, for example, a city may be expressly authorized in its discretion to erect a public wharf and charge tolls for its use, or to supply its inhabitants with water or gas, charging them therefor and making a profit thereby. In one sense such powers are public in their nature, because conferred for the public advantage. In another sense, they may be considered private, because they are such as may be, and often are, conferred upon individuals and private corporations, and result in a special advantage or benefit to the municipality as distinct from the public at large. In this limited sense, and as forming a basis for the implied civil liability for damages caused by the negligent execution of such powers, it may be said that a municipality has a private as well a public character. And so, as hereafter shown, a municipality may have property rights which are so far private in their nature that they are not held at the pleasure of the legislature." 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 27.

30 L. R. A.

While parks, squares, wharves, landing places, fire apparatus, etc., are not absolutely necessary to enable a municipal corporation to perform its strictly governmental duties, so far as they relate to the state at large, they are so far held for governmental purposes that they cannot be appropriated to any other use without special legislation. Mr. Chief Justice Waite, in speaking of this class of city property in Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 473, 26 L. ed. 197, says: "(1) Property held for public uses, such as public buildings, streets, squares, parks, promenades, wharves, landing places, fire engines, hose and hose carriages, engine houses, engineering instruments and generally everything held for governmental purposes, cannot be subjected to the payment of the debts of the city. Its public character forbids such an appropriation." And Mr. Justice Field, in the same case (page 513, L. ed. 204), says: "What, then, is the property of a municipal corporation, which, upon its dissolution, a court of equity will lay hold of and apply to the payment of its debts? We answer, first, that it is not property held by the corporation in trust for a private charity, for in such property the corporation possesses no interest for its own uses; and, secondly, that it is not property held in trust for the public, for of such property the corporation is the mere agent of the state. In its streets, wharves, cemeteries, hospitals, court-houses, and other public buildings, the corporation has no proprietary rights distinct from the trust for the public. It holds them for public use, and to no other use can they be appropriated without special legislative sanction. It would be a perversion of that trust to apply them to other uses." It is difficult to perceive upon what principle a distinction can be made between the waterworks of a city, constructed at the expense of the corporation and used to supply water for fire purposes, domestic use, and other city purposes, and public parks, squares, fire apparatus, public buildings, etc., used for public purposes, and the courts in the later decisions seem to make no such distinction. Judge Dillon, in his work above referred to, says: "In some of the states it is held that the private property of municipal corporations—that is, such as they own for profit, and charged with no public trusts or uses—may be sold on execution against them.

. . . On principle, in the absence of statutable provision, or legislative policy in the particular state, it would seem to be a sound view to hold that the right to contract and the power to be sued give to the creditor a right to recover judgment; that judgments should be enforceable by execution against the strictly private property of the corporation, but not against any property owned or used by the corporation for public purposes, such as buildings, hospitals, and cemeteries, fire engines and apparatus, waterworks, and the like; and that judgments should not be deemed liens upon real property, except when it may be taken in execution." Dill. Mun. Corp. § 576.

It will be noticed that Judge Dillon places waterworks in the same class with public buildings, hospitals, cemeteries, etc., and in this the learned author is fully supported by the very able decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in New Orleans v. Morris, 105 U. S. 600, 28 L. ed. 1184. Mr. Justice Miller, speaking for the court, says: "The learned counsel, in the oral argument and in the brief, substantially concedes that the waterworks themselves, in the hands of the city, were not liable to be sold for the debts of the city. And, if no such concession were made, we think it quite clear that these works were of a character which, like the wharves owned by the city, were of such public utility and necessity that they were held in trust for the use of the citizens. In this respect they were the same as public parks and buildings, and were not liable to sale under execution for ordinary debts against the city. . . . In the next place, the city was not situated, as regards this property, as a private person would be in the purchase and acquisition of ordinary property. The city could not have sold this property as the law stood. It could not have put it into a joint-stock company without the aid of a new law. The legislature, in authorizing the change in the form of the ownership of the waterworks, could, since it injured nobody and invaded no one's rights, say, as to the city, whether it be called new property or not, that such ownership could continue exempt from execution. As the city was using no means in acquiring this stock which could have been appropriated under any circumstances to the payment of the debts of the appellees, the legislature impaired no obligation of the city in declaring the stock thus acquired exempt from liability for debts." This decision is important, not only as being made by the highest court of the nation, but as being the unanimous opinion of that court upon the question, and made subsequently to the decision in the Meriwether Case, above cited.

It is clear and to the point that the waterworks of a city belong to the same class of property as "wharves, parks," etc., and holds distinctly that the waterworks property of a city cannot be sold, except by authority of the legislature, and the court says: "We think it quite clear that these works were of a character which, like the wharves owned by the city, were of such public utility that they were held in trust for the use of the citizens." The same view is taken by the court of appeals in the state of New York in the case of Rochester v. Rush, 80 N. Y. 802. In that case the court says: "The argument of the appellant that the property in question would properly be exempt from a city tax, as it was procured by a tax upon property within the city, but not from a county tax, but the people of the county were not taxed to procure it, would apply with equal force to the city hall and engine houses and machines and equipments which make those houses necessary, and, if sound, would subject them to the hazard of sale under a treasurer's warrant for the enforcement of the county tax. I am unable to perceive that in any sense the waterworks can be regarded as the private property of the city, as distinguished from property held by it for public use. These considerations lead to the opinion that the property was not taxable, and that the proceedings on the part of the assessors of the town of Rush in regard thereto cannot be sustained."

80 L. R. A.

The supreme court of Connecticut, in the well considered case of West Hartford v. Hartford Water Comrs. 44 Conn. 860, lays down the same doctrine. In that case the court says: "The introduction of a supply of water for the preservation of the health of its inhabitants by the city of Hartford is unquestionably now to be accepted as an undertaking for the public good, in the judicial sense of that term, not, indeed, as the discharge of one of the few governmental duties imposed upon it, but as ranking next in order. For this purpose the legislature invested the city with a portion of its sovereignty, and authorized it to enter within the territorial limits of West Hartford, and condemn by process of law certain lands therein for the purpose of storing water for its own inhabitants. It authorized the assessment of a tax upon property within the city of Hartford for money wherewith to pay for this land, because the taking and holding was for the public good."

Having, as we think, established the proposition that the waterworks of a city, when constructed and owned by the city, are to be regarded the same as other city property held for public use, and therefore charged and clothed with a public trust, it would seem to follow that such property cannot be sold and conveyed by the mayor and common council of the city, unless under special authority conferred upon them to so sell and convey the same, by the legislative power of the state. Judge Dillon says, in his work before referred to, that they (municipal corporations) cannot dispose of property of a public nature in violation of the trusts upon which it is held, and they cannot, except under valid legislative authority, dispose of the public squares, streets, or commons. See 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 575, and cases cited. In the recent case of Roberts v. Louisville (decided in 1891) 92 Ky. 95, 13 L. R. A. 844, the same doctrine was laid down by the supreme court of Kentucky as to the wharves held by the city of Louisville. In that case the court says: "The power of a municipal corporation to acquire land for the purpose of erecting wharves thereon, and to charge wharfage, is not a necessary incident of its charter, but must, like all its other powers, be derived directly from the legislature, of course to be exercised within the limits and upon conditions of the grant. Dill. Mun. Corp. § 110. And, looking to the nature and purpose of such special grant, it must be regarded as a trust, involving duties and obligations to the public and individuals which cannot be ignored or shifted; for the power to acquire implies the duty of the municipality, through its governing head, to maintain and preserve wharf property for benefit of the public, without discrimination or unreasonable charges for individual use. In every instance, so far as we have observed, wharf property of the city of Louisville has been acquired under act of the legislature and paid for by taxation; and in no case is there evidence of legislative intention that it should be held otherwise than in trust for use of the public, and in aid of trade and commerce. The wharf property being so held, the city of Louisville cannot transfer its title or possession, nor, according to a plain and well-settled principle, can the general council, which is by statute invested with power of control, and burdened with duty of maintaining, preserving, and operating the wharves, either delegate the power or disable itself from performing the duties." In that case the judgment of the court below dismissing the bill for an injunction was reversed, the court, in effect, holding that an injunction enjoining the mayor and common council from making the sale should be granted. In the case of Smith v. Nashville, 88 Tenn. 464, 7 L. R. A. 469, also a late decision made in 1890, the supreme court of Tennessee says: "It is seen at once that the waterworks are corporate property. That is not denied. The debate is with respect to the nature of the use. As to that, for the sake of convenience, we divide all the purposes for which the city furnishes water into three classes: (1) To extinguish fires and sprinkling the streets; (2) to supply citizens of the city; (3) to supplying persons and factories adjacent to but beyond the corporate limits. If the business were confined to the first class, there would be no ground to base a decision on, so clearly would the use be exclusively for public advantage. We think there can be but little more doubt about the second class, especially in view of certain words in the city charter, to which we will advert presently. . . . Having accepted the charter, and undertaken to exercise this authority in the manner detailed by the witness, it cannot be held that the city in doing so is engaging in a private enterprise, or performing a municipal function for a private end. It is the use of corporate property for corporate purposes, in the sense of the revenue law of 1877. It can make no difference whether the water be furnished the inhabitants as a gratuity or for a recompense, the sum raised in the latter case being reasonable, and applied for legitimate purposes."

From this examination of the authorities, we conclude that there is no distinction between the nature of waterworks property owned and held by the city, and public parks, squares, wharves, quarries, hospitals, cemeteries, city halls, court-houses, fire engines, and apparatus, and other property owned and held by the city for public use. All such property is held by the municipality as a trustee in trust for the use and benefit of the citizens of the municipality, and it cannot be sold or disposed of by the common council of the city, except under the authority of the state legislature. Such property, as before stated, is private property, in the sense that the municipality cannot be deprived of it without compensation, no more than can a private corporation be deprived of its property by the law-making power. But such property is so owned and held by the municipality as the trustee of the citizens of the municipality, for the use and benefit of such citizens. It has been acquired by the corporation at the expense of the taxpayers of the city, for their use and benefit, and the law will not permit the corporation to divest itself of the trust, nor to deprive the citizens of their just rights as beneficiaries in the same.

Counsel for respondents has called our attention to a number of cases which he contends 80 L. R. A.

hold a contrary doctrine from those to which we have directed attention. But, after a careful examination of those authorities, we are inclined to the opinion that there is no such conflict as the counsel suggests. The leading case cited is Bailey v. New York, 8 Hill, 538, 88 Am. Dec. 669, in which Chief Justice Nelson, in the course of the opinion, uses language, taken by itself, that possibly might be construed as favorable to the respondents' contention, but it must be construed with reference to the case before the court. The questions we are now considering were not involved, the only question there being whether or not the city of New York was liable for damages caused by a defective dam erected in the construction of its water system. The views expressed by the chief justice in that case have been repudiated by the courts of New York. In Darlington v. New York, 31 N. Y. 164, 88 Am. Dec. 248, the court of appeals expressly disapprove of the doctrine announced by Chief Justice Nelson. That court, on pages 200 and 201, says: "If this case of Bailey v. New York had rested where it was left by the supreme court, though I should be obliged to acknowledge my inability to appreciate the distinction suggested between the public and private functions of the city government, the judgment would have been entitled to a certain weight as authority. But a new trial took place, pursuant to the judgment of the supreme court, when the plaintiff recovered a very large verdict, and the case was presented to the court for the correction of errors, whose judgment of affirmance is reported in 2 Denio, 433. The chancellor and three senators delivered written opinions in favor of affirmance, and the president of the senate an opinion for reversal. None of the opinions even alluded to the ground taken in the opinion of the supreme court. . . . The liability of the defendants being established by the court of ultimate review, on an entirely different theory from that which affirmed the enterprise of conveying water into the city to be a private work, as distinguished from an act of municipal government, the doctrine of the opinion of the supreme court was substantially repudiated, and cannot, therefore, be considered as a precedent. It is but the opinion of the eminent chief justice and learned associates, and does not, like a final adjudication upon the cause of action, settle any principle of law." And that court, speaking of the question now before us, says: "The subjects of the several actions, in the cases I have been examining, were as clearly matters of municipal government as any which could be presented. Nothing could, in the nature of things, partake less of a private character than the supplying of water to and the cleaning of the streets of a town containing nearly a million of inhabitants. If these were not public subjects, and under the control of the legislature, the city is not subordinate to the supreme legislative power on any conceivable subject. It is an imperium in imperio." We have already seen that in the case of Rochester v. Rush, 80 N. Y. 802, the court of appeals of New York distinctly placed waterworks in the class of property held for public use, and therefore exempt from taxation. Georgia held that the common council of the city of Rome had power to mortgage the waterworks for money advanced for its construction. The court in that case was construing a charter in which the powers conferred upon the common council of the city of Rome were exceedingly broad and comprehensive,—much more so than those conferred upon the city of Huron as a corporation,—and they were conferred directly upon the common council itself. The decision is one of too local a character and too dependent upon the provisions of the charter to be of much weight, and so it seems to have been regarded, as it is rarely referred to by the courts; and Judge Dillon, in citing the decision, adds: "Query, as to implied power to mortgage waterworks, see supra, section 576, and note 577,"—thus indicating that that learned author does not regard the doctrine of the court as sound in principle. The case of Adams v. Memphis & L. R. R. Co. 2 Coldw. 645, involved the sale, by the common council of the city, of some outlying lands donated to the city. The land had not been devoted to any public use, and was not held by the city in trust for public purposes. It was therefore strictly private property of the city, held like the private property of a natural person or private corporation. The decision in that case, therefore, has no application to the case at bar.

The doctrine laid down in the case of Western Soc. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 81 Pa. 175, 73 Am. Dec. 780, does not seem to be applicable to this case. The contest there was between the city and a private gas company in which the city held stock. The case is somewhat complicated, and it is not easy to determine the question actually decided by the court. There is language used by the judge writing the opinion that cannot be sustained in the light of more modern authority, but we discover nothing in the decision itself that is in conflict with the doctrine that waterworks, when constructed and owned by the city, are held for public use, and therefore charged with a public trust. Our conclusion is that the waterworks in controversy were held by the city of Huron for public use, and therefore charged and clothed with a public trust, and that the mayor and common council of the city had no authority to sell and transfer the same. "Municipal corporations are created and exist for the public advantage, and not for the benefit of the officers or of particular individuals or classes. The corporation is the artificial body created by the law, and not the officers, since these are, from the lowest up to the council or mayor, the mere ministers of the corporation." 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 31.

The common council of the city of Huron was, to a certain extent, at least, but agent of the corporation, and possessed only such authority as was conferred upon it by its charter. While it probably possessed the power of disposing of strictly private property held by the city, and not held for public use, and therefore not charged with a trust, it did not possess the power to dispose of the city waterworks constructed by the corporation, and held for public use; and the power conferred by the first section of its charter to sell and dispose of the property of the city must be held to be limited to that class of property held as strictly private property, and not charged with any public use.

Having arrived at the conclusion that the sale of the waterworks by the city council was made without authority, and was void, it becomes necessary to determine the second question presented, namely, is the city of Huron entitled to the possession of the waterworks property without refunding to the Huron Waterworks Company the money paid by it to the city treasurer as the consideration therefor, and the money expended by said company in making improvements and repairs thereon? It will be noticed, from the finding of fact in reference to the payment of the consideration, that it was paid to the city treasurer, or "into the city treasury." It is not found that the treasurer paid out the same by the order of the common council, upon any legitimate or other indebtedness of the city, or that he has appropriated it to any city purpose whatever. The act of the city treasurer in receiving the money cannot bind the city to refund it. As city treasurer, his only authority is to receive and receipt for moneys properly due the city, or that are legally paid into the city treasury. The money paid for this waterworks property did not belong to the city, and the money was therefore paid to one who had no authority, as treasurer or agent of the city, to receive it in the name of the city, and apply it in the payment of city indebtedness. The money in the hands of the treasurer did not belong to the city, and there being no finding that the city, in its corporate capacity, accepted and appropriated the money, the city is not liable to refund the same. This subject was very fully considered and discussed in Hero v. San Francisco, 33 Cal. 184. That was an action brought to recover of the city money paid by the plaintiff for "City Slip property," the sale of which by the city had been held illegal and void. The supreme court in that case held that the plaintiff could not recover, as he had failed to show, and the court below had failed to find, that the corporation in its corporate capacity had appropriated the money paid, although it was shown that the money paid for the property had been paid into the city treasury and paid out by the treasurer on city indebtedness. The court in that case, on page 147, says: "The city, in our opinion, not being responsible for the acts of her assumed agents up to and including the placing of the money in the treasury, and the money being then the money of the plaintiff, responsibility for the money does not attach to her till she has converted it to her own use. The unauthorized act of the treasurer in paying it out to a third person is not the act of the city, and it makes no difference in this respect whether he pays it to a creditor of the city or to any other person. Suppose that he or the secretary of the land committee, while the money was in his hands, acting upon the fact, of which all persons concerned had notice, that the sale was a nullity, had returned the money to the plaintiff, it could not be said that the act of payment was the act of the city. She could not rightfully do anything with the money, and, to be responsible for it, she must have wrongfully converted it to her own use, and this she must have done by some corporate act, and the only act competent for that purpose was an appropriation, for that is the only manner in which she can dispose of money. The reports of the secretary of the land committee and of the treasurer, and the acceptance of the reports by the common council, neither changed the ownership, the custody nor control of the money,—it still remained in the hands of the treasurer, and continued the property of the plaintiff." In the case of Pimental v. San Francisco, 21 Cal. 357, one of the same class of "City Slip cases" above referred to, the plaintiff was held entitled to recover back the money paid; but upon the ground that it was shown, not only to have been received by the city treasurer, but appropriated by the corporate authority of the city, by ordinances and resolutions. In that case Chief Justice Field, speaking for the court, on page 361 says: "The moneys paid by the bidders went into the treasury of the city, and were afterward, by different ordinances and resolutions, appropriated to municipal purposes. To the different actions, as we have mentioned, various defenses have been interposed. In some of them, as already stated, the entire transactions giving rise to or connected with the alleged sale have been treated as transactions to which the city was an absolute stranger; in other words, a want of privity, as it is termed, between the bidders and the city has been alleged. This alleged want of privity, as we understand it, amounts to this: That, inasmuch as the mayor and land committee had no authority to make the sale, they had no authority to pay the money which they had received from the bidders into the treasury of the city, and therefore no obligation can be fastened from such unauthorized act upon the city. The position thus restricted in its statement is undoubtedly correct, but the facts of the cases go beyond this statement. They show an appropriation of the proceeds, and the liability of the city arises from the use of the moneys, or her refusal to refund them after their receipt." The same doctrine is laid down in Agawam Nat. Bank v. South Hadley, 128 Mass. 508. In that case the court says: "But the plaintiff contends that it is entitled to recover upon the last count in the declaration for money had and received, and at the trial offered to show that the money paid or credited to the town treasurer upon the notes in suit was used by him in the payment of debts due from the town. This evidence was properly rejected. It fails to show that the money was received by the town in its corporate capacity, or that the act of the treasurer in applying it to the payment of its debts was ever authorized or ratified by the town. The difficulty is that the money was paid to one who had no authority as treasurer or as agent of the town to receive it in the name of the town, and apply it to the payment of town debts. If a town could be held in an action for money had and received, under such circumstances, then the purpose of the second and third sections of the statute would be wholly defeated. It makes no difference that the treasurer used this specific money in payment of the town debts. There is nothing to show any appropriation of such payments by the town to its own use, or any ratification of the act. The money in the hands of the treasurer did not belong to the town." Litchfield v. Ballou, 114 U. S. 190, 29 L. ed. 132. It would be manifestly unjust and inequitable to require the city of Huron to refund the consideration paid for these waterworks, before it can be restored to the possession of the same, because the same was paid to and received by an officer of the city unauthorized to receive it. If it had been further found by the court in this case that the city of Huron, through its proper corporate authorities, had appropriated the money so paid to the payment of the legitimate debts of the city, another question might have arisen, not necessary now to consider. But it is clear that, upon principle and authority, upon the findings in this case, the conclusions of law and the judgment should have been in favor of the city of Huron, H. Ray Myers, and Henry Schaller. The circuit court, in arriving at a different conclusion, in our opinion, committed error.

30 L. R. A.

The judgments of the court below are reversed, and the case remanded, with instructions to the circuit court to correct its conclusions of law in accordance with this opinion, and render the proper judgments in favor of the city of Huron, H. Ray Myers, and Henry Schaller, as prayed for in their complaint, and against the Huron Waterworks Company; and it is so ordered, all the judges concurring.

On January 8, 1896, Kellam, J., handed down the following opinion in response to the petition for rehearing:

An application for a rehearing of this case having been duly made and an oral argument by special order having been allowed and heard, the majority of the court now adhere to the former opinion published in — S. D.

— For myself I think the case should be remanded for further investigation of the question, whether the consideration claimed to have been paid for the waterworks was actually received and beneficially used by the city. As this question is not considered material by the majority of the court, I do not discuss it, merely suggesting my own opinion that if it was so received and used, the city should not be allowed to recover the plant and at the same time retain the consideration which it received for a conveyance of it.

The petition for a rehearing is denied.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

J. J. DOUGLASS COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
MINNESOTA TRANSFER RAILWAY COMPANY, Respnt.

(.....Minn.....)

*Five barrels of whiskey were delivered for transportation to a common carrier, accompanied by a written statement of the shipper that the value of the property was $20 per barrel, and also, as one of the conditions upon which the property should be transported, that "the amount of loss or damage for which any carrier becomes liable shall be computed at the value of the property at the time and place of shipment under the bill of lading, unless a lower value has been agreed upon or is determined by the classification upon which the rate is based, in either of which events such lower value shall be the maximum price to govern such computation." The carrier executed, and the shipper accepted, a bill of lading in accordance with these terms, in which the value of the goods was stated to be $20 per barrel, and classifying them as second-class freight, and fixing the rate of freight at $2.78 per 100 pounds. The bill of lading also contained a stipulation that, "in consideration of rates inserted, it is agreed that, in case of loss or damage, the same shall be adjusted at the agreed valuation of $20 per barrel." If the valuation of the goods had been at their full actual value, they would have been classified as first-class freight, and the rate of freight would have been $3.45 per 100 pounds. The shipper fixed and agreed to such valuation in order to obtain, and he did thereby obtain, the lower rate of freight, the charge for transportation being based on such valuation. The goods were lost by the negligence of the carrier. Held, in an action for such loss, that the stipulation that such loss should be adjusted at the agreed valuation of $20 per barrel was valid, and that the recovery by the shipper is limited to the value named.

(October 30, 1895.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the District Court for Hennepin County overruling a motion for new trial after verdict in favor of defendant in a case submitted upon an agreed statement of facts without action for the purpose of determining defendant's liability for the value of certain property delivered to it for transportation and which was forwarded contrary to orders so that it reached the insolvent consignee notwithstanding plaintiff's efforts to stop it in transitu. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Merrick & Merrick, for appellant:

The words: "In consideration of rates inserted it is agreed that in case of loss or damage the same shall be adjusted at agreed valuation of $20 per barrel"—stamped upon the face of the bill of lading, if they can be construed into a contract to limit the liability of the carrier to the sum of $20 per barrel in case of loss or damage, must be so construed as to limit such liability only in case of loss without the fault or negligence of the carrier.

Black v. Goodrich Transp. Co. 55 Wis. 319, 42 Am. Rep. 718; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 47 U. S. 6 How. 344, 12 L. ed. 465; New York O. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co. 93 U. S. 173, 23 L. ed. 872; Candee v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 34 Wis. 471, 17 Am. Rep. 452; Hubbard v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 83 Wis. 558; Morrison v. Phillips & C. Constr. Co. 44 Wis. 405, 28 Am. Rep. 599.

In order to exempt a carrier from liability for the want of ordinary care or negligence of any kind on the part of its servants or agents, the contract must so expressly provide, and, in the absence of such express agreement, it will be presumed that there was no intention on the part of the carrier to exempt himself from such liability.

Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 543, 19 Am. Rep. 800; Christenson v. American Exp. Co. 15 Minn. 270, 2 Am. Rep. 122; Moulton v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 81 Minn. 85, 47 Am. Rep. 781; Shriver v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. 24 Minn. 506, 81 Am. Rep. 353; New York O. R. Co. v. Lockwood, and Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co. supra; Boehl v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 44 Minn. 191.

The facts in the case at bar are entirely different from those in the case of Alair v. Northern P. R. Co. 53 Minn. 160, so that this decision is in no sense applicable to the principle which we contend for.

United States Exp. Co. v. Backman, 28 Ohio St. 144; New York O. R. Co. v. Lockwood, supra; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655, 24 L. ed. 535; Southern Exp. Co. v. Moon, 39 Miss. 822; Moulton v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. supra; Garnett v. Willan, 5 Barn. & Ald. 53; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wynn, 88 Tenn. 320; Davidson v. Graham, 2 Ohio St. 131; Adams Exp. Co. v. Stettaners, 61 Ill. 184, 14 Am. Rep. 57; Boehl v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., and Christenson v. American Exp. Co., supra; Black v. Goodrich Transp. Co. 55 Wis. 319, 42 Am. Rep. 718; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 47 U. S. 6 How. 344, 12 L. ed. 465; Orndorff v. Adams Exp. Co. 8 Bush, 194, 96 Am. Dec. 207; Kirby v. Adams Exp. Co. 3 Mo. App. 899; Davis v. Garrett, 6 Bing. 718; American Exp. Co. v. Sands, 55 Pa. 140; Lamb v. Camden & A. R. & Transp. Co. 46 N. Y. 271, 7 Am. Rep. 827; Lawson, Carr, chap. 2, § 29, and cases cited; Michigan S. & N. I. R. Co. v. Heaton, 37 Ind. 448, 10 Am. Rep. 89; Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 547, 19 Am. Rep. 800.

When a carrier accepts goods to be carried with the directions on the part of the owner to carry them in a particular way or by a specified route, it is bound to obey such instructions, and if it attempts to perform the contract different from the directions, it becomes an insurer, and cannot avail itself of any exceptions in the contract.

Lawson, Carr, chap. 7; Galveston, H. & H.

*Headnote by MITCHELL, J.

Note.—For power to limit amount of carrier's liability in case of negligence, see note to Ballou v. Earle (R. L.) 14 L. R. A. 433.
80 L. R. A.

R. Co. v. Allison, 59 Tex. 198; Duneth v. Wade, 8 Ill. 285; Robinson v. Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co. 45 Iowa, 470; Hastings v. Pepper, 11 Pick. 41; Maghee v. Camden & A. R. Transp. Co. 45 N. Y. 514, 6 Am. Rep. 124; Sleat v. Fogg, 5 Barn. & Ald. 348; Angell, Carr. §§ 269, 271; Hutchinson, Carr. §§ 249, 257, 260; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wynn, 88 Tenn. 320; Johnson v. New York C. R. Co. 88 N. Y. 610, 88 Am. Dec. 416; Ackley v. Kellogg, 8 Cow. 225.

It cannot be held that when the contract in this case was made it had any reference whatever to an anticipated gross violation of it, in forwarding the goods in a mode prohibited by the owner.

The loss and damage spoken of in the stipulation can only have reference to loss or damage occurring in the ordinary and usual mode of transportation.

Butler v. The Arrow, 6 McLean, 470; Magnin v. Dinmore, 56 N. Y. 168; Steele v. Townsend, 37 Ala. 247, 79 Am. Dec. 49; Ayres v. Western R. Corp. 14 Blatchf. 9; Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Indianapolis & C. R. Co. 1 Disney (Ohio) 480; St. Louis & S. E. R. Co. v. Smuck, 49 Ind. 302; Barter v. Wheeler, 49 N. H. 9, 6 Am. Rep. 434; Southern Exp. Co. v. Moon, 89 Miss. 823; Black v. Goodrich Transp. Co. 55 Wis. 819, 42 Am. Rep. 718; Hooper v. Wells, F. & Co. 27 Cal. 11, 85 Am. Dec. 311; Edsall v. Camden & A. R. & Transp. Co. 50 N. Y. 861; Westcott v. Fargo, 61 N. Y. 553, 19 Am. Rep. 300; Hutchinson, Carr. § 270; Lawson, Carr. chap. 6, p. 71, and cases cited in notes.

Although a common carrier may limit his liability as an insurer he is not allowed to contract against the consequences of his own negligence, or that of his servants.

Christenson v. American Exp. Co. 15 Minn. 270, 2 Am. Rep. 122; Moulton v. St. Paul, M. & N. R. Co. 31 Minn. 85, 47 Am. Rep. 781; Boehl v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 44 Minn. 191; Shriver v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. 24 Minn. 508, 31 Am. Rep. 358; Ortt v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 36 Minn. 396.

A distinction should be made between the violation of the contract on the part of the carrier by reason of which the property is lost, and the loss of property occurring through some accident in the running or operation of the trains.

Ibid.

The requirement of the law has ever been, and is now, that the common carrier shall be diligent and careful in the transportation of its freight, and public policy forbids that it shall throw off that obligation by stipulation for exemption, in whole or in part, from the consequences of negligent acts. This view is sustained by sound reason and also by the weight of authority.

Coward v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 16 Lea, 225, 57 Am. Rep. 227; Moulton v. St. Paul, M. & N. R. Co. 31 Minn. 85, 47 Am. Rep. 781; Kanone City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co. v. Simpson, 80 Kan. 645, 46 Am. Rep. 104; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Abels, 60 Miss. 1019; United States Exp. Co. v. Backman, 28 Ohio St. 144; Black v. Goodrich Transp. Co. 55 Wis. 819, 42 Am. Rep. 718; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Little, 71 Ala. 611; Rosenfeld v. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. 108 Ind. 121; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fagan, 72 Tex. 127, 2 L. R. A. 75.

80 L. R. A.

Mr. W. H. Norris, for respondent:

The liability, if any, of respondent, if a carrier, whether protected by this contract or not, whether the contract is itself valid or invalid, is not a carrier's common-law liability as an insurer.

Such liability is confined to safe carriage and delivery to the consignee; to liability for loss of or injury to the goods themselves.

Christenson v. American Exp. Co. 15 Minn. 270, 2 Am. Rep. 122; New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 47 U. S. 6 How. 381, 12 L. ed. 481; Alair v. Northern P. R. Co. 53 Minn. 163.

The term "public policy," or "policy of the law," is sometimes to be invoked as authority for a decision when a more definite reason cannot readily be assigned.

Rogers v. Kennebec S. B. Co. 86 Me. 261, 25 L. R. A. 491.

Greenhood on Public Policy, page 1, says that any contract made by a competent party, upon valuable consideration, when made freely and intelligently, is valid, unless it is within the rule that if such contract bind the maker to do something opposed to the public policy of the state or nation, or conflicts with the wants, interest, or prevailing sentiment of the people, or our obligations to the world, or is repugnant to the morals of the times, it is void, however solemnly the same may be made.

Public policy is a variable quantity.

Davies v. Davies, L. R. 38 Ch. Div. 359; Griswold v. Illinois C. R. Co. 90 Iowa, 265, 24 L. R. A. 647, 651; Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 233, 86 L. ed. 418; Nashville & C. R. Co. v. Jackson, 6 Heisk. 271 (1871); Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Little, 71 Ala. 611 (1832).

The only public policy which as such could have a right to declare this contract void is that of the state of Kentucky where the contract was made.

But our agreed case concedes that this "bill of lading was not contrary to the law of Kentucky."

Orndorff v. Adams Exp. Co. 3 Bush, 194, 96 Am. Dec. 207.

The public policy of the state of Minnesota cannot, if it would, affect the validity of a contract made in another state for an interstate shipment across numerous states; and we can hardly think that the public policy of Minnesota would do so, if it could.

Hull v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 41 Minn. 510, 5 L. R. A. 587 (1889).

As between the different states of this Union, the public policy which shall determine the validity of a contract must be the public policy of the state in which the contract was made.

Doyle v. Continental Ins. Co. 94 U. S. 535, 24 L. ed. 148; Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 39 U. S. 18 Pet. 519, 10 L. ed. 274; Vidal v. Philadelphia, 43 U. S. 2 How. 127, 11 L. ed. 205; Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 331, 29 L. ed. 717; Primrose v. Western U. Tele. Co. 154 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 833 (1894); New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 857, 21 L. ed. 627; Camp v. Western U. Tele. Co. 1 Met. (Ky.) 164, 71 Am. Dec. 461.

The destructive force of supposed public policy should be applied with clear knowledge and extreme caution.

Printing & N. R. Co. v. Sampson, L. R. 19 Eq. 465 (1875); New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 47 U. S. 6 How. 382, 12 L. ed. 482.

This contract does not assume to relieve against any common-law liability; it only defines the measure of that liability.

Graves v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 187 Mass. 85, 50 Am. Rep. 282.

A carrier is entitled to honest treatment from his customers.

Orange County Bank v. Brown, 9 Wend. 85, 117, 24 Am. Dec. 129; Warner v. Western Transp. Co. 5 Robt. 490; Magnin v. Dinmore, 62 N. Y. 85, 20 Am. Rep. 442; Humphreys v. Perry, 148 U. S. 627, 37 L. ed. 587; Haines v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 29 Minn. 160.

A contract for definite liability in consideration of reduced rates was sustained in Squire v. New York C. R. Co. 98 Mass. 239, 246, 249, 98 Am. Dec. 157.

Agreed valuation as a valid limitation of liability was sustained in Graves v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 187 Mass. 85, 50 Am. Rep. 282. See also Hill v. Boston, H. T. & W. R. Co. 144 Mass. 284; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Wynn, 88 Tenn. 320; Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 112 U. S. 831, 28 L. ed. 717; Harvey v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 74 Mo. 589; Brehme v. Adams Exp. Co. 28 Md. 329; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Sherrod, 84 Ala. 178.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The matter in dispute between these parties was submitted to the district court, without action, upon an agreed state of facts. Gen. Stat. 1894, § 6083. The only facts material on this appeal are the following: The Ohio & Mississippi Railway Company is a common carrier operating a line of railway from Louisville, Ky., to East St. Louis, Ill., where it makes connection with another like carrier operating a line of railway from East St. Louis to Chicago, where it makes a like connection with a third like carrier operating a line of railway from Chicago to St. Paul, where it makes a like connection with the transfer tracks of the defendant, the Minnesota Transfer Railway Company, a like carrier, which connects with the railways of both the Northern Pacific Railway Company and the Great Northern Railway Company, like carriers, each of which operates a line of railway from St. Paul to Butte, Mont.; the transfer of freight from railroads running into St. Paul from the south and east to the railroads running from St. Paul to the west and north being made by the defendant, over its system of transfer tracks. In October, 1892, at Louisville, Ky., the plaintiff delivered to the first-named railway company (the Ohio & Mississippi) five barrels of whiskey, weighing 1,930 pounds, now admitted to have been of the actual value of $443.89. The property was so delivered to be transported by the Ohio & Mississippi Railway Company and its connecting lines from Louisville to Butte, being consigned to one Cohen, at the latter place.

The delivery of the property to the Ohio & Mississippi Railway Company was accompanied by the following paper, prepared, executed, and presented by the plaintiff itself:

Received of J. J. Douglass Co. the following described packages (contents unknown), in store at his risk, to be forwarded by the Ohio & Mississippi Railway Company, subject to all the conditions (as printed on the back of this sheet) of a bill of lading which will be issued by said company after the same shall have been loaded into the cars of said company.

Articles.

Weight (subject to correction)

Alex. Cohen, Butte, Mont.

Via Great Northern R. R.

Five bls. whiskey O. R. L. 20 Val.

Among the conditions referred to as printed on the back of this paper was the following:

"The amount of any loss or damage for which any carrier becomes liable shall be computed at the value of the property at the time and place of shipment under this bill of lading, unless a lower value has been agreed upon or is determined by the classification upon which the rate is based, in either of which events such lower value shall be the maximum price to govern such computation."

The Ohio & Mississippi Railway then executed and delivered to the plaintiff a bill of lading in accordance with the terms and conditions proposed by the plaintiff, in which the railway company agreed to carry the property to its destination if on its own road; otherwise, to deliver it to another carrier on the route to such destination. It further provided that the rate of freight from Louisville to Butte should be $2.73 per 100 pounds, the goods being classed as second class freight. It also showed that the goods were consigned via the Great Northern Railway, and stated the value of the goods at $20 per barrel, the same given by the plaintiff in the paper already referred to. The bill of lading contained the following provisions: "It is mutually agreed, in consideration of the rate of freight hereinafter named, as to each carrier of all or any of said property over all or any portion of said route to destination, and as to each party at any time interested in all or any of said property, that every service to be performed hereunder shall be subject to all the conditions herein contained, and which are hereby agreed to by the shipper, and by him accepted for himself and assigns as just and reasonable." Also: "In consideration of rates inserted, it is agreed that, in case of loss or damage, the same shall be adjusted at the agreed valuation of $20 per barrel." The same conditions were printed on the back of this bill of lading as upon the paper previously referred to, as prepared, executed, and presented by the plaintiff upon delivery of property. "This bill of lading was not contrary to the law of Kentucky." "If said bill of lading had not contained the provision, 'In consideration of rates inserted, it is agreed that, in case of loss or damage, the same shall be adjusted at agreed valuation of $20 a barrel,' and if said whiskey had been shipped without any valuation, the same would have been rated as first class, and the freight thereon from Louisville aforesaid to Butte aforesaid would have been

$3.45 per hundred pounds." "Said J. J. Douglass Company then was and long had been a frequent and heavy shipper of such goods over said lines of railway, well knew and intended to avail itself of such valuation and agreement as to valuation, in order to obtain, and so obtained, the shipment thereof at such lower rate of freight, at $2.72 per one hundred pounds."

The property, accompanied by a waybill setting forth that the shipment from St. Paul to Butte should be over the Great Northern Railway Company, and that the same was of the value of $20 per barrel, was transported by the Ohio & Mississippi Railway Company and its connecting carriers from Louisville to St. Paul, and there delivered to the defendant, which in due time shipped the same for Butte over the Northern Pacific Railway Company instead of the Great Northern Railway Company, as directed. While the goods were still in transit over the Northern Pacific Railroad, the plaintiff, having discovered the insolvency of the consignee, and having a right for that reason to stop the goods in transit, but being ignorant of the misshipment over the Northern Pacific Railroad, directed the Ohio & Mississippi Railway Company to stop delivery thereof, and to hold the same subject to their order. The Ohio & Mississippi Railway Company, being also ignorant of the misshipment, immediately communicated these orders to its next succeeding carrier, who being likewise ignorant of the error in shipment, transmitted the orders to the agent of the Great Northern Railway Company at Butte. If the goods had been shipped, as plaintiff directed, over the Great Northern Railway, the order would have been seasonable to prevent their delivery to the consignee; but the Northern Pacific Railway Company, being ignorant of any such order, delivered the goods to the consignee, who appropriated the same, and he never paid for them, and, as he was wholly insolvent, the plaintiff has wholly lost the property.

The questions submitted to the court upon this state of facts, so far as here material, were: (1) For such shipment over the Northern Pacific Railroad instead of the Great Northern Railway, is the defendant liable in any sum? (2) If liable, is it liable for the whole actual value of the property, or only to the extent of $20 per barrel? The court below held that the defendant was liable to the extent of $20 per barrel, and no more. As the defendant did not appeal, the first question is not before us for consideration, except so far as it may be involved in the determination of the second.

We have so recently considered this subject at considerable length in Alair v. Northern P. R. Co. 53 Minn. 160, that it does not require any extended discussion at this time. That case and the present cannot, in our judgment, be distinguished on principle. The value stipulated was one named by the shippers themselves for the very purpose of securing a lower rate of freight; and in consideration of securing that reduced rate, and without any sort of coercion or any unfair advantage being exercised over them by the carrier, they expressly agreed that, in case of loss or damage, the same should be adjusted at the agreed valuation of $20 per barrel; in other words, that such valuation should be that whereon the rate of compensation to the carriers for their services as well as their risks connected with the property should be based. That being the case, the contract ought to be upheld as a just and reasonable mode of securing a due proportion between the amount for which the carriers might be responsible and the freight which they were to receive. If this purpose was a reasonable and fair one, the mere fact that the contract might incidentally have the effect of reducing the amount of the carrier's liability in case of loss caused by negligence will not render it invalid. If the plaintiff desired to obtain the carrier's unlimited common-law liability, all it had to do was to ship the goods as first class, and pay or agree to pay the higher rate of freight. It would be manifestly unjust, after a shipper has secured a reduced rate of freight by stipulating to a valuation of the property as the basis of fixing the carrier's compensation and responsibility, to allow him to repudiate his contract. It would require some very weighty considerations of public policy to justify permitting him to do so. The only difference that is suggested between the Alair Case and the present one is that in the former it did not appear that the carrier had any reason to suppose that the stipulated value of the property was not its actual value, while in this case it is claimed the carrier must have known that the goods were worth more than $20 per barrel. The agreed facts do not state that the carrier knew that the value of the goods was greater than that fixed on them by the shipper. But it is fair to presume that, if the carrier thought of the matter at all, it had good reason to suppose that, if the property was what it purported to be, it was worth more than $20 per barrel. But we do not think that this, if true, would be at all material, inasmuch as the valuation was one voluntarily fixed and agreed to by the shipper as the basis upon which the carrier's compensation as well as responsibility should be determined and adjusted. In some respects the facts in this case are even stronger in favor of the defendant than in the Alair Case, although, perhaps, not affecting the rule of law applicable. In the present case it affirmatively appears that the valuation was one placed on the property by the shipper himself, for the purpose of securing cheaper freight; that he did thereby secure a lower rate, and in consideration of that fact expressly contracted that, in case of loss or damage, the same should be adjusted on the basis of that valuation. There is no suggestion of any coercion or unfair dealing on the part of the carrier which received the freight; neither is there any suggestion of fraud or wilful wrong on the part of this defendant in shipping the goods over the Northern Pacific Railroad. So far as appears, it was simply a mistake.

There is no force in the suggestion that the terms of the contract would be applicable only where the loss or damage occurred while the goods were in transit over the route designated by the shipper, and not to loss or damage caused by a violation of the contract in forwarding them over some other route.

As the authorities were quite fully cited and discussed by us in the Alair Case, it is unneceseasy to again refer to them. We will simply suggest that Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 113 U. S. 881, 28 L. ed. 717, was decided over eleven years ago. It has never been overruled or modified, but, on the contrary, has been recently cited approvingly and its doctrine applied in Primrose v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 888. It may therefore be considered as the settled doctrine of the Federal courts. The desirableness of being in harmony, if possible, with those courts, on a question of this kind, must be apparent. But aside from any such consideration, we see no reason why the doctrine of the Alair Case should not be adhered to.

30 L. R. A.

We have not considered the effect of the agreed fact that the terms of the bill of lading were not contrary to the law of Kentucky, where the contract was made, as we preferred to decide the case on broader grounds.

Order affirmed.

Canty, J.:

I concur in the foregoing opinion but am of the opinion that the rule of law laid down in this and the Alair Case should be watched closely, as in practice it is liable to lead to evasion and abuse on the part of the common carrier.

END OF CASES IN BOOK 30.

RÉSUMÉ OF THE DECISIONS PUBLISHED IN THIS BOOK.

SHOWING the Changes, Progress, and Development of the Law during the Second Quarter of the Judicial Year Beginning with October 1, 1895, Classified as Follows:

- I. PUBLIC, OFFICIAL, AND STATUTORY MATTERS.
- II. CONTRACTUAL AND COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.
- III. CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.
- IV. DOMESTIC RELATIONS.
- V. FIDUCIARIES.
- VI. TORTS; NEGLIGENCE; INJURIES.
- VII. PROPERTY RIGHTS; WILLS.
- VIII. CIVIL REMEDIES; RULES AND PRINCIPLES; DAMAGES.
- IX. CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTICE.

I. PUBLIC, OFFICIAL, AND STATUTORY MATTERS.

Constitutional equality.

A statute allowing attorneys' fees to a designated class of persons, such as employees, in an action for wages, is held not to constitute special legislation. (Ill.) 491.

A statute requiring a license fee of $25 from every male laundryman who employs one or more others in his business, unless he has a steam laundry, while the proprietor of a steam laundry pays $15 only, is sustained against the claim that it amounts to a tax which violates the constitutional rule of uniformity, or that it is prohibitory of hand laundries, or discriminates against the Chinese because the hand laundries are in fact operated by Chinamen. (Mont.) 415.

A statute making it unlawful to solicit insurance within the state for any nonresident without procuring a certificate of authority is held not to make any unconstitutional discrimination against citizens of other states. (Mich.) 464.

Due process.

The constitutionality of the Minnesota log lien law is sustained against the contention that it does not provide due process of law. (Minn.) 84.

Tax.

The direct inheritance tax provided by the Ohio statute is held void for lack of uniformity, because it exempted estates less than $20,000 in value, and did not tax the larger and smaller estates at the same ratio. (Ohio) 318.

The fact that the benefactions of a charitable organization are confined to its members and their families is held not to prevent it from being regarded as a charitable institution, within a statutory provision as to exemption of its property from taxation. (Or.) 167.

Interstate commerce.

License fees charged on itinerant vendors of drugs, professing to treat diseases, are held not to constitute an interference with interstate commerce, although the medicines sold were in original packages brought from another state. (Iowa) 429.

The doctrine that a package put up for interstate trade to be sold at retail without breaking bulk is not an original package, within the meaning of the law relating to interstate commerce, is reiterated by the supreme court of Pennsylvania in case of a ten-pound package of oleomargarine. (Pa.) 396.

Shipments between points in the same state are held to constitute interstate commerce, where a continuous voyage to a foreign state is contemplated, with only a change of carriers at the terminal point mentioned in the bill of lading. (Tex.) 718.

Legislative committee.

A legislative committee appointed to make an examination of facts and report is denied power to incur expense for an attorney. (N. C.) 262.

It is also held that such committee cannot draw per diem or mileage after adjournment of the legislature, unless an express provision is made therefor. (N. C.) 261.

Parliamentary law.

A quorum of a legislative body is held to be a majority, in the absence of an express provision fixing a different number. (N. C.) 532.

Municipal corporations.

A peculiar question of constitutional law, interpreting the late New York Constitution, is decided by holding that the annexation of a part of Westchester county to the city and county of New York is valid for municipal purposes, but leaves the annexed territory still in Westchester county for the purpose of constituting a part of the Senate and assembly districts of that county. (N. Y.) 74.

The Federal circuit court of appeals refuses to follow the decision of the supreme court of Indiana to the effect that the discretion of a board of county commissioners respecting annexation of land to a city can be reviewed by the courts, but the Federal court holds that the matter is legislative rather than judicial. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 576.

Likewise the power of the legislature over municipal corporations is asserted to the extent of changing the burden of municipal indebtedness by a subsequent statute after the division of a city under an act which made an adjustment of such burdens on the parts divided, since this power is held to be political and governmental. (Cal.) 178.

The power of the legislature over municipalities and counties is held to extend to requiring a city to incur a debt without its consent for the acquisition of public bridges and ferries, and the transfer of the management of them to a county court. (Or.) 171.

An ordinance requiring a roofed passageway to be built over a sidewalk when a building is erected abutting thereon is held to be within the power of the common council of a city. (Wis.) 504.

The expense of building viaducts over railroad tracks in a city is held to be properly shared by the city under a contract with a railroad company to that effect, even if the city could have compelled the railroad company to make the improvement at its own expense. (Kan.) 255.

The purchase by sinking-fund commissioners, for their fund, of bonds offered for sale by their city, is held invalid, notwithstanding the absence of any express statutory prohibition. (Minn.) 281.

The power of a municipal corporation to manufacture electric lights for private residences and business places within the city, as well as to light streets and other public places, is sustained in a Florida case against the contention that supplying lights to private persons is outside municipal purposes. (Fla.) 540.

Municipal waterworks.

The right of a municipality to transfer to a private corporation a system of waterworks which the municipality had been in general terms authorized to provide for itself is denied on the ground that the waterworks are held in trust for the public, and the restoration of the money received on such invalid sale is held not necessary as a condition precedent to an action to recover the property, at least where the city has not made any use of the money. (S. D.) 848.

The maintenance of waterworks by a city is held to be within its governmental power and not an enterprise of a private character, and therefore the city is held not to be liable for damages by fire resulting from its negligence in respect to the waterworks. (N. Y.) 660.

Public improvements.

The front of corner lots for the purposes of street improvements is discussed in respect to a number of instances in a case holding that the shorter side is presumed to be the front of such a lot unless the improvements thereon clearly show the contrary. (Ohio) 598.

The unreasonableness of an ordinance for which it will be declared void is illustrated in the case of a sidewalk improvement, which holds that the owner of a vacant lot cannot be compelled to put down a cement sidewalk in place of a plank walk which is in good condition for public use, which he had built as required by an ordinance less than six months before. (Ill.) 225.

30 L. R. A.

Officers.

The disability of a member of the legislature to hold other office during the time for which he is elected, is held to be unaffected by the fact that he resigns before the expiration of his term. (Minn.) 680.

The liability of a mayor in a civil action on account of an erroneous and malicious order of imprisonment for contempt is denied, where he had power to make the order. (N. C.) 696.

Official newspapers.

In the selection of an official county newspaper having the largest number of bona fide subscribers, it is held that a person to whom a paper is sent without his consent, express or implied, though it is done under a contract with a third person, is not a subscriber. (Iowa) 584.

Schools.

A contract giving the teacher of a common school the right to charge extra compensation from pupils taking special studies is held valid. (Ky.) 697.

Voters and elections.

Failure of inspectors of election to take the number strips from ballots, as required by statute, is held insufficient to prevent counting the ballots. (Nev.) 854.

Another decision on recent ballot laws is made in an Illinois case deciding that the provision as to marking a ballot with a cross is not mandatory, but at the same time makes an honest attempt on the part of the voter to follow the direction of the statute without making any distinguishing mark on the ballot essential to the validity of the ballot. (Ill.) 227.

An injunction against registration under a statute alleged to be unconstitutional because of its unreasonable and burdensome requirements is denied on the ground that the matter is governmental and political, and that property rights or civil rights are not infringed thereby. (C. C. App. 4th C.) 90.

Courts.

A state statute giving a right of action for death caused by negligence is held to be enforceable in a Federal court of admiralty in that state, where the death occurred in the waters of Lake Michigan more than 3 miles from the shore of the state. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 336.

Jurisdiction on service by publication in a suit by a foreign corporation against a nonresident is declined, although the foreign corporation has a place of business in the state, where the defendant has no property there except an interest in a firm whose books and accounts were chiefly in another state at its principal place of business. (Mass.) 628.

Naturalization.

Power of Congress to require state courts to entertain proceedings for the naturalization of aliens is held to be subject to the consent of the state, and the state legislature is held to have power to limit the times when and during which such proceedings may be had. (N. Y.) 761.

II. CONTRACTUAL AND COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

The invalidity of a lobby contract is illustrated in a case which denies recovery on a contract for procuring legislation to forfeit a grant of public lands, whereby settlers acquired them at a small part of their value. (Minn.) 787.

Compensation which a state agrees to pay to an agent for prosecuting a claim against the United States is held recoverable notwithstanding the payment of the claim to the state on condition that no part of it should be used to pay for collecting it. (Mass.) 748.

The invalidity of a contract to pay extra compensation to an officer for performing services within the range of his official duties is reiterated in a case in which a city attorney had such a contract; and it is also held that for services after his term of office expired he could not recover under the contract, although he might have compensation under an implied agreement. (Cal.) 409.

A stipulation against liability for negligence of a railroad company setting fire to buildings erected on its right of way is held properly included in a lease, and not to violate public policy. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 198.

The rule that a contract for violation of the law will not sustain an action is applied in a case in which beer was sold with the intent to have it resold by the purchaser under the license of the seller. (Neb.) 644.

The effect of loaning money to a treasurer from funds in his custody, in respect to the liability of his sureties, is discussed in a case which holds that he holds such money as debtor merely, and that his sureties are not liable, but that interest which, as debtor, he pays to himself as treasurer, is held by him as an officer, and is within the protection of his bond. (Pa.) 898.

The enforcement of a mortgage to secure the support of persons for life is decreed in a case in which the mortgagor claimed the right to furnish the support at his own home, but it was held that the mortgagees had the right to claim support at any reasonable place. (Ohio) 214.

Breach and rescission of contract.

The right to rescind a contract to purchase goods for a delivery in instalments on account of the failure to deliver the first instalment is denied in a New Jersey case. (N. J.) 61.

But, reversing on rehearing a prior conclusion, the Illinois supreme court in an elaborate opinion holds that repudiation of a contract may constitute in legal effect such a prevention of performance as will justify the other party in regarding it as abandoned and sue for damages. (Ill.) 83.

The refusal to accept an article which a person has expressly agreed in consideration of its delivery to an express company to pay for in instalments is held not to relieve him from liability to pay the whole price so as to restrict the seller to his remedy for damages. (Mass.) 587.

Carrier's contracts.

See also supra, I., as to interstate commerce.

A case in which a railroad company makes a contract to haul a circus train as a private carrier holds that such a contract is lawful, although it requires the owner of the circus to assume all the risk of accidents. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 161.
80 L. R. A.

A stipulation that the loss of property shipped should be adjusted at a certain agreed valuation is sustained, although the goods were lost by the carrier's negligence, where it was made to obtain a lower rate of freight. (Minn.) 860.

The expulsion of a passenger because the return coupon of a round-trip ticket, on which he attempted to ride, was not properly stamped, is held to make the carrier liable, where the passenger had done all on his part, and received the ticket from the agent under circumstances justifying the belief that it had been stamped. (C. C. App. 9th C.) 730.

Telegraph cases.

One who voluntarily carries out a contract made by his agent in accordance with a telegram which is wrongly transmitted is denied the right to recover against the telegraph company, if he knew of the mistake before performing the contract and it was not binding on him. (Miss.) 444.

The right of a telegraph company to refuse to transmit a message unless the sender will consent to a stipulation requiring any claim for damages or penalties to be made within sixty days is sustained in a case which upon rehearing reverses a former holding. (S. D.) 612.

Bank matters.

The right of a bank which had guaranteed the checks of another bank in order to clear them through a clearing-house, to recover against the drawers of a certified check which it had paid according to the guaranty after the insolvency of the drawee, is sustained on the ground that the guarantor became an assignee of the check and paid it as agent of the other bank. (Ill.) 155.

The right of a bank to stop payment of its draft mailed in payment of a creditor's draft on a customer of the bank is denied, although the bank extended credit to the customer in ignorance of the fact of his insolvency. This seems to be an exception to the general rule permitting a drawer to stop payment. (Wis.) 845.

A bank which cashed a check for an accommodation indorser is denied the right to hold him liable where it sent the check to a correspondent, which accepted another check in lieu of money as payment thereof, and negligently failed to present the new check in time to obtain the money upon it, although after its dishonor the original check was reclaimed and protested. (Ga.) 800.

Promissory notes.

A statute making all joint obligations joint and several is held applicable to the indorsement of a promissory note, so that notice to any one of several indorsers is sufficient to bind him. (Tenn.) 495.

A state statute providing that all persons becoming parties to a negotiable note by signature on the back thereof shall be entitled to the same notice of nonpayment as indorsers is held to govern the rights of the parties in a Federal court. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 513.

What is regarded by the court as a novel question in the law of commercial paper is the question of the effect of an assignment without recourse to destroy the negotiable character of an instrument so as to prevent a subsequent indorser from being held liable as an indorser of negotiable paper. The decision is that such liability as indorser is not prevented by the preceding assignment. (C. C. App. 8d C.) 189.

The rule that an administrator may be held liable personally in a note which does not bind the estate is held not to apply to a note made in the name of the estate for an alleged debt of the deceased which was not enforceable. (Minn.) 296.

Leases.

An oral lease for one year with the privilege of three, at an annual rent, is held to be within the statute of frauds and the court says that it has been unable to find a case involving such a contract. (Mich.) 379.

A covenant to keep premises in repair is held to bind the lessor of a hotel to put them in good repair if defective at the time of the lease, so far as to make them habitable. (R. I.) 682.

The abatement of part of the rent on a plantation on destruction of a building thereon is made under statutory provision that a tenant shall not be bound to pay rent for buildings destroyed without his fault. (Miss.) 716.

A lease for 999 years of a railroad is held not to be a sale within the meaning of a provision that the grantor of the right of way shall have the purchase price in case of sale. (Minn.) 546.

Insurance.

An employer's liability policy is construed to be an agreement to assume and pay any liability of the employer for accidents to employees, and not merely a contract of indemnity so that the employer need not pay a judgment against him before maintaining an action on the policy. (Minn.) 689.

Some novel questions in guaranty insurance are presented in a case which decides the liability of an employee to the insurance company which has been compelled to pay for his fraud and dishonesty. (Minn.) 586.

The express language of the printed clauses in an insurance policy against keeping inflammable substances on the premises is held to be limited where such substances are necessary for use in the business on the stock in which the insurance was issued. (Wis.) 788; (Ga.) 835.

Leaving gasoline in a building for use in burning off old paint is held not to constitute such a keeping, using, or allowing of it upon the premises as will avoid an insurance policy, while the use of it to burn off paint from the building is held to make a question for the jury in respect to the increase of risk. (Mich.) 368.

Where a fire insurance contract is made by using a marine policy blank covering the vessel while on a voyage, this is held not to be waived by a rider waiving provisions in conflict with the fire blank, although the rider describes the property as located at a particular place. (Mich.) 636.

The clerk or employee of an insurance agent is held to represent the company in the same way that the agent does so far as he acts in the matter of the agency by the agent's direction. (Va.) 843.

Representing that the property is owned by husband and wife jointly is held not to be untrue when the property insured consists of a homestead the title to which was entirely in the wife, and personal property thereon which was owned by the husband alone. (Ohio) 719.

Many cases as to what constitutes an accident are collected in an opinion which decides that death by shooting while trying forcibly to eject another, who is not known to be armed, from a hotel, is by accident. (Mo.) 209.

Hanging by a mob is held to be an accidental death within the meaning of an insurance policy. (Miss.) 208.

The question what constitutes nonoccupancy of a dwelling house is answered by holding that a fixed abode is necessary to constitute occupancy, and that keeping provisions therein which are daily taken from it, and the occasional lodging of employees there, are not sufficient. (Md.) 638.

The defense that suicide was contemplated by the insured, which by statute is the only case in which suicide is allowed as a defense to a policy of life insurance, is held to be made out only when it is shown that he had intended or had resolved to commit suicide when he applied for the policy. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 87.

The interest of the "heirs" to whom life insurance is payable is held to be derived from the contract, and not from the statute, and that creditors of the person whose life is insured have no claim to the proceeds. (Ga.) 593.

Construing a statute according to its intent, it is held that life insurance taken by a man before marriage is "effected by a husband," within statutory provisions entitling his widow, children, and next of kin to the proceeds free from the claims of creditors. (Tenn.) 609.

The requirement of immediate notice of loss insured against is considered in a case which seems to be a novel one, and which decides that sixty days' delay as matter of law is a breach of the condition, and, further, that local agents, although having full authority to issue policies, are not authorized to receive or to waive such notice of loss, and that failure to give the notice is not waived by retaining proofs of loss sent after the policy was dead. (Minn.) 346.

III. CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.

Public corporation.

Trustees of Berkeley Springs, belonging to the state of West Virginia, are held to constitute a public corporation; and a lease of the springs to a private person for ninety-nine years is held ultra vires. (W. Va.) 747.

Private corporations.

Joint action by two states to create a corporation as a single entity, which for jurisdictional purposes shall be a citizen of each state, is held ineffectual, but the result is the creation of two corporations of the same name. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 250.

The dissolution of a corporation on account of the vacancy of all its offices and the lack of a sufficient number of stockholders to satisfy the law is held not to take place ipso facto, and a receiver on the application of one stockholder is permitted against a claim that as the property of the company is in the hands of an administrator of the only other stockholder it is held by joint ownership. (La. Ann.) 648.

The supreme lodge of a benefit society is denied the right to delegate to a board of control the power to enact general laws. (Tenn.) 888.

All the money paid by borrowing members in a building and loan association which has become insolvent, whether payments were called fines, penalties, weekly dues, or any other name, are held to be credits on the amounts borrowed, and the rate of interest charged to them and allowed to nonborrowing members is held in North Carolina to be 6 per cent. (N. C.) 693.

Compelling a private water company to furnish water to a patron without discrimination when it has a franchise for supplying a city, is held to be within the power of the court, where an invalid rule to charge a delinquent $1 extra for turning on and off the water before renewing his service was insisted on by the company. (Neb.) 447.

A woman who has the custody of minor children under a decree of divorce is denied the right to recover payment for their board out of the estate of her former husband. (R. I.) 690.

The liability of a husband for his wife's slander is sustained in Minnesota notwithstanding the modern statutes respecting married women. (Minn.) 521.

See also infra, VII., as to property rights of spouses.

IV. DOMESTIC RELATIONS.

Churches.

The right of an unincorporated church society to hold land is held unaffected by a statute restricting the quantity of land to be held by incorporated church societies. (Ill.) 232.

The liability of a church corporation for services performed by an attorney under procurement of individual trustees is denied, although the trustees had voted a sum to pay another person with an individual understanding that he should apply a part of it to the former claim. (N. Y.) 574.

Lloyds.

Unincorporated associations called "Lloyds" are held unaffected by the Alabama statute restricting business of insurance companies. (Ala.) 851.

Partnership.

Some questions of difficulty respecting the rights of creditors of a partnership and of its individual members are decided in a case in which the firm had been changed by admitting a new member, with the assumption of the old debts by the new firm. (Wis.) 549.

Money received from one partner by his creditor can be retained to satisfy a just debt of the individual partner, although the money belonged to the firm, if this was not known to the creditor. (N. J.) 604.

Adoption.

The adoption without legitimation of an illegitimate child, by the father, is held to give the father's next of kin no inheritable blood with respect to the child, and on the latter's death the property descended to him from his father, like his other property, is held to descend to his mother as against the father's next of kin. (Tenn.) 263.

V. FIDUCIARIES.

As to receivers, see infra, VII., under heading Liens.

For note of administrator, see supra, II.

VI. TORTS; NEGLIGENCE; INJURIES.

Violation of a statute designed to protect a certain class of persons, whereby such persons are injured, is regarded as negligence per se, for which a civil action will lie, but subject to the defense of contributory negligence. (Tenn.) 82.

Liability of an owner of animals is denied in case of the escape of a jack which killed a filly, where the escape was without the owner's knowledge or negligence, although the statute declared that the owner should be liable for all damages sustained by the running at large of such an animal. (Ark.) 607.

Injury by gas.

Injury to shade trees caused by the escape of natural gas from a street main through carelessness of the gas company is held to render the company liable to the owner of the trees. (N. Y.) 651

80 L. R. A.

A gas company is held chargeable with the duty of turning on the gas to a building supplied therewith, when proper connections and a meter have been provided, and liable for negligence in so doing, but not liable for the act of a stranger in turning on the gas. (N. Y.) 653.

Injury by cars.

The liability of a railroad company for running over a person lying asleep on a track if the engineer could have seen him with reasonable care, is affirmed under the North Carolina rule that it is the duty of the engineer to keep a lookout. (N. C.) 257.

The negligence of a person riding with another when injured by a train at a crossing is held to be a question for the jury, although it appeared that he might have discovered the train by looking and listening, and it did not appear that he knew that the driver was incompetent or negligent. (Minn.) 684.

The Ohio statute requiring every street railway company before a street car crosses a railroad track at grade to stop the car and send an employee ahead to see if the track is clear and signal to that effect is construed to apply in case of a crossing at which there are gates and a watchman as well as to other crossings; and it is held that, at least in the absence of extraordinary circumstances, failure to comply with these requirements is negligence, and renders the street-car company liable for any damages resulting therefrom. (Ohio) 509.

An attempt to mount a flat car used in front of a road engine for switching purposes is held not to constitute contributory negligence as matter of law where it was in accordance with the usage of brakemen in similar circumstances, and was the only way in which the employee could do the work required of him. (Mont.) 814.

Carrier's liability.

See also Contracts, supra, II.

For an assault on a railroad passenger after alighting at a station and starting out on his business as a peddler, the carrier is held not liable, but is held liable for an assault, without provocation, in a ticket office in the presence of the ticket agent where he made no effort to prevent it. (Utah) 297.

The words "any railroad," in the New York general railroad law respecting passengers riding on platforms, are held inapplicable to street railways. (N. Y.) 626.

Physician's negligence.

A physician who sends another physician in his stead to attend a patient is held not to be liable for the negligence or unskillfulness of the latter. (N. J.) 345.

VII. PROPERTY RIGHTS; WILLS.

Easement of railway.

A public warehouse or elevator on a railroad right of way, maintained by the railroad company, its lessee or licensee, is held not to be a misuse of the easement. (Minn.) 584.

Railroad fence.

An adjoining landowner is held entitled to connect his fences with the railroad fence, whether that is built on the line of the right of way as it should be, or further back on such right of way. (Minn.) 590.

Entireties.

An estate by entireties is held not to exist where property descends to husband and wife as next of kin. (Wis.) 820.

A deed to husband and wife is held to create an estate by entirety although it provides that if the wife survive the husband she shall have the use of the property, and that the remainder at her death shall go to their children. It is also held that the wife's rights in the property cannot be affected by sale under any judgment against the husband, although the purchaser may be entitled to it if the husband outlives the wife. (Tenn.) 315.

In Maine a gift by will of the residue to a daughter and her husband in equal shares, and so to their heirs and assigns forever, is held not to create a tenancy by entireties; and the court goes further and says that such estates are irreconcilable with statutes giving wives separate and independent property rights. (Me.) 881.

Separate mortgages made by husband and wife each for an undivided half interest in land held by the entireties are held to give the mortgagee on the husband's death no lien except upon an undivided half interest under the wife's mortgage. The right of the wife to make such a mortgage is sustained under laws giving the wife control of her property free from her husband's marital rights. (Ark.) 824.

The question as to the right to the rents and profits of an estate by the entirety where statutes have given married women power to control and dispose of their own property is decided on the theory that the common law right of the husband to the entire usufruct of such an estate was a part of his marital rights and not an incident of this estate, therefore the husband and wife are held entitled to separate moieties in these rents and profits. (N. Y.) 305.

Mines.

A decision of the highest importance in respect to mining rights is that which sustains the right of a locator, when the apex of a vein passes through but one end line and crosses one of the side lines, to follow the strike of the vein on a dip beyond the side line so far as it is included between a vertical plane through such end line extended, and a parallel vertical plane through the intersection of the apex and the side line. (Mont.) 803.

Homestead.

A building in a city, a part of which is rented for business purposes and the rest occupied as a residence, is held to be protected as a homestead. (Okla.) 722.

Water rights.

On the sudden diversion of water from a channel by the act of God, it is held that a riparian appropriator has no right to go upon another's land to restore the water to the old channel. (Cal.) 820.

The claim of a riparian owner to damages for trespass in disturbing his thatch by a person digging clams below high-water mark is held not to be valid on the ground that the public right of fishery is paramount. (R. I.) 497.

The loss by nonuser of rights in an irrigating ditch is held to result by failure to take water therefrom during the statutory period of limitation in irrigating season, except what is distributed to the owners as shareholders in an association which owns an older ditch of which this has been taken as part. (C. C. App. 9th C.) 265.

An important case as to the law of prior appropriation of waters holds it applicable to the diversion of water for a flouring mill, and sustains the right as existing in that portion of the state of Washington east of the Cascade mountains before the act of Congress on the subject. (Wash.) 665.

(CIVIL REMEDIES; RULES AND PRINCIPLES; DAMAGES.)

A change of the place and purpose of use of water by a prior appropriator is held allowable so long as the water is used for proper objects and the change does not injuriously affect the rights of others. (Cal.) 390.

But the right of a prior appropriator of water to enter on land held by a homestead claim to change the point of diversion is denied although the claimant has not obtained or yet become entitled to a patent. (Cal.) 384.

A peculiar case as to the right of prior appropriation in respect to percolating waters sustains the right in favor of one who dug wells on public lands as against a subsequent locator of the land. (Utah) 186.

Liens.

The inception of liens within the meaning of a statute is held to be the time to which they relate in giving them effect as against a mortgage taken upon an incomplete building, and this is held subject to all mechanics' liens accruing before the work is completed. (Tex.) 765.

So a mechanic's lien for machinery in a mill is held superior to a prior mortgage taken on the premises when the mill was unfinished and substantially without machinery. (Wis.) 778.

The right of subrogation of a mortgagee who advances money on the promise of a first lien is enforced in a case in which the first liens were paid off with his money, while an intermediate lien remaining first in order is held not to prevent subrogation. (Miss.) 829.

The priority of a judgment recovered against a consolidated railroad company under the South Carolina statutes over a mortgage is sustained as against a purchaser on foreclosure who had covenanted to discharge all liens prior to the mortgage, although the judgment was for a personal injury in another state. (C. C. App. 4th C.) 823.

The revival of a judgment is held effective as against a grantee of the judgment debtor, in a deed made after the judgment but before the revival of which the judgment creditor had neither actual nor constructive notice. (Pa.) 400.

Authority to borrow money is held beyond the power of a court to confer upon a receiver to carry on the business of a private corporation by issuing certificates which should be a first lien on the corporate property against the objection of the first mortgagee. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 201.

The rule allowing earnings of a receiver to be applied to running expenses in preference to a mortgage on railway property is denied application in case of a street railway to a claim for damages for negligence of the company before the receiver's appointment. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 456.

Insolvency.

Participation in dividends from assets of an insolvent is allowed on secured claims only for the amount unpaid after deducting all that was realized on collaterals up to the time of making the preliminary proofs, but this is not held to apply to a payment made on that day. (Ill.) 380.

Trust.

Property purchased by a trust for bondholders under an arrangement for the reorganization of a railroad is held not to be discharged from the trust as to bondholders who fail to pay their assessments and give a release to the trustee, where he proceeds to acquire the title to the property. (Ill.) 290.

Gift.

A gift by a man to his children of the bulk of his estate, consisting of personal property, is held valid in Kansas against any claim made by his widow. (Kan.) 243.

Wills.

The signature of a witness to a will is held insufficient where by inadvertence he wrote testator's surname instead of his own with his own initials. (Cal.) 460.

The competency of an attesting witness to a will who signed by mark is held not to depend on his ability to identify the mark. (Ga.) 143.

VIII. CIVIL REMEDIES; RULES AND PRINCIPLES; DAMAGES.

Diminished capacity to labor is held to be an element of the damages recoverable by a married woman for personal injuries under statutes which entitle her to her own earnings. (Mass.) 658.

Evidence.

The doctrine of oral evidence to show consideration of a conveyance receives careful analysis in a case which denies such evidence as to the consideration of a deed expressly made for the settlement of certain claims. (Miss.) 441.

Attachment.

Constructive fraud in a conveyance as against creditors is held insufficient to sustain an attachment. (Ill.) 463.

Garnishment.

Garnishment of a foreign corporation assuming to do business in a state, authorized in general terms by a state statute, is denied in case all the parties are nonresidents and the debt did not arise on a contract payable within the state. (C. C. App. 6th C.) 364.

30 L. R. A.

Creditors who proceed to take judgment and by garnishment on execution reach wages which were exempt by the law of the debtor's domicile after an order restraining them from collecting such wages by garnishee proceedings will be compelled to refund the exempt amount reached with interest, although they dismissed the garnishment which was pending when the restraining order was made. (Wia.) 360.

Injunction.

A novel case of a mandatory injunction is that in which the proprietor of a store is ordered to adopt some means of distinguishing it from that of a competitor where he had purposely imitated the building of the other and adopted the same name, without any name or sign to distinguish them. (Cal.) 182.

An injunction against trespass upon land for the purpose of boxing and scraping trees for turpentine is held to be within the jurisdiction of chancery, notwithstanding the constitutional provisions as to right of trial by jury. (Fla.) 754.

The right to an injunction against an execution sale of exempt property is denied unless the property has some special value to the plaintiff, where the statutes provide a remedy at law. (Or.) 98.

RÉSUMÉ OF DECISIONS.
(CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTICE.)

An injunction against a judgment at law is sustained, where the judgment is without evidence to support it and an appeal was prevented by the death of the trial judge. (Ark.) 560.

Fraud in the entry of a default judgment is held ground for an injunction against it, although there was a remedy by certiorari. (Cal.) 786.

The rendition by a justice of a judgment for more than is demanded by an affidavit of attachment is held insufficient ground for an injunction. (Ind.) 700.

An injunction against a judgment by confession which is held to be merely irregular and not void is denied, and it is said that lack of jurisdiction only will not be ground for the injunction unless it is also unjust and inequitable. (Wis.) 285.

The failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant is held not to be a ground for an injunction against a judgment taken against him. (Ala.) 707.

Time.

The meaning of the term "calendar month" in a provision as to the time for statutes to take effect is defined as denoting a period terminating with the day of the succeeding month numerically corresponding with the day of its beginning less one, unless there is no corresponding day of the succeeding month, when it terminates on the last day. (Neb.) 450.

The rule that Sunday is to be excluded from the computation of time which ends on Sunday is denied application in a case where the act to be performed was the filing of an application for a writ of error which the court held could lawfully be done on that day. (Tex.) 498.

IX. CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTICE.

A constitutional provision prohibiting exile is held not to preclude a pardon on condition that the convict leave the state and never return. (Ark.) 786.

The constitutionality of a statute imposing a penalty of imprisonment for life for criminal intimacy with a girl under sixteen years of age is sustained in a Massachusetts case against the contention that it imposes a cruel and unusual punishment, and ignorance is held not to be a defense. (Mass.) 734.

80 L. R. A.

Sales of intoxicating liquors by an incorporated social club to its members are held not to constitute engaging in the business of selling liquors under a statute imposing an occupation tax on such business. (Tex.) 500.

The right to kill another in self-defense is held to extend to one who began the affray where he had afterwards attempted to withdraw from it. (Cal.) 408.

INDEX TO NOTES.

(The General Index follows this.)

Abandonment. See WATERS.
Accident. See also INSURANCE.
As ground of injunction against judgment	786
Action; abatement of suit for libel or slander by wife, on account of death of party	529
Act of God; as affecting rights in watercourse	820
Adverse possession; against wife holding by entirety	335
Aliens; powers of state legislatures and courts in respect to naturalization:—In general; power of Federal government to confer power on state courts; what state courts may act	761
Attachment; what intent to defraud will sustain an attachment:—(I.) Generally; (II.) actual as distinguished from constructive fraud; (III.) fraudulent contraction of debts; (IV.) against absconding debtors; (V.) for removal of property; (VI.) for assignment, disposal, or secretion of property; (a) the intent to defraud; (b) participation in fraudulent intent by transferee; (c) gifts; (d) sales of property; (e) mortgaging or pledging property; (f) assignment for the benefit of creditors; (g) threats to assign or dispose of property; (h) making preferences; (i) transfers in payment of debts; (j) confession of judgment; (k) transfers and withdrawals by partners; (l) formation of and transfer to corporation or partnership; (m) overbuying; (n) refusal to pay; (o) statements and misrepresentations by debtor; (p) conversion of property; (q) miscellaneous cases	465
Bail; special, in suit for slander by wife	530
Banks. See CHECKS.
Carriers; railroad companies as private carriers in drawing special trains or special cars	161
Checks; right to stop payment of	845
Contracts; validity of contract for services to procure legislation:—In general; condemnation of such contracts generally; contingent fee makes contract void; contract for personal influence or lobby services; application of rules; analogous cases	787
Right to rescind or abandon contract because of other party's default:—(I.) Introduction; (II.) condition precedent; (a) how far is right to rescind controlled by question of condition precedent; (b) charter party; (c) party excused by nonperformance of condition precedent; (d) excuse for not performing condition precedent; (III.) right to rescind contract without liability for nonperformance: (a) necessity of mutual consent; (b) contract may be rescinded; (c) duty to place other party in statu quo ; (d) partial performance; (IV.) party seeking to rescind must not be in default; (V.) right of party rescinding to recover for what he has done; (VI.) right to abandon performance and recover for breach; (a) performance excused; (b) recovery for breach; (c) lost profits as damages; (VII.) what will warrant rescission; (VIII.) application of above rules to various kinds of contracts: (a) vendor and purchaser; (b) constructive contracts; (c) insurance contracts; (d) continuing contracts	89
Corporations; injunction against execution sale of property of	103
Injunction against judgment confessed by	240
Cotenancy; husband and wife as joint tenants, tenants in common, or tenants by entirety, see HUSBAND AND WIFE.
Custody of law; injunction against execution sale of property in	103
Custom; as to prior appropriation	635
Damages; for libel or slander by wife	529
Disease. See INSURANCE.
Duress; as ground of injunction against judgment	786
Ejectment; injunction against dispossession in	129
Emblements; right to, in case of estate by entirety	308
Entireties. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.
Execution. See INJUNCTION.
Executors and administrators; injunction in favor of or against, to prevent execution sales	120
Exemptions. See INJUNCTION.
Forcible entry and detainer; injunction against dispossession in case of	129
Fraud; as ground of injunction against judgment	786
As ground of injunction against judgment when arising subsequent to its rendition	560
As ground of injunction against judgment by confession	238
Intent to defraud which will sustain attachment	465
Garnishment; injunctions against judgments in	360
Heirs; within meaning of insurance policy	598
Homestead; injunction against sale of, under execution	100
Husband and wife; injunction against execution sale of wife's property	112, 118
Tenancy by entirety:—(I.) Definition; (II.) who can hold this estate; (III.) nature of the interest of each spouse: (a) the interest of the husband during the joint lifetime at common law; (b) the interests of the spouses during the joint lifetime, since the married women's property acts; (c) right of the spouses and their representatives to emblements at common law; (d) husband's right to compensation for improvements; (e) husband's right to commit waste; (f) husband's right to estovers; (g) right of either spouse to sue for wrongs to the entirety property; (IV.) survivorship of one of the spouses after the death, actual or civil, of the other; (V.) operation of technical rules on the entirety estate: (a) rule in Shelley's Case; (b) merger; (c) equity to a settlement; (d) vendor's lien; (e) notice; (f) homestead exemption; (g) construction of statutes; (VI.) where and to what extent entirety estates exist: (a) list of states, etc.; (b) construction of statutes affecting this question; (VII.) in what subjects, estates, and interests entirety may exist: (a) in what subjects; (b) in what tenures; (c) in what titles; (d) in what species of estate, legal or equitable; (e) in what estates; (f) in what shares; (VIII.) creation of entirety estates: (a) by act of law; (b) by act of the party: (1) limitation to husband and wife without specifying how they are to take; (2) limitation expressly by entireties in a state where entirety does not exist; (3) limitation to husband and wife as joint tenants; (4) limitation to husband and wife as tenants in common; (5) limitation to husband and wife for their lives; (6) limitations in peculiar forms; (c) conveyance by entireties to spouses one of whom already has an estate in the land or other subject-matter; (d) invalidity, on other grounds, of a limitation; (IX.) the share taken by husband and wife under limitation to them and another or others; (X.) disposition or encumbrance of entirety property: (a) by both spouses concurring; (b) by one of the spouses alone: (1) neither can derogate from the survivorship right of the other; (2) each can in most states pass his or her own survivorship right; (3) whether a conveyance by the husband made before the wife's death was void for the period of the joint lifetime; (XI.) the effect of divorce on the entirety property: (a) generally; (b) nullification; (c) dissolution; (d) separation without dissolution of marriage; (XII.) partition between tenants by entireties; (XIII.) adverse possession and the statute of limitations

Liability of, for wife's libel and slander

Injunction; against execution sales or other proceedings under final process:—(I.) Exempt personal property; (II.) homestead; (III.) what kind of property first liable; (IV.) public property; (V.) property in the custody of the law; (VI.) railroad and quasi public corporation property; (VII.) partnership property; (VIII.) property owned by third parties: (a) condition precedent; (b) real estate; (c) wife's real estate; (d) subsequent purchasers; (e) fraudulent purchasers; (f) equitable owners; (g) right of third party to require levy on other property; (h) personal property; (i) slaves; (j) wife's personal property; (IX.) personal property of a peculiar value; (X.) trust property; (XI.) in favor of or against executors and administrators: (a)

English decisions: (1) to obtain equal distribution of assets; (2) foreign administrators and executors; (3) costs; (b) American decisions: (1) to obtain equal distribution of assets; (2) to protect heirs and legatees; (3) judgments against administrators or executors personally; (4) judgments in favor of administrators or executors; (5) sale to pay debts; (XII.) in favor of assignees for creditors; (XIII.) in favor of or against lien creditors: (a) mortgages of chattels; (b) mortgages of real property; (c) attachment creditors; (d) judgment creditors; (e) mechanic's lien; (f) landlord's lien; (XIV.) in favor of general creditors; (XV.) ejectment cases; (XVI.) summary proceedings in forcible entry and detainer; (XVII.) jurisdiction of courts: (a) to protect third party; (b) exempt property; (c) other cases; (d) Federal and state courts; (XVIII.) remedy at law: (a) personal property; (b) real property; (XIX.) irregularities: (a) execution: (1) condition precedent; (2) form; (3) time; (4) party; (5) excessive; (b) levy: (1) excessive; (2) mode, manner, and description; (3) notice; (c) sale: (1) notice and advertisement; (2) appraisement; (3) costs; (4) time, place, and manner; (5) officer; (XX.) effect of injunction on executions, sales, and final process: (a) release of errors; (b) release of lien; (c) officer; (d) limitation; (XXI.) effect of time upon injunctions, executions, and judgments: (a) injunctions and executions; (b) dormant judgments

Against judgments entered on confession:—(I.) In favor of creditors; (II.) for irregularities; (III.) for fraud; (IV.) judgments against public policy: (a) usury; (b) compounding crimes; (c) gambling consideration; (V.) judgments against sureties; (VI.) judgments against corporations; (VII.) judgments against partners; (VIII.) judgments against executors and administrators; (IX.) statute of limitations; (X.) consideration not due; (XI.) valid defense must be shown; (XII.) negligence; (XIII.) remedy at law; (XIV.) other matters

Against judgments in garnishment proceedings:—(I.) Necessity of making defense at law; (II.) injunction for errors and irregularities; (III.) void judgments; (IV.) fraud and mistake; (V.) payment; (VI.) set-off; (VII.) injunctions in behalf of creditors

Against judgments for matters arising subsequent to their rendition:—(I.) Lack of remedy by appeal or new trial: (a) by mistake; (b) by act of court or officer; (c) other cases of defective record; (d) by negligence; (II.) lost or destroyed record; (III.) for fraud; (IV.) for alteration of record; (V.) judgments set aside, reversed, or superseded; (VI.) for payment or satisfaction; (VII.) in behalf of surety; (VIII.) for set-off; (IX.) for newly discovered evidence

Against judgments for errors and irregularities:—(I.) For erroneous rulings and decisions: (a) generally; (b) in refusing a continuance; (c) in rulings on pleadings

or motions; (d) in rulings on evidence; (e) as to incompetency of evidence; (f) as to insufficiency of evidence; (g) as to excessive judgments; (h) as to parties; (II.) for irregularities: (a) generally; (b) as to infants; (c) in trial; (d) in matters of form; (e) in pleadings and papers; (f) in records and dockets; (g) in regard to time of rendering judgment	700	joinder of parties and actions; (V.) necessity of service upon wife; (VI.) effect of death pending action; (VII.) husband and wife as witnesses; (VIII.) damages and evidence in mitigation; (IX.) effect of a judgment in such cases; (X.) action on bail bond in such cases	521
Against judgments obtained by fraud, accident, mistake, surprise, and duress:—(I.) Equity jurisdiction; (II.) fraud in obtaining judgments: (a) by agreement: (1) generally; (2) to dismiss; (3) to give notice; (4) to abide by other matters; (5) to allow a defense; (6) to continue or delay; (7) to compromise; (8) where complainant participated in fraud; (b) by concealment; (c) in matters of record; (d) in matters of party; (e) in acts committed at the trial; (f) by collusion; (g) other matters; (III.) on account of accident: (a) sickness: (1) of party; (2) of family; (3) of witness; (4) of attorney; (b) death of attorney; (c) other causes; (IV.) on account of mistake: (a) of law; (b) of fact; (V.) on account of surprise: (a) generally; (b) in matters of witnesses; (c) in regard to perjury; (VI.) on account of duress	736	License; limit of amount of license fees:—(I.) Power to fix license fees generally; (II.) constitutional restrictions as to amount: (a) provisions against discrimination; (b) provisions against violation of contract obligations; (c) provisions requiring equality and uniformity; (d) direct restrictions as to amount of levy; (e) miscellaneous provisions; (III.) graduation of license fees; (IV.) limitations peculiar to municipal corporations: (a) statutory and charter restrictions; (b) must not be discriminating; (c) under a general power to regulate; (1) what may be included in the fee; (2) must not be for revenue; (3) distinction between measures for revenue and regulation; (4) must not be unreasonable or in restraint of trade; (5) reasonableness, by whom determined; (6) presumption of reasonableness; (7) what impositions are reasonable; (d) under a power to restrain or prohibit; (e) under a power to tax or license; (f) when discretion is expressly conferred	415
Insolvency; injunction in favor of assignee for creditors to prevent execution sale	124	Liens; injunction in favor of or against lien creditors to prevent execution sales	125
Insurance; right to rescind contract of, for default of other party	60	Limitation of actions; suspension of, by injunction	142
Who are "legal representatives" within the meaning of life insurance policies:—(I.) In general; (II.) other words combined with the words "legal representatives"	609	Injunction against judgment confessed on debt barred by	241
Effect of riders or slips attached to insurance policies	638	Lobby. See CONTRACTS.
What constitutes an accident within the meaning of an accident insurance policy; (I.) Definitions: general rules; (II.) intentional injuries: (a) self-inflicted; (b) inflicted by others; (c) proviso against liability for intentional injuries; (III.) accident and disease: (a) distinguished; (b) accident caused by disease; (c) disease caused by accident; (d) disease aggravated by accident; (IV.) other instances	206	Merger; in case of estate by entireties	313
Who are "heirs" within the meaning of life insurance policies:—(I.) In general; (II.) other words combined with the word "heirs;" (III.) widow as an heir; (IV.) insured as heir of beneficiary	568	Mistake; as ground of injunction against judgment	786
Judgment. See also INJUNCTION.		Mortgage; injunction in favor of mortgagee against execution sale	125
Injunction in favor of judgment creditor against execution sales; dormancy of, as ground for injunction against execution	142	Municipal corporations. See LICENSE.
Confession of, as fraud to sustain attachment	496	Naturalization. See ALIENS.
Injunction against, for matters arising subsequent to rendition	560	Partition; between tenants by entireties	335
Landlord and tenant; injunction in favor of landlord against execution sale	129	Partnership; injunction against execution sale of property of	105
Legal representatives. See INSURANCE.		Injunction against judgments by confession against partners	240
Levy and seizure; irregularities in, as ground of injunction	136	Payment; as ground of injunction against judgment	563
Libel; liability of husband and wife for the wife's libel and slander:—(I.) The common-law doctrine; (II.) effect of state legislation; (III.) the question of the husband's presence and coercion; (IV.)		Prior appropriators. See WATERS.
		Public property; injunction against sale of, under execution	103
		Railroads; injunction against execution sale of property of	104
		Records; loss or alteration of, as ground of injunction against judgments	562, 563
		Rescission. See CONTRACTS.
		Set-off; as ground for injunction against judgment in garnishment	363
		Arising after judgment as ground of injunction	569
		Shelley's case; as affecting entirety estate	312
		Slaves; injunction against sale of, under execution	117
		Summary proceedings; injunction against dispossession by	129
		Surprise; as ground of injunction against judgment	786

Trusts; injunction against execution sale of trust property	119
Usury; as ground of injunction against judgment by confession	239
Vendor and purchaser; right of, to rescind or abandon contract because of other party's default	64
Waste; by husband on land held by entireties	309
Waters; appropriation of percolating waters on public lands	186
Abandonment or loss of rights of prior appropriators of:—In general; effect of non-user; attempt to change use; abandonment prevented by use; decisions under statutes	265
Change of use or channel of water appropriated:—In general; right subsequently vested cannot be infringed; priority not lost by change; right may be sold; right to change mill location	284

80 L. R. A.

Rights in water of stream as affected by act of God or natural change of course	59
Right of prior appropriation of water:—(L) Right at common law; (II.) right under special statutes or customs: (a) mill act; (b) customs: (1) general doctrine in mining states; (2) source of right of appropriation; (3) against whom available; (4) extent and limitation of right; (5) for what purpose appropriation permissible; (6) who may be an appropriator; (7) what is an appropriation and when complete; (8) determination of priority; (9) interference with and protection of right; (10) second appropriation; (11) riparian rights; (12) statutes affecting; (13) transmission of right; (c) act of Congress of 1893; (d) statutes abolishing riparian rights	65
Witnesses; husband and wife as, in action for wife's libel or slander	59

GENERAL INDEX

TO

OPINIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

(Separate Index to Notes precedes this.)

ABANDONMENT. See WATERS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

ACCIDENT. See also INSURANCE, 23, 24.
NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Accident; as ground of injunction against judgment. 786

ACTION OR SUIT. See also CORPORATIONS, 2; LIENS, 1; TRUSTS, 4.

1. A city is not required to repay money which has been paid into its treasury on an illegal sale of waterworks by the city council, before recovering possession of the property, where it has not appropriated or used the money in any way. Huron Waterworks Co. v. Huron (S. D.) 848

2. A mortgagee is not bound by his election of remedy in selling land under his mortgage and attempting to defend his title thus acquired, so as to preclude his subsequent claim of subrogation to earlier securities. Union Mortg. Bkg. & T. Co. v. Peters (Miss.) 829

3. A suit to set aside a conveyance and recover back the property, which has been abandoned and dismissed without trial, while the grantee remains in the undisturbed possession and enjoyment of the property, will not preclude the enforcement of a mortgage in consideration of a conveyance of the property securing the grantor's support during life. Tuttle v. Burgett (Ohio) 214

4. Unknown assigns need not be made parties in any way in a suit to annul a conveyance to a person and his assigns, where no transfer by him is shown. Smith v. Cornelius (W. Va.) 747

5. A corporation is a necessary party in a suit to annul its act as ultra vires. Id.

6. All the bondholders who were parties to an agreement for the reorganization of a railroad, by which a trustee was appointed to purchase the road at foreclosure sale, have a beneficial interest in the property purchased by such trustee, and are in equity to be regarded as the real owners of it as tenants in common, and any of them are entitled to relief in a suit by one of them for himself and others similarly situated to enforce the trust against a purchaser from the trustee, where the only differences in their situation are such as do not release the property from the trust. Indiana, I. & I. R. Co. v. Swannell (Ill.) 290

7. One of two codefendants against whom a default judgment is fraudulently entered may maintain a suit to enjoin the execution of the judgment against him, without joining his codefendants in the action. Merriman v. Walton (Cal.) 786

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Action; necessity of joinder of joint creditors. 765

Abatement of suit for libel or slander by wife on account of death of party. 529

ACT OF GOD. See also WATERS, 1.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Act of God; as affecting rights in watercourse. 820

ADMIRALTY.

1. A state statute giving a right of action for death by negligence is applicable to a death occurring on the waters of Lake Michigan, more than 3 miles from the shore of such state, and may be enforced in a Federal court of admiralty. Bigelow v. Nickerson (C. C. App. 7th C.) 886

2. A Federal court of admiralty may enforce a state statute giving a right of action for death by negligence, where the death occurs in consequence of a collision between vessels. Id.

ADOPTION. See PARENT AND CHILD.

ADVERSE POSSESSION.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Against wife holding by entirety. 835

ALIENS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7.

1. Congress cannot, without the consent of the state, constrain the state courts to entertain or act upon applications for naturalization. State, Rushworth, v. Judges of Inferior Ct. (N. J. Sup.) 761

2. The state legislature may by statute prescribe and limit the times when and during which applications for naturalization may be heard in the state courts. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Aliens; powers of state legislatures and courts in respect to naturalization:—In general; power of Federal government to confer power on state courts; what state courts may act.

761
877

ANIMALS.

The owner of an unaltered jack is not liable for a filly killed by it, where, without his knowledge or intentional or negligent permission, it broke from the place in which it was kept, under Sand. & H. (Ark.) Dig. § 7801, making the owner of such an animal liable for all damages sustained by its "running at large."
Briacos v. Alfrey (Ark.) 607

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Animals; liability for injuries by; doctrine of scienter. 608

APPEAL AND ERROR. See also TRIAL, 18.

1. An appeal lies to the United States circuit court of appeals from an interlocutory order continuing a preliminary injunction, where, although there is a question of jurisdiction resting on the challenging of a state law as in contravention of the Federal Constitution, yet at the threshold of the case the further question arises whether the facts relied on make a case of equitable cognizance. Green v. Mills (C. G. App. 4th C.) 90

2. Filing a plea to the merits before filing a plea in abatement to the jurisdiction of the court upon the ground of citizenship is not a waiver of the question of jurisdiction under the act of Congress of March 3, 1875, § 5, making it the duty of the Federal circuit courts to dismiss or remand a suit not involving a dispute properly within the jurisdiction. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Meah (C. C. App. 8th C.) 250

3. An appeal from the Illinois county court upon the question of the amount for which a claim against an insolvent estate should be allowed is properly taken to the appellate court. Lovy v. Chicago Nat. Bank (Ill.) 380

4. A statute making the judgment of the appellate court conclusive on all questions of fact does not violate the provisions of the Illinois Constitution authorizing appeals and writs of error to the supreme court in all criminal cases and cases in which a franchise or freehold or the validity of a statute is involved, and "in such other case as may be provided by law." Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Richards (Ill.) 83

5. A judgment that one of the parties to an election contest is the duly elected officer, and that he is entitled to the office on performing necessary acts, is not a judgment in which an election has been "annulled and set aside," within Nev. Gen. Stat. § 1569, requiring the appeal in such case to be taken within thirty days. Buckner v. Lynip (Nev.) 354

6. The appellate court is confined to such of the interlocutory orders made in the action as are appealed from. Wiggins v. Williams (Fla.) 754

7. Attaching a certified copy of a justice's judgment as an exhibit to a complaint to enjoin the execution of a judgment does not make it a part of the record so that it can be considered on appeal. Gum-Elastic Roofing Co. v. Mexico Publishing Co. (Ind.) 700

8. An objection that evidence was incompetent 30 L. R. A.

tent on the question of damages cannot be made for the first time on appeal, where the objections in the court below were merely to the competency of the witnesses and as to the materiality of the evidence at that stage of the case. Evans v. Keystone Gas Co. (N. Y.) 651

9. An appellant cannot assign for error matters which affect other defendants who refuse to join in the appeal. Baum v. Lynn (Miss.) 441

10. It will be presumed that the rulings of the court below excluding from evidence will offered to show the condition of the testator's mind, and claims filed in the probate court, offered to show his financial condition, were correct, where the will and the claims are not contained in the record. Atina L. Ins. Co. v. Florida (C. C. App. 8th C.) 87

11. A motion to direct a verdict for defendant is abandoned by proceeding to introduce evidence to sustain the defense after the motion is overruled, if it is not renewed. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Richards (Ill.) 33

12. Instructions to receivers, which seem material, if not necessary, to their work, may be given by an appellate court in reviewing instructions given by a lower court. Straw v. Carolina I. Bldg. & L. Assn. (N. C.) 693

Grounds of reversal.

13. An improper or insufficient modification of an instruction is not ground for a reversal, if on the facts and evidence in the case it was not misleading. Prouser v. Montana C. R. Co. (Mont.) 214

14. For the court to assume in its charge to the jury the existence of undisputed facts is not reversible error. Forsyth v. Hammond (Ind.) 576

15. The elimination from a requested instruction for defendant in a criminal trial of the direction to find the defendant not guilty, if the jury find the facts hypothesized in the instruction, is not reversible error, although it is the better practice to add such conclusion to each instruction which warrants it. People v. Hecker (Cal.) 403

16. The refusal of instructions as to the rights of a finder in respect to the property found is reversible error in a prosecution against him for murder, in which he pleads self defense and the evidence shows that the homicide occurred while he was attempting to enforce a right to possession as against the owner, when both men used firearms, since such instructions are necessary to enable the jury to determine which was first in the wrong. Id.

17. The accidental absence of the attorney of a party when the verdict is received, not due to any order or action of the court or any conduct by the counsel or parties on the other side, is not cause for reversal. Fitzgerald v. Clark (Mont.) 803

18. An alleged error in allowing the jury to separate temporarily, without being admonished by the trial court not to converse among themselves or with others upon the subject of the trial, is without prejudice, if, upon undisputed facts, no other verdict could have been properly rendered. Kirby v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (S. D.) 612

19. A judgment against an insolvent estate will not be reversed at the instance of the administratrix, where the reversal would result in no benefit to her or the estate from the fact that the claim has been allowed by the probate court. Weare Commission Co. v. Druley (Ill.) 465

20. A new trial solely for the purpose of inquiring as to the damages may be granted on a reversal for errors affecting damages only. Pickett v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. (N. C.) 258

Rehearing.

21. A rehearing will be granted for the purpose of considering new matter stated in the petition therefor, which may materially affect the merits of the main controversy, and was not considered at the rendition of the original opinion. Kirby v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (S. D.) 612

ATTACHMENT.

A conveyance by a debtor, legally or constructively fraudulent as to creditors, as contradistinguished from fraudulent in fact, is not ground for attachment by them under the Illinois attachment law. Weare Commission Co. v. Druley (Ill.) 465

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Attachment; what intent to defraud will sustain an attachment:—(I.) Generally; (II.) actual as distinguished from constructive fraud; (III.) fraudulent contraction of debts; (IV.) against absconding debtors; (V.) for removal of property; (VI.) for assignment, disposal, or secretion of property. 465

BAIL.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Special, in suit for slander by wife. 580

BALLOT. See VOTERS AND ELECTIONS, 10.

BANKS. See also CHECKS, 1.

1. A bank which guaranteed the payment of the checks of another bank that was not a member of a clearing-house association, in order to clear its checks, and, after the latter bank had made an assignment for creditors, and a check thereon which had been certified for the drawers had been refused at the clearing-house, paid the check in pursuance of the guaranty,—did not do this as agent of the other bank, but became an assignee of the check, with the right to recover thereon against the drawers. Voltz v. National Bank (Ill.) 155

2. A bank which at its customer's request mails its own draft to his creditor in payment of the creditor's draft on him cannot defeat the creditor's right to its draft by intercepting it in the mail, although it extended credit for the amount of the draft to its customer in ignorance of the fact that he was insolvent. Canterbury v. Bank of Sparta (Wis.) 845

30 L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CHECKS.

Banks; acceptance of check as payment on collection. 801

BASTARDY. See DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, 1.

BATHS. See CORPORATIONS, 1.

BENEFIT SOCIETIES.

1. The adoption, certification, promulgation, and printing as one full and complete instrument, of a constitution by the proper body of a benefit society, will cause that instrument to annul and supersede all portions of former constitutions which are not embodied in it. Supreme Lodge K. of P. v. La Malta (Tenn.) 888

2. The supreme lodge of a benefit society cannot delegate to a board of control its power to enact general laws affecting the whole endowment rank of the order, without express authority in the charter. Id.

3. Power given by the supreme lodge of a benefit association to the board of control of the endowment rank, to have "entire charge and full control" of such rank does not authorize the board to enact laws. Id.

4. The holder of a benefit certificate who agrees to be bound by all laws of the order "now in force or that may hereafter be enacted" will be subject to a subsequent rule regularly passed, destroying liability on certificates in case of the suicide of their holders. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Benefit societies; obligation of contract with members. 839

BILLS AND NOTES. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS; COURTS, 9; EVIDENCE, 11; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, 1, 2.

1. An assignment without recourse by the payee of a negotiable note payable to order will not prevent an indorsement by the assignee from making him liable as indorser of negotiable commercial paper. De Haas v. Dibert (C. C. App. 8d C.) 189

2. The negotiability of a note with accompanying interest coupons is not destroyed by clauses declaring that the contract shall be construed by the laws of the state in which it is executed, that it shall draw a specified higher rate of interest after maturity, and that if any coupon is not paid when due the whole debt shall mature at that time without demand, and the first unpaid coupon shall become a part of the principal and bear interest at the higher rate specified. Id.

3. Insolvency of the maker of a note is no excuse for failure to give notice of dishonor. Hudson Furniture Co. v. Harding (C. C. App. 7th C.) 513

4. The fact that persons who become joint makers of a corporation note are directors of the company and constituted a majority of the board does not make it unnecessary to give them notice of dishonor of the note, when by the law of the state joint makers are entitled to the same notice as indorsers. Id.

5. A statute making all joint obligations joint and several applies to the indorsement of a promissory note, so that notice of nonpayment given to any one of several joint indorsers is sufficient to bind him. Jarnagin v. Stratton (Tenn.) 495

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Bills and notes; effect of indorsement without recourse upon negotiability. 189
 Notice to joint indorsers. 496

BONDS. See also TRUSTS.

1. Money is not loaned to a city treasurer who is also a banker, so as to relieve his sureties from liability for it, by his invalid promise, made to induce his election, that he will pay interest on the balances in favor of the city. Wilkes Barre v. Rockefeller (Pa.) 893

2. A city treasurer who borrows money in his custody, from sinking fund commissioners who have the power to invest it, holds the money as a debtor rather than as an officer; and the sureties on his bond are not liable for his repayment of the money, but only for his care of the security held by him. Id.

3. Interest paid to himself as city treasurer by such officer on money which he had borrowed from a fund in his custody is held by him as treasurer; and his failure to pay it over to his successor is a breach of his official bond. Id.

4. Commissioners of the sinking fund of a city have no authority to purchase from the city, for that fund, bonds of the city at the time when they are offered for sale by the city, even when there is no statute expressly forbidding such purposes. Kelly v. Minneapolis (Minn.) 281

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Bonds; official, default of treasurer. 893

BOUNDARIES. See STATE, 1, 2.

BRIDGES. See also COUNTIES, 1; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 16; STATUTES, 6.

The transfer of the management and control of public bridges and ferries may be made by the legislature to any governmental agency,—such as a county court,—although the bridges and ferries belong to a city. Simon v. Northup (Or.) 171

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS. See also MORTGAGE, 3.

The affairs of an insolvent building and loan association are to be settled in North Carolina by charging borrowing members 6 per cent interest on the amounts they received, with a credit for all they have paid into the concern, whether it was called "fines," "penalties," "weekly dues," or by any other name; while nonborrowing members are entitled to interest at the same rate upon the amounts due them. Strauss v. Carolina I. Bldg. & L. Assn. (N. C.) 693

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Building and loan associations; rule of settlement on insolvency of. 693
 30 L. R. A.

CARRIERS. See also COMMERCE, 1; TELEGRAPHS, 1.

1. A common carrier is under a legal duty to accept and carry whatever is offered to him, at a reasonable time and place, of a kind that he undertakes or is accustomed to carry, subject to the full liability of a common carrier, unless such liability is restricted by a valid agreement between such carrier and his employer. Kirby v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (S. D.) 613

2. A common carrier has a right to make, and as a condition precedent to insist upon a compliance with, reasonable rules and regulations designed to protect its interests and promote the safe and convenient transaction of business, when the same contravene no consideration of public policy, and in no manner affect its liability under the statutory or common law. Id.

3. A railroad company is not a common or public carrier in respect to a special train of cars loaded with wild animals and other property as well as persons, belonging to or connected with a circus, which is loaded and unloaded by the proprietor of the circus and is run on special time to suit his convenience, under a special contract that he shall assume all the risk of accidents, the only duty of the railroad company being to haul the cars. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wallace (C. C. App. 7th C.) 161

4. A railroad company hauling a special train of cars as a private carrier may lawfully contract for entire exemption from the risk of accidents. Id.

5. A common carrier cannot legally exact an agreement limiting its liability, as a condition precedent to receiving or carrying the offered freight or message. Kirby v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (S. D.) 613

6. A stipulation in a bill of lading, that, in consideration of rates inserted therein less than the regular rates, it is agreed in case of loss or damage to the property transferred that the same shall be adjusted at an agreed valuation, which is less than the actual value of such property,—is binding upon the shipper. J. J. Douglass Co. v. Minnesota Transfer R. Co. (Minn.) 860

7. An agreement restricting the carrier's liability except as "to the rate of hire, the time, place, and manner of delivery," can only be manifested, under S. D. Comp. Laws, § 8888, by the signature of the passenger, consignor, consignee, or person employing such carrier. Kirby v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (S. D.) 613

8. The failure of a carrier's agent to stamp the return coupon of a round-trip ticket in order to make it valid for use under the carrier's regulations will not justify the expulsion from a train of a passenger who had presented himself to the agent, and signed the ticket in the agent's presence, and delivered it to and received it from the agent under such circumstances as to justify the belief that the ticket had been properly stamped. Northern P. R. Co. v. Pauson (C. C. App. 9th C.) 730

9. A passenger riding on the platform of a street car is not a passenger "on any railroad" who assumes the risk of injury, under the provisions of the New York general railroad law of 1850, § 48, as that was not intended to apply to street railways. Vail v. Broadway R. Co. (N. Y.) 626

10. A railroad company owes no duty to a passenger as such after he alights from the train at a station, and proceeds towards a section house connected with the station, for the purpose of engaging in his regular business as a peddler. Krants v. Rio Grande W. R. Co. (Utah) 297

11. A railroad company is liable for an injury to a person in one of its station houses in a sparsely settled country, although he was not an intending passenger, caused without any provocation by one of the employees of such company aided by strangers, in the presence of the ticket agent, who represented the company, and who made no effort to prevent the injury. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Carriers; railroad companies as private carriers in drawing special trains or special cars. 161

Duty to intending passenger. 297

Protection of passenger against assault. 297

Negligence in riding on platform of street car. 626

Contract limiting amount of liability. 860

CHARITIES. See also PERPETUITIES; TAXES, 1.

A gift to the rector, church wardens, and vestrymen of an unincorporated religious society, in trust to pay the salary of the rectors of the parish forever, or for church purposes only, is for a charitable use. Alden v. St. Peter's Parish (Ill.) 232

CHECKS. See also BANKS, 2.

1. Even if a guaranty by one bank to another for clearing-house purposes is ultra vires, this fact will not avail the drawers of a certified check who are not parties to the guaranty, when charged with liability to the bank, which in compliance with its guaranty had paid the check and become an assignee thereof after the drawee became insolvent. Volts v. National Bank (Ill.) 155

2. A bank which cashes a check, and duly sends it for collection to its correspondent, whose runner duly presents it, with other checks, to the drawee, receiving in payment the latter's check drawn on another bank in the same city, which check is dishonored because not presented for two or more hours, during which time the drawee fails, cannot recover from an accommodation indorser of the original check, even though it is subsequently reclaimed and duly protested. Comer v. Du-four (Ga.) 800

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Checks; right to stop payment of. 845

CIRCUS. See CARRIERS, 3.

CITIZENS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 6.
30 L. R. A.

CITY ATTORNEY. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 20.

CLAIMS. See also CONTRACTS, 9, 21, 22.

The trust imposed upon the states by the act of Congress refunding the direct tax levied in 1861, to hold the same for the benefit of the persons from whom it was collected, is not binding upon states which paid the tax out of their treasuries, and did not collect it by a levy upon their inhabitants. Davis v. Com. (Mass.) 748

CLEARING HOUSE. See BANKS, 1.

CLERKS. See INSURANCE, 6.

CLUBS. See INTOXICATING LIQUORS

COMMERCE.

1. A provision in a carrier's charter, that it shall be subject in the transportation of freight to the laws applicable to common carriers, does not make it subject to state control when engaged in interstate commerce. Houston Direct Nav. Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. (Tex.) 718

2. A shipment from one point to another within the same state is interstate commerce, although a bill of lading is given and charges are collected to the latter point only, where the destination of the property is in a foreign state, to which a continuous voyage is contemplated, with only a stop to change carriers at the terminal point mentioned in the bill of lading. Id.

3. A 10-pound package of oleomargarine put up by a nonresident manufacturer, and sent into the state for sale at retail to an individual customer, and thus sold by an agent for use as food, is not an original package the sale of which is protected against state laws by the Constitution of the United States. Com. v. Paul (Pa.) 896

4. A reasonable license fee charged upon itinerant vendors of drugs or articles intended for the treatment of diseases, who publicly profess to cure or treat diseases, is not an unconstitutional interference with interstate commerce, although the medicines sold were in original packages brought from another state. State v. Wheelock (Iowa) 429

5. The provision of the United States Constitution, conferring upon Congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states, does not prohibit the legislature of a state from enacting a law subjecting telegraph companies to penalties for acts of negligence occurring entirely within the limits of the state, although such acts are committed in dealing with messages to be transmitted to points in other states. Western U. Tele. Co. v. Howell (Ga.) 158

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Original package, what is. 897

COMMITTEE. See LEGISLATURE.

COMMON LAW.

There is no common law of the United States except, possibly, as the common law of England has been adopted with reference to the construction of powers granted to the Federal Union. Hudson Furniture Co. v. Harding (C. C. App. 7th C.) 518

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

The liability of joint makers of a note is controlled by the law of the place where the contract is payable. Hudson Furniture Co. v. Harding (C. C. App. 7th C.) 518

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Conflict of laws; law applicable to contracts. 514

CONGRESS. See ALIENA.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 16.

1. Minn. Gen. Stat. 1894, §§ 2451-2465, authorizing the establishment of a logger's lien without notice to the owner, but not precluding him from denying in a subsequent proceeding plaintiff's right to a lien, and giving him an opportunity to intervene in the original action, is not unconstitutional as taking the property of one person to pay the debt of another without due process of law. Brown v. Markham (Minn.) 84

2. A statute to regulate by taxation or otherwise the privilege or right to receive property is not in conflict with the Ohio bill of rights, which recognizes the inalienable right of acquiring or possessing and protecting property. State, Schwartz, v. Ferris (Ohio) 218

3. The provision of Ohio Const. art. 2, § 26, that all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation throughout the state, does not guarantee the general protection of all the inhabitants of the state, but only that such laws shall be in force in all parts of the state. Id.

4. The exemption by the Ohio inheritance tax law of April 20, 1894, of estates of $20,000 and under from all taxation, while no exemption is allowed estates exceeding such amount, and the taxation of larger estates at a higher rate than smaller ones, renders the act unconstitutional as violating the Ohio bill of rights, § 2, declaring that all political power is inherent in the people, and that government is instituted for their equal protection and benefit. Id.

5. The provision of U. S. Const. 14th amend. § 1, that no state shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws, is not broader than the provision of the Ohio bill of rights, § 2, that government is instituted for the equal protection and benefit of the people; and a statute imposing an inheritance tax authorized by the latter provision will not conflict with the former. Id.

6. There is no unwarranted discrimination against citizens of other states in Mich. Sess. Laws 1893, act No. 74, declaring it to be unlawful for any person to solicit insurance within the state on property within the state for any nonresident persons without procuring from the commissioner of insurance the certificate of insurance provided for by the statute. People v. Gay (Mich.) 464

NO L. R. A.

7. The fact that Chinamen are engaged in the hand laundry business does not make invalid a statute imposing a license fee of $25 on a male laundryman employing one or more other persons in such business, while the fee for a steam laundry is $15, where the law in its terms applies to all male laundrymen of every condition and nationality. State, Toi, v. French (Mont.) 415

8. The provision as to cruel and unusual punishment in U. S. Const. 8th amend. has no application to crimes against the laws of a state. Com. v. Murphy (Mass.) 734

9. An application to compel the attendance of a witness, which will delay the trial, is properly refused where the attempt would be idle because he is without the jurisdiction of the court and beyond the reach of its process. Fidelity & C. Co. v. Johnson (Miss.) 206

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Constitutional law; delegation of legislative power. 578, 616

As to statute giving attorney's fees. 493

CONTRACTS. See also HIGHWAYS, 2; INSURANCE, 18.

1. The acceptance by the master of a written contract of employment signed by the servant is equivalent to its formal execution by the former. Vogel v. Pekoc (Ill.) 491

2. A church does not take the benefit of an attorney's services in prosecuting a preacher, so as to make it liable to pay for them, by a resolution for the removal of the preacher from the parsonage, which recites his suspension from the ministry upon the charges presented against him. Parshley v. Third M. E. Church (N. Y.) 574

3. An oral lease of land for one year, with the privilege of three, at an annual rent, is for a longer period than a year within the statute of frauds, notwithstanding the lessee's option, since he could not compel the execution of the lease for a year, because the contract contemplates the exercise of the option after the execution of the lease. Hand v. Osgood (Mich.) 379

4. A memorandum of an order for the purchase of goods, signed by the agent of the buyer, with a written acceptance signed by the agent of the seller, may constitute a valid contract within the statute of frauds. Gerli v. Poidebard Silk Mfg. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 61

5. A construction most beneficial to the promisee will be adopted if other things are equal, when the terms of an instrument and the relation of the parties leave it doubtful whether words are used in an enlarged or a restricted sense. Webster v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. (Ohio) 719

Validity; public policy.

6. No action can be maintained on a contract the consideration of which is either wicked in itself or prohibited by law. Sorz v. Finkelstein (Neb.) 644

7. The purchase price of beer cannot be recovered where it was sold under an arrangement contemplating its resale by the purchaser in violation of law under pretense of an agency for conducting a bottling department under the license of the seller. Id.

8. A contract for services in procuring legislation which forfeits to the government timber lands previously included in a railroad grant, and gives the preference in purchase thereof to those who have already settled thereon, whereby the other party to the contract is enabled to buy very valuable government land for the paltry sum of $1.25 or $2.50 per acre, is void as against public policy. Houlton v. Dunn (Minn.) 737

9. The legislature may authorize the employment of an agent to prosecute claims on behalf of the state which require the procurement of legislation, for a fee contingent on his success. Davis v. Com. (Mass.) 743

10. A contract to pay a city attorney any compensation other than his salary, for conducting litigation on behalf of the city which is within the scope of his official duties, is void by public policy as well as by the provisions of Cal. Const. art. 11, § 9. Buck v. Eureka (Cal.) 409

11. For services rendered after the expiration of his term of office under a void contract to pay an officer extra compensation he cannot have any recovery under the contract, though he may be entitled to some compensation upon an implied contract. Id.

12. The promise to pay interest on balances in favor of the city, made by a banker to induce his election by the council as city treasurer, is against public policy and is incapable of enforcement. Wilkes Barre v. Rockefeller (Pa.) 393

13. A stipulation between an employee and a guaranty insurance company which insures his employer against the employee's fraud or dishonesty, to the effect that a voucher or other evidence of payment by the insurer to the employer shall be conclusive evidence against the employee as to the fact and extent of his liability to the insurer, is void as against public policy so far as it attempts to make such evidence conclusive, although it may be sustained to the extent of making it prima facie evidence. Fidelity & C. Co. v. Erickhoff (Minn.) 586

14. A stipulation against liability for negligence of a railroad company setting fire to buildings erected on its right of way under a lease may be included in the lease without violating public policy. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 193

Change; rescission; abandonment.

15. The manner in which compensation shall be paid may be waived or modified without destroying the promise that a certain amount shall be paid, where the latter is the principal part of the contract. Davis v. Com. (Mass.) 743

16. Failure to deliver the first instalment of goods on a contract for delivery in instalments does not justify a rescission by the buyer. Gerli v. Poidebard Silk Mfg. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 61

17. A breach of contract which will justify the party not in default in abandoning performance and suing for damages on account of a breach by the other need not be of such a character as to render the further execution of the contract by him impossible, but if the other party refuses to treat it as subsisting and binding upon him, or by his act and conduct shows that he has renounced it and no longer considers himself bound by it, there is in legal effect a prevention of performance by the other party. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Richards (Ill.) 33

18. It can make no difference whether a contract has been partially performed or the time for performance has not yet arrived, in determining the right of one party to regard it as abandoned by the other. Id.

19. Upon election to treat the renunciation of the contract by the other party, whether by declaration or by acts and conduct, as a breach of the contract, the rights of the parties are to be then regarded as culminating, and the contractual relation ceases to exist except for the purpose of maintaining an action for the recovery of damages. Id.

20. A contract whereby the first party agrees to employ the second party to perform such work as he may assign to him from time to time imposes no obligation on the first party, and a provision therein for the forfeiture of a specified sum by the servant in case he shall leave the employment without a specified notice constitutes no defense to an action by the latter for his wages, as the contract is void for want of mutuality. Vogel v. Pekoc (Ill.) 491

Breach; performance.

21. A state cannot resist payment of compensation to its agent who has under his contract with it become entitled thereto, on the ground that it has promised the United States that it would not make the payment. Davis v. Com. (Mass.) 743

22. A waiver of claim to compensation, or estoppel from asserting it under a contract to collect the direct tax returned by the general government for a state which had paid the tax out of its treasury, for a percentage of the amount received, is not worked by consenting to its receipt on condition that no part of it shall be used to pay the claimant, since such consent will at most amount to an agreement that he shall be paid in some other way. Id.

23. The refusal of a mortgagor to furnish support to the mortgagees at any other place than his own home, although they were entitled to claim it at any reasonable place, and his declaration that he would not pay for any support furnished by others, constitute a breach of the condition of the mortgage, on which an action of foreclosure may be maintained for the reasonable value of support furnished by others, without any request of the mortgagor or demand upon him. Tuttle v. Burgett (Ohio) 214

24. Support at such place or places as may be selected by the mortgagees can be claimed by them under a mortgage conditioned that the mortgagor shall furnish them during life comfortable rooms, food, clothing, medicine and medical attendance in sickness, with necessities and comforts suitable for persons of their age and situation in life, without specifying any place where it shall be furnished; and they are not obliged to receive it at the house of the mortgagor. Id.

25. Any reasonable place of performance may be designated by the obligee, as a general rule, when no place of performance is agreed upon by the parties. Id.

26. Lien creditors are concluded as to the sufficiency of the completion of a building, in the absence of fraud or mistake, by its acceptance by the architect and the owner. Oriental Hotel Co. v. Griffiths (Tex.) 765

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Contracts; for support of person; place of support. 215

To procure legislation. 744

Against liability for negligence. 194

Waiver of right by. 587

Illegal purpose of. 644

Validity of contract for services to procure legislation:—In general; condemnation of such contracts generally; contingent fee makes contract void; contract for personal influence or lobby services; application of rules; analogous cases. 787

Right to rescind or abandon contract because of other party's default:—(I.) Introduction; (II.) condition precedent: (a) how far is right to rescind controlled by question of condition precedent; (b) charter-party; (c) party excused by nonperformance of condition precedent; (d) excuse for not performing condition precedent; (III.) right to rescind contract without liability for nonperformance: (a) necessity of mutual consent; (b) contract may be rescinded; (c) duty to place other party in statu quo; (d) partial performance; (IV.) party seeking to rescind must not be in default; (V.) right of party rescinding to recover for what he has done; (VI.) right to abandon performance and recover for breach: (a) performance excused; (b) recovery for breach; (c) lost profits as damages; (VII.) what will warrant rescission; (VIII.) application of above rules to various kinds of contracts: (a) vendor and purchaser; (b) constructive contracts; (c) insurance contracts; (d) continuing contracts. 88

CORPORATIONS. See also COURTS, 8, 7; EVIDENCE, 2, 3; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, 8; MORTGAGE, 7; RECEIVERS, 1.

1. A lease by a public corporation holding in trust medicinal baths belonging to the state, by which a private person is for the term of ninety-nine years given exclusive possession and control in place of the trustees, is ultra vires. Smith v. Cornelius (W. Va.) 747

2. Directors as such cannot sustain a suit to contest a lease made by a public corporation on the ground that it is ultra vires. Id.

3. Notice of restrictions annexed to the grant of power by a law authorizing action by a corporation is chargeable upon persons dealing with the corporation. Id.

4. A public corporation vested with powers by the state to be exercised for the public cannot transfer to another the exercise of such powers, and make a lease of its property necessary to enable it to execute its functions, without legislative consent. Id.

5. A consolidated railroad company may be held responsible for the acts and neglects of its constituent members as done by it as a whole. Southern R. Co. v. Bouknight (C. C. App. 4th C.) 833

6. Two states cannot by joint action create a corporation which will be regarded as a single corporate entity, and for jurisdictional purposes a citizen of each state which joined in creating it. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Meri (C. C. App. 8th C.) 250

7. An interstate corporation having by one board of directors formed by process of consolidation or otherwise acts in each of such states as a domestic, and not as a foreign, corporation. Id.

8. The result of creation by one state of a corporation of a given name, and the declaration of the legislature of an adjoining state that the same legal entity shall be or become a corporation of that state, and be entitled to exercise within its borders all of its corporate functions by the same board of directors, is not to create a single corporation, but two corporations of the same name having a different paternity. Id.

9. Neither the want of officers of a corporation by reason of failure to elect, or by death, nor the burning of the mill which it was the object of the corporation to carry on, will of itself work a dissolution. Re Belton (La.) 648

10. An existing corporation is not dissolved by the fact that its shares are held by a less number of persons than the law requires as a condition precedent to its organization. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Corporations; consolidation of. 825

Power to transfer franchise. 820

Power to make by-law. 830

Injunction against execution sale of property of. 103

Injunction against judgment confessed by. 240

Action by shareholders. 749

COTENANCY. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Husband and wife as joint tenants, tenants in common, or tenants by entireties, see HUSBAND AND WIFE.

COUNTERFEIT. See INJUNCTION, 3.

COUNTIES. See also ELECTION DISTRICTS, 1.

1. The requirement that a county shall pay the debt of a city within it, made by Or. act 1886, providing for a county tax to pay the interest and principal on the bridge bonds of the city of Portland, is unconstitutional. Simon v. Northrup (Or.) 171

2. The power to divide counties or towns and erect new counties and towns, or to change their boundaries, is conferred by the general grant of legislative power, the time and mode of exercising which is in the discretion of the legislature, unless restrained by other provisions or arrangements of the Constitution. People, Henderson, v. Westchester County Supers. (N. Y.) 74

8. The provision in N. Y. Const. art. 8, § 5, that nothing in that section shall prevent the division at any time of counties and towns by the legislature, although that section relates to the apportionment of members of assembly and the manner of constituting assembly districts, gives the legislature power to change such boundaries in its discretion, although the county boundaries which are changed may be the boundaries of a senate district. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Counties; division of, for election districts. 75

Legislative power to impose liabilities upon. 172

COURTS. See also ADMIRALTY; CORPORATIONS, 6, 7; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 8.

1. A statute abolishing a judicial district before the expiration of the term of office of the judge of that district, and transferring all the counties comprising it into another district, is within the constitutional power of the legislature. Aikman v. Edwards (Kan.) 149

2. The public policy of a state or nation must be determined by its Constitution, laws, and judicial decisions, not by the varying opinions of laymen, lawyers, or judges as to the demands of the interests of the public. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 198

3. The legislative character of the function of annexation of territory to a city does not preclude judicial examination and decision on questions as to the preliminary steps and the truth and sufficiency of the petition for annexation. Foreyth v. Hammond (Ind.) 576

4. Questions of the necessity and expediency of viaducts over railroad tracks, and of the portion of the expense which the city may properly assume, are for the determination of the city authorities, rather than the courts. Argentine v. Atchison, T. & S. P. R. Co. (Kan.) 255

5. An ordinance which is unreasonable, unjust, and oppressive, will be held by the courts to be void. Haues v. Chicago (Ill.) 225

6. Courts of equity are not open to a foreign corporation as a matter of strict right, but as matter of comity. National Teleph. Mfg. Co. v. Dubois (Mass.) 628

7. Jurisdiction will not be taken on service by publication, of an action by a foreign corporation having a place of business in the state to recover a debt contracted in another state and not reduced to judgment, from a nonresident whose only property in the state consists of his interest as partner in a firm whose property, assets, books, vouchers, papers, and accounts, are all, with few exceptions, in another state where the principal business of the firm is carried on and two of the partners live. Id.

8. The relation to a note, of a party whose name is signed on the back of it, is a question 30 L. R. A.

of general law on which Federal courts are not bound by state decisions. Hudson Furniture Co. v. Harding (C. C. App. 7th C.) 518

9. State legislation with respect to the law merchant must be recognized and enforced by Federal courts, although in the absence of such statutes they are not bound by state decisions on the subject. Id.

10. A state statute providing that all persons becoming parties to promissory notes payable on time, by signature on the back thereof, shall be entitled to the same notice of nonpayment as indorsers, must control the decisions of a Federal court as to the rights of parties to a note payable in that state. Id.

11. A provision of a state statute giving a cause of action for death by negligence, that the action shall be brought in some court established by the Constitution and laws of the state, is not operative to deprive a Federal court of jurisdiction of such action. Bigelow v. Nickerson (C. C. App. 7th C.) 886

12. A Federal court has no jurisdiction of an action by a citizen of the state against a consolidated railway company organized under the statutes of that and adjoining states, for personal injuries inflicted within the state, as such corporation is a domestic corporation for jurisdictional purposes. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Meeh (C. C. App. 8th C.) 250

13. Decisions by state courts as to the validity of a contract against liability for negligence are not conclusive upon the Federal courts. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 198

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Courts; citizenship of consolidated corporation. 250

COVENANT. See LANDLORD AND TENANT, 1.CRIMINAL LAW. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8.

1. One who intentionally commits a crime is responsible criminally for the consequences of his act, if the offense proves to be different from that which he intended. Com. v. Murphy (Mass.) 784

2. The legislature is ordinarily the judge of the expediency of creating new crimes, and of prescribing penalties, whether light or severe, for prohibited acts. Id.

3. The punishment of imprisonment for life under Mass. Stat. 1898, chap. 466, for criminal intimacy with a female child under the age of sixteen years, is not in violation of the constitutional provision against cruel or unusual punishments. Id.

4. Lack of knowledge or of good reason to believe that a girl is under sixteen years of age is no defense under Mass. Stat. 1898, chap. 466, providing the penalty of imprisonment for life in case of criminal intimacy with such a person. Id.

5. Procuring reversal of a judgment of conviction on account of error by the trial court waives the right to object to further prosecution on the ground of former jeopardy. McGinn v. State (Neb.) 450

6. The power of the court to correct a judgment sentencing a person to death and to solitary confinement until execution is not lost by the fact of imprisonment after sentence, on the ground that this is the suffering of a part of the sentence. Id.

7. The power of the court to order confinement of a person sentenced to death, during the time before execution, does not rest upon any positive provision of statute, as such confinement is not a part of the penalty although it is a necessary incident thereof. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Criminal law; cruel and unusual punishment. 784

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL PUNISHMENT. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8; CRIMINAL LAW, 8.

CUSTODY OF LAW.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunction against execution sale of property in. 108

CUSTOM. See also EVIDENCE, 25.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

As to prior appropriation. 665

DAMAGES. See also SALE, 1.

1. Physical impossibility for the seller to tender goods at the proper time will prevent his obtaining more than nominal damages for breach of the contract by prior notice that the purchaser will not accept the goods. Gerli v. Poitebard Silk Mfg. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 61

2. No right of action for the death of a child exists in New Jersey merely because the shock of its death caused the sickness of its mother, with the consequent deprivation of her services and society from her husband and the increase of his expenses, as the only right of action for death is to recover, under N. J. Rev. p. 294, for the pecuniary loss resulting therefrom. Myers v. Holborn (N. J. Err. & App.) 845

3. One injured by the negligence of another can recover only for such future pain as the evidence shows she is reasonably certain to endure, and not for such as there is a reasonable probability that she will endure. Smith v. Milwaukee Builders' & T. Eech. (Wis.) 504

4. The impairment of the capacity of a married woman to perform labor can be considered as an element of the damages recoverable in an action by her for a personal injury, where the statutes entitle her to make contracts on her own account and give her the right to her own earnings. Harmon v. Old Colony R. Co. (Mass.) 658

5. A verdict for $4,500 for serious and permanent injuries to a young man, leaving him badly maimed and deformed for life and practically a physical wreck, is not so excessive as to be set aside. Hove v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. R. Co. (Minn.) 634

80 L. R. A.

6. Damages of a land owner for the failure of a railroad company to build railroad fences include the loss of his privilege to connect his fences with such fences for the purpose of making an inclosure. Gould v. Great Northern R. Co. (Minn.) 590

7. Damages to shade trees are measured by the difference between the value of the land before and after the injury. Evans v. Key-stone Gas Co. (N. Y.) 651

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Damages; for libel or slander by wife. 529

Recoverable by wife for personal injury; impaired capacity to labor as an element. 658

DEATH. See ADMIRALTY; DAMAGES, 2.

DEDICATION. See also EVIDENCE, 6, 8.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Dedication; to state. 748

DEFINITIONS. See also INSURANCE, 38, 39; NEWSPAPERS, 1; TIME, 2.

The word "direct," in a policy insuring against direct loss or damage by fire, means "immediate" or "proximate," as distinguished from "remote." Ermentrout v. Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. (Minn.) 346

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Definition; month. 451

DEPOSITIONS.

1. A deposition taken before certain persons made parties to a suit cannot be used as against them. Smith v. Milwaukee Builders' & T. Eech. (Wis.) 504

2. Refusal to answer a cross-interrogatory which does not appear to have been material will not prevent the admission of a deposition in evidence. White v. Solomon (Mass.) 537

DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE, 4.

1. The next of kin of the father of an illegitimate child that has been adopted with capacity to inherit, but not legitimated, have no inheritable blood as to such child. Murphy v. Portrum (Tenn.) 263

2. Property descended from the father to an illegitimate child who has been adopted, but not legitimated, will, like other property of the child, descend on his death intestate to his mother in preference to the father's next of kin, under the general provisions of Mill. & V. (Tenn.) Code, § 3273, as to inheritance from an illegitimate child by the mother. Id.

DISEASE. See INSURANCE, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

DOWER.

A widow who is not and never has been a resident of the state is not entitled in Kansas to any interest in real property of her husband in that state. Small v. Small (Kan.) 243

DURESS.NOTES AND BRIEFS.

As ground of injunction against judgment. 786

EJECTMENT.NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunction against dispossession in. 129

ELECTION. See VOTERS AND ELECTIONS.*ELECTION DISTRICTS. See also COUNTIES, 8.

1. The constitutional declaration that a senate district shall consist of certain specified counties, when construed with other provisions making population the basis of apportionment and prohibiting the division of a county between senate districts, establishes an organic relation between the boundaries of the counties as they existed at that time and the senate districts thereby established, so that no change of county boundaries can be effectual to change the boundaries of the senate district. People, Henderson, v. Westchester County Supers. (N. Y.) 74

2. The annexation of a portion of Westchester county to the city and county of New York by N. Y. Laws 1895, chap. 934, which is valid so far as it affects municipal burdens and municipal rights, leaves the annexed territory still a part of the 22d senate district, which by the Constitution consisted of Westchester county, and within the jurisdiction of the board of supervisors of that county for the purpose of including it within one of the three assembly districts allotted to that county by the Constitution. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Election districts; constitutionality of change of. 75

ELECTRIC LIGHTS. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 10.*ELEVATORS. See EMINENT DOMAIN.*EMBLEMENTS.*NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right to, in case of estate by entireties. 308

EMINENT DOMAIN.

The erection and operation of a public grain elevator or warehouse upon a railroad right of way acquired in condemnation proceedings, whether done by the company or its licensee or lessee, are neither misuse nor abandonment of the easement in the land occupied by such structure, so as to give the owner of the fee a right to resume possession. Gurney v. Minneapolis Union Elevator Co. (Minn.) 584

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Eminent domain; public purposes for exercise of. 849

Purposes for which railroad right of way may be used. 584

80 L. R. A.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY POLICY. See INSURANCE, 16.*ENTIRETIES. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, NOTES AND BRIEFS.*ESTOPPEL.

1. The state is not estopped from levying a tax for the reason that no attempt has been made to assess the property for many years, during which the owner has borrowed money by a mortgage on the property for the erection of a building upon it, and agreed to pay the taxes on such mortgage. Portland Hibernian Benev. Soc. v. Kelly (Or.) 167

2. One who has accepted the appointment to an office having at least a potential existence, and has received the emoluments of it, is estopped from endeavoring to show to his own advantage that the office has never been lawfully created because it was not done in the proper mode,—as, by ordinance. Buck v. Eureka (Cal.) 409

3. A riparian owner is not estopped to use the water for irrigating purposes by failing to object to the diversion of water by a lower appropriator. Hargrave v. Cook (Cal.) 890

4. One who fraudulently obtains money on a mortgage by representing that his property is unencumbered is estopped to contest the mortgagee's right of subrogation to earlier liens, on the ground that they are barred by the statute of limitations. Union Mortg. Bkg. & T. Co. v. Peters (Miss.) 829

5. The representative of a deceased person, who stands in his shoes, is bound by an estoppel raised by the fraud of the decedent. Id.

EVIDENCE. See also DEPOSITIONS; TRIAL, 14.*Judicial notice.

1. Judicial notice will be taken by the supreme court of Washington that at least that portion of the state east of the Cascade Mountains was included within the territory where the customary law of miners was in force. Isaacs v. Barber (Wash.) 685

2. The fact that many unincorporated church societies have been in existence is a matter of common knowledge. Alden v. St. Peter's Parish (Ill.) 283

Presumptions and burden of proof.

3. Incorporation of a church society cannot be presumed merely because the statute prescribes a mode by which such societies may be incorporated. Id.

4. A quorum shown to have been present will be presumed to continue present at proceedings taken the same day, until the contrary is shown. State, Stanford, v. Ellington (N. C.) 583

5. The fact that less than a quorum of a legislative body are reported by the tellers as voting when the roll is called overcomes any presumption that a quorum present earlier in the day still continued present. Id.

6. Long and uninterrupted possession of land by the state, with a claim of ownership for public use, and user by the public, will raise a presumption of a dedication by the property owner for such public use. Smith v. Cornelius (W. Va.) 747

7. A grant will be presumed from long and uninterrupted possession of land, with claim of ownership. Id.

8. A presumption of a grant or dedication by Lord Fairfax as lord of the fee, for public use, of the grounds at Bath or Berkeley Springs, West Virginia, arises from the possession and claim of ownership by that state and Virginia for 119 years, although Va. act 1776 seizing this land recites no consent on the part of Lord Fairfax and makes no provision for obtaining his consent or giving him compensation. Id.

9. The presumption is that a corner lot fronts on the street on which its shorter side abuts, if there is a material difference in the length of its sides. Toledo v. Sheill (Ohio) 598

10. The front of a corner lot while vacant is presumed to continue to be the front after the lot is improved, unless the contrary appears by the style and character of the improvement. Id.

11. A negotiable promissory note made by an administrator in his official capacity imports sufficient consideration to bind him personally. Germania Bank v. Michaud (Minn.) 286

12. The duty and burden of showing that an act of legislation within the ordinary scope of legislative power is unconstitutional rests upon those who assert its unconstitutionality. People, Henderson, v. Westchester County Supers. (N. Y.) 74

13. The burden of proof as to contributory negligence is on the defense. Prosser v. Montana U. R. Co. (Mont.) 814

14. A vessel bound to keep out of the way of another has the burden of proving that a collision between them was due to the failure of the latter. Bigelow v. Nickerson (C. C. App. 7th C.) 886

15. A telegraph company receiving a prepaid telegram in Georgia for transmission to a point in another state, which was never delivered to the addressee, has the burden of showing that it was transmitted from the Georgia office with due diligence, and that nondelivery was due to default or some other cause arising beyond the limits of the state, in order to escape liability for the statutory penalty for negligence in transmission. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Howell (Ga.) 158

16. A party excepting to a claim filed in insolvency proceedings has the burden of showing what payments have been made thereon. Levy v. Chicago Nat. Bank (Ill.) 880

Documentary.

17. Transcript showing entries by a treasurer upon his books are not conclusive, but only prima facie, evidence against his sureties that he is liable for the sums with which he has charged himself. Wilkes Barre v. Rockafellow (Pa.) 898

18. The record of a judgment against a railroad company for personal injuries is admissible as against a purchaser on foreclosure sale, who agreed as part of the price to satisfy all claims held prior in lien, not simply to establish the fact of its rendition, but as proof of when the action was brought, for what, and the amount, for the purpose of showing that such judgment is prior to the mortgage under the South Carolina statute giving judgments for personal injuries precedence over railroad mortgages. Southern R. Co. v. Bouknight (C. C. App. 4th C.) 823

Oral as to writings.

19. Oral proof of a separate agreement, to show that the consideration of a conveyance which recited that it was in settlement and release of the claims of a guardian and ward against the grantor, included also a release of the ward's claim against the guardian, is inadmissible. Baum v. Lynn (Miss.) 441

20. Oral evidence as to the consideration recited in a written agreement is inadmissible when the stipulation as to the consideration is contractual—as, in a case where a conveyance expressly recites that it is made for the settlement and release of specified claims. Id.

21. Oral declarations of a party to a written instrument made before or at the time of its execution, of an intention or purpose not therein expressed, or different than that to be derived from its terms, are not within the rule which permits extrinsic evidence of the situation of the parties and of the surrounding circumstances, and are inadmissible in an action on the instrument where its reformation is not sought. Tuttle v. Burgett (Ohio) 214

22. Parol evidence is admissible to show the meaning of the words "watchmaker's materials," in a policy of insurance on such stock, where there is nothing in the policy itself to indicate with exactness what articles were intended by such term. Marril v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. (Ga.) 835

Opinions.

23. Testimony that flat cars were placed before a locomotive for the purpose of allowing brakemen and switchmen to mount upon the brake beam of a car by grasping the brake staff is not incompetent as an opinion of the witness or as a statement of fact, when made by a witness who is cognizant and observant of the conduct of the business. Prosser v. Montana O. R. Co. (Mont.) 814

24. A diver who has examined a vessel sunk while burning is not incapacitated to give his opinion that the vessel is a total loss, by the fact that he regarded himself as not competent to estimate the cost of repairs necessary to replace it. Jackson v. British America Assur. Co. (Mich.) 636

Relevancy; sufficiency.

25. Evidence of the usual and customary way of mounting flat cars in front of a road engine when used in switching offered to disprove contributory negligence is not inadmissible on the ground that it is an attempt to excuse negligence by usage or custom, where it does not appear that the act in question was positively negligent. Prosser v. Montana C. R. Co. (Mont.) 814

26. The existence of a fault in one mineral vein cannot be proved by showing a fault in another vein which is claimed to be a continuity of the vein in question, in the absence of a showing of a continuity in the latter fault. Fitzgerald v. Clark (Mont.) 803

27. Testimony as to the value of shade trees is not admissible on the question of damages for their destruction, as the damages are measured by the depreciation of the value of the land. Evans v. Keystone Gas Co. (N. Y.) 651

28. Evidence of occurrences the day of, but some hours before, a fatal affray, is admissible in a prosecution for murder, on the question of self-defense, where they were a part of the occurrences that culminated in the killing, and tend to enlighten the jury as to the mental attitude of the men toward each other at the time of the affray. People v. Hecker (Cal.) 408

29. An offer to prove that a city treasurer borrowed money in his custody from the officers who had power to invest it, and that he paid interest upon it, and that the city council approved reports showing the receipt of such interest, should not be rejected in an action against his sureties because it does not undertake to set forth what action was taken before loaning the money. Wilkes Barre v. Roata-fellow (Pa.) 893

30. The coincidence of the decay and death of vegetation with the existence of the leakage of a large amount of gas after the laying of a new main and until its recalking, and the fact of the healthy growth after the recalking, will sustain a conclusion by the jury that the escape of the gas was the cause of the injury. Evans v. Keystone Gas Co. (N. Y.) 651

31. There is evidence of a signature to a contract where the party testifies that it resembles his, but that he wishes to have the contract identified before answering further, if there is no later denial of the signature. White v. Solomon (Mass.) 537

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Evidence; presumption as to jurisdiction of tribunal. 578

EXECUTION. See INJUNCTION, 5, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

1. An administrator is not personally liable to the payee on a promissory note given in the name of the estate for a debt of the deceased without any new consideration, and when the time to file claims has expired, and when the probate court has never allowed the claim or ordered it paid. Germania Bank v. Michaud (Minn.) 286

2. A promissory note made by an executor or administrator cannot bind the estate, although it may bind the maker personally. Id.

3. The property of a corporation in possession or custody of an officer at his death does not pass, as part of his estate, into the possession and control of his administrator. Re Belton (La.) 648

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Executors and administrators; injunction in favor of or against, to prevent execution sales. 120

Validity of promissory note of. 286

30 L. R. A.

EXEMPTIONS. See INJUNCTION, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

EXILE. See PARDON.

EXPLOSIONS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of gas. 655

FENCE. See RAILROADS, 3, 4.

FERRIES. See BRIDGES; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 16; STATUTES, 6.

FILING.

An application for a writ of error is sufficiently filed on Sunday when the clerk received it on that day, but, being doubtful as to his power to file it, merely noted the fact and date of its receipt, and upon the next day marked it "Filed." Hanover F. Ins. Co. v. Shrader (Tex.) 498

FIRE. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 12.

FISHERIES.

1. Any inhabitant may take shell-fish anywhere in the waters of the state and on the shores below high-water mark as it exists from time to time, in the absence of any express restriction on such right. Allen v. Allen (R. I.) 497

2. Disturbing the thatch of a riparian owner by digging clams below high-water mark is not a trespass, as the public right of fishery is paramount to the private right to cut grass or sedge. Id.

FOOD.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Interstate trade in oleomargarine. 897

FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunction against dispossession in case of. 129

FORFEITURE.

1. Rules followed in courts of equity, respecting forfeitures, may be available in a suit at law, where the facts make their application necessary to the ends of justice. Webster v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. (Ohio) 719

2. Provisions for forfeiture are to receive, where the intent is doubtful, a strict construction against those for whose benefit they are introduced. Id.

FORMER JEOPARDY. See CRIMINAL LAW, 5.

FRAUD. See also ATTACHMENT; INJUNCTION, 3.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Fraud; as ground of injunction against judgment. 786

As ground of injunction against judgment by confession. 288

As ground of injunction against judgment when arising subsequent to its rendition. 560

Intent to defraud which will sustain attachment. 465

GARNISHMENT. See also INJUNCTION, 10.

1. An employee who has a judgment against his employer for injuries may garnish an insurance company to reach the employer's right of action against it upon an employer's liability policy, where the employer has made an assignment in insolvency before action is begun by the employee. Anoka Lumber Co. v. Fidelity & O. Co. (Minn.) 689

2. A nonresident creditor cannot have his property in a debt seized in a state to which the debtor may resort merely for the purpose of doing business through agents, when the claim arose on a contract not to be performed within the state and the debtor does not reside therein. Reimers v. Sealco Mfg. Co. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 364

3. A debt has no situs for the purpose of garnishment in a state of which the plaintiff, defendant, and garnishee are all nonresidents, although the garnishee is a foreign corporation, which by general provisions of a state statute is subject to garnishment in the state because it assumes to do business there. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

' Garnishment; protection of nonresident against. 365

Injunctions against judgments in. 360

GAS. See also TRIAL, 6, 7.

1. The injury to shade trees by the escape of natural gas carelessly suffered to escape from a gas main in an adjoining street renders the gas company liable to the owner for the damage. Evans v. Keystone Gas Co. (N. Y.) 651

2. The duty imposed on a gas company, of supplying gas to applicants, includes the duty, when the proper connections have been made and a meter furnished, of turning on the gas when applied to for that purpose. Schmeer v. Gaslight Co. (N. Y.) 658

3. A gas company before turning on, or permitting to be turned on, gas for the benefit of tenants in an apartment house who have applied for it, must use reasonable precautions to ascertain that the pipes in the building are in such condition that the gas will not flow out into the apartments of tenants who have not applied for it, to their injury. Id.

4. A gas company cannot be held liable for the act of a stranger in turning gas into the pipes of a building without its knowledge or request. Id.

5. Notice of intention to turn on the gas, and request to inspect as to the condition of the pipes, in an apartment house, cannot be insisted upon by a gas company as a prerequisite to its duty to make such inspection, if it has adopted the custom of permitting any one to turn the gas into a building after plans of the piping have been furnished to it and it has provided a meter. Id.

6. A gas company cannot deny its liability for injuries resulting from failure to use reasonable precautions before turning gas into an apartment building to see that injury should not result from the escape of gas into the rooms of tenants not applying for it, on the ground that it had no right to enter upon the premises for the purpose of making an inspection. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Gas; negligence causing explosion of; duty of gas company as to connections. 655

GIFT. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 1.

GRANT. See EVIDENCE, 7, 8.

GUARANTY. See BANKS, 1; CHECKS, 1.

GUARANTY COMPANY. See CONTRACTS, 13; INSURANCE, 13-15.

HEIRS. See also INSURANCE, 39.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Heirs; within meaning of insurance policy. 503

HIGHWAYS.

1. An ordinance requiring "any owner or contractor constructing any building abutting on a sidewalk to build a roofed passageway in front of the building, after the completion of the first story, is a reasonable one; and any owner or contractor who fails to do so is liable to a pedestrian on the sidewalk, not guilty of contributory negligence, who is injured by a brick which falls from the building. Smith v. Milwaukee Builders' & T. Bch. (Wia.) 504

2. One who undertakes to construct the iron work in a building, which is an integral and substantial part thereof, consisting of iron girders, beams, and floor joists set in the walls, is a contractor within the meaning of an ordinance requiring any contractor who shall build or cause to be built any building abutting on a public sidewalk to build a roofed passageway in front on the sidewalk, after completion of the first story. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Highways; legislative power to control. 173

Contributory negligence of traveler. 506

HOMESTEAD. See also WATERS, 11-13.

Renting for business purposes the larger portion of a building resembling ordinary business structures and flush with the sidewalk of a business street, reserving as the only home of the family the smaller part on the second floor, will not deprive it of its homestead character under Okla. Stat. 1893, chap. 34, § 2, providing that an urban homestead shall consist of a lot or lots and the improvements used as a home for the family, and that temporary renting shall not change its character. De Ford v. Painter (Okla.) 723

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Homestead; injunction against sale of, under execution. 100

Premises used in part for residence. 723

HOMICIDE.

1. The duty to refrain from killing a mere trespasser is not limited to cases where the trespass is committed in a peaceable manner. People v. Hecker (Cal.) 408

2. A first felonious assailant may justifiably kill his adversary if, after in good faith withdrawing from and declining further combat, and fairly making known such purpose to his adversary, the latter forces a new combat upon him. Id.

3. A first felonious assailant cannot kill the person assaulted, in defending himself against a deadly return assault by the latter, until he has in good faith declined the strife and fairly made known to the latter his willingness to do so; and the imminence of his danger does not relieve him of the necessity of so declining before availing himself of the right of self-defense. Id.

4. Retreat is not an essential condition of the right of a person feloniously assaulted without provocation to kill his assailant, if the assault is sudden and the danger great or apparently great; and under such circumstances he may pursue and slay his adversary if apparently necessary for his safety. Id.

5. That an attempt to kill or inflict great bodily harm is made in resisting a forcible trespass against personal property does not deprive the person assaulted of the right to kill his assailant without retreating and declining, or making known to his adversary his willingness to decline, the strife, where the assault is so sudden and perilous as to render retreat and declination impossible; but as he is the first wrongdoer, although his wrong does not justify the attack upon him, he must retreat and decline the combat, if possible, before resorting to killing his adversary. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Homicide; right of self-defense. 404

HUSBAND AND WIFE. See also DAMAGES, 4; MORTGAGE, 10.

1. Gifts by a man to his children, of personal property constituting the bulk of his estate, are valid as against a post mortem claim by his widow. Small v. Small (Kan.) 243

2. The common-law liability of a husband for slanderous words uttered by his wife, although he is not present, and in which he has not participated in any manner, has not been abrogated in Minnesota by the statutes relating to married women. Morgan v. Kennedy (Minn.) 521

3. A woman who has been given the custody of minor children on obtaining a divorce cannot maintain an action at law against the estate of her deceased husband for their board. Brown v. Smith (R. I.) 630

30 L. R. A.

Entireties.

4. Husband and wife taking by descent as next of kin take by moieties, and not by entireties, and without any rights of survivorship. Brown v. Baraboo (Wis.) 820

5. A joint conveyance to husband and wife vests in them an estate in entirety. Branch v. Polk (Ark.) 824

6. A wife may execute a mortgage on her interest in lands held by the entirety, where the state Constitution and statutes have excluded the marital rights of the husband in such property during the wife's life, and given her control of her property. Id.

7. Separate mortgages made without jointer by husband and wife on land held by the entireties, purporting to convey an undivided half interest in land, although made to the same person and for the same purpose, will give to the mortgagee on the death of the husband no lien beyond an undivided half interest. Id.

8. A tenancy by the entirety is not created by a will giving the residuary estate to a daughter and her husband "equal shares and proportions, and so to their respective heirs and assigns forever," where the statutes give married women separate and independent property rights. Re Robinson's Appeal (Me.) 831

9. The character of an estate as one by entirety is not changed by the fact that the deed contains a proviso that in the event the wife should survive the husband "she shall have the use and enjoyment of said land," and "at her death the estate in remainder is to go to her children by the said husband." Cole Mfg. Co. v. Collier (Tenn.) 815

10. A statute providing that the husband and wife shall not be ejected from the wife's real estate by virtue of any judgment against him will apply to estates by entirety, although the rule has been adopted that the husband's rights may be seized and sold in such a way that in case he should outlive his wife the purchaser will come into possession of the whole estate. Id.

11. The rule of the common law creating estates by entirety is irreconcilable with both the letter and the spirit of statutes giving married women separate and independent property rights. Re Robinson's Appeal (Me.) 831

12. The rents and profits of an estate by entirety during the joint lives of husband and wife do not follow the nature of the estate in respect to their disposal, but belong to them in separate moieties, the wife's share of which is within the general statutory provisions giving married women power to control and dispose of their own property. Hiles v. Fisher (N. Y.) 805

13. The common-law right of the husband to the entire usufruct of an estate by the entirety during the joint lives of his wife and himself is not an incident of that estate, but was a part of his common-law marital rights. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Husband and wife; injunction against execution sale of wife's property. 113, 118

Gift by husband to defraud wife. 245
 Liability of, for wife's libel and slander. 531

Tenancy by entireties:—(I.) Definition; (II.) who can hold this estate; (III.) nature of the interest of each spouse; (a) the interest of the husband during the joint lifetime at common law; (b) the interests of the spouses during the joint lifetime, since the married women's property acts; (c) right of the spouses and their representatives to emblements at common law; (d) husband's right to compensation for improvements; (e) husband's right to commit waste; (f) husband's right to estovers; (g) right of either spouse to sue for wrongs to the entirety property; (IV.) survivorship of one of the spouses after the death, actual or civil, of the other; (V.) operation of technical rules on the entirety estate: (a) rule in Shelley's Case; (b) merger; (c) equity to a settlement; (d) vendor's lien; (e) notice; (f) homestead exemption; (g) construction of statutes; (VI.) where and to what extent entirety estates exist: (a) list of states, etc.; (b) construction of statutes affecting this question; (VII.) in what subjects, estates, and interests entirety may exist: (a) in what subjects; (b) in what tenures; (c) in what titles; (d) in what species of estate, legal or equitable; (e) in what estates; (f) in what shares; (VIII.) creation of entirety estates: (a) by act of law; (b) by act of the party: (1) limitation to husband and wife without specifying how they are to take; (2) limitations expressly by entireties in a state where entirety does not exist; (3) limitation to husband and wife as joint tenants; (4) limitation to husband and wife as tenants in common; (5) limitation to husband and wife for their lives; (6) limitations in peculiar forms; (c) conveyance by entireties to spouses one of whom already has an estate in the land or other subject-matter; (d) invalidity on other grounds of a limitation; (IX.) the share taken by husband and wife under limitation to them and another or others; (X.) disposition or encumbrance of entirety property: (a) by both spouses concurring; (b) by one of the spouses alone: (1) neither can derogate from the survivorship right of the other; (2) each can in most states pass his or her own survivorship right; (3) whether a conveyance by the husband made before the wife's death was void for the period of the joint lifetime; (XI.) the effect of divorce on the entirety property: (a) generally; (b) nullification; (c) dissolution; (d) separation without dissolution of marriage; (XII.) partition between tenants by entireties; (XIII.) adverse possession and the statute of limitations. 805

ILLEGITIMACY. See DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION, 1.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR. See MASTER AND SERVANT, 8.

INFANTS. See also INJUNCTION, 7; NEGLIGENCE, 4; PARENT AND CHILD; WRIT AND PROCESS, 1.

Failure of a court to appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant defendant does not make the judgment, if recovered against him, so invalid as to be subject to collateral attack. Levystein v. O'Brien (Ala.) 707
 30 L. R. A.

INHERITANCE TAX. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 4, 5; TAXES.

INJUNCTION. See ACTION OR SUIT, 7.

1. An injunction to restrain the exercise of governmental powers under an unconstitutional statute cannot be granted on behalf of individuals who assert no threatened infringement of rights of property or of civil rights. Green v. Mills (C. C. App. 4th C.) 90

2. An injunction against any registration of voters on the ground that the statute providing for the registration is unconstitutional because its provisions are so unreasonable, unnecessary, and burdensome that complainant has been unable to register after repeated and persistent efforts to do so, cannot be granted, since the action sought to be enjoined is political and governmental, and will not infringe any right of property or civil right of the complainant and others similarly situated. Id.

3. A mandatory injunction to compel a person to distinguish his place of business in some mode or form that shall be a sufficient indication that it is a different place of business from that of a competitor should be granted, where he has imitated the building of another dealer in the same business so closely as to deceive customers and with intent to deceive them, and has omitted the use of any name or sign which could designate the true proprietorship of the store; but it would be too strict a rule to compel him to show the proprietorship of his store. Wienstock, L. & Co. v. Marks (Cal.) 183

4. An injunction to restrain the collection of a tax will not be granted merely because of an inaccuracy in the name, on the assessment roll, of the owner of the property. Portland Hawaiian Benev. Soc. v. Kelly (Or.) 167

5. Injunction will not lie to prevent the sale under execution of exempt property, unless it has some special value to plaintiff, where the statutes provide a remedy at law for the recovery of personal property and damages for its wrongful seizure. Parsons v. Hartman (Or.) 93

6. The enforcement of a judgment at law will not be enjoined merely for want of jurisdiction in the court which rendered it, unless such judgment is shown to be unjust or inequitable. John V. Farwell Co. v. Hilbert (Wia.) 235

7. Injunction will not lie against a judgment at law against an infant, merely because no guardian ad litem was appointed for him and his general guardian was not brought into the action. Levystein v. O'Brien (Ala.) 707

8. A justice's rendition of judgment for more than is demanded by the affidavit of attachment does not make the judgment void so as to warrant an injunction against its execution. Gum-Elastic Roofing Co. v. Mexico Publishing Co. (Ind.) 700

9. A clause in a judgment restraining creditors from prosecuting garnishment proceedings against their debtor in another state to reach exempt wages, "so long as plain'tiff remains a resident of this state," if incorrect, is rendered harmless by a subsequent clause limiting the operation of the judgment to earnings which are exempt. Griggs v. Dozier (Wis.) 860

10. Creditors who, having instituted garnishment proceedings in a foreign state to reach wages exempt by the law of the debtor's domicile, dismiss that garnishment, but take judgment, issue execution, and reach the wages by garnishment on the execution after the issuance by the courts of such domicile of an order restraining them from collecting any exempt wages by "said garnishee proceedings," may be compelled to refund to the debtor the exempt amount reached, with interest. Id.

11. An injunction against enforcing a judgment at law will be granted where the death of the trial judge soon after the trial prevented the perfection of an appeal, and the record shows that the judgment is without evidence to support it. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Wells (Ark.) 560

12. A defendant against whom a default judgment has been fraudulently entered is not compelled to resort to certiorari for relief, rather than to apply for an injunction against its execution, where he would not thereby obtain as effective relief as he could by injunction. Merriman v. Walton (Cal.) 786

13. The entering of a default judgment pending negotiations for a transfer of the cause to another jurisdiction, which is concealed until the time for appeal has expired, followed by a justice's refusal to vacate the same, will entitle the defendant to have the execution of the judgment enjoined. Id.

14. Relief will not be denied to one seeking to enjoin the execution of a judgment because he might have sought it under a different form of action, in a state where the various kinds of relief are administered by the same tribunal, and there is but one form of civil action for the enforcement or protection of civil rights. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunctions against execution sales or other proceedings under final process:—(I.) Exempt personal property; (II.) homestead; (III.) what kind of property first liable; (IV.) public property; (V.) property in the custody of the law; (VI.) railroad and quasi-public corporation property; (VII.) partnership property; (VIII.) property owned by third parties: (a) condition precedent; (b) real estate; (c) wife's real estate; (d) subsequent purchasers; (e) fraudulent purchasers; (f) equitable owners; (g) right of third party to require levy on other property; (h) personal property; (i) slaves; (j) wife's personal property; (IX.) personal property of a peculiar value; (X.) trust property; (XI.) in favor of or against executors and administrators: (a) English decisions: (1) to obtain equal distribution of assets; (2) foreign administrators and executors; (3) costs; (b) American decisions: (1) to obtain equal distribution of assets; (2) to protect heirs and legatees; (3) judgments against administrators or executors personally; (4) judgments in favor of administrators or executors; (5) sale to pay debts; (XII.) in favor of assignee 30 L. R. A.

for creditors; (XIII.) in favor of or against lien creditors: (a) mortgagees of chattels; (b) mortgagees of real property; (c) attachment creditors; (d) judgment creditors; (e) mechanics' lien; (f) landlord's lien; (XIV.) in favor of general creditors: (XV.) ejectment cases; (XVI.) summary proceedings in forcible entry and detainer; (XVII.) jurisdiction of courts: (a) to protect third party; (b) exempt property; (c) other cases; (d) Federal and state courts; (XVIII.) remedy at law: (a) personal property; (b) real property; (XIX.) irregularities: (a) execution: (1) condition precedent; (2) form; (3) time; (4) party; (5) excessive; (b) levy: (1) excessive; (2) mode, manner, and description; (3) notice; (c) sale: (1) notice and advertisement; (2) appraisal; (3) costs; (4) time, place, and manner; (5) officer; (XX.) effect of injunction on executions, sales, and final process: (a) release of errors; (b) release of liens; (c) officer; (d) limitation; (XXI.) effect of time upon injunctions, executions, and judgments: (a) injunctions and executions; (b) dormant judgments. 98

Against judgments entered on confession:—(I.) In favor of creditors; (II.) for irregularities; (III.) for fraud; (IV.) judgments against public policy: (a) usury; (b) compounding crimes; (c) gambling consideration; (V.) judgments against sureties; (VI.) judgments against corporations; (VII.) judgments against partners; (VIII.) judgments against executors and administrators; (IX.) statute of limitations; (X.) consideration not due; (XI.) valid defense must be shown; (XII.) negligence; (XIII.) remedy at law; (XIV.) other matters. 235

Against judgments in garnishment proceedings:—(I.) Necessity of making defense at law; (II.) injunction for errors and irregularities; (III.) void judgments; (IV.) fraud and mistake; (V.) payment; (VI.) set-off; (VII.) injunctions in behalf of creditors. 860

Against judgments for matters arising subsequent to their rendition:—(I.) Lack of remedy by appeal or new trial: (a) by mistake; (b) by act of court or officer; (c) other cases of defective record; (d) by negligence; (II.) lost or destroyed record; (III.) for fraud; (IV.) for alteration of record; (V.) judgments set aside, reversed, or superseded; (VI.) for payment or satisfaction; (VII.) in behalf of surety; (VIII.) for set-off; (IX.) for newly discovered evidence. 560

Against judgments for errors and irregularities:—(I.) For erroneous rulings and decisions: (a) generally; (b) in refusing a continuance; (c) in rulings on pleadings or motions; (d) in rulings on evidence; (e) as to incompetency of evidence; (f) as to insufficiency of evidence; (g) as to excessive judgments; (h) as to parties; (II.) for irregularities: (a) generally; (b) as to infants; (c) in trial; (d) in matters of form; (e) in pleadings and papers; (f) in records and dockets; (g) in regard to time of rendering judgment. 700

Against judgments obtained by fraud, accident, mistake, surprise, and duress:—(I.) Equity jurisdiction; (II.) fraud in obtaining judgments: (a) by agreement: (1) generally; (2) to dismiss; (3) to give notice; (4) to abide by other matters; (5) to allow a defense; (6) to continue or delay; (7) to compromise; (8) where complainant participated in fraud; (b) by concealment; (c) in matters of record; (d) in matters of party; (e) in acts committed at the trial; (f) by collusion; (g) other matters; (III.) on account of accident: (a) sickness: (1) of party; (2) of family; (8) of witness; (4) of attorney; (b) death of attorney; (c) other causes; (IV.) on account of mistake: (a) of law; (b) of fact; (V.) on account of surprise: (a) generally; (b) in matters of witnesses; (c) in regard to perjury; (VI.) on account of duress. 786

INSOLVENCY.

1. A claim upon an employer's liability policy does not pass to an assignee in insolvency proceedings under an assignment by the employer, before any action has been commenced against him by the employee who was injured. Anoka Lumber Co. v. Fidelity & C. Co. (Minn.) 689

2. A payment upon collaterals held to secure a claim against an insolvent estate, shown merely to have been made upon the same day that the claim was proved, should not be deducted from the amount of such claim as made before the proving, as acts done upon the same day will generally be regarded in law as done at the same time. Levy v. Chicago Nat. Bank (Ill.) 880

8. A secured creditor of one who becomes insolvent is entitled to prove his claim and to participate in dividends only for the amount remaining after deducting sums realized upon collaterals up to the date of filing his claim and making the preliminary proofs, and not upon the claim as it exists at the date of the assignment,—especially in view of the provisions of the Illinois assignment act, that creditors must assent to the assignment by proving their claims within a certain time, and for continuance of the proceeding by assent of a majority of creditors, as a creditor acquires no vested interest in the assigned estate until his assent is so signified. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Insolvency; Injunction in favor of assignee for creditors to prevent execution sale. 124

INSURANCE. See also BENEVOLENT SOCIETIES, 4; CONTRACTS, 18; DEFINITIONS; INSOLVENCY, 1.

Right to do business.

1. A state has power to regulate the business of fire insurance within its boundaries. Hoadeley v. Purifoy (Ala.) 851

2. Only chartered insurance companies are included within Ala. Acts 1886-87, p. 85, requiring all insurance companies doing business in the state, "whether chartered by the state or admitted from other states," to have an actual capital of not less than $100,000. Id.

3. Only foreign incorporated insurance companies are included within Ala. Acts 1886-87, p. 105, requiring every insurance company "not organized under the laws of this state" to pay a uniform license tax for the privilege of carrying on business within the state. Id.

4. The citizens of any state are entitled to carry on insurance business in Alabama as individuals, associations, partnerships, or companies, in the absence of any statute prohibiting the citizens of such state from doing so. Id.

Agents.

5. A person authorized to accept risks, to agree upon and settle the terms of insurance, and to carry them into effect by issuing and renewing policies, must be regarded as the general agent of the insurance company. Goodie v. Georgia Home Ins. Co. (Va.) 942

6. The acts of clerks or employees of insurance agents, to whom they delegate authority to discharge their functions, within the scope of their agency, bind the insurer to the same extent as the acts of the agents. Id.

Construction of policy.

7. A written special description of the subject-matter must control the printed clauses of an insurance policy, whenever they are inconsistent. Faust v. American F. Ins. Co. (Wis.) 738

8. The construction to be given to an insurance policy will not be controlled by the fact that in correspondence relating to the loss the insured apparently sought to bring it within the policy as interpreted by the insurer. Jackson v. British America Assur. Co. (Mich.) 698

9. A provision in a marine policy blank upon which a fire insurance contract is written, for navigation by the vessel insured, does not so far conflict with a clause in a fire policy blank providing for insurance while the property is "located and contained as described herein" as to be waived by a rider attached to the marine blank waiving all provisions which conflict with the fire blank, although the description in the rider locates the property at a particular place. Id.

10. Riders attached to a policy of insurance on a vessel, describing it as "laid up" in a harbor, and giving permission "to make repairs" and "fit out in the spring" and "more from dock to dock" to load and unload, do not prevent the policy from covering the vessel while on a voyage which is permitted by the body of the policy. Id.

11. The cost of repairs to a vessel insured against fire at the time it sunk while burning need not be minutely proved to justify a recovery on a policy making the insurer liable only for the actual cash value of the property destroyed or the cost of replacing it. Id.

12. Life insurance taken by a man before marriage is to be deemed "effected by a husband" within the provisions of Mill. & V. (Tenn.) Code, §§ 8135, 8335, giving the benefit of such insurance to the widow, children, and next of kin free from claims of creditors. Rose v. Wortham (Tenn.) 109

Guaranty of employer or employee.

13. A contract guaranteeing the honesty of employees is not void as against public policy. Fidelity & C. Co. v. Eickhoff (Minn.) 886

14. The obligation of an employee to indemnify a guaranty insurance company for payments to his employer in satisfaction of a guaranty policy executed at his request insuring against his fraud or dishonesty is coextensive with the insurer's obligation to indemnify the employer. Id.

15. Provisions as to proof of liability on a guaranty policy insuring against fraud or dishonesty of an employee are as binding on the employee at whose request the policy was executed, when reimbursement is claimed by the insurer, as they were upon the insurer in favor of the employer. Id.

16. An action upon an employer's liability policy may be maintained by the employer after judgment against him on account of an accident to an employee, without first paying the judgment, under a policy insuring against liability for injuries to employees, providing that the insurer shall settle any loss and have control of any legal proceedings against the assured for such injuries, and that the assured shall not settle such claims without the consent of the insurer, and also that no action shall be brought on the policy after the period in which one might be brought by the employee against the employer, unless a suit was pending against the employer when that time expired, since such a policy is not merely one of indemnity, but an agreement to assume and pay the liability. Anoka Lumber Co. v. Fidelity & C. Co. (Minn.) 689

Forfeiture; conditions; misrepresentations.

17. The forfeiture of an insurance policy as to the risk upon a dwelling house, by virtue of a provision that the entire policy shall be void for vacancy or nonoccupancy, avoids it also as to personal property in the house. Agri-cultural Ins. Co. v. Hamilton (Md.) 688

18. A dwelling house is vacant or unoccupied in the sense in which those terms are employed in a policy of insurance, when it is not used as a fixed abode, although employees occasionally sleep there and some provisions are kept in the house, which is visited to obtain them. Id.

19. Failure to mention encumbrances and other insurance in an application for insurance cannot be set up by the insurer, when the omission was made by advice of the solicitor, who issued the policy in the name of the agent, and had full knowledge of the facts. Goode v. Georgia Home Ins. Co. (Va.) 842

20. The examination of insured property, required by Ohio Rev. Stat. § 8643, for the purpose of fixing the value, which shall control in the absence of any change increasing the risk, does not include any examination of the matter of encumbrances, so as to prevent a forfeiture by reason of a new encumbrance on the property, whether it increases the risk or not. Webster v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. (Ohio) 719

21. A representation and warranty that the insured property was owned by husband and wife jointly will not be held to be untrue within a condition in an insurance policy, merely because the title to the real estate is wholly in the wife and the title to the personalty wholly in the husband, where the property consists of a family homestead and the personalty thereon. Id.

Risks covered or prohibited.

22. The insured can be held to have "contemplated suicide" so as to defeat a policy of life insurance under Mo. Rev. Stat. 1889, § 5855, only when he intended or had resolved to commit suicide at the time he made his application for the policy. Atna L. Ins. Co. v. Florida (C. C. App. 8th C.) 87

23. Death by hanging at the hands of a mob is an accident within the meaning of a policy against injuries through "external, violent, and accidental means." Fidelity & C. Co. v. Johnson (Miss.) 206

24. The death of a person who is shot by one whom he is trying to eject by force from a hotel office is a death by accident, and not a risk voluntarily assumed, where he makes the attempt without knowing that the other person is armed. Lovelace v. Travelers' Protective Assn. (Mo.) 209

25. The fall of a building is "the result of fire" and "a direct loss or damage by fire," although no part of it ignites or is consumed by fire, when it is partly carried down, together with a partition wall, by an adjacent building which falls as the direct result of a fire therein. Ermentrout v. Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. (Minn.) 849

26. Painters employed in repainting a building are not "mechanics" within the provision of an insurance policy respecting the employment of mechanics on the building. Smith v. German Ins. Co. (Mich.) 868

27. Gasoline is not "kept, used, or allowed" on the premises insured, within the meaning of a provision for avoiding the policy, by leaving a 5-gallon can containing gasoline in the building for a number of days for use in burning off old paint preparatory to repainting the building. Id.

28. The increase of hazard by using gasoline to burn old paint from a brick and stone building is a question for the jury, where there is some testimony to show that this was the custom of painters. Id.

29. Keeping a small quantity of benzine necessary for use in a furniture repair shop does not forfeit a policy of insurance thereon, although the printed portion of it declares that it shall be void if benzine is kept on the premises, where the written portion of the policy insures the building as a "furniture store and repair shop." Faust v. American F. Ins. Co. (Wis.) 788

30. The use of inflammable substances, which is a necessary, usual, and customary incident to a business, must have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time of taking a policy of insurance upon a stock of materials used in that business; and therefore the policy is not avoided, notwithstanding the express language to that effect in printed clauses, by keeping such substances in such quantities only and using them in such manner only as must have been contemplated. Maril v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. (Ga.) 835

31. Inflammable substances constituting component parts of a stock of materials used in a business are covered by a policy of insurance on the stock of materials used in such business, even if there is a printed condition in the policy against the keeping of such inflammable substances. Id.

Notice; proofs; waiver.

32. A condition of immediate notice of loss insured against is broken, as matter of law, by failure for nearly sixty days to give such notice. Ermentrout v. Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. (Minn.) 846

83. Notice of an accident before any claim thereon is made is not necessary under an employer's liability policy requiring immediate notice by the assured "upon the occurrence of an accident and upon the notice of any claim on account of the accident." Anoka Lumber Co. v. Fidelity & O. Co. (Minn.) 689

84. An adjuster's visit to insured premises soon after a fire, and his taking away a list of the property destroyed, which is not returned, with a denial of liability for the loss on the ground that the policy had been avoided, is a waiver of provisions of the policy requiring proofs of loss. Faust v. American F. Ins. Co. (Wis.) 768

85. Local agents have no implied authority to accept or waive notice of loss insured against, although they have authority to accept applications, fix rates, fill up, countersign, and issue policies, and collect premiums. Ermentrout v. Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. (Minn.) 846

86. Failure to give notice of loss, which defeats a right of action for insurance, is not waived by retaining proofs of loss sent after the policy is dead, where the insurer gives notice of a denial of any liability on the policy. Id.

87. An insurer waives a cause of forfeiture of a policy by failing to mention it when it undertakes to state definitely its reasons for denying liability thereon. Smith v. German Ins. Co. (Mich.) 868

Rights in proceeds.

88. The term "legal representatives," in a policy of life insurance, as a description of the beneficiaries, does not give the executor or administrator any beneficial interest in the recovery so as to defeat the right of widow, children, and next of kin under Mill. & V. (Tenn.) Code, §§ 8185, 8885, to take the proceeds free from claims of creditors. Ross v. Wortham (Tenn.) 609

89. The word "heirs," in a policy of life insurance payable to the "heirs or assigns" of the assured, who has no wife or child, is to be construed to mean his next of kin according to the statute of distributions. Hubbard v. Turner (Ga.) 598

40. The interest of the "heirs" to whom a policy of life insurance is made payable, being derived from the contract, and not from the statute which determines who are within the description, cannot be made subject to the claims of the creditors of the person whose life is insured. Id.

41. The fact that the loss is by indorsement made payable to mortgagees as their interest may appear does not prevent a breach of condition of the policy from making it void as to the mortgagees, as well as to other parties. Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Hamilton (Md.) 688

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Insurance; powers of agent; of agent's clerk. 842

Notice to agent. 846

Construction of guaranty policy. 586

Employer's liability policy. 690

Right to rescind contract of, for default of other party. 69

80 L. R. A.

Waiver of objection to notice of loss. 847

Statute as to increase of risk. 719

Keeping prohibited articles on premises. 868, 754

Who are "heirs" within the meaning of life insurance policies:—(I.) In general; (II.) other words combined with the word "heirs;" (III.) widow as an heir; (IV.) insured as heir or beneficiary. 543

Who are "legal representatives" within the meaning of life insurance policies:—(I.) In general; (II.) other words combined with the words "legal representatives." 609

Effect of riders or slips attached to insurance policies. 636

What constitutes an accident within the meaning of an accident insurance policy:—(I.) Definitions; general rules; (II.) intentional injuries: (a) self-inflicted; (b) inflicted by others; (c) proviso against liability for intentional injuries; (III.) accident and disease: (a) distinguished; (b) accident caused by disease; (c) disease caused by accident; (d) disease aggravated by accident; (IV.) other instances. 206

INTEREST. See BONDS, 8; CRIMINAL LAW, 4.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

An incorporated social club is not engaged in the business of selling intoxicating liquors within the meaning of Sayles's (Tex.) Civ. Stat. art. 8226a, imposing an occupation tax on such business, where the club does not sell liquors for profit, and sells them only to its members. State v. Austin Club (Tex.) 500

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Intoxicating liquors; sale of, by club. 500

JUDGMENT. See also APPEAL AND ERROR, 5; COURTS, 7; INFANTS; INJUNCTION, 1; MORTGAGE, 4-9.

1. A judgment by confession is irregular only, and not void, where it is founded on a valid debt and there is a sufficient warrant of attorney and release of errors, although the answer of confession, required under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 2896, to be signed by defendant or some attorney in his behalf, is signed by plaintiff's attorney in the name of another attorney, at his special instance and request, as attorney for defendant. John V. Farwell Co. v. Hilbert (Wis.) 225

2. A money judgment is properly rendered against a railroad company purchasing from a trustee for bondholders a railroad bought in by him under a reorganization scheme, with notice of the trust, by which the bondholders were entitled to new bonds secured by mortgage, where it refuses to comply with an interlocutory decree directing it to issue such bonds, although stock in a construction company was given in consideration of such purchase, which was at one time of great value, but has greatly depreciated. Indiana, I. & I. R. Co. v. Swannell (Ill.) 290

3. A judgment for the lienor in an action against a contractor under the Minnesota log lien law (Minn. Gen. Stat. 1894, §§ 2451-2465) does not preclude the owner of the logs from denying in a subsequent action plaintiff's right to a lien; but such judgment, if regular on its face, will be held valid unless the contrary affirmatively appears. Brown v. Markham (Minn.) 84

4. The description of the property in a decree foreclosing a lien, which properly describes the lot and building, is not made insufficient by adding "save and except the land and the basement and foundation" of the building. Oriental Hotel Co. v. Griffiths (Tex.) 765

5. The revival of a judgment against the judgment debtor by a writ of scire facias regularly issued, or by an amicable scire facias, is effective as against the grantee in a deed made after the judgment but before its revival, of which the judgment creditor had neither actual nor constructive notice prior to the revival. Lyon v. Cleveland (Pa.) 400

6. The revival by amicable scire facias of a judgment is not abandoned by subsequent erroneous proceedings upon discovering that a transferee claimed an interest in the property covered by the judgment lien, which are instituted for the purpose of making the judgment effective against him. Lyon v. Cleveland (Pa.) 400

7. Proceedings to revive a judgment as against a terre-tenant, after receiving notice that he held a secret deed to the property at the time the judgment was regularly revived against the judgment debtor, are erroneous, since he is bound by the proceedings against the debtor. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also INJUNCTION.

Jurisdiction of and service by publication. 628

Confession of, as fraud to sustain attachment. 486

Injunction against for matters arising subsequent to rendition. 560

Injunction in favor of judgment creditor against execution sales; dormancy of, as ground for injunction against execution. 142

Collateral attack on decision of inferior tribunal. 578

Revival by scire facias. 400

JUDICIAL SALE. See also INJUNCTION, 10.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Judicial sale; bona fide purchaser at. 293

JURY. See TRIAL, 1-4.

LANDLORD AND TENANT. See also CONTRACTS, 8.

1. A covenant by the lessor of a hotel, "that he will keep . . . in good repair" the outside of the premises, binds him to repair the roof so as to make the building habitable, if it was out of repair at the time of the lease, and is not satisfied in such case by maintaining the premises in the same condition as when leased. Miller v. McCordell (R. I.) 682

2. An abatement of so much of the rent as was paid "for the building" must be allowed under Miss. Code 1892, § 2498, in case of the destruction of buildings which constituted a material part of the consideration of the lease. Taylor v. Hart (Miss.) 716

3. A lessee of rural as well as urban property is within the provision of Miss. Code 1892, § 2498, exempting him from liability to pay rent for buildings destroyed without his fault. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Landlord and tenant; injunction in favor of landlord against execution sale. 129

Covenant as to repairs. 682

LAUNDRY. See LICENSE, 2.

LEASE. See RAILROADS, 1, 2.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES. See INSURANCE, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

LEGISLATURE. See also COUNTIES, 1, 2; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 14, 16; OFFICERS, 1.

1. A committee appointed by the legislature to make an examination and find the facts from the evidence and report the facts and set out the evidence in full, is not entitled to an attorney as a "necessary expense." Purnell v. Worth (N. C.) 262

2. A committee appointed by the general assembly to make an examination and find the facts from the evidence, with authority to make the report after adjournment of the assembly, cannot draw per diem or mileage after such adjournment, unless the resolution appointing them provides therefor. Commercial & F. Bank v. Worth (N. C.) 261

3. A resolution by the general assembly providing that a committee created thereby shall find the facts from the evidence in an examination to be made by it, report such facts and set out the evidence in full and report to the general assembly "if it is possible to do so before its adjournment, and if not then said report shall be made to the supreme court," confers on such committee no power to act after adjournment of the general assembly except to make the report. Id.

LEVY AND SEIZURE. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE, 10.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Levy and seizure; irregularities in, as ground of injunction. 136

LIBEL AND SLANDER. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE, 2.

Saying that a man has been drunk throughout Thanksgiving week, and has not retired any night during that week other than in a state of drunkenness, and that he has drunken people in his room, and gets people there and makes them drunk, is slanderous per se, as the words involve moral turpitude and charge an indictable offense. Morgan v. Kennedy (Minn.) 521

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Libel; liability of husband and wife for the wife's libel and slander:—(I.) The common-law doctrine; (II.) effect of state legislation; (III.) the question of the husband's presence and coercion; (IV.) joinder of parties and actions; (V.) necessity of services upon wife; (VI.) effect of death pending action; (VII.) husband and wife as witnesses; (VIII.) damages and evidence in mitigation; (IX.) effect of judgment in such cases; (X.) action on bail bond in such cases. 521

LICENSE. See also COMMERCE, 4; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7.

1. The uniformity clause of Mont. Const. art. 12, § 1, relating to taxation, does not apply to licenses imposed on occupations. State, Toi, v. French (Mont.) 415

2. Imposing on laundrymen the payment of a license fee of $15 for a steam laundry, $10 for every male person in the business other than that of a steam laundry, and $25 for a male laundryman employing one or more other persons, does not grant a monopoly or have a prohibitory effect. Id.

8. A license fee of $100 per annum charged an itinerant vendor of drugs professing to cure or treat all diseases is not unreasonable. State v. Wheelock (Iowa) 429

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

License; limit of amount of license fees:—(I.) Power to fix license fees generally; (II.) constitutional restrictions as to amount: (a) provisions against discrimination; (b) provisions against violation of contract obligations; (c) provisions requiring equality and uniformity; (d) direct restrictions as to amount of levy; (e) miscellaneous provisions; (III.) graduation of license fees; (IV.) limitations peculiar to municipal corporations: (a) statutory and charter restrictions; (b) must not be discriminating; (c) under a general power to regulate: (1) what may be included in the fee; (2) must not be for revenue; (3) distinction between measures for revenue and regulation; (4) must not be unreasonable or in restraint of trade; (5) reasonableness, by whom determined; (6) presumption of reasonableness; (7) what impositions are reasonable; (d) under a power to restrain or prohibit; (e) under a power to tax or license; (f) when discretion is expressly conferred. 415

LIENS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 1; JUDGMENT, 3, 4; PLEADING, 5.

1. Holders of liens cannot be divested of them and their liens transferred to the proceeds of a sale on foreclosure of another lien, to which they are not made parties. Oriental Hotel Co. v. Griffiths (Tex.) 765

2. The time of the inception of mechanics' liens is the time to which they relate in giving them effect, under Sayles's (Tex.) Civ. Stat. art. 3171, as amended in 1889, saving mortgages and other encumbrances on the land at the time of the inception of other liens, and art. 3179, placing all liens upon an equal footing, so that a mortgage upon an incomplete building is subject to all mechanics' liens which accrue 80 L. R. A.

before its completion, as they relate back to the beginning of the work. Id.

8. A mechanic's lien for machinery placed in a mill is superior to a prior mortgage taken on the premises when the mill was unfinished and substantially without machinery, under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 3314, making such liens "prior to any other lien which originates subsequent to the commencement of the construction . . . or work" for which the lien is claimed. Vilas v. McDonough Mfg. Co. (Wis.) 778

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Liens; on logs, validity of. 84

Mechanics'; priority of. 766, 779

Injunction in favor of or against lien creditors to prevent execution sales. 125

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Suspension of, by injunction. 142

Injunction against judgment confessed on debt barred by. 241

LOBBY. See CONTRACTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

MANDAMUS.

Mandamus may issue to a private corporation furnishing a municipality with water under a franchise, to compel water to be furnished to a patron without discrimination, where the company has refused to furnish it without an unjust charge. American Waterworks Co. v. State, Walker (Neb.) 447

MANDATORY INJUNCTION. See INJUNCTION, 3.

MARINE INSURANCE. See INSURANCE, 9.

MARK. See WILLS, 2.

MASTER AND SERVANT. See also NEGLIGENCE, 2.

1. Allowing a brake-staff to remain loose in its socket, and to be bent at an angle of 30 degrees from the perpendicular, when it is used by brakemen and switchmen for the purpose of mounting a flat car used in front of a road engine for switching purposes, is negligence on the part of a railroad. Prosser v. Montana C. R. Co. (Mont.) 814

2. A switchman and brakeman who grasps a brake-staff on the front of a flat car as it approaches him, for the purpose of mounting the car as his duties require him to do and in the manner that he is expected to mount, although the staff is loose in its socket and is bent, but appears to him to be straight as the bend is directly away from him, is not as matter of law guilty of contributory negligence. Id.

3. The reservation by an employer under an independent contract for the construction of a building, of the right of inspection of the work, does not change the character of the contract so as to render him liable for the negligence of some of the workmen employed by the contractors. Smith v. Milwaukee Builders' & T. Exch. (Wis.) 504

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Master and servant; contributory negligence of servant. 815

MAXIMS.

1. Aqua cedit solo. Wholey v. Caldwell (Cal.) 820

2. Aqua currit et debet currere ut currere solebat ex jure naturæ. Id.

3. Cessat ratio, cessat lex. Isaacs v. Barber (Wash.) 665

4. Delegatus non potest delegari. Goode v. Georgia Home Ins. Co. (Va.) 842

5. Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. Kelly v. Minneapolis (Minn.) 281

6. Omnia rite acta præsumuntur. Fidelity & C. Co. v. Eickhoff (Minn.) 586

7. Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas. Briscoe v. Alfrey (Ark.) 607

MAYOR. See OFFICERS, 2.

MERGER.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

In case of estate by entreties. 813

MINES. See also EVIDENCE, 26; NEGLIGENCE, 2.

1. The existence between two veins of such material or indications as a practical miner would follow with the expectation of finding ore does not establish such connection between them as entitles the owner of the vein first located to the ore in the portion of the other vein lying within his location, but which, in the absence of a connection between the two veins, belongs to the owner of the other vein by virtue of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322; but the connection, to accomplish such result, must be through a continuous streak or body of ore or through vein matter. Fitzgerald v. Clark (Mont.) 803

2. The construction of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322, defining the rights of a mining locator in a vein of which the apex is within his location, should be such as to give him a length on the strike equal to the length of the apex within the boundary lines of his location, regardless of the direction of the dip or the depth to which it is followed. Id.

3. The owner of a mining claim located on the apex of a vein which enters on an end line and passes out of a side line is entitled, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2322, to so much of the strike of the vein on the dip extending beyond such side line as is included between a vertical plane let fall into the earth through such end line extended, and a parallel vertical plane let fall through the point of intersection of the apex and the side line. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Mines; right to follow vein. 804

MISTAKE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

As ground of injunction against judgment. 786

MORTGAGE. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 2, 8; CONTRACTS, 23; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 6, 7; INSURANCE, 41; LIENS, 2, 3; RECEIVERS, 8; SUBROGATION, 8; TRUSTS, 1.

1. A resolution of directors included in a deed of trust, to the effect that this shall constitute a prior and first lien, is inoperative to change the relation of that lien to others as fixed by law. Oriental Hotel Co. v. Griffiths (Tex.) 765

2. A mortgage for the support of persons during life may be foreclosed after their death, to obtain payment of claims allowed in administration for support furnished them after the mortgagor's breach of his contract. Tuttle v. Burgett (Ohio) 214

3. A receiver of a building and loan association cannot foreclose under the power of sale contained in mortgages held by the association. Strauss v. Carolina I. Bldg. & L. Asso. (N. C.) 693

4. A judgment for personal injuries is not deprived of its priority over a railroad mortgage, under S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1528, by the fact that the mortgage was executed by a consolidated company formed from companies organized in South Carolina and other states, and the entire property was sold as a unit, as against a purchaser who agreed as part of the price to satisfy all claims adjudged prior in lien to the mortgage. Southern R. Co. v. Bouknight (C. C. App. 4th C.) 823

5. A mortgagee of a railroad by accepting the mortgage subsequent to the passage of a statute giving judgments against the railroad company for personal injuries, recovered in actions commenced within twelve months from the injury, precedence over any mortgage or security for bonds, assents to such priority. Id.

6. A railroad mortgage is not entitled to priority over a judgment for personal injuries subsequently recovered, under S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1528, providing that such judgments shall take precedence over any mortgage, because of the further provision that they shall relate back to the date when the cause of action arose, and the fact that the injury was subsequent to the mortgage. Id.

7. The priority of a judgment recovered against a consolidated railroad company over a mortgage made by such company, under S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1528, cannot be defeated on the theory that the mortgagor was in fact three corporations of different states, and that the injury was inflicted in the exercise of the franchises of a separate domestic corporation of another state. Id.

8. A personal injury in another state for which judgment is recovered in South Carolina is within S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1528, giving priority to a judgment recovered on a cause of action against a railroad company for personal injuries over any railroad mortgage. Id.

9. A purchaser on foreclosure of a mortgage on the property of a railroad company, who has covenanted to discharge all liens held prior to the mortgage, is not entitled to assert an equity for the revival of prior mortgages executed before the passage of S. C. Gen. Stat. 1882, § 1528, giving judgments for personal injuries priority over railroad mortgages, so as to destroy the precedence of such a judgment over the mortgage upon which the sale was made, or to claim a proportionate reduction by reason thereof. Southern R. Co. v. Bouknight (C. C. App. 4th C.) 828

10. A purchaser on foreclosure sale under a mortgage given by the husband alone on land held by the entirety, where the wife is alive at the time of the sale, obtains the husband's interest, which is subject to her right of survivorship, with the right to use an undivided half of the land during the joint lives of the husband and wife. Hiles v. Fisher (N.Y.) 805

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Mortgage; injunction in favor of mortgagee against execution sale. 125

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 1; BONDS, 4; BRIDGES; COUNTIES, 1; COURTS, 3, 5; HIGHWAYS, 1; PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS, 1; TRIAL, 18; WATERS, 21.

Annexation.

1. A statute giving a city council jurisdiction to annex adjacent lands on the written consent of the owners gives the council no jurisdiction to annex lands on the petition of owners whose lands are not adjacent. Forryth v. Hammond (Ind.) 576

2. Lands subdivided into lots and blocks, if not contiguous to the limits of a city, are not "platted" within the meaning of the statutes relating to the annexation of territory to municipalities. Id.

3. The annexation by a city council of territory to the city by proceedings in which it acquires no jurisdiction may, except in case of estoppel, be collaterally attacked. Id.

4. The jurisdiction of the county board to order annexation of territory to a city is not defeated under Ind. Rev. Stat. 1894, § 3659, by the fact that a part of the lands are platted, if the platted section is not contiguous to the city. Id.

5. Failure of the owner to consent need not be alleged in a proceeding for the annexation of unplatted land to a city, since the very existence of the controversy implies, not only a desire for annexation on the part of the city, but also want of consent thereto on the part of the property owner. Id.

6. If the parties declining to join in an appeal go voluntarily before the supreme court and file their written declination, all is accomplished that was intended by Ind. Rev. Stat. 1894, § 647, providing for an appeal by some of several coparties upon service of notice upon all, and striking out the names of those refusing to join on motion, so that the appeal cannot be dismissed for failure to make them parties after the time for them to appeal has passed. Id.

Powers and liabilities generally.

7. Power to make ordinances on a given subject, conferred by the legislature without prescribing the details, must be reasonably exercised, else the ordinances will be held invalid. Hawes v. Chicago (Ill.) 225

80 L. R. A.

8. The reasonableness or unreasonableness of a municipal ordinance is a question for the decision of the court in the light of all existing circumstances or contemporaneous conditions, the objects sought to be obtained, and the necessity or want of necessity for its adoption. Id.

9. The common council of a city has power to pass an ordinance requiring any owner or contractor building or causing to be built any building abutting on a public sidewalk, to build a roofed passageway in front on the sidewalk after completion of the first story, under a charter giving it power to control and regulate the construction of buildings, to control and regulate streets, and to regulate the manner of using the streets and pavements. Smith v. Milwaukee Builders' & T. Exch. (Wis.) 504

10. The erection of an electric-light plant to supply the inhabitants of a city with light for use in private residences and business houses, as well as to light the streets and public places of the city, is for a municipal purpose within the meaning of a statute authorizing the issue of bonds for municipal purposes. Jacksonville Electric Light Co. v. Jacksonville (Fla.) 540

11. The maintenance of municipal waterworks is in no sense a private business, for negligence in which the corporation will be held liable, but is an exercise of governmental power for the public good, appertaining to the corporation in its political character. Springfield H. & M. Ins. Co. v. Keeseville (N. Y.) 660

12. A municipal corporation is not liable for damages caused by fire in consequence of its negligent failure to maintain sufficient waterworks. Id.

13. A sale by city authorities, without legislative authority, of waterworks which the city has been given power to construct and maintain for public use, is invalid, as the property is clothed with a public trust which cannot be discharged and devolved upon another party. Huron Waterworks Co. v. Huron (S. D.) 848

Debts.

14. The power of the legislature to change and readjust the burden of municipal indebtedness, after the division of a city and after having declared in the act of separation in what manner it should be borne by the divisions, still remains; and such future adjustments may be made as the equities may suggest. Johnson v. San Diego (Cal.) 178

15. Liability for a pro rata share of the debts of the city continued on a part excluded from San Diego, under Cal. Stat. 1889, p. 356, providing that it shall not "relieve in any manner whatsoever any part of such territory from any liability for any debt contracted by such municipal corporation prior to such exclusion." Id.

16. The legislature has power to require a city to incur a debt, without its consent, for the acquisition of public bridges and ferries, as is done by Or. act 1895, relating to the city of Portland, in the absence of any constitutional prohibition. Simon v. Northrup (Or.) 171

17. Liability for part of the expense of building a viaduct or bridge over railroad tracks within a city, for the safety and convenience of the public, may be incurred by the city when it is deemed just, under a contract with the railroad company, even if the city might be able to compel the railroad company to build it at its own expense. Argentine v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (Kan.) 255

18. The amount of a sinking fund must be deducted from the total apparent debt of a city, to ascertain if its actual debt exceeds the debt limit. Kelly v. Minneapolis (Minn.) 281

19. Park board certificates reciting that the city is indebted in the sum named therein, and that the consideration therefor is a conveyance of land which is mortgaged to secure their payment, and that they are payable out of funds arising from assessments for benefits, and also that there is no liability on the part of the city to pay them out of any other fund,—do not constitute a part of the indebtedness of the city within the meaning of a statute fixing a debt limit. Id.

City attorney.

20. The duty of a city attorney to attend to "all suits, matters, and things" in which the city may be legally interested, under Cal. Pol. Code, § 4891, is not limited to suits in any particular courts. Buck v. Eureka (Cal.) 400

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also LICENSE.

Municipal corporations; legislative power to impose burdens upon. 172

Power to annex territory. 576

Limitation of indebtedness; use of sinking fund. 281

Power to furnish light. 542

Liability for damage by fire on account of failure of water supply. 661

Power to maintain waterworks; power to sell waterworks. 849

MURDER. See HOMICIDE.

NATURALIZATION. See ALIENS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

NEGLIGENCE. See also ANIMALS; CONTRACTS, 14; GAS; MASTER AND SERVANT; STREET RAILWAYS; TRIAL, 5-8, 10, 11.

1. Liability to persons for whose protection a statute was made, in case of their injury by breach of it, is subject to the defense of contributory negligence. Queen v. Dayton Coal & I. Co. (Tenn.) 82

2. Violation of a statute by hiring a boy under twelve years of age to work in a mine constitutes negligence per se, which will sustain a civil right of action whenever the boy sustains injuries in consequence of the employment. Id.

3. He who has the last clear chance, notwithstanding the negligence of the adverse party, is considered solely responsible for injuries resulting from his failure to exercise reasonable care. Pickett v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. (N. C.) 257

4. Contributory negligence on the part of a minor is to be measured by his age and his ability to discern and appreciate circumstances of danger. Queen v. Dayton Coal & I. Co. (Tenn.) 82

80 L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Negligence; contract stipulating against liability for. 194

By violation of statute. 510

Of driver imputed to person riding with him. 686

NEGOTIABLE PAPERS. See BILLS AND NOTES.

NEWSPAPERS.

1. A person to whom a paper is sent without his knowledge or consent, either expressed or implied, although it is done under a valid contract with a third person, is not a "subscriber" within the meaning of Iowa Code, § 807, as amended (McClain's Code, § 428), requiring supervisors to select as the official newspapers of the county the two having the largest number of bona fide yearly subscribers within the county. Ashton v. Stoy (Iowa) 584

2. An amendment of the list of subscribers by adding the name of one omitted should be refused by the district court on review of the action of the board of supervisors in the selection of a county newspaper. Id.

3. A motion in a district court to require plaintiffs to state more particularly the manner in which they were aggrieved by the action of the board of supervisors in the selection of a county newspaper under Iowa Code, § 807, is properly overruled. Id.

NEW TRIAL.

1. A juror's affidavit impeaching the verdict rendered in an equity case, which is merely advisory, is properly disregarded. Hitzgerald v. Clark (Mont.) 808

2. A correct verdict will not be set aside because of errors occurring on the trial. Krantz v. Rio Grande W. R. Co. (Utah) 297

NOTICE.

A railroad company is chargeable with the knowledge of its president and director that property purchased by it is impressed with a trust in favor of the holders of bonds issued by the former owner of such property. Indiana, I. & I. R. Co. v. Swannell (Ill.) 290

OCCUPATION TAX. See LICENSE, 1.

OFFICERS. See also BONDS; CONTRACTS, 10-12; COURTS, 1; ESTOPPEL, 2; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 20.

1. The disability of a member of the legislature "during the time for which he is elected," under Minn. Const. art. 4, § 9, to hold any office under the authority of the United States or the state, except that of postmaster, continues until the expiration of the full period of time for which he was elected, notwithstanding his resignation as a member of the legislature. State, Childs, v. Sutton (Minn.) 630

2. A mayor is not subject to a civil action for damages because of an erroneous order, made through malice, for the imprisonment of a person for contempt, if it was an order made in court and within his power to make. Scott v. Fishblate (N. C.) 696

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Officers; election of, by legislature. 582
Eligibility. 681
Constitutional tenure of. 149
Contract for extra compensation. 410
Personal liability of magistrate. 696

OLEOMARGARINE. See COMMERCE, 8.

PARDON.

A constitutional provision forbidding exile does not prevent the granting of pardons to convicts upon condition that they leave the state and never return. Ex parte Hawkins (Ark.) 736

PARENT AND CHILD.

A decree for the adoption of an illegitimate child with capacity to inherit, without legitimating the child, may be rendered under a petition which asks for both legitimation and adoption. Murphy v. Portrum (Tenn.) 263

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Parent and child; liability of father to pay for support of child after divorce giving custody to wife. 680

PARLIAMENTARY LAW. See also EVIDENCE, 5.

1. A majority of the members of a legislative body constitute a quorum, unless the number is otherwise fixed by the Constitution or the power that creates the body. State v. Stanford, v. Ellington (N. C.) 582

2. It seems that the presiding officer of a legislative body is powerless to count those who are present and do not vote, for the purpose of making a quorum, in the absence of any rule of the House or other express authority to do so. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Parliamentary law; majority of quorum. 582

PARTITION.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Between tenants by entireties. 885

PARTNERSHIP.

1. A chose in action accruing to a partnership from a transaction in the ordinary course of its business may be transferred by a single member of the firm. Gerli v. Poidebard Silk Mfg. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 61

2. An individual creditor who receives money from one partner in satisfaction of a just debt, without knowledge or notice that it is partnership money, can retain it against the claims of the partnership or of the other partners, although the money was in fact derived from the sale of partnership property; but it would be otherwise as to partnership property transferred in payment of an individual debt. Stanish v. Babcock (N. J. Err. & App.) 604

3. Partnership creditors may prove pari passu with separate creditors against the estate of a partner, when there is no living solvent partner and no partnership assets applicable to the partnership debts, either at law or in equity. Thayer v. Humphrey (Wis.) 549

4. Creditors of the old and of the new firm may prove their claims pari passu and be preferred over individual creditors of the members of the new firm, when the new firm assumed the debts of the old with the intention of all parties to have the business continue and pay the old debts out of the business, but the new firm has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. Id.

5. A sale by a partner of his interest in an insolvent firm, for the purpose of paying the old firm debts and thus winding up the old partnership concern by applying the assets to such debts, does not change the equity of the outgoing partner and of the firm creditors to have the assets applied to such debts. Id.

6. On a sale of the interest of a partner, his equity to have the assets of the firm applied to the existing partnership debts ceases, even if the purchaser agrees to pay them as part of the consideration, unless there is an express or implied agreement to apply the assets to such purpose. Id.

7. Creditors who have trusted persons as partners and a business as that of the firm may hold the property used to carry on the business of the ostensible partnership subject to their claims in case of insolvency, to the exclusion of any claim of either of the ostensible members of the firm or of their separate creditors. Id.

8. Partnership creditors have no lien on the partnership assets independent of the equities of the partners, but must work out their preference over the individual creditors of the members of the partnership through the equities of such members. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunction against execution sale of property of. 105

Injunction against judgments by confession against partners. 240

Rights of individual and of firm creditors. 549

Reclaiming funds of. 604

PAYMENT. See also EVIDENCE, 16.

Failure to pay a debt in stock when stock is due and demanded makes the entire demand due in money. Oriental Hotel Co. v. Griffiths (Tex.) 765

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Payment; as ground of injunction against judgment. 563

PEDDLERS. See COMMERCE, 4.

PERPETUITIES.

Gifts to charitable uses are excluded from the operation of the rule against perpetuities by the statute of 43 Eliz. chap. 4, which is in force in Illinois. Alden v. St. Peter's Parish (Ill.) 232

PHYSICIANS. See also COMMERCE, 4.

A practicing physician who sends another physician in his place to attend a patient whom he has promised to attend is not liable for the unskilful or negligent acts of the other physician, when the latter is engaged in a distinct and independent occupation of his own, and is not the servant or agent of the former. Myers v. Holborn (N. J. Err. & App.) 345

PLEADING.

1. Conclusions of law are not admitted by a demurrer. American Waterworks Co. v. State, Walker (Neb.) 447

2. Allegations that a judgment was rendered without jurisdiction of the subject-matter or person of defendant, that no sufficient ground for publication was shown, and that the affidavit stated no ground for attachment,—are mere legal conclusions, and not sufficient to require the enjoining of the judgment. Gum-Elastic Roofing Co. v. Mexico Publishing Co. (Ind.) 700

3. A complaint does not show absence of jurisdiction in a justice which will require an injunction against his judgment, which alleges that the "process under which appellant was before said justice being publication of notice as a nonresident." Gum-Elastic Roofing Co. v. Mexico Publishing Co. (Ind.) 700

4. A petition to enforce a mechanic's lien is not insufficient because it fails to set forth plans and specifications which are made part of an alleged contract declared upon. Oriental Hotel Co. v. Griffiths (Tex.) 765

PRIOR APPROPRIATORS. See WATERS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS. See also EVIDENCE, 9, 10.

1. A ordinance compelling the substitution of a cement sidewalk in the place of a plank walk in front of a vacant 20-acre lot, which had been laid less than six months before in conformity with an ordinance, and which was in good condition and in all respects safe, convenient, and sufficient for public use, is unreasonable, unjust, and oppressive, and therefore void. Hawes v. Chicago (Ill.) 325

2. The erection on a corner lot of a dwelling house facing the street on the shorter side of the lot, and also of a business house facing the street on the longer side of the lot, makes the portion of the lot occupied by and clearly appurtenant to the latter front on the longer side of the lot. Toledo v. Sheill (Ohio) 598

3. An extensive use of the street on the longer side of a corner lot, permitted by doors and halls thereon, is not sufficient to make that side the front of the lot, when the building constitutes a single business house and the plan of construction and style of architecture accord with the presumption that the shorter side is the front.

80 L. R. A.

4. Appurtenant structures accessible only from the street on the longer side of a corner lot, together with entrances to a dwelling from that street, which are extensively used, are not sufficient to show that that side is the front of the lot, when the front of the dwelling according to its plan of construction or style of architecture corresponds with that of the lot when it was vacant. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Public improvements; reasonableness of ordinances for. . 225

Frontage assessment for; on corner lots. 598

PUBLIC LANDS. See WATERS, 5, 7, 8, 10-13.

PUBLIC MONEYS.

Funds raised by the taxation of franchises, rights, and privileges, may be applied to purposes of general revenue, or any other purpose authorized by statute. State, Schwartz, v. Ferris (Ohio) 218

PUBLIC POLICY. See COURTS, 2.

PUBLIC PROPERTY.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunction against sale of, under execution. 108

QUORUM. See EVIDENCE, 4, 5; PARLIAMENTARY LAW.

RAILROADS. See also CARRIERS; CONTRACTS, 14; MASTER AND SERVANT; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 17; STREET RAILWAYS, 2, 3.

1. A railroad company which, under a lease of another road, is conducting it wholly in the interest of the lessor, occupies the position merely of operating agent, and the lessor is liable for injuries for the negligence of the lessee. Southern R. Co. v. Bouknight (C. C. App. 4th C.) 828

2. A lease of a railroad for 999 years is not a sale within the meaning of a provision in a deed that in case the grantee should sell the right of way it should pay half of the purchase money to the grantor, where it does not appear from the instrument as a whole that the real intention of the parties was a sale, but the lease was intended to secure better connections and more profitable operation of the railroad, and was terminable at any time after ninety days in case of default of the lessee. Morrison v. St. Paul & N. P. R. Co. (Minn.) 546

3. The owner of land adjoining a railroad has the right to join his fences to the railroad fence, whether that is on the border of the right of way or set back inside such line on the right of way. Gould v. Great Northern R. Co. (Minn.) 590

4. "Fences on each side of such road," required by Minn. Gen Stat. 1878, chap. 84,

§ 54 (Minn. Gen. Stat. 1894, § 2692), relating to fencing railroads, are to be made on the margin or border of the entire grounds or right of way. Gould v. Great Northern R. Co. (Minn.) 590

5. The failure of an engineer to perform his duty to maintain a reasonably vigilant lookout along the track in front of the train renders the railroad company liable for killing a human being lying on the track, apparently helpless from any cause, when the engineer could have seen him by the exercise of ordinary care. Pickett v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. (N. C.) 257

6. One riding in a wagon owned and driven by another over whom he has no control, at the owner's invitation, is not as a matter of law negligent in failing to look and listen on approaching a railroad track, where he does not know that the driver is incompetent or that he is not keeping a proper lookout for trains. Howe v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. R. Co. (Minn.) 684

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Railroads; lease of, as a sale.	546
Liability for acts of lessees.	825
Injunction against execution sale of property of.	104
Duty as to fences.	591
Negligence of person injured at crossing.	685

RAPE. See CRIMINAL LAW, 4.

RECEIVERS. See also MORTGAGE, 8.

1. The appointment of a receiver on application of a stockholder will not be denied on the ground that the corporation has ceased to exist and the property is held by joint ownership, merely because the shares have passed into the hands of a less number of persons than the law requires for stockholders, and the offices of the company have become vacant, while an administrator of the only other stockholder has taken possession of the corporate property. Re Belton (La.) 648

2. Receivers will not be instructed as to the distribution of funds until they have them in court. Strauss v. Carolina I. Bldg. & L. Assn. (N. C.) 698

3. Preference over a mortgage debt in respect to the receiver's earnings cannot be given to a claim for damages caused by negligence of a street-railway company before the appointment of the receiver, in a suit to foreclose the mortgage on the street-railway property. St. Louis Trust Co. v. Riley (C. C. App. 8th C.) 456

4. A court of chancery cannot, against the objection of the first mortgagee, authorize the receiver of a private corporation appointed at the suit of a second mortgagee to borrow money to carry on the corporate business on certificates to be made a first and paramount lien on the corporate property. Hanna v. State Trust Co. (C. C. App. 8th C.) 201

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Receivers; ex parte appointment.	648
-----------------------------------------	-----

80 L. R. A.

Power to issue certificates giving first lien; limited to railroad cases. 203

Priority of claim for damages. 454

RECORDS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Loss or alteration of, as ground of injunction against judgments. 562, 563

RELEASE. See TRUSTS, 5.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES. See also CONTRACTS, 2; EVIDENCE, 2, 8.

1. An unincorporated church society is not affected by a statute limiting the quantity of real estate which can be held by incorporated church societies. Alden v. St. Peter's Parish (Ill.) 232

2. A church corporation does not ratify the employment of an attorney by individual trustees to conduct the prosecution of a preacher before a church tribunal, by passing a resolution to pay a certain sum to another attorney for services in respect to the sale of property, although the trustees acting individually, and not in their corporate character, had an understanding with him that a part of the money should be applied by him to discharge the claim of the other attorney. Parahley v. Third M. E. Church (N. Y.) 574

3. No liability is admitted by a resolution by church trustees appointing a committee to "confer with and act under the advice of" the attorney of the board in examining a certain claim and agreeing upon the sum, if any, to be paid, and another resolution authorizing the president and treasurer to pay the sum, if any, found due by such committee, where the board refused to accept the report of the committee, which found in favor of the claim in disregard of the condition as to acting under the advice of counsel. Id.

4. The official board of a Methodist Episcopal church, consisting of the trustees, the stewards, the class leaders, the Sunday-school teachers, and the local preachers, does not represent and cannot legally bind the church corporation in respect to the payment of a claim against it. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Religious societies; power to own lands. 233

Power of trustees to contract for. 574

RESCISSION. See CONTRACTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

RESUME.

For resumé of contents of book, see 865

SALE. See also RAILROADS, 2.

1. The refusal to accept an article which a person has expressly agreed, in consideration of its delivery to an express company, to pay for in instalments, does not relieve him from liability to pay the whole price, or restrict the seller to his remedy for damages. White v. Solomon (Mass.) 587

2. A contract to pay the whole value of a chattel before the title passes may be lawfully made. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Sale; passing of title upon order for goods. 587

SCHOOLS.

The trustees of a common-school district may contract with a teacher that the latter may teach certain higher branches, and as a part of his compensation have the right to charge and receive compensation therefor from all pupils taking such branches, under Ky. Stat. § 4364, entitling all pupils of school age within the district to free tuition in certain studies specified in § 4388, and § 4506, providing that no teacher shall be required to teach any other than the common-school branches unless it is so specified in a written contract with the trustees. Major v. Cayce (Ky.) 697

SCIRE FACIAS. See JUDGMENT, 5-7.

SET-OFF.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

As ground for injunction against judgment in garnishment. 868

Arising after judgment as ground of injunction. 569

SHELLEY'S CASE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

As affecting entirety estate. 812

SHIPPING. See also EVIDENCE, 14; INSURANCE, 9-11.

1. Failure of a schooner to exhibit a torch light will not render her responsible for collision with a vessel which sees her lights, where her position and course are distinctly apparent. Bigelow v. Nickerson (C. C. App. 7th C.) 836

2. The luffing of a vessel in the presence of imminent danger of collision is not such a fault as will preclude recovery for damages from such collision. Id.

SINKING FUND. See BONDS, 4.

SLANDER. See LIBEL AND SLANDER.

SLAVES.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunction against sale of, under execution. 117

STATE. See also ESTOPPEL, 1; INSURANCE, 1.

1. The sovereignty of the state of Wisconsin extends to the middle of Lake Michigan, and its laws, so far as they do not conflict with those of the United States regulating commerce and navigation, are operative within such limits. Bigelow v. Nickerson (C. C. App. 7th C.) 836
80 L. R. A.

2. The territorial limit of sovereignty with respect to the high seas, to the 8-mile zone, should not be applied to a lake which is not the common boundary of nations, or open by nature for the commerce of the world, but is within the exclusive jurisdiction of each nation. Id.

3. A state treasurer properly refuses to pay a warrant drawn on him by the auditor for an illegal claim, under N. C. Code, § 8856, sub. 8, requiring him to pay all warrants legally drawn on him by the auditor. Commercial & F. Bank v. Worth (N. C.) 261

STATE INSTITUTIONS. See CORPORATIONS, 1, 2, 4.

STATUTES. See also EVIDENCE, 12; TIME, 2.

1. A failure of the presiding officers to sign a bill within two days after its passage does not defeat the act or in any manner impair its validity, if it be thereafter duly authenticated and approved by the governor. Aikman v. Edwards (Kan.) 149

2. A two-thirds vote of the members of each House of the legislature is not required on the passage of an act to abolish a judicial district, under Kan. Const. art. 8, § 14, requiring such a vote to increase the number of judicial districts. Id.

3. The three months after the adjournment of the legislature on April 8, which must expire before a statute would take effect under Neb. Const. art. 8, § 24, expires so that the act will take effect on July 9. McGinn v. State (Neb.) 450

4. A statute providing for the acquisition of bridges and ferries by a city, the issuance of bonds in payment therefor, the transfer of the property to the county, and the collection of taxes by the county to pay the bonds, does not embrace more than one subject in violation of Or. Const. art. 4, § 20. Simon v. Northrup (Or.) 171

5. The maintenance of a ferry by the county of Multnomah at Sellwood is not within the subject of Or. act 1895, providing for the acquisition of specified bridges and ferries by the city of Portland. Id.

6. The acquisition by a city of certain bridges and ferries which are already public highways, provided for by Or. act 1895, is not included in the laying out, opening, and working of highways, for which special or local laws are forbidden by Or. Const. art. 4, § 23, subd. 7. Id.

7. A statute requiring a county tax to be levied and collected like other taxes, for the purpose of maintaining bridges and ferries, being in effect a requirement only that the sums required shall be included in the estimate for county purposes, does not violate Or. Const. art. 4, § 28, subd. 10, prohibiting local or special laws for assessment and collection of taxes. Id.

8. But one subject is included in a statute defining the boundaries of several judicial districts, providing for holding terms of court therein, and defining certain duties of the trial court in one of the districts, and also repealing all laws inconsistent therewith. Aikman v. Edwards (Kan.) 149

9. The restriction to a designated class of persons of the right to recover attorneys' fees, granted by Ill. Laws 1889, p. 862, in suits for wages, does not render the statute obnoxious to the constitutional prohibition against special legislation, as it applies to all persons in the state similarly engaged. Vogel v. Pakoc (Ill.) 491

10. A law of a general nature which is in full force in every part of the state complies with a constitutional requirement that laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation throughout the state. State, Schwartz, v. Ferris (Ohio) 218

STREET RAILWAYS. See also CARRIERS, 9; RECEIVERS, 8.

1. The provision of N. H. Gen. Laws, chap. 269, § 14, that "no person shall ride through any street" in the compact part of any town at a swifter pace than at the rate of 5 miles an hour, applies to a street-railway company whose charter provides that the road may be operated by such power as may be authorized by the mayor and aldermen, who shall have power to make such regulations as to the rate of speed as the public safety and convenience require, where no regulations have been made by them in regard to speed. Bly v. Nashua Street R. Co. (N. H.) 808

2. Running a street car across a railroad track at grade without first stopping it, and without some employee going ahead to see if the way is clear and free from danger and giving a signal to that effect as required by Ohio act May 4, 1891 (88 Ohio Laws, 582), is negligence—at least in the absence of extraordinary circumstances—for which the street-railroad company will be liable for any damages directly caused by such negligence. Cincinnati Street R. Co. v. Murray (Ohio) 508

3. The existence of gates and a watchman at a railroad crossing does not relieve a street-railroad company from the necessity of complying with the provisions of Ohio act May 4, 1891 (88 Ohio Laws, 582), requiring a street car to be stopped and an employee to go ahead to ascertain if the way is clear and safe and give a signal to that effect before crossing a railroad track at grade. Id.

SUBROGATION. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 2.

1. A bank which pays a check in pursuance of a guaranty, even if that was ultra vires, is not a mere volunteer so as to be precluded from claiming the rights of the person to whom payment was made, by subrogation. Voltz v. National Bank (Ill.) 155

2. One who advances money at the instance of a debtor, to be used by the latter in payment of a prior security, is not a stranger or intermeddler in his affairs within the rule 80 L. R. A.

which denies to such persons a remedy by way of subrogation. Union Mortg. Bkg. & T. Co. v. Peters (Miss.) 829

8. The holder of an intermediate mortgage who is not placed in any worse attitude by the subrogation of a subsequent mortgagee to the first lien on the property, which was paid off with money advanced by the last mortgagee on a promise that he should have the first lien, cannot defeat such subrogation, even if he has not waived or become estopped to assert his priority. Id.

4. The relief by subrogation to earlier liens which have been paid off with money advanced by a subsequent mortgagee under agreement that he shall have a first lien is not destroyed by the fact that the early liens have been actually paid off and canceled in pursuance of an agreement that this should be done, since equity will consider them alive so long as justice requires. Id.

SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunction against dispossession by. 129

SUNDAY. See also TIME, 8.

The right to file papers on Sunday during the progress of a suit is clearly implied by Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 1184, prohibiting the commencement of suits or the issue of process, on that day with certain exceptions. Hanover F. Ins. Co. v. Shrader (Tex.) 498

SUPPORT. See CONTRACTS, 24; MORTGAGE, 2.

SURPRISE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

As ground of injunction against judgment. 786

TAXES. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 4, 5; ESTOPPEL, 1; INJUNCTION, 4; PUBLIC MONEY; STATUTES, 7.

1. The restriction of the benefactions of a charitable organization to its own members or their families does not take it out of the exemption of certain property of charitable institutions by Hill's (Or.) Ann. Laws, § 2732. Portland Hibernian Benev. Soc. v. Kelly (Or.) 167

2. An exemption from taxation of property used exclusively for charitable or benevolent purposes cannot be extended to property occupied and used for other and different purposes, although the revenue derived from its use is devoted exclusively to charitable or benevolent objects. Id.

8. The state may tax the right to receive property by will or inheritance. State, Schwartz, v. Ferris (Ohio) 218

4. The Ohio inheritance tax law of April 20, 1894, is not made unconstitutional as a tax on property, by the provision that it shall become a lien upon the property received. Id.

5. The Ohio inheritance tax law is not unconstitutional when construed as a tax upon the right of receiving property, as in conflict with Ohio Const. art. 12, § 2, requiring taxation to be by uniform rule on all property according to its true value in money, because the proceeds are to be applied for purposes of general revenue. Id.

6. The tax imposed by Ohio act April 20, 1894, declaring that all property passing by will or the intestate laws or by deed of gift intended to take effect after the grantor's death, to an heir, shall be liable to certain taxes, is a tax upon the right or privilege of succession, and not upon the property itself. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Taxes; exemption of charities. 167
On inheritances; constitutionality of. 219

TELEGRAPHS. See also COMMERCE, 5; EVIDENCE, 15; PLEADING, 8; STATUTES, 11.

1. A telegraph company is a common carrier in South Dakota. Kirby v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (S. D.) 612

2. As a common carrier, a telegraph company cannot legally refuse to accept and transmit an offered message because the person offering will not sign an agreement that such carrier shall not be liable for damages in any case where the claim is not presented in writing within sixty days after the message is filed with the company for transmission. Id.

3. The statute which makes a telegraph company a common carrier of messages is not superseded or repealed by S. D. Const. art. 17, § 11, imposing upon the legislature the duty of providing reasonable regulations, by general law, for giving effect to the right of a corporation organized for such purpose to construct and maintain lines of telegraph within the state. Id.

4. The wrongful refusal of a message by a telegraph company, except on certain conditions, is not cured by the fact that the message offered is subsequently sent on the conditions demanded by the telegraph company. Id.

5. A telegraph company has the right to decline to accept a message for transmission if the sender will not consent to a stipulation requiring a claim for any damages or statutory penalties to be presented in writing within sixty days after the message is filed for transmission, since this regulation is a reasonable one, and does not limit or modify the statutory obligation and common-law liability of the company to transmit the message safely and promptly. Id.

6. A mistake in a telegram directing an agent to sell property, in reliance on which he makes a contract for such sale in his own name and not binding on the principal, will not give the latter a right of action where he voluntarily carries out the contract after notice of the mistake, in order to protect his agent, instead of leaving the latter to his remedy against the telegraph company. Shingleur v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (Miss.) 444
80 L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Telegraphs; stipulation as to liability for default. 445

Stipulation as to liability for messages; telegraph company as common carrier. 613

TIME. See also INSOLVENCY, 2; STATUTES, 8.

1. The rule as to the exclusion of the first day in computing the time within which an act is to be done, provided by Neb. Code Civ. Proc. § 895, was intended to be uniformly applicable alike to the construction of statutes and to matters of practice. McGinn v. State (Neb.) 450

2. The term "calendar month," in Neb. Const. art. 3, § 24, fixing the time for statutes to go into effect, denotes a period terminating with the day of the succeeding month numerically corresponding to the day of its beginning, less one. If there be no corresponding day of the succeeding month it terminates with the last day thereof. Id.

3. Sunday cannot be excluded from the computation of the thirty days after motion for rehearing before filing an application for a writ of error, although it is the thirtieth day and the clerk is not bound to file the application on that day, since he may lawfully do so. Hanover F. Ins. Co. v. Shrader (Tex.) 498

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Time; computation of months. 451

TOWNS. See COUNTIES, 2.

TRADENAME.

The words "mechanics' store" may be a trade-name, and the user thereof entitled to protection from the use of such words by a competitor in business for the purpose of deceiving the public, and especially the customers of the former. Weinstock, L. & Co. v. Marks (Cal.) 182

TREES. See GAS, 1.

TRESPASS. See FISHERIES, 2.

TRIAL.

1. It is not competent under the Florida Bill of Rights, § 8, guaranteeing the right of trial by jury existing at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, for the legislature to confer the power to enjoin in cases where it did not exist before the Constitution, and at the same time draw to it the incidental power to assess damages in a case triable at law by a jury. Wiggins v. Williams (Fla.) 754

2. The guaranty of the right of trial existing at the time of the Constitution, in the Florida Bill of Rights, § 8, is infringed by the provision of Fla. Acts 1889, chap. 8884, § 2, that the court of chancery may, in an action thereby authorized to enjoin trespasses on land by the cutting of trees thereon or removal of turpentine therefrom, cause an account to be taken of the damage to claimant from the trespass, as such trespass would not, before the adoption of the Constitution, have conferred jurisdiction upon chancery to enjoin the same. Wiggins v. Williams (Fla.) 754

8. Persons were incompetent as jurors in a suit against a railroad company to recover the penalty for an overcharge for passenger carriage, who only a short time before had brought similar actions against the same defendant for overcharges on the same section of track, so that the two cases involved the same issues. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Wells (Ark.) 560

4. The legislature may lawfully provide that interest as a taxpayer of a county shall not disqualify a person from acting as juror in a suit in which the county is a party. Smith v. German Ins. Co. (Mich.) 868

5. Whether or not the evidence tends to prove that negligence was the direct cause of an injury is a question of law for the court. Cincinnati Street R. Co. v. Murray (Ohio) 508

6. The question is for the jury whether or not a gas company, before permitting gas to be turned on for the benefit of some of the tenants of an apartment house, used reasonable precaution to ascertain that no harm would thereby result to other tenants who had not applied for it, by the gas escaping into their rooms. Schmeer v. Gaslight Co. (N. Y.) 658

7. Whether or not it is negligence for a boy eighteen years old to take a lighted candle to search for a leak in gas pipes is a question for the jury, to be considered in the light of all the circumstances of the case. Id.

8. The contributory negligence of a brakeman and switchman in mounting a flat car coming toward him, by grasping a brake-staff which was loose and bent when he did not know of its defects, is a question for the jury. Prosser v. Montana C. R. Co. (Mont.) 814

9. The qualification of a witness to give an opinion is for the court to decide. Pickett v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. (N. C.) 257

10. It is proper to instruct the jury that plaintiff's negligence is immaterial if they find that the defendant's negligence was the proximate cause of the injury. Id.

11. An instruction that plaintiff is not chargeable with negligence because she did not use the best means of escaping injury is misleading, where she did not know or understand that she was in any danger, and did not adopt any course of action while facing an imminent danger. Smith v. Milwaukee Builders' & T. Exch. (Wis.) 504

12. A requested instruction in a criminal action, which requires the jury to be convinced to "an absolute moral certainty" before conviction, is properly refused. People v. Hecker (Cal.) 408

18. An instruction that the positive testimony of a witness to the existence of a certain thing, and the testimony of another witness that such a thing does not exist, are equally credible, is erroneous. Smith v. Milwaukee Builders' & T. Exch. (Wis.) 504

30 L. R. A.

14. A charge in substance that negative testimony is confined to that of witnesses who, though present at a transaction, say that they did not see or did not hear, is erroneous, as testimony which is positive in form may amount merely to negative testimony. Id.

15. An instruction that the measure of damages for the loss of a human life is the estimated value of the intestate's life to those dependent upon him is not sufficient to cure a refusal to instruct that it would be the present value of accumulations arising from his net income, based upon his expectancy of life. Pickett v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. (N. C.) 257

16. An instruction making the basis for estimating the value of ore extracted from a claim the market value of such ore on the dump after deducting the cost of mining and hoisting the same in effect allows a party liable the reasonable expense of reducing the ore. Hitzgerald v. Clark (Mont.) 803

17. A requested instruction that the jury may render a general verdict or a special one is properly refused in the absence of a request to submit any special findings upon any branch of the case. Prosser v. Montana C. R. Co. (Mont.) 814

18. An instruction that land is contiguous to a certain city is not erroneous because of the fact that the land has been previously annexed to another municipality. Forsyth v. Hammond (Ind.) 576

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Trial; question for jury as to negligence. 509

Sufficiency of special verdict. 505

TRUSTS. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 6; JUDGMENT, 2.

1. A trustee for railroad bondholders to purchase at a foreclosure sale under a reorganization scheme, though entitled to abandon the sale because of the failure of a sufficient number of bondholders to pay assessments made, is bound by all the terms of his trust, where notwithstanding such failure he proceeds to complete the purchase made as such trustee, until he is released therefrom by the bondholders. Indiana, I. & L. R. Co. v. Swannell (Ill.) 290

2. Property purchased under a scheme for reorganization of a railroad, by a trustee for bondholders, may be followed by the latter into the hands of a purchaser from such trustee with knowledge of the trust. Id.

3. A purchaser with notice of a trust, either express or implied, becomes himself a trustee for the beneficiary with respect of the property, and is bound in the same manner as the original trustee from whom he purchases, even though he is a purchaser for a valuable consideration. Id.

4. The beneficiary in a trust is not bound to enforce an individual liability against a trustee who has disposed of the trust property in an improper manner, but has the alternative remedy of following the trust property. Id.

5. A release by a bondholder of the trustee in a reorganization agreement from all further luty or liability, and a waiver of all rights attained through or by him, will not preclude such bondholder from following the railroad property purchased by such trustee in his official capacity and transferred by him to another company. Id.

6. The return of bonds by a trustee for bondholders under an arrangement for the reorganization of a railroad, to a bondholder upon an order receipting in full for the bonds and discharging the trustee from all liability, does not release the equities that such bondholder has in the property purchased by such trustee under the arrangement and transferred by him to another company. Id.

7. Property purchased by a trustee for bondholders under an arrangement for the reorganization of a railroad is not discharged from the trust, where such trustee does not abandon his bid, but procures the confirmation of the sale to himself and the vesting in him of the title to the property, as to bondholders who fail to pay assessments, release the trustee from liability, and accept a return of their bonds or a portion of the assessments paid,—especially where the reorganization plan makes no provision for forfeiting the interests of bondholders, but provides that their shares of the purchase money may be borrowed or otherwise provided, and in default of payment within a specified time the interests of such bondholders may be sold. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Trusts; injunction against execution sale of trust property. 119

USURY.

An agreement to pay interest at 12 per cent after maturity, in a note made in Kansas, expressly made subject to the laws of that state, is not usurious. De Hass v. Dibert (C. C. App. 3d C.) 189

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Usury; as ground of injunction against judgment by confession. 289

VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right of, to rescind or abandon contract because of other party's default. 64

VOLUNTEER. See SUBROGATION, 1.

VOTERS AND ELECTIONS. See also APPEAL AND ERROR, 5; INJUNCTION, 2.

1. Ballots from which the inspectors have unintentionally omitted to take slips containing the numbers, as required by Nev. Stat. 1891, chap. 40, § 24, will not be rejected under the provision of § 26, that any ballot upon which appear "names, words, or marks, written or printed," except as provided in the act, shall not be counted. Buckner v. Lynip (Nev.) 854

2. The rule that a voter should not be disfranchised or deprived of his right to vote through mere inadvertence, mistake, or ignorance, if an honest intention can be ascertained from his ballot, is not changed by the Illinois ballot law of 1891, which expressly provides in § 26 that his ballot shall not be counted if he "marks more names than there are persons to be elected to an office, or if, for any reason, it is impossible to determine the voter's choice for any office to be filled." Parker v. Orr (Ill.) 227

8. The use of a mark or character which furnishes the means to designing persons of avoiding the law as to secrecy will require the rejection of a ballot under the Illinois ballot law, though it contains no prohibition of distinguishing marks, even if the mark or character used indicates an intention to vote a particular party ticket or for certain candidates. Id.

4. An honest attempt to follow the directions of the law requiring a cross to be made in the appropriate margin or place opposite the name on the ballot must appear in order to permit the ballot to be counted. Id.

5. A mark on a ballot, which bears no resemblance to a cross, without any attempt to make a cross of any kind on the ballot, will not permit it to be counted. Id.

6. A mark made with ink and somewhat blurred, even if it cannot be said to be a cross strictly speaking, if it shows an attempt to make a cross, may be sufficient to allow the ballot to be counted. Id.

7. The fact that a ballot is marked by a cross in a circle at the head of each of two tickets will not prevent counting the vote for a candidate named on one ticket for an office for which no candidate is named on the other, although it prevents counting the ballot for a candidate for any office for which both tickets present a candidate. Id.

8. Imperfect success in marking a cross in the proper places to indicate a choice of candidates, where there was a clear intention to conform to the statute, and not to distinguish the ballot, will not require its rejection. Id.

9. The requirement that a ballot be marked by a cross "in the appropriate margin or place opposite the name," made by the Illinois ballot law, § 28 (3 Starr & C. chap. 46, p. 570), is directory, and not mandatory, and under it the voter's intention should be given effect if it can be gathered from his ballot without laying down a rule which may lead to a destruction of its secrecy. Id.

10. A ballot marked simply by writing the word "Democratic" at the head of the Democratic ticket, or one marked by a single mark across or through the circle or square, or marked with a circle or irregular character within the circle or square, or marked with crosses opposite the names of candidates, but entirely outside of the squares; as well as a ballot signed by the name of the voter,—must be rejected as disregarding the plain directions of the law requiring the ballot to be marked by a cross in the appropriate margin or place opposite the name, and as furnishing the means whereby the secrecy of the ballot could be destroyed. Id.

11. The erasure of names of candidates by pencil marks drawn through them does not constitute a distinguishing mark which requires a rejection of the ballot as to other candidates. Parker v. Orr (Ill.) 227

12. A word which is read by one party as "get" and by the other as "yes," opposite a proposed constitutional amendment, is not regarded as such a distinguishing mark as to prevent counting the ballot for a candidate named on the same ballot. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Voters and elections; construction of ballot law; marking on ballots. 228

WARRANT. See STATE, 8.

WASTE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

By husband on land held by entireties. 309

WATERS. See also ESTOPPEL, 8; MANDAMUS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 11-13; STATE, 1, 2.

1. A riparian proprietor has no right to go upon another's land, and restore to the old channel the water which has been suddenly diverted by the act of God so as to flow elsewhere. Wholey v. Caldwell (Cal.) 820

2. A grant by a riparian proprietor of land bordering on the stream below that retained by him, and of the "waters accustomed to flow in the stream," will not entitle the grantee to go upon the grantor's land to return to the stream waters suddenly diverted by an extraordinary freshet. Id.

Prior appropriation.

3. The right of prior appropriation of waters existed as part of the laws and customs of that portion of the state of Washington east of the Cascade mountains, prior to the act of Congress on that subject. Isaacs v. Barber (Wash.) 665

4. The right of prior appropriation of waters according to the customary law of mining regions was not created, but merely recognized, by the act of Congress of 1866. Id.

5. A grant of government lands is subject to a prior appropriation of waters made according to the customary law of the locality, although the act of Congress on the subject had not then been passed. Id.

6. The operation of a flouring-mill is one of the purposes for which water can be appropriated under the customary law of mining regions, adopted by the act of Congress of 1866. Id.

7. An appropriator of water upon the public domain acquires, under the confirmatory acts of Congress, no rights superior to the riparian rights which have attached to land held at the time of the appropriation in private ownership. Hargrave v. Cook (Cal.) 390

8. The discoverer of a flow of percolating waters on the public lands may, by digging wells and improving them and constantly using the water for a beneficial purpose, acquire a right to take water from such wells as against one who by subsequent location acquires title to the land. Sullivan v. Northern Spy Min. Co. (Utah) 186

3) L. R. A.

Change of appropriation.

9. An appropriator of water may change the place and purpose of use as against subsequent appropriators, so long as the water is used for proper objects and the change does not injuriously affect the rights of such other appropriators. Hargrave v. Cook (Cal.) 390

10. Although an appropriator of water upon government lands retains his right when the land passes into private ownership, under Stat. at L. 253, 16 Stat. at L. 218, and may change the point of diversion to another place, he cannot make such change arbitrarily, but only when required to enable him to take the amount of water to which he is entitled, and then, under Cal. Civ. Code, § 1412, only when others are not injured by the change. Id.

11. The provision in the act of Congress of July 26, 1866, that a party committing injury or damage, in the construction of a ditch or canal, to the possession of any settler on the public domain, shall be liable to the party injured, does not grant any rights to enter on the possession of a homestead claimant for the purpose of materially changing the point of diversion of water already appropriated. McGuire v. Brown (Cal.) 354

12. The privilege of changing the point of diversion of water to which a right has been obtained by prior appropriation, under Cal. Civ. Code, § 1412, does not extend to materially changing the point of diversion and making new ditches on land lawfully held under a homestead claim. Id.

13. The prior appropriator of water has no right to enter upon the homestead claim of a settler, for the purpose of materially changing the point of diversion and constructing new waterways through the land, although the settler has not made final proof of residence and cultivation, or obtained a patent to the land, but has made an entry and has actual possession. Id.

Abandonment.

14. A riparian owner does not lose his right to the use of water for irrigating purposes by mere nonuser, as against a lower appropriator. Hargrave v. Cook (Cal.) 390

15. The rights of the locators of a ditch for irrigation, to the use of waste water after supplying prior appropriators, are lost by permitting the exclusive possession, management, and beneficial use of the waste water ditch to be enjoyed during the season of irrigation, for more than the statutory period of limitation, as part of an older system, without any use of water therefrom by such locators except what is distributed to them by virtue of their ownership of shares in the older ditch. Hewett v. Store (C. C. App. 9th C.) 265

16. Mere declarations of parties who have acquired rights to the use of water in an irrigating ditch are insufficient to preserve those rights, without any act or deed in vindication or maintenance of them, when for a period prescribed by the statute of limitations they take no water from the ditch except what is distributed to them as shareholders in an older ditch owned by an unincorporated association which has assumed entire control and use of the latter ditch as a part of the older system. Id.

7. Rights in a ditch location lost by non-user cannot be reasserted so as to acquire any right therein, except by continued and adverse use for the statutory period of prescription or a new and valid appropriation. Id.

Public supply.

8. Rules adopted by a water company with respect to its service must be lawful and just and free from discrimination, in order to be valid and enforceable. American Waterworks v. State, Walker (Neb.) 447

9. A private corporation supplying water to a municipality under a franchise is affected with a public use and assumes a public duty, which is to furnish all the inhabitants with water at reasonable rates and without unjust discrimination. Id.

20. A rule of a water company to make a charge of $1 in addition to all back rents for turning the water off and on, made a condition precedent to turning on the water after a person has become in default for water rents, is reasonable, discriminatory, and void, since compensation for turning off and on the water included in the water rents. Id.

21. The imposition of water rents by a municipal corporation for the use of water does not show that the waterworks system is operated by the corporation in its private corporate character, but is only a mode of taxation and part of the general scheme of raising revenue to carry on the work of government. Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Keeseville (N. H.) 660

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Waters; appropriation of percolating waters to public lands. 186

Abandonment or loss of rights of prior appropriators of:—In general; effect of nonuser; attempt to change use; abandonment prevented by use; decisions under statutes. 265

Change of use or channel of water appropriated:—In general; rights subsequently vested cannot be infringed; priority not lost by change; right may be sold; right to change ditch location. 884

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right of prior appropriation of water:—(I.) right at common law; (II.) right under special statutes or customs: (a) mill acts; (b) customs: (1) general doctrine in mining states; (2) source of right of appropriation; (3) against whom available; (4) extent and limitation of right; (5) for what purpose appropriation permissible; (6) who may be an appropriator; (7) what is an appropriation and when complete; (8) determination of priority; (9) interference with and protection of right; (10) second appropriation; (11) riparian rights; (12) statutes affecting; (13) transmission of right; (c) act of Congress of 1866; (d) statutes abolishing riparian rights. 665

Rights in water of stream as affected by act of God or natural change of course. 820

L. R. A.

Trust in respect to municipal waterworks; sale of. 849

Municipal liability for failure to supply in case of fires. 661

WELLS. See WATERS, 8.

WILLS.

1. An inadvertent mistake by a witness to a will, in writing testator's surname with his own initials when attempting to sign his name as a witness, makes his signature insufficient under a statute requiring witnesses to the will. Re Walker's Estate (Cal.) 460

2. The right to "attest by his mark provided he can swear to the same," given to a subscribing witness to a will by Ga. Code, § 2415, does not depend on his ability to swear to or identify his mark at the time the will is offered for probate, but such a witness is competent to attest by his mark as one of the competent witnesses required by § 2414, if he is under no legal disability to testify as a witness. Gillis v. Gillis (Ga.) 148

3. Any competent witness, although not a subscribing witness to a will, may testify to facts as to the attestation or execution of the will or the testator's capacity, if the subscribing witnesses deny these facts or, from want of memory or other cause, are unable or unwilling to testify thereto. Id.

4. A moiety of a residuary estate descends to testator's heirs on the death, during his life, of one of two persons to whom the residue is given in equal shares. Robinson's Appeal (Me.) 831

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Wills; mistake in signature to. 460

WITNESSES. See also WILLS, 8.

The trial judge may, in the exercise of his discretion, interrogate witnesses to aid in eliciting material matter suggested by the evidence. DeFord v. Painter (Okla.) 722

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Witnesses; husband and wife as, in action for wife's libel or slander. 529

WRIT AND PROCESS.

1. Jurisdiction of an infant defendant may be acquired by the service of summons in the same manner as upon defendants who are sui juris. Levystein v. O'Brien (Ala.) 707

2. A certification by the sheriff in his return to a writ in an action to establish a logger's lien against the contractor under Minn. Gen. Stat. 1894, §§ 2451-2465, in addition to the statutory requirements, that he has attached all the defendant's right, title, and interest in the logs described, is an irregularity, but will not prevent jurisdiction over the logs for the purpose of establishing a lien. Brown v. Markham (Minn.) 84

L. R. A. CASES AS AUTHORITIES

SHOWING WHERE THE CASES IN THIS VOLUME HAVE BEEN AP-PLIED DEVELOPED STRENGTHENED, LIMITED, OR IN ANY WAY AFFECTED BY LATER DECISIONS THAT HAVE CITED THESE CASES AS PRECEDENTS WITH HOLDINGS OF CITING CASES, ALSO REFERENCES TO LATER AN-NOTATIONS CITING
CASES OR NOTES

CORVALLIS, 1908.

L. R. A. CASES AS AUTHORITIES.

CASES IN 30 L. R. A.

30 L. R. A. 33, LAKE SHORE M. S. R. CO. v. RICHARDS, 152 Ill. 59, 38 N. E. 773.

Partnership accounting in Maynard v. Richards, 166 Ill. 478, 57 Am. St. Rep. 145, 46 N. E. 1138, Affirming 61 Ill. App. 336.

Constitutional right to appeal.

Cited in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Larson, 152 Ill. 329, 38 N. E. 784, sustaining statute making judgment of appellate court final as to questions of fact.

Cited in footnotes to Johnson v. State, 51 L. R. A. 272, which sustains statute requiring exception to obtain reversal for error in charge; McClain v. Williams, 43 L. R. A. 287, which holds right of appeal subject to legislative restriction.

Review of facts by supreme court.

Cited in Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Stanley, 158 Ill. 400, 41 N. E. 1012, and Lake Shore Laundry Co. v. Rakowski, 157 Ill. 461, 41 N. E. 1019, holding judgment of appellate court on questions of fact conclusive on supreme court; Cicero & P. Street R. Co. v. Meixner, 160 Ill. 322, 31 L. R. A. 332, 43 N. E. 823, and Siddall v. Jansen, 168 Ill. 45, 39 L. R. A. 114, 48 N. E. 191, holding that supreme court may review sufficiency of facts supporting plaintiff's case when refusal to direct verdict for defendant is assigned as error.

Waiver of exception to refusal to direct verdict.

Cited in Kolze v. Jones, 64 Ill. App. 292, and Martin Emrich Outfitting Co. v. Brown, 63 Ill. App. 39, holding exception to refusal to direct verdict for defendant waived by introducing evidence and submitting case without renewing motion.

Taking case from jury.

Cited in Siddall v. Jansen, 168 Ill. 46, 39 L. R. A. 114, 48 N. E. 191; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Stanley, 158 Ill. 398, 41 N. E. 1012; Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Callaghan, 157 Ill. 410, 41 N. E. 909; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Logue, 158 Ill. 626, 42 N. E. 53; Foster v. Wadsworth-Howland Co. 168 Ill. 517, 48 N. E. 163; North Chicago Street R. Co. v. Wiswell, 168 Ill. 614, 48 N. E. 407; Illinois Steel Co. v. Ostrowski, 194 Ill. 382, 62 N. E. 822; Wetz v. Greffe, 71 Ill. App. 315; Boyle v. Illinois C. R. Co. 88 Ill. App. 257; Finley v. West Chicago Street R. Co. 90 Ill. App. 370; North Chicago Street R. Co. v. Boyd, 156 Ill. 419, 40 N. E. 955,—holding instruction to find for defendant proper only when evidence wholly insufficient to sustain verdict for plaintiff; Cooney v. United States Wringer Co. 101 Ill. App. 473; Missouri Malleable Iron Co. v. Hoover, 77 Ill.

L. R. A. AU.—VOL. IV.—1.

App. 439; Kean v. West Chicago Street R. Co. 75 Ill. App. 41; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Marzalkiewicz, 75 Ill. App. 242, — holding that evidence tending to sustain plaintiff's case raises question for jury.

Right to rescind or abandon contract for other party's default.

Cited in Turney v. Peoria Grape Sugar Co. 65 Ill. App. 657, holding that refusal to receive coal authorizes termination of contract to supply; Ballance v. Vanuxem, 191 Ill. 324, 61 N. E. 85, holding that default rendering further performance something different than contracted for justifies termination of contract; Tomson v. Heidenheimer, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 118, 40 S. W. 425, holding that repudiation gives other party right to treat contract as abandoned, and referring particularly to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 33; Curtis v. Brannon, 85 Tenn. 162, 38 S. W. 1073, holding that vendee seeking to rescind sale for breach of covenant of seisin must restore possession, and referring particularly to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 33; Peurrung v. Carter-Crume Co. 110 Fed. 109, holding (obiter) repudiation of contract equivalent to prevention of performance; Kimbark v. Illinois Car & Equipment Co. 103 Ill. App. 645, raising, without deciding, question whether refusal to deliver, repudiation of contract to furnish iron; Kaukauna Electric Light Co. v. Kaukauna, 114 Wis. 341, 89 N. W. 542, raising, without deciding, question whether breach of agreement to furnish additional lights justifies rescission of lighting contract; Genet v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 170 N. Y. 295, 63 N. E. 350, by Bartlett, J., dissenting, who holds contract terminable only when acts of other party amount to complete repudiation.

Cited in footnotes to Johnson Forge Co. v. Leonard, 57 L. R. A. 225, which sustains seller's right to rescind upon purchaser's demand for additional deliveries before remitting for articles delivered; Vandegrift v. Cowles Engineering Co. 48 L. R. A. 685, which holds general assignment for creditors by contractor not abrogation or breach of existing contracts; Kauffman v. Raeder, 54 L. R. A. 247, which denies right of one receiving and retaining benefit of part performance by other party to rescind for breach of complete performance; Ball v. Safe Deposit & T. Co. 52 L. R. A. 403, which sustains right of purchaser to rescind for want of jurisdiction in court authorizing sale.

Limited in Stanford v. McGill, 6 N. D. 564, 38 L. R. A. 770, footnote p. 760, 72 N. W. 938, holding repudiation of contract before time of performance not breach.

Annotation in 30 L. R. A. 33, referred to particularly in West v. Bechtel, 125 Mich. 163, 51 L. R. A. 799, footnote p. 791, 84 N. W. 69, holding contract not abandoned by purchaser's breach of agreement to pay for each shipment as received; Worthington v. Gwin, 119 Ala. 54, 43 L. R. A. 384, footnote p. 382, 24 So. 739, denying right to abandon entire contract because small quantity of ore not free from foreign substances as required.

Bringing action on repudiated contract before time to perform.

Cited in Marks v. Van Eeghen, 30 C. C. A. 210, 57 U. S. App. 149, 85 Fed. 855, and Roehm v. Horst, 178 U. S. 16, 44 L. ed. 959, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780, holding action on breach of executory contract after repudiation not premature; Zatlin v. Davenport, 71 Ill. App. 294, holding declaration of intention not to abide by contract to marry justifies bringing action before time set.

Effect of repudiation of contract.

Cited in Chemical Nat. Bank v. World's Columbian Exposition, 170 Ill. 92, 48 N. E. 331, Affirming 67 Ill. App. 178, holding insolvency of bank breach of contract to establish branch on exposition grounds; Meyer v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co. 144 Ind. 451, 43 N. E. 448, holding allowing insurance to lapse terminates insured's right to paid-up policy; Southern Cotton-Oil Co. v. Heflin, 39 C. C. A. 550, 99 Fed. 344, holding notice that vendee will not receive goods does not take away vendor's rights under contract.

Remedies of injured party to repudiated contract.

Cited in Lockport v. Shields, 87 Ill. App. 154, holding repudiation of contract for services gives right to sue for damages; Vickers v. Electrozone Commercial Co. 67 N. J. L. 671, 52 Atl. 467, and James H. Rice Co. v. Penn Plate Glass Co. 88 Ill. App. 414, holding repudiation of contract gives right to sue for profits which would have been realized; Dyer v. Middle Kittitas Irrig. Dist. 25 Wash. 90, 64 Pac. 1009, sustaining right of contractor to recover without completing contract, where instalments not paid when due; Waggeman v. Janssen, 74 Ill. App. 41, sustaining recovery on quantum meruit for work under partly performed repudiated contract; Ornstein v. Yahr & L. Drug Co. 119 Wis. 435, 96 N. W. 826, holding recovery, upon breach of contract of employment, of one month's pro rata salary, bar to any subsequent recovery thereon.

Distinguished in effect in Rogers-Ruger Co. v. McCord, 115 Wis. 263, 91 N. W. 685, holding establishment of conditions precedent to defendant's obligation, necessary, before recovery may be had upon contract.

Measure of damages for breach of contract.

Cited in Delaware & H. Canal Co. v. Mitchell, 92 Ill. App. 581, holding measure of damages for vendor's refusal to deliver, difference between contract and market prices at time and place of delivery fixed.

Cited in footnote to Bethel v. Salem Improv. Co. 33 L. R. A. 602, which holds loss of profits not recoverable for breach of contract.

Cited in note (53 L. R. A. 36, 47) on loss of profits as element of damages for breach of contract.

30 L. R. A. 61, GERLI v. POIDEBARD SILK MFG. CO. 57 N. J. L. 432, 51 Am. St. Rep. 612, 31 Atl. 401.

Assignment of chose in action.

Cited in Tufts v. People's Bank & T. Co. 59 N. J. L. 382, 35 Atl. 792, holding accepting payment of third person's note amounts to assignment of debt; Sullivan v. Visconti, 68 N. J. L. 545, 53 Atl. 598, recognizing validity of assignment by single partner of chose in action belonging to firm.

What constitutes breach of contract.

Cited in Middlesex Water Co. v. Knappmann Whiting Co. 64 N. J. L. 246, 49 L. R. A. 575, 81 Am. St. Rep. 467, 45 Atl. 692, holding water company liable for failure to furnish fire protection, due to break in pipes.

Cited in footnote to West v. Bechtel, 51 L. R. A. 791, which holds contract not abandoned by purchaser's breach of agreement to pay for each shipment as received.

30 L. R. A. 74, PEOPLE ex rel HENDERSON v. WESTCHESTER COUNTY, 147 N. Y. 1, 41 N. E. 563.

Followed without discussion in Westchester v. Haffen, 147 N. Y. 685, 42 N. E. 726.

Burden of showing act unconstitutional.

Cited in Re Brenner, 35 Misc. 215, 70 N. Y. Supp. 744, holding burden of proof on party asserting unconstitutionality of statute; Board of Education v. Board of Education, 76 App. Div. 357, 78 N. Y. Supp. 522, recognizing presumption of validity of legislation changing boundaries of school district; People ex rel. Tyroler v. City Prison, 157 N. Y. 149, 43 L. R. A. 277, 68 Am. St. Rep. 763, 51 N. E. 1006, by Martin, J., dissenting, who holds burden of showing unconstitutionality of statute on party asserting it.

When statute unconstitutional.

Cited in Dillon v. Erie R. Co. 19 Misc. 123, 43 N. Y. Supp. 320; Re Brenner, 35 Misc. 215, 70 N. Y. Supp. 744; Parfitt v. Ferguson, 3 App. Div. 196, 38 N. Y. Supp. 466; Irwin v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 38 App. Div. 260, 57 N. Y. Supp. 21; People ex rel. Holmes v. Lane, 53 App. Div. 539, 65 N. Y. Supp. 1004; Worthington v. London Guarantee & Acci. Co. 164 N. Y. 84, 58 N. E. 102, — holding statute invalid only where clearly irreconcilable with Constitution.

Constitutional interpretation.

Cited in Goedel v. Palmer, 15 App. Div. 89, 44 N. Y. Supp. 301, holding that journal of Constitutional Convention may be consulted in interpreting Constitution.

Division of county without changing assembly district.

Cited in State ex rel. Hicks v. Stevens, 112 Wis. 177, 88 N. W. 48, sustaining statute creating new county providing it shall remain part of original assembly district.

Change in senatorial districts.

Cited in footnote to Denny v. State, 31 L. R. A. 726, which denies right to create double districts so as to give counties having less than population for one senator or representative a voice in electing more than one.

Distinguished in Baker County v. Benson, 40 Or. 223, 66 Pac. 815, sustaining act changing senatorial districts.

Effect of annexation act.

Cited in Irwin v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 38 App. Div. 260, 57 N. Y. Supp. 21, sustaining act extending jurisdiction of municipal court of New York over more than one county; Bell v. New York, 46 App. Div. 197, 61 N. Y. Supp. 709, holding contract of school librarian with town annexed to New York city binding on city; Duckworth v. Cunningham, 26 Misc. 404, 56 N. Y. Supp. 191, and McTurek v. Foussadier, 51 App. Div. 219, 64 N. Y. Supp. 962, holding change of county boundaries does not change judicial departments; Re McKeon, 26 Misc. 470, 58 N. Y. Supp. 589, holding jurisdiction of Westchester surrogate unaffected by act of annexation; Zeimer v. Rafferty, 18 App. Div. 398, 46 N. Y. Supp. 345, holding persons living in annexed portion deemed residents of Westchester county for purpose of determining venue of action.

Limited in Hawkins v. Pelham Electric Light & P. Co. 158 N. Y. 419, 53 N. E. 162, holding territory annexed by act of legislature part of New York county for purpose of determining place of trial of action.

30 L. R. A. 82, QUEEN v. DAYTON COAL & I. CO. 95 Tenn. 458, 49 Am. St. Rep. 935, 32 S. W. 460.

Breach of statutory duty as creating liability.

Cited in Wise v. Morgan, 101 Tenn. 278, 44 L. R. A. 551, 48 S. W. 971, holding druggist's failure to label poison negligence per se; Iron & Wire Co. v. Green, 108 Tenn. 164, 65 S. W. 399, holding employment of infant in factory in violation of statute, negligence per se; Perry v. Tozer, 90 Minn. 437, 101 Am. St. Rep. 416, 97 N. W. 137, holding that employment of child in sawmill in violation of statute, makes employer prima facie liable for injury; Riden v. Grimm Bros. 97 Tenn. 223, 35 L. R. A. 588, 36 S. W. 1097, holding seller of liquor after notice forbidding sale, in violation of statute, liable to wife for husband's death; Rhea County v. Sneed, 105 Tenn. 586, 58 S. W. 1063, holding commissioners, failing to comply with statute requiring taking bond from contractor for benefit of laborers, liable for wages; Weeks v. McNulty, 101 Tenn. 502, 43 L. R. A. 187, 70 Am. St. Rep. 693, 48 S. W. 809, and Schmalzried v. White, 97 Tenn. 45, 32 L. R. A. 784, 36 S. W. 393, raising, without deciding, question whether failure to comply with ordinance requiring fire escapes creates liability to person injured.

Contributory negligence as defense.

Cited in Island Coal Co. v. Sherwood, 153 Ind. 700, 53 N. E. 1135, holding contributory negligence of miner defense to action for injury from fall of coal; Bodell v. Brazil Block Coal Co. 25 Ind. App. 660, 58 N. E. 856, holding, that freedom from contributory negligence must be shown in action based on breach of statutory duty to cover mine cages.

Contributory negligence of children.

Cited in footnote to Gleason v. Smith, 55 L. R. A. 622, which denies liability for injury by collision with team, to twelve-year-old boy using street as playground.

30 L. R. A. 84, BROWN v. MARKHAM, 60 Minn. 233, 62 N. W. 123.

Validity of log-lien law.

Cited in Foley v. Markham, 60 Minn. 218, 62 N. W. 125, holding log-lien law constitutional.

Log-lien judgment as evidence of lien.

Cited in Scott & H. Lumber Co. v. Sharvy, 62 Minn. 529, 64 N. W. 1132, holding log-lien judgments prima facie evidence of existence of liens, in action against owner.

30 L. R. A. 87, ÆTNA L. INS. CO. v. FLORIDA, 16 C. C. A. 618, 32 U. S. App. 753, 69 Fed. 932.

Petition for certiorari to circuit court of appeals denied in 163 U. S. 675, 41 L. ed. 311, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1198.

Suicide of insured as bar to recovery.

Cited in Christian v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 143 Mo. 467, 45 S. W. 268, construing statute making "contemplated suicide" defense in action for life insurance, as meaning intended suicide; Supreme Lodge, K. of P. v. Stein, 75 Miss. 120, 37 L. R. A. 778, 65 Am. St. Rep. 589, 21 So. 559, holding anti-suicide clause in application not binding when not adopted by competent authority of fraternal organization.

Cited in footnote to Campbell v. Supreme Conclave I. O. H. 54 L. R. A. 576, which holds recovery not prevented by suicide of insured.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 260) on contestability of life insurance under provisions of policy or of statute.

30 L. R. A. 90, GREEN v. MILLS, 16 C. C. A. 516, 25 U. S. App. 383, 69 Fed. 852.

Appeal dismissed in 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. ed. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132.

Appeals to circuit court of appeals.

Cited in Indianapolis v. Central Trust Co. 27 C. C. A. 582, 53 U. S. App. 659, 83 Fed. 531, holding that appeal lies from interlocutory injunction where violation of Federal Constitution not primarily involved; Watkins v. King, 55 C. C. A. 297, 118 Fed. 531, sustaining jurisdiction of court where question as to Federal Constitution arises incidentally upon objection to evidence of state statute; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 43 C. C. A. 395, 104 Fed. 5 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that court should decline jurisdiction where controlling question involves Federal Constitution; Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 42 C. C. A. 266, 102 Fed. 209 (dissenting opinion), majority holding injunction order in case involving contract clause of Federal Constitution, as well as other questions, not appealable.

Distinguished in Beck & P. Lithographing Co. v. Wacker & B. Brewing & Malting Co. 22 C. C. A. 14, 46 U. S. App. 486, 76 Fed. 13, holding order dismissing action as to defendants not served, appealable.

Power of appellate court to pass on merits on appeal from interlocutory order.

Cited in Smith v. Vulcan Iron Works, 165 U. S. 522, 41 L. ed. 811, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407, holding that on appeal from interlocutory injunction after hearing on pleadings and proofs, bill may be dismissed; Mast, F. & Co. v. Stover Mfg. Co. 177 U. S. 495, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708, holding that bill may be dismissed on appeal from injunction order granted upon bill and affidavits; Bissell Carpet-Sweeper Co. v. Goshen Sweeper Co. 19 C. C. A. 38, 43 U. S. App. 47, 72 Fed. 558, holding that on appeal from interlocutory decree for perpetual injunction court may pass on whole merits of case; Allegheny Oil Co. v. Snyder, 45 C. C. A. 611, 106 Fed. 764; Knoxville v. Africa, 23 C. C. A. 257, 47 U. S. App. 85, 77 Fed. 506, holding that on appeal from preliminary injunction order, presenting questions fully, court of appeals will dispose of case on merits; Lake Street Elev. R. Co. v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 23 C. C. A. 452, 46 U. S. App. 630, 77 Fed. 772, holding that on appeal from order dissolving injunction court of appeals may, on finding want of jurisdiction, remand cause to state court; Dewey Hotel Co. v. United States Electric Lighting Co. 17 App. D. C. 368, holding that on appeal from interlocutory injunction appellate court of District of Columbia may dismiss bill on merits.

Distinguished in Standard Elevator Co. v. Crane Elevator Co. 22 C. C. A. 557, 46 U. S. App. 411, 76 Fed. 775, holding affirmance by court of appeals does not confer finality on decree of circuit court; Lockwood v. Wickes, 21 C. C. A. 263, 40 U. S. App. 136, 75 Fed. 123, refusing to pass on merits of case on appeal from interlocutory order where injunction dissolved by expiration.

Injunction to restrain governmental or political action.

Cited in Gowdy v. Green, 69 Fed. 865, denying injunction to restrain officers from acting under state registration law abridging right to vote; McNiece v. Sohmer, 29 Misc. 239, 61 N. Y. Supp. 193, holding that equity cannot enjoin filling of vacancy in public office nor compel reinstatement of person removed; State ex rel. Taylor v. Lord, 28 Or. 520, 31 L. R. A. 483, footnote p. 473, 43 Pac. 471, denying power of court to interfere with location by governor of site for public institution; State ex rel. McCaffery v. Aloe, 152 Mo. 481, 47 L. R. A. 398, footnote p. 393, 54 S. W. 494, denying right to injunction to protect purely political right of citizen as voter; Landes v. Walls, 160 Ind. 219, 66 N. E. 619, denying injunction to restrain appointees from acting as members of common council, until determination of their right so to do; Anthony v. Burrow, 129 Fed. 790, denying injunction preventing state officers acting under state statute, from certifying name of candidate for office of representative in Congress; Segars v. Parrott, 54 S. C. 72, 31 S. E. 677, by Buchanan, J., dissenting, holding that injunction cannot be issued in effect invalidating election of members of legislature under unconstitutional statute.

Power of courts in political matters.

Cited in Giles v. Harris, 189 U. S. 486, 47 L. ed. 911, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639, denying equitable jurisdiction of United States circuit court to compel enrolment of names upon county voting list.

Cited in footnotes to Phelps v. Piper, 33 L. R. A. 53, which holds question as to which faction of political party is true representative, political rather than judicial; Davis v. Hambrick, 51 L. R. A. 671, which holds decision of state central committee between bodies claiming to be executive committee of county conclusive on courts; Covington v. Buffett, 47 L. R. A. 622, which denies court's jurisdiction to determine existence of vacancy in office of senator; Weaver v. Toney, 50 L. R. A. 105, which denies right to enforce in equity right to have inspector of certain party at polls; Fesler v. Brayton, 32 L. R. A. 578, which denies right to injunction against holding election under alleged unconstitutional statute; State ex rel. Cranmer v. Thorson, 33 L. R. A. 582, which denies right to enjoin certifying of proposed constitutional amendment.

Effect of acquired remedy at law to oust equitable jurisdiction.

Cited in Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Blair, 130 Fed. 974, holding equitable jurisdiction of Federal court obtained in proceeding to cancel insurance policy, not ousted by death of insured and commencement of action at law on policy.

30 L. R. A. 98, PARSONS v. HARTMAN, 25 Or. 547, 42 Am. St. Rep. 803, 37 Pac. 61.

Exemption of property in custody of law.

Cited in Reger v. Manhattan Brass Co. 6 Pa. Super. Ct. 379, 41 W. N. C. 422, holding property in custody of claimant giving bond to sheriff, exempt from process.

Injunction against judgments.

Cited in notes (31 L. R. A. 775) on injunction against judgments for defenses existing prior to their rendition; (32 L. R. A. 329) on general equitable jurisdiction in regard to injunctions against judgments.

30 L. R. A. 143, GILLIS v. GILLIS, 96 Ga. 1, 51 Am. St. Rep. 121, 23 S. E. 107.

Competency of attesting witness.

Cited in Smith v. Crotty, 112 Ga. 909, 38 S. E. 110, holding competency of attesting witness tested by competency to testify to attestation in court.

Proof of execution where attesting witnesses fail.

Cited in Kelly v. William Sharp Saddlery Co. 99 Ga. 398, 27 S. E. 741, holding maker of deed competent to testify to execution, where subscribing witnesses cannot recollect transaction; Buchanan v. Simpson Grocery Co. 105 Ga. 305, 31 S. E. 105, holding execution of note provable by other evidence where subscribing witness denies attestation; Underwood v. Thurman, 111 Ga. 334, 36 S. E. 788, raising, without deciding, question whether presumption of due execution of will restricted to cases where subscribing witnesses die or fail to remember.

Evidence in proceeding to establish lost will.

Cited in Scott v. Maddox, 113 Ga. 797, 84 Am. St. Rep. 263, 39 S. E. 500, holding, in proceeding to establish lost will, execution provable by subscribing witnesses and facts rebutting presumed revocation by others.

Construction of Code.

Cited in Mitchell v. Georgia & A. R. Co. 111 Ga. 769, 51 L. R. A. 626, 36 S. E. 971, and Lamar v. McLaren, 107 Ga. 599, 34 S. E. 116, holding that, unless contrary manifestly appears, Code construable as declaratory of, not as changing, existing law.

30 L. R. A. 149, AIKMAN v. EDWARDS, 55 Kan. 751, 42 Pac. 366.

Legislative power to abolish existing courts.

Cited in Proulx v. Graves, 143 Cal. 247, 76 Pac. 1025, sustaining supervisors' power to abolish townships including justice's courts in each, and consolidate them into one; McCully v. State, 102 Tenn. 542, 46 L. R. A. 576, footnote p. 567, 53 S. W. 134 (distinguished in dissenting opinion), upholding legislature's power to abolish existing courts and change counties from one circuit to another.

Cited in footnotes to People ex rel. Burby v. Howland, 41 L. R. A. 838, which holds void, statute depriving justices of the peace of single town of criminal jurisdiction; Love v. Liddle, 62 L. R. A. 482, which denies power to regulate jurisdiction of justices of the peace by classification of cities in which they reside.

Repeal by implication.

Cited in Lowe v. Bourbon County, 6 Kan. App. 606, 51 Pac. 579, upholding act covering whole subject repealing by implication previous legislation.

30 L. R. A. 155, VOLTZ v. NATIONAL BANK, 158 Ill. 532, 42 N. E. 69.

Ultra vires corporate contracts.

Cited in Tourtelot v. Whithed, 9 N. D. 480, 84 N. W. 8, holding ultra vires contract of bank, not forbidden by law, not voidable when preformed.

Effect of payment of debt by stranger.

Cited in footnote to United States use of Fidelity Nat. Bank v. Rundle, 52 L. R. A. 505, which holds money furnished to pay labor claims not within bond for paying persons supplying principal with labor or materials for prosecuting work.

30 L. R. A. 158, WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. v. HOWELL, 95 Ga. 194, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 516, 51 Am. St. Rep. 68, 22 S. E. 286.

Followed without discussion in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Rawlings, 95 Ga. 526, 23 S. E. 416.

30 L. R. A. 161, CHICAGO, M. & ST. P. R. CO. v. WALLACE, 14 C. C. A. 257, 24 U. S. App. 589, 66 Fed. 506.

Right of carrier to limit liability by contract.

Cited in Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Voigt, 176 U. S. 516, 44 L. ed. 569, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385, Reversing 79 Fed. 566; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 148 Ind. 200, 40 L. R. A. 103, 62 Am. St. Rep. 503, 46 N. E. 917; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Keefer, 146 Ind. 26, 38 L. R. A. 94, 58 Am. St. Rep. 348, 44 N. E. 796; Long v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 130 Fed. 873, — sustaining provision exempting railroad from liability to express messenger in contract to carry express matter; Wilson v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 129 Fed. 779, sustaining validity of contract limiting carrier's liability for injuries to circus equipment transported under special arrangement.

Cited in footnotes to Mears v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 884, which authorizes carrier to stipulate for exemption from liability for injuries by wet; Ullman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 246, which sustains carrier's right to secure entire exemption from liability as insurer for loss not due to negligence or misfeasance; Tecumseh Mills v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 49 L. R. A. 558, which holds statutory prohibition against carriers limiting liability inapplicable to contract by domestic corporation in other state for transportation entirely outside of state; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 53 L. R. A. 720, which holds negligent carrier liable for true value, notwithstanding arbitrary preadjustment in bill of lading assented to by shipper.

Distinguished in Richmond v. Southern P. Co. 41 Or. 57, 57 L. R. A. 618, 93 Am. St. Rep. 694, 67 Pac. 947, holding agreement releasing railroad from liability to passenger on freight trains void as to trains designated to carry passengers.

30 L. R. A. 167, PORTLAND HIBERNIAN BENEV. SOC. v. KELLY, 28 Or. 173, 52 Am. St. Rep. 769, 42 Pac. 3.

Masonic lodge as charitable institution.

Cited in Fitterer v. Crawford, 157 Mo. 61, 50 L. R. A. 194, 57 S. W. 532, holding Masonic lodge exempt from taxation as institution "for purposes purely charitable."

Distinguished in Mason v. Perry, 22 R. I. 484, 48 Atl. 671, holding Masonic lodge not charitable institution which can hold bequest in trust for lodge purposes.

Effect of use of property on exemption from taxation.

Cited in Willamette University v. Knight, 35 Or. 36, 56 Pac. 124, holding realty of educational institution leased for profit, not exempt; People ex rel. Young Men's Asso. v. Sayles, 32 App. Div. 202, 53 N. Y. Supp. 67, denying exemption of part of library building rented as public hall; Parker v. Quinn, 23 Utah, 341, 64 Pac. 961, denying exemption of portion of property of charitable institution devoted to purposes of revenue; People ex rel. Delta Kappa Epsilon Soc. v. Lawler, 74 App. Div. 560, 77 N. Y. Supp. 840, holding college fraternity house used primarily as boarding place for members not exempt; Fitterer v. Crawford, 157 Mo. 65, 50 L. R. A. 195, footnote p. 191, 57 S. W. 532, denying exemption of masonic lodge building, first and second stories of which are rented to pay debt and current expenses of lodge.

Cited in footnotes to Young Men's Christian Asso. v. Douglas County, 52 L. R. A. 123, which denies exemption to part of Y. M. C. A. building rented for business purposes; Protestant Episcopal Church v. Prioleau, 57 L. R. A. 606, which holds exempt, church parsonage rented, the rent being used to procure other residence for parson.

Injunction against collection of taxes.

Cited in Alliance Trust Co. v. Multnomah County, 38 Or. 437, 63 Pac. 498, refusing to restrain collection of irregular tax until tender of amount due; Southern Oregon Co. v. Coos County, 39 Or. 194, 64 Pac. 646, refusing to enjoin collection of tax on property not grossly overvalued.

Cited in footnote to Philadelphia Mortg. & Trust Co. v. Omaha, 57 L. R. A. 150, which denies right to restrain city from enforcing tax against property on which money loaned in reliance on treasurer's mistaken marking of taxes as paid.

30 L. R. A. 171, SIMON v. NORTHUP, 27 Or. 487, 40 Pac. 560.

Legislative power to impose burdens on municipalities.

Cited in State ex rel. Bulkeley v. Williams, 68 Conn. 148, 48 L. R. A. 490, 35 Atl. 24, holding that legislature may require town specially benefitted to contribute to cost of maintaining bridge or highway outside of limits.

Cited in footnotes to Byram v. Marion County, 33 L. R. A. 476, which authorizes taxation of city property for free gravel roads or turnpikes within county; Johnson v. San Diego, 30 L. R. A. 178, which upholds legislative power to readjust municipal indebtedness after division of city.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 471) on power of legislature to impose burdens upon municipalities and to control their local administration and property.

Distinguished in Eaton v. Minnaugh, 43 Or. 475, 73 Pac. 754, holding void legislation creating indebtedness by county beyond constitutional limit for construction of court-house.

Requirement that subject of act be stated in title.

Cited in State ex rel. Carey v. Cornell, 50 Neb. 532, 70 N. W. 56, holding provision for stenographer's salary germane to title of act relating to "courts."

Constitutional prohibition of special legislation laying out highways.

Cited in Ellis v. Frazier, 38 Or. 469, 53 L. R. A. 457, 63 Pac. 642, raising, without deciding, question whether statute authorizing construction of bicycle paths is a laying out of highway by local law.

State control of highways.

Cited in Brand v. Multnomah County, 38 Or. 91, 50 L. R. A. 393, 84 Am. St. Rep. 772, 60 Pac. 390, sustaining legislature's power to fix grade of city street; Huddleston v. Eugene, 34 Or. 354, 43 L. R. A. 447, 55 Pac. 868, holding that legislature may by act of incorporation change county road to city street; Cicero Lumber Co. v. Cicero, 176 Ill. 25, 42 L. R. A. 703, 68 Am. St. Rep. 155, 51 N. E. 758, holding that municipality may, under legislative authority, exclude general traffic from public highway.

Cited in note (59 L. R. A. 522, 542) on establishment, regulation, and protection of ferries.

Taxation of county for city's benefit.

Distinguished in Ladd v. Holmes, 40 Or. 191, 91 Am. St. Rep. 457, 66 Pac. 714, holding that expenses of city primary elections may be imposed on county.

When statute unconstitutional.

Cited in Ellis v. Frazier, 38 Or. 464, 53 L. R. A. 456, 63 Pac. 642, holding that constitutionality of statute will be upheld wherever possible.

Municipal duties as to ferries.

Limited in Kadderly v. County Court, 32 Or. 567, 52 Pac. 515, denying right to compel court to provide new ferry boat to replace one in use when ferry was purchased.

30 L. R. A. 178, JOHNSON v. SAN DIEGO, 109 Cal. 468, 42 Pac. 249.

Legislative power to impose burdens on localities.

Cited in Rolph v. Fargo, 7 N. D. 662, 42 L. R. A. 655, 76 N. W. 242, sustaining front-foot assessments for paving.

Cited in footnote to Simon v. Northup, 30 L. R. A. 171, which upholds legislative power to require city to incur debt for bridges and ferries.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 475) on power of legislature to impose burdens on municipalities and to control their local administration and property.

Apportionment of municipal indebtedness.

Cited in Re Fremont & B. H. Counties, 8 Wyo. 22, 54 Pac. 1073, holding that provision apportioning indebtedness may be made after passage of act dividing county.

30 L. R. A. 182, WEINSTOCK, L. & CO. v. MARKS, 109 Cal. 529, 50 Am. St. Rep. 57, 42 Pac. 142.

Unlawful competition.

Cited in Hainque v. Cyclops Iron Works, 136 Cal. 352, 68 Pac. 1014, enjoining use of word "Cyclops" applied to machine shop by neighboring business competitor; Duke v. Cleaver, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 222, 46 S. W. 1128, enjoining use of words "nickle store" as business sign and trade name.

Cited in footnote to American Washboard Co. v. Saginaw Mfg. Co. 50 L. R. A. 609, which holds false description of zinc washboards as "aluminum," not unlawful competition.

Scope of equity jurisdiction.

Cited in Southern P. Co. v. Robinson, 132 Cal. 412, 64 Pac. 572, sustaining equity jurisdiction over action for injunction staying multiplicity of suits against railroad refusing stop-over privileges.

30 L. R. A. 186, SULLIVAN v. NORTHERN SPY MIN. CO. 11 Utah, 438, 40 Pac. 709.

Appropriation of percolating waters.

Cited in Brosnan v. Harris, 39 Or. 151, 54 L. R. A. 629, footnote p. 628, 87 Am. St. Rep. 649, 65 Pac. 867, sustaining right under statute to appropriate water of spring without natural outlet.

Cited in footnotes to Bruening v. Dorr, 35 L. R. A. 640, which denies right to use water of spring for irrigation as against prior appropriator of stream into which it percolates; Willow Creek Irrig. Co. v. Michaelson, 51 L. R. A. 280, which denies right to appropriate water arising through percolation on land after its segregation from public domain; Vineland Irrig. District v. Azusa Irrig. Co. 46 L. R. A. 820, which holds subsurface flow of river through gravelly bed subject to legal appropriation subordinate to rights of prior appropriator of surface flow; Stillwater Water Co. v. Farmer, 60 L. R. A. 875, which sustains right to injunction against landowner draining, collecting, and diverting percolating waters solely to waste them; Huber v. Merkel, 62 L. R. A. 589, which holds that landowner's right to sink wells and gather percolating water cannot be taken away by legislation unless by exercise of eminent domain or police power.

Limited in Deadwood C. R. Co. v. Barker, 14 S. D. 571, 86 N. W. 619, sustaining right of landowner to cut off, by adjoining well, supply of percolating water appropriated on public lands.

Distinguished in Crescent Min. Co. v. Silver King Min. Co. 17 Utah, 456, 76 Am. St. Rep. 810, 54 Pac. 244, holding that appropriator of waters from artificial lake on public land acquires no prescriptive right to percolating waters drained from tunnel.

Acquiring rights in public lands by location.

Cited in Bear Lake & River Waterworks & Irrig. Co. v. Garland, 164 U. S. 19, 41 L. ed. 334, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7, holding contractor's lien filed before completion of irrigation canal across public lands superior to antecedent mortgage.

30 L. R. A. 189, DE HASS v. DIBERT, 17 C. C. A. 79, 28 U. S. App. 559, 70 Fed. 227.

Negotiability of note.

Cited in Benny v. Dunn, 26 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 383, 2 Lack. Legal News, 138, holding note containing provision for sale of stock collateral in case of depreciation before maturity, nonnegotiable.

Usury in agreement for interest after maturity.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 552) on usury in agreement for interest after maturity.

30 L. R. A. 193, HARTFORD F. INS. CO. v. CHICAGO, M. & ST. P. R. CO. 17 C. C. A. 62, 36 U. S. App. 152, 70 Fed. 201.

When state decisions binding on Federal courts.

Reversed on this point in 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. ed. 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33, holding state decision as to validity of contract against liability for negligence conclusive on Federal courts.

Cited in Speer v. Kearney County, 32 C. C. A. 114, 60 U. S. App. 38, 88 Fed. 762, holding decision of state, not conclusive upon Federal, court as to effect of invalidity of act creating township on town warrants; Clapp v. Otoe County, 45 C. C. A. 582, 104 Fed. 477, holding decision of state, not obligatory on Federal courts as to effect of invalidity of municipal action on bonds issued pursuant thereto; Independent School Dist. v. Rew, 55 L. R. A. 372, 49 C. C. A. 207, 111 Fed. 11, holding state decisions as to validity of municipal bonds not controlling in Federal courts; Manship v. New South Bldg. & L. Asso. 110 Fed. 859, holding Federal court not bound by decision of state courts as to law governing loan by loan association of another state.

Stipulations against liability for negligence.

Cited in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 148 Ind. 200, 40 L. R. A. 104, footnote p. 191, 62 Am. St. Rep. 503, 46 N. E. 917, holding assumption of risks of employer's negligence by express contract not against public policy; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Keefer, 146 Ind. 31, 38 L. R. A. 95, 58 Am. St. Rep. 348, 44 N. E. 796, sustaining provision in contract with express company exempting railroad from liability to messenger; South Carolina & G. R. Co. v. Carolina, C. G. & C. R. Co. 93 Fed. 559, upholding stipulation against liability for negligence of employees in contract by one railroad to operate another.

— In railroad leases against liability for fire.

Cited in Northern P. R. Co. v. McClure, 9 N. D. 81, 47 L. R. A. 153, 81 N. W. 52, holding that covenant by railroad's lessee to indemnify against damages by fire from engines passes to transferee of railroad; Ordelheide v. Wabash R. Co. 80 Mo. App. 367; American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 74 Mo. App. 102, sustaining release of damages by fire to buildings on land leased from railroad; Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 112 Ky. 604, 56 L. R. A. 479, footnote p. 477, 99 Am. St. Rep. 313, 66 S. W. 411, and Ordelheide v. Wabash R. Co. 175 Mo. 346, 75 S. W. 149, sustaining contract releasing company from liability for injury by fire to building permitted to be placed on right of way.

Burden of showing contract against public policy.

Cited in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 148 Ind. 201, 40 L. R. A. 104, 62 Am. St. Rep. 503, 46 N. E. 917, holding burden of showing contract against public policy on party asserting.

30 L. R. A. 201, HANNA v. STATE TRUST CO. 16 C. C. A. 586, 36 U. S. App. 61, 70 Fed. 2.

Power to make debts preferred liens.

Cited in Doe v. Northwestern Coal & Transp. Co. 78 Fed. 73, holding certificates issued by receiver of private corporation not entitled to priority as against non-consenting lienors; Baltimore Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Alderson, 32 C. C. A. 545, 61 U. S. App. 636, 90 Fed. 145, holding receiver's certificates not issuable to complete hotel without consent of creditors whose liens affected; Ford v. Central Trust Co. 17 C. C. A. 33, 36 U. S. App. 203, 70 Fed. 145, refusing to authorize receiver to recognize claim for materials and services in extending waterworks as paramount to prior mortgage; International Trust Co. v. United Coal Co. 27 Colo. 257, 83 Am. St. Rep. 59, 60 Pac. 621, holding that expenses of receiver operating coal mine cannot be given priority over mortgage; Belknap Sav. Bank v. Lamar Land & Canal Co. 28 Colo. 342, 64 Pac. 212, holding certificate of receiver of irrigation company inferior to liens of nonconsenting bondholders; United States Invest. Corp. v. Portland Hospital, 40 Or. 533, 56 L. R. A. 629, footnote p. 627, 67 Pac. 194, denying authority of receiver for continuing operation of hospital to contract debts taking precedence over prior claims; Grove v. Grove, 93 Fed. 871, holding (obiter) consent of lienholders indispensable to issuance of certificates by receiver of private corporation; Drennen v. Mercantile Trust & D. Co. 115 Ala. 630, 39 L. R. A. 634, footnote p. 623, 67 Am. St. Rep. 72, 23 So. 164 (dissenting opinion), majority holding employee of manufacturing or mining company entitled to priority for wages earned within six months before receiver appointed; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Doud, 52 L. R. A. 497, 44 C. C. A. 416, 105 Fed. 150 (dissenting opinion), majority denying priority over mortgage of loan to make addition to plant of electric railway, light, and power company.

Cited in footnotes to Whitely v. Central Trust Co. 34 L. R. A. 303, which holds preference to railroad mortgages not gained by paying judgment for damages against company by surety on supersedeas bond; St. Louis Trust Co. v. Riley, 30 L. R. A. 456, which denies right to prefer claim for personal injuries over mortgage debt in receiver's earnings.

30 L. R. A. 206, FIDELITY & C. CO. v. JOHNSON, 72 Miss. 333, 17 So. 2.

What constitutes accident.

Cited in American Acci. Co. v. Carson, 99 Ky. 445, 34 L. R. A. 302, footnote p. 301, 59 Am. St. Rep. 473, 36 S. W. 169, holding intentional killing of insured by third person an accident; Campbell v. Fidelity & C. Co. 109 Ky. 670, 60 S. W. 492, holding death caused by being shot by another in self-defense, accidental, within meaning of policy; Railway Officials & E. Acci. Asso. v. Drummond, 56 Neb. 242, 76 N. W. 562, holding death of insured shot by footpads, accidental; Feder v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Asso. 107 Iowa, 540, 43 L. R. A. 694, footnote p. 693, 70 Am. St. Rep. 212, 78 N. W. 252, holding death by rupture of artery while reaching over chair to close shutters, not accidental.

Cited in footnotes to Atlanta Acci. Asso. v. Alexander, 42 L. R. A. 188, which holds death from hernia from sudden and accidental strain not within clause exempting insurer from death resulting from hernia; Fetter v. Fidelity & C. Co. 61 L. R. A. 459, which holds death from rupture of cancerous kidney covered by accident policy; Horsfall v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 63 L. R. A. 425, which holds dilation of heart resulting in death within few weeks, caused by heavy lift, covered by accident policy; Maryland Casualty Co. v. Hudgins, 64 L. R. A. 349, which holds death by accidentally eating spoiled oysters within clause of policy exempting from injuries from poison or anything accidentally or otherwise taken or absorbed; Brown v. Sun L. Ins. Co. 51 L. R. A. 252, which sustains recovery on policy of one whose death caused by taking over dose of morphine; Delaney v. Modern Accident Club, 63 L. R. A. 603, which holds death from blood poisoning received through slight wound as result of accidental injury covered by accident policy; Preferred Acci. Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 61 L. R. A. 145, which denies right to recover under accident policy for inflammation of eyes from accidental contact with poison ivy; Railway Officials & E. Acci. Asso. v. Johnson, 52 L. R. A. 401, which holds death by sunstroke while in line of employment covered by accident policy; Smith v. Etna L. Ins. Co. 56 L. R. A. 272, which holds injury by fall from steps of moving train covered by policy; Fidelity & C. Co. v. Waterman, 32 L. R. A. 654, which holds death from breathing illuminating gas while asleep covered by policy; Menneiley v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. 31 L. R. A. 686, which holds death by inhaling illuminating gas while asleep covered by accident policy; Kasten v. Interstate Casualty Co. 40 L. R. A. 651, which holds death caused by blood poisoning from germs in cotton used by dentist covered by accident policy; Modern Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Shryock, 39 L. R. A. 826, which holds question whether accident or disease caused death of insured for jury; Burt v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 59 L. R. A. 393, which denies right to recover on policy on life of innocent person executed after conviction of capital offense.

30 L. R. A. 209, LOVELACE v. TRAVELERS' PROTECTIVE ASSO. 126 Mo. 104, 47 Am. St. Rep. 638, 28 S. W. 877.

Death by accident.

Cited in American Acci. Co. v. Carson, 99 Ky. 445, 34 L. R. A. 302, 59 Am. St. Rep. 473, 36 S. W. 169, holding intentional killing of insured by another, accident within meaning of policy and referring particularly to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 209; Union Casualty & Surety Co. v. Harroll, 98 Tenn. 595, 60 Am. St. Rep. 873, 40 S. W. 1080, holding killing of insured while quarreling with person, not knowing him armed, accidental; Collins v. Fidelity & C. Co. 63 Mo. App. 257, holding shooting of insured while in controversy with another, accidental injury; Railway Officials & E. Acci. Asso. v. Drummond, 56 Neb. 241, 76 N. W. 562, holding death of insured shot by robber, accidental; Carnes v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Asso. 106 Iowa, 285, 68 Am. St. Rep. 306, 76 N. W. 683, holding death by mistaken overdose of morphine, accidental; otherwise when effect of dose misjudged; Hester v. Fidelity & C. Co. 69 Mo. App. 191, holding it a question for the jury whether injuries sustained from gunshot wound in quarrel were accidental.

Distinguished in Taliaferro v. Travelers' Protective Asso. 25 C. C. A. 496, 49 U. S. App. 275, 80 Fed. 370, holding death of insured attacking adversary with pistol not accidental.

Annotation in 30 L. R. A. 209, referred to particularly in Peele v. Provident Fund Soc. 147 Ind. 549, 44 N. E. 661, holding involuntary death by drowning, death by accident.

Voluntary exposure to risk.

Cited in Hester v. Fidelity & C. Co. 78 Mo. App. 509, denying liability on accident policy for death of insured persisting in quarrel, knowing person armed; Union Casualty & Surety Co. v. Harroll, 98 Tenn. 598, 60 Am. St. Rep. 873, 40 S. W. 1080, holding insured's advancing toward apparently unarmed adversary after warning, not voluntary exposure.

30 L. R. A. 214, TUTTLE v. BURGETT, 53 Ohio St. 498, 53 Am. St. Rep. 649, 42 N. E. 427.

Rights under deed in consideration of agreement to support.

Cited in footnote to Glocke v. Glocke, 57 L. R. A. 458, which holds land conveyed by aged parent to son promising to support him, reverts to former on breach of agreement.

Parol evidence varying written instrument.

Cited in First Nat. Bank v. Central Chandelier Co. 17 Ohio C. C. 447, holding prior oral declarations of parties inadmissible to show purpose not expressed in ambiguous instrument; Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Board of Education, 49 W. Va. 377, 38 S. E. 679, holding parol evidence of contemporaneous agreement contradicting written submission of controversy inadmissible; Harness v. Eastern Oil Co. 49 W. Va. 248, 38 S. E. 662, holding parol evidence of contemporaneous agreement not to assign lease inadmissible.

30 L. R. A. 218, STATE ex rel. SCHWARTZ v. FERRIS, 53 Ohio St. 314, 41 N. E. 579.

Power of taxation for general revenue.

Cited in Dyer v. Hagerty, 12 Ohio C. C. 607, sustaining collateral inheritance tax for general revenue; Alter v. Cincinnati, 56 Ohio St. 68, 35 L. R. A. 742, 46 N. E. 69, sustaining statute applying water rents to general revenue; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 593, 64 N. E. 564, sustaining corporate franchise tax for general revenue.

Constitutional requirement that general laws operate uniformly.

Cited in State v. Spellmire, 67 Ohio St. 82, 65 N. E. 619, holding act creating special school district unconstitutional.

"Equal protection" clause of Constitution.

Cited in Williams v. Donough, 65 Ohio St. 506, 56 L. R. A. 769, 63 N. E. 84, holding statute exempting benefits rendered by fraternal organizations from seizure for debt, unconstitutional; Mykrantz v. Globe Bldg. & Loan Assn. 19 Ohio C. C. 57, holding act exempting loan associations from usury laws unconstitutional; Palmer v. Tingle, 55 Ohio St. 445, 45 N. E. 313, holding act giving lien on owner's property to subcontractors, laborers, and materialmen, unconstitutional; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 594, 64 N. E. 564, sustaining state's power to reasonably tax corporate franchise.

Distinguished in Snell v. Cincinnati Street R. Co. 60 Ohio St. 270, 54 N. E. 270. Affirming 16 Ohio C. C. 634, sustaining validity of statute providing for change of venue from county where corporation having more than fifty shareholders has principal office.

Succession taxes.

Cited in Black v. State, 113 Wis. 223, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522, holding succession tax on estates of $10,000 or over, without regard to amount received by individual beneficiary, unconstitutional; Union Trust Co. v. Wayne Probate Judge, 125 Mich. 492, 84 N. W. 1101, holding succession tax taxation of privilege of inheritance; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 58, 44 L. ed. 976, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, 9 Pa. Dist. R. 309, sustaining Federal succession tax; State ex rel. Garth v. Switzler, 143 Mo. 332, 40 L. R. A. 290, footnote p. 280, 65 Am. St. Rep. 653, 45 S. W. 245, holding succession tax at different rates on legacies of different amounts, invalid; State ex rel. Taylor v. Guilbert, 70 Ohio St. 248, 71 N. E. 636, holding valid, inheritance tax operating uniformly throughout state upon all persons in same category; Gelsthorpe v. Furnell, 20 Mont. 306, 39 L. R. A. 173, footnote p. 170, 51 Pac. 267, sustaining exemption, from succession tax, of estate less than $7,500; Hinds v. Wilcox, 22 Mont. 13, 55 Pac. 355, by Pigott, J., in separate opinion, holding inheritance tax on estates exceeding certain value, unconstitutional.

Cited in footnotes to Billings v. People, 59 L. R. A. 807, which sustains transfer tax on lineal descendants to whom life estate is given with remainder to lineal descendants, but exempting lineal descendants taking fee; Ferry v. Campbell, 50 L. R. A. 92, which holds succession tax void for want of notice of proceedings to fix amount of tax; Drew v. Tifft, 47 L. R. A. 525, which requires uniformity and equal application in exemption from inheritance tax; Re Cope, 45 L. R. A. 316, which holds void succession tax exempting $5,000 in each estate.

Distinguished in Hagerty v. State, 55 Ohio St. 625, 45 N. E. 1046, sustaining law imposing collateral inheritance tax on amounts exceeding constitutional exemption; Re Lacey, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 433, 6 Pa. Dist. R. 500, holding succession tax on estates in excess of certain amount constitutional; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 291, 42 L. ed. 1042, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, sustaining succession tax at different rates on legacies or shares of relatives of different degrees.

30 L. R. A. 225, HAWES v. CHICAGO, 158 Ill. 653, 42 N. E. 373.

Necessity that ordinances be reasonable.

Cited in People ex rel. Akin v. Kipley, 171 Ill. 86, 41 L. R. A. 789, 49 N. E. 229, holding ordinance extending exemption from classified service under civil service act invalid.

Cited in footnote to Slaughter v. O'Berry, 48 L. R. A. 442, which holds void, ordinance that city provide materials and do work of making sewer connections to within 3 feet of building.

What may be considered in construing statute or ordinance.

Cited in People ex rel. Akin v. Kipley, 171 Ill. 77, 41 L. R. A. 786, 49 N. E. 229, holding existing circumstances, objects sought to be obtained, and necessity for adoption to be considered in determining meaning of statute; Wice v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 193 Ill. 356, 56 L. R. A. 271, 61 N. E. 1084, holding reasonableness of ordinance prohibiting getting on or off moving trains determinable with regard to circumstances, object, and necessity.

Power of courts to review reasonableness of ordinances.

Cited in Wice v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 193 Ill. 356, 56 L. R. A. 271, 61 N. E. 1084, holding that ordinance passed under general power must be reasonable; Title Guarantee & Trust Co. v. Chicago, 162 Ill. 509, 44 N. E. 832, holding reasonableness of sewer ordinance subject to review; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Carlinville, 200 Ill. 321, 60 L. R. A. 393, 93 Am. St. Rep. 190, 65 N. E. 730, holding reasonableness of ordinance regulating speed of trains, passed under power, subject to review; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Crown Point, 146 Ind. 423, 35 L. R. A. 685, 45 N. E. 587, holding reasonableness of ordinance requiring watchman at railroad crossing subject to review; People ex rel. Gleason v. Yancey, 167 Ill. 263, 47 N. E. 521, holding (obiter) reasonableness of sidewalk ordinance subject to review.

Cited in footnote to Beiling v. Evansville, 35 L. R. A. 272, which refuses to hold void, ordinance prohibiting maintenance of slaughterhouse within city when authorized by statute.

Reasonableness of ordinances for public improvements.

Cited in Job v. Alton, 189 Ill. 267, 82 Am. St. Rep. 448, 59 N. E. 622, holding that sidewalk ordinances must be reasonable, not oppressive; McFarlane v. Chicago, 185 Ill. 252, 57 N. E. 12, holding ordinance for brick in place of good block pavement, void as unreasonable.

Distinguished in Walker v. Morgan Park, 175 Ill. 573, 51 N. E. 636, sustaining sidewalk ordinance not clearly oppressive, although no pressing demand for walk exists; Field v. Western Springs, 181 Ill. 192, 54 N. E. 929, holding requiring construction of sidewalk demanded by public convenience, not unreasonable; Myers v. Chicago, 196 Ill. 593, 63 N. E. 1037, sustaining ordinance for water-pipe extension and assessment of cost on abutting vacant lots; Chicago v. Wilson, 195 Ill. 23, 57 L. R. A. 128, footnote p. 127, 62 N. E. 843, sustaining ordinance for con-to allow inheritance by wife of husband's property, if she has once been resident of state.

30 L. R. A. 250, MISSOURI P. R. CO. v. MEEH, 16 C. C. A. 510, 32 U. S. App. 691, 69 Fed. 753.

Citizenship of corporations for jurisdictional purposes.

Cited in Bradley v. Ohio R. & C. Co. 119 N. C. 923, Appx. 78 Fed. 391, holding foreign corporation made domestic by legislative enfranchisement; Winn v. Wabash R. Co. 118 Fed. 65, holding that corporation formed by consolidating railroads becomes citizen of each of states where constituent companies domiciled; Goodwin v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 124 Fed. 369, holding corporation incorporated in Massachusetts and Connecticut not suable in Massachusetts by citizen thereof alleging it to be Connecticut corporation.

Cited as qualified in Walters v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 104 Fed. 378, holding that incorporation in another state does not change citizenship of corporation.

30 L. R. A. 255, ARGENTINE v. ATCHISON, T. & S. F. R. CO. 55 Kan. 730, 41 Pac. 946.

30 L. R. A. 257, PICKETT v. WILMINGTON & W. R. CO. 117 N. C. 616, 53 Am. St. Rep. 611, 23 S. E. 264.

Last clear chance.

Cited in Bogan v. Carolina C. R. Co. 129 N. C. 157, 55 L. R. A. 421, 39 S. E. 808, holding that contributory negligence in walking upon trestle will not defeat recovery where engineer could have avoided accident; Klockenbrink v. St. Louis & M. River R. Co. 81 Mo. App. 357, holding railway liable for collision of street car with wagon on track where motorman might have avoided accident; Fulp v. Roanoke & S. R. Co. 120 N. C. 529, 27 S. E. 74, holding instruction that failure to note approach of train in consequence of drunkenness was contributory negligence, erroneous; McCracken v. Smathers, 119 N. C. 619, 26 S. E. 157, holding that instruction that contributory negligence proximately causing injury bars recovery should be accompanied by definition of contributory negligence; Weitzman v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 33 App. Div. 596, 53 N. Y. Supp. 905, holding that negligence of motorman in not stopping car after child fell on fender should be submitted to jury; Styles v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 118 N. C. 1088, 24 S. E. 740, denying railroad's liability where caving of bank throws section hand in front of train; Baker v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 118 N. C. 1019, 24 S. E. 415, holding negligence in going to sleep on track not proximate cause of injury where engineer exercising ordinary care might have stopped train; Lloyd v. Albemarle & R. R. Co. 118 N. C. 1013, 54 Am. St. Rep. 764, 24 S. E. 805, holding railroad liable where headlight would have enabled engineer to see man on track in time; Chesson v. John L. Roper Lumber Co. 118 N. C. 68, 23 S. E. 925, holding employer liable where inspection of platform would have prevented accident; Carney v. Concord Street R. Co. 72 N. H. 371, 57 Atl. 218, denying nonliability of railway company for death of child at crossing unless fair-minded men agree in its freedom from fault; Purnell v. Raleigh & G. R. Co. 122 N. C. 844, 29 S. E. 953 (dissenting opinion), majority denying liability of railroad for death of person discovering train in time to escape by ordinary care.

Cited in footnotes to Thompson v. Salt Lake Rapid-Transit Co. 40 L. R. A.

172, which holds one having last clear chance, solely responsible for injury; Baltimore Consol. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 54 L. R. A. 424, which denies liability towards one caught between two street-cars by becoming confused after assenting to motorman's instructions as to reaching safe place; Western & A. R. Co. v. Ferguson, 54 L. R. A. 802, which holds that duty to exercise care to avoid injury from other's negligence does not arise till negligence apprehensible; Tesch v. Milwaukee Electric R. & L. Co. 53 L. R. A. 618, which denies liability for injury to one guilty of contributory negligence, notwithstanding subsequent opportunity of other party to avoid injury.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 420, 423, 444, 455, 456) on doctrine of last clear chance.

Distinguished in Doster v. Charlotte Street R. Co. 117 N. C. 663, 34 L. R. A. 486, 23 S. E. 449, denying street car company's liability for failure to stop car frightening mule not on track; Mayes v. Southern R. Co. 119 N. C. 769, 26 S. E. 148, holding that court need not charge that person going upon crossing after looking and listening was negligent if he might have seen train.

Railroad's duty to trespassers.

Cited in Cook v. Southern R. Co. 128 N. C. 335, 38 S. E. 925, holding that carrier owes ordinary care to person stealing ride; Pharr v. Southern R. Co. 119 N. C. 756, 26 S. E. 32, holding railroad liable for killing man lying near track, discoverable by engineer in exercise of ordinary care; Jeffries v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 129 N. C. 240, 39 S. E. 836, holding it carrier's duty to check train at time when child on track could first have been seen; Lindsay v. Canadian P. R. Co. 68 Vt. 566, 35 Atl. 513, holding railroad liable for killing child on track, from failure to keep reasonable lookout.

Cited in footnotes to Mason v. Southern R. Co. 53 L. R. A. 913, which holds company liable for death of child on track from failure to keep reasonable lookout; Becker v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 53 L. R. A. 268, which requires stopping to enable trespasser discovered on railroad bridge to escape; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 49 L. R. A. 99, which denies duty towards trespassers on track before discovery; Schreiner v. Great Northern R. Co. 58 L. R. A. 76, which holds failure to build fence not proximate cause of injury to one pushed on track by cow.

Duty to keep lookout.

Cited in Arrowood v. South Carolina & G. Extension R. Co. 126 N. C. 631, 36 S. E. 151, holding it railroad's duty to keep proper lookout; McClanahan v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 111 La. 792, 35 So. 902, holding failure of engineer to keep proper lookout proximate cause of injury; Lassiter v. Raleigh & G. R. Co. 133 N. C. 247, 45 S. E. 570, holding question for jury whether failure to keep lookout on moving train was proximate cause of injury.

What constitutes negligence.

Cited in Little v. Carolina C. R. Co. 118 N. C. 1076, 24 S. E. 514, holding attempt to walk across high railroad trestle negligence; Nieboer v. Detroit Electric R. Co. 128 Mich. 494, 87 N. W. 626 (dissenting opinion), majority holding person riding on rear bumper of crowded car, when he might have taken another car within few minutes, contributorily negligent.

Intoxication as affecting negligence.

Cited in Lloyd v. Albemarle & R. R. Co. 118 N. C. 1014, 54 Am. St. Rep. 764.

24 S. E. 805, holding drunkenness of man on track not concurrent negligence, where railroad's ordinary care would prevent accident.

Cited in note (40 L. R. A. 140) on intoxication as affecting negligence.

When plaintiff's negligence immaterial.

Cited in Sherrill v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 117 N. C. 361, 23 S. E. 277, holding that negligence of sender of telegram in making arrangements for delivery of answer will not excuse negligence of company in delivering to wrong person.

Measure of damages for negligent injuries.

Cited in Benton v. North Carolina R. Co. 122 N. C. 1009, 30 S. E. 333, and Coley v. Statesville, 121 N. C. 317, 28 S. E. 482, holding measure of damages for negligently causing death, present value of deceased's net income.

Distinguished in Coley v. North Carolina R. Co. 128 N. C. 542, 57 L. R. A. 830, 39 S. E. 43, holding "present cash value" of injury, considering pain and mental suffering, proper measure of damages.

New trials on restricted issues.

Cited in Strother v. Aberdeen & A. R. Co. 123 N. C. 200, 31 S. E. 386, granting new trial on issue of damages, on reversal for errors affecting damages only; Benton v. Collins, 125 N. C. 90, 47 L. R. A. 37, 34 S. E. 242, sustaining power of superior court to order new trial on issue of damages, where verdict inadequate.

Exceptions to court's framing of issues.

Cited in Williams v. Gill, 122 N. C. 968, 29 S. E. 879, holding that party excepting must show himself injured by exercise of court's discretion in framing issues.

Distinguished in Nathan v. Charlotte Street R. Co. 118 N. C. 1070, 24 S. E. 511, and Baker v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 118 N. C. 1023, 24 S. E. 415, holding refusal to submit issue involving question whether defendant's or plaintiff's negligence was proximate cause of injury, error.

30 L. R. A. 261, COMMERCIAL & F. BANK v. WORTH, 117 N. C. 146, 23 S. E. 160.

Authority of legislative committee.

Cited in Purnell v. Worth, 117 N. C. 157, 30 L. R. A. 263, 23 S. E. 161, denying authority of legislative investigating committee to employ counsel under provision for necessary expenses.

Claims for which no appropriation exists.

Cited in Garner v. Worth, 122 N. C. 253, 29 S. E. 364, denying mandamus for payment of claim for which no appropriation exists; State ex rel. White v. Hill, 125 N. C. 200, 34 S. E. 432, by Clark, J., dissenting, who holds auditor's warrant no protection to treasurer paying claim for which no appropriation made.

30 L. R. A. 262, PURNELL v. WORTH, 117 N. C. 157, 23 S. E. 161.

Rights of legislative committee.

Cited in footnote to Commercial & Farmers' Bank v. Worth, 30 L. R. A. 261, which denies right of legislative committee to draw per diem or mileage after legislature adjourns.

30 L. R. A. 263, MURPHY v. PORTRUM, 95 Tenn. 605, 32 S. W. 633.

Decrees of adoption or legitimation.

Cited in Crocker v. Balch, 104 Tenn. 8, 55 S. W. 307, holding county court decrees of adoption or legitimation not assailable collaterally except for want of jurisdiction appearing on record.

Illegitimate's right to inherit.

Cited in Laughlin v. Johnson, 102 Tenn. 460, 52 S. W. 816, holding that illegitimate shares equally with legitimates in estate of deceased sister.

Legal status of adopted children.

Cited in footnotes to Butterfield v. Sawyer, 52 L. R. A. 75, which holds adopted child within deed to woman for life, with remainder to her "child" if any, otherwise to her "heirs generally;" Hartwell v. Tefft, 34 L. R. A. 500, which holds adopted child "lawful issue" within meaning of will; Clarkson v. Hatton, 39 L. R. A. 748, which holds adopted child not within statute giving remainder to children or heirs of life tenant; Gray v. Holmes, 33 L. R. A. 207, which sustains right of inheritance of child adopted in sister state; Glascott v. Bragg, 56 L. R. A. 258, which holds will in favor of third person revoked by marriage and adoption of child.

30 L. R. A. 265, HEWITT v. STORY, 12 C. C. A. 250, 29 U. S. App. 155, 64 Fed. Rep. 510.

Rights of prior appropriators of water.

Cited in Union Mill & Min. Co. v. Dangberg, 81 Fed. 96, holding extent of appropriation of water measured by amount applied to beneficial use within reasonable time.

Cited in footnotes to Salt Lake City v. Salt Lake City Water & Electrical Power Co. 61 L. R. A. 649, which holds appropriator's right to use water not forfeited by not putting to actual use on account of opposition of prior appropriators; Ada County Farmers' Irrig. Co. v. Farmers' Canal Co. 40 L. R. A. 485, which sustains right to convey ditch reserving water right and vice versa.

Cited in notes (30 L. R. A. 676) on right of prior appropriation of water; (30 L. R. A. 389) on change of use or channel of water appropriated.

Parties to suit for infringing water rights.

Cited in Union Mill & Min. Co. v. Dangberg, 81 Fed. 87, upholding right of tenant in common to restrain infringement of water rights without joining co-tenants.

30 L. R. A. 281, KELLY v. MINNEAPOLIS, 63 Minn. 125, 65 N. W. 115.

What constitutes municipal indebtedness.

Cited in Burnham v. Milwaukee, 98 Wis. 134, 73 N. W. 1019, holding unpaid instalments for purchase of park lands not corporate indebtedness; Kronsheim v. Rochester, 76 App. Div. 499, 78 N. Y. Supp. 813, holding paving contract limiting liability to sums collected from property owners does not create municipal indebtedness; Swanson v. Ottumwa, 118 Iowa. 190, 59 L. R. A. 630, 91 N. W. 1048, holding purchase-money mortgage on waterworks accompanying bonds payable out of special tax not municipal indebtedness; Perrigo v. Milwaukee, 92 Wis. 242, 65 N. W. 1025, holding contract for purchase of park land creating no corporate liability not taxable as debt; Reynolds v. Waterville, 92 Me. 317, 42 Atl. 553 (dissenting opinion), majority holding act incorporating city hall commission imposes additional indebtedness on city.

Cited in footnote to Indianapolis v. Wann, 31 L. R. A. 743, which holds contract for street lights for five years payable monthly void.

How municipal indebtedness ascertained.

Cited in Johnson v. Pawnee County, 7 Okla. 692, 56 Pac. 701, holding existing indebtedness ascertained by deducting available county assets from total indebtedness; Stone v. Chicago, 207 Ill. 510, 69 N. E. 970, holding amount in treasurer's hands applicable to sinking fund deductible from amount of city's bonded indebtedness in estimating amount thereof.

30 L. R. A. 286, GERMANIA BANK v. MICHAUD, 62 Minn. 459, 54 Am. St. Rep. 653, 65 N. W. 70.

30 L. R. A. 290, INDIANA, I. & I. R. CO. v. SWANNELL, 157 Ill. 616, 41 N. E. 989.

Following trust property.

Cited in First Nat. Bank v. Leech, 207 Ill. 220, 69 N. E. 890, holding that bank acquiring land from guardian with notice of its purchase with ward's money, holds as trustee for ward.

Cited in footnote to Carter v. Gibson, 52 L. R. A. 468, which holds right to pursue purchaser of trust property waived by taking judgment for price against trustee.

Purchase by trustee of lien on trust property.

Cited in footnote to Harrison v. Mulvane, 54 L. R. A. 405, which holds one charged with selling corporate stock to pay encumbrances one of which he owns, not forbidden, as trustee, to buy prior liens to protect own interests.

30 L. R. A. 297, KRANTZ v. RIO GRANDE WESTERN R. CO. 12 Utah, 104, 41 Pac. 717.

Carrier's liability for assault on passenger.

Cited in Seawell v. Carolina C. R. Co. 133 N. C. 518, 45 S. E. 850, sustaining liability of carrier for failure to extend protection to passenger against mob.

Cited in footnotes to Birmingham R. & Electric Co. v. Baird, 54 L. R. A. 752, which holds carrier liable for conductor's assault on passenger; Kohner v. Capital Traction Co. 62 L. R. A. 875, which requires carrier, when peaceable passenger on street car is unlawfully assaulted by conductor, to show that injury was result of unavoidable accident; Haver v. Central R. Co. 43 L. R. A. 84, which holds carrier liable for malicious assault by employee on passenger; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Quo, 40 L. R. A. 483, which holds carrier liable for baggage master's assault with intent to rape passenger; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Jones, 39 L. R. A. 784, which holds carrier liable for conductor's unreasonably beating passenger slapping his face; Exton v. Central R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 509, which holds carrier liable for injury to passenger at station by scuffling cabmen; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Phillio, 59 L. R. A. 392, which denies duty of carriers to protect persons, resorting to stations to aid departure of friends, from assaults by loungers; McDermott v. American Brewing Co. 52 L. R. A. 684, which denies master's liability for assault by servant to protect his own interests.

30 L. R. A. 300, COMER v. DUFOUR, 95 Ga. 376, 51 Am. St. Rep. 89, 22 S. E. 543.

Effect on drawer's liability of delay in presenting check.

Cited in Merritt v. Gate City Nat. Bank, 100 Ga. 150, 38 L. R. A. 750, 27 S. E. 979, holding drawer of check not absolved from liability thereon where no loss results from delay in presentment.

30 L. R. A. 303, BLY v. NASHUA STREET R. CO. 67 N. H. 474, 68 Am. St. Rep. 681, 32 Atl. 764.

Rights of street railroad.

Cited in Smith v. Nashua Street R. Co. 69 N. H. 504, 44 Atl. 133, holding street railway liable for injury to traveler from snow bank made in clearing tracks; Little v. Boston & M. R. Co. 72 N. H. 503, 57 Atl. 920, holding street railway bound to exercise due care toward traveler negligently upon crossing.

Effect of violating ordinance on liability.

Cited in Lane v. Concord, 70 N. H. 487, 85 Am. St. Rep. 643, 49 Atl. 687, holding proof of violation of ordinance forbidding dumping rubbish not conclusive as to nuisance; Bresnehan v. Gove, 71 N. H. 239, 51 Atl. 916, holding evidence of unlawful speed not conclusive as to negligence.

Cited in footnote to Evansville Street R. Co. v. Gentry, 37 L. R. A. 378, which holds running electric car at unusually rapid rate over much frequented crossing negligence.

30 L. R. A. 305, HILES v. FISHER, 144 N. Y. 306, 43 Am. St. Rep. 762, 39 N. E. 337.

Right to usufruct of estate by entirety.

Cited in Messing v. Messing, 64 App. Div. 127, 71 N. Y. Supp. 717, sustaining right of tenant by entirety to accounting of rents and profits.

Disapproved in Dickey v. Converse, 117 Mich. 453, 72 Am. St. Rep. 568, 76 N. W. 80, holding crops on land held by entireties not subject to execution against one tenant.

Tenancy by entireties.

Cited in Branch v. Polk, 61 Ark. 393, 30 L. R. A. 329, 54 Am. St. Rep. 266, 33 S. W. 424, holding separate mortgages of half interests by tenants by entirety give lien on half interest only upon husband's death; Grosser v. Rochester, 148 N. Y. 238, 42 N. E. 672, sustaining right of wife holding by entirety to restrain construction of sewer across premises under condemnation award to husband; Howell v. Folsom, 38 Or. 187, 84 Am. St. Rep. 785, 63 Pac. 116, sustaining wife's right to mortgage separate interest in land held by entirety; Toole v. Oneida County, 13 App. Div. 474, 37 N. Y. Supp. 9, Affirming 16 Misc. 656, 37 N. Y. Supp. 9, holding wife's interest as tenant by entirety assessable; Laird v. Perry, 74 Vt. 462, 59 L. R. A. 342, footnote p. 340, 52 Atl. 1040, holding estate by entireties, except wife's right of survivorship, passes by husband's assignment for creditors; Messing v. Messing, 64 App. Div. 126, 71 N. Y. Supp. 717, holding land deeded to woman and affianced husband "as joint tenants" cannot be partitioned; Fulper v. Fulper, 54 N. J. Eq. 433, 32 L. R. A. 702, footnote p. 701, 55 Am. St. Rep. 590, 34 Atl. 1063, holding tenancy in common created by deed to husband and wife as "tenants in common;" McCallister v. Folden, 110 Ky.

736, 62 S. W. 538, holding deed to husband and wife "during their natural lives" provides for right of survivorship within statutory exception.

Cited in footnotes to Simons v. Bollinger, 48 L. R. A. 234, which holds estate by entireties created by deed to husband and wife "jointly;" Johnston v. Johnston, 61 L. R. A. 166, which holds estate by entirety not created by giving note secured by deed of trust to husband and wife for loan part of which advanced by each; Price v. Planters' Nat. Bank, 32 L. R. A. 214, which holds liability of wife's equitable statutory estate for her debts not terminated by her death.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 315) on tenancy by entireties.

Disapproved in McNeeley v. South Penn Oil Co. 52 W. Va. 628, 62 L. R. A. 570, 44 S. E. 508, holding survivorship in estates by entireties abolished by statute.

30 L. R. A. 315, COLE MFG. CO. v. COLLIER, 95 Tenn. 115, 49 Am. St. Rep. 921, 31 S. W. 1000.

Tenancy by entireties.

Cited in footnote to Re Parry, 49 L. R. A. 444, which holds estate by entireties created by letter of credit in favor of husband and wife purchased with former's money.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 308, 315, 319) on tenancy by entireties.

Distinguished in Hamilton Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Patton, 105 Tenn. 410, 58 S. W. 482, holding wife joining husband in mortgage of estate by entireties cannot be dispossessed under stipulation therein upon notice to husband.

30 L. R. A. 320, BROWN v. BARABOO, 90 Wis. 151, 62 N. W. 921.

Tenancy of husband and wife.

Second appeal in 98 Wis. 284, 74 N. W. 223, holding that father and mother of deceased intestate take as tenants in common.

Cited in Fiedler v. Howard, 99 Wis. 394, 67 Am. St. Rep. 865, 75 N. W. 163, holding note and mortgage running to husband and wife go to survivor; Fulper v. Fulper, 54 N. J. Eq. 435, 32 L. R. A. 703, 55 Am. St. Rep. 590, 34 Atl. 1063, holding tenancy in common created by deed to husband and wife "as tenants in common;" Citizens Loan & T. Co. v. Witte, 116 Wis. 63, 92 N. W. 443, holding common-law rule as to rights of husband and wife in real estate held as tenants in the entirety, modified by statute enlarging rights of married women.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 316) on tenancy by entireties.

Distinguished in Wallace v. St. John, 119 Wis. 590, 97 N. W. 197, holding that conveyance to husband and wife makes them joint tenants with right in wife to convey as though unmarried.

30 L. R. A. 324, BRANCH v. POLK, 61 Ark. 388, 54 Am. St. Rep. 266, 33 S. W. 424.

Effect of conveyance to husband and wife.

Cited in Simpson v. Biffle, 63 Ark. 301, 38 S. W. 345, holding that sale on execution against husband of lands conveyed to husband and wife does not divest wife's right of possession.

Effect of enabling acts.

Cited in Howell v. Folsom, 38 Or. 187, 84 Am. St. Rep. 785, 63 Pac. 116, sustaining validity of wife's mortgage of land held by entirety, and referring particularly to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 324; Kies v. Young, 64 Ark. 385, 62 Am. St. Rep. 198, 42 S. W. 669, holding husband liable for wife's antenuptial debts.

30 L. R. A. 331, ROBINSON'S APPEAL, 88 Me. 17, 51 Am. St. Rep. 367, 33 Atl. 652.

Effect of enabling acts.

Cited in Morrison v. Clark, 89 Me. 105, 56 Am. St. Rep. 395, 35 Atl. 1034, and Helvie v. Hoover, 11 Okla. 693, 69 Pac. 958, holding deed to husband and wife creates tenancy in common; McNeeley v. South Penn Oil Co. 52 W. Va. 627, 62 L. R. A. 569, 44 S. E. 508, and Armstrong v. Johnson, 93 Mo. App. 501, 67 S. W. 733, holding common-law rule of survivorship as applied to husband and wife abolished by enabling acts, the latter referring particularly to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 331.

Partition between life tenant and remainderman.

Cited in footnote to Love v. Blauw, 48 L. R. A. 257, which holds void on collateral attack partition decree made on petition showing plaintiff only life tenant.

30 L. R. A. 336, BIGELOW v. NICKERSON, 17 C. C. A. 1, 34 U. S. App. 261, 70 Fed. 113.

Actions for death from negligent collision of vessels.

Cited in The Onoko, 47 C. C. A. 112, 107 Fed. 986, holding statute making vessel liable for damages to person or property does not give lien in favor of next of kin of persons negligently killed; Chicago Transit Co. v. Campbell, 110 Ill. App. 370, holding law of state applicable in action for death from negligent collision upon high seas within its jurisdiction.

Limit of state sovereignty on seas.

Distinguished in Carlson v. United New York Sandy Hook Pilots' Asso. 93 Fed. 472, raising, without deciding, question whether state jurisdiction extends to exterior boundary for application of rules for harbor navigation beyond 3-mile limit.

Jurisdiction of Federal courts.

Cited in Williams v. Crabb, 59 L. R. A. 429, 54 C. C. A. 217, 117 Fed. 195, holding equity suit to set aside probated will maintainable in Federal courts.

Failure to choose best way of escape from danger.

Cited in The Marguerite, 87 Fed. 955, holding vessel not at fault for unwise maneuver under extreme danger.

Care required from passing vessels.

Cited in The E. Luckenbach, 35 C. C. A. 631, 93 Fed. 844, holding enhanced degree of caution required from tug with tow passing sailing vessel.

Number of actions for same wrongful act.

Cited in Sweetland v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. 117 Mich. 343, 43 L. R. A. 573, 75 N. W. 1066, court divided as to whether actions maintainable for pain and suffering and for loss occasioned to heirs of person negligently killed.

30 L. R. A. 345, MYERS v. HOLBORN, 58 N. J. L. 193, 55 Am. St. Rep. 606, 33 Atl. 389.

Physician's liability for malpractice.

Cited in Keller v. Lewis, 65 Ark. 580, 47 S. W. 755, holding doctor not liable for negligence of another to whom case turned over.

Cited in note (37 L. R. A. 834) on degree of care and skill which physician or surgeon must exercise.

Liability of employer furnishing physician to employee.

Cited in Haggerty v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 100 Mo. App. 449, 74 S. W. 456, denying liability of railroad company for malpractice of physician furnished to care for employees unless there was want of care in his selection.

Action for causing person's death.

Cited in Consolidated Traction Co. v. Hone, 60 N. J. L. 445, 38 Atl. 759, holding funeral expenses not recoverable under statute giving right of action for causing person's death.

30 L. R. A. 346, ERMENTROUT v. GIRARD F. & M. INS. CO. 63 Minn. 305, 56 Am. St. Rep. 485, 65 N. W. 635.

What losses covered by insurance.

Cited in Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Ins. Co. v. Sonneborn, 96 Md. 629, 54 Atl. 610, holding damage by automatic sprinkler proximate result of boiler explosion.

Cited in footnote to Leonard v. Orient Ins. Co. 54 L. R. A. 706, which authorizes recovery for insured building destroyed by fire breaking out immediately after one corner knocked down by explosion in neighboring building.

Failure to give notice or proofs of loss or death.

Cited in California Sav. Bank v. American Surety Co. 87 Fed. 123, holding condition in surety bond that claim be made as soon as practicable after discovering loss, precedent to recovery; Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Pratt, 62 Neb. 683, 55 L. R. A. 295, footnote p. 291, 89 Am. St. Rep. 777, 87 N. W. 546, holding failure to give notice of injury excused by derangement of insured; Granite Bldg. Co. v. Saville, 101 Va. 223, 43 S. E. 351, upholding provision in indemnity bond limiting time within which claims may be made thereunder.

Cited in footnotes to Foster v. Fidelity & C. Co. 40 L. R. A. 833, which holds twenty-nine days' delay in giving notice of accident fatal under policy requiring immediate notice; Peabody v. Satterlee, 52 L. R. A. 956, which requires reception, not mere mailing, of statement as to time and origin of fire, within time specified; Munz v. Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 62 L. R. A. 485, which holds insurer not released from liability for failure to furnish notice and proofs of death within required time where beneficiary did not learn of death or of policy within such time.

Distinguished in Mason v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 82 Minn. 339, 83 Am. St. Rep. 433, 85 N. W. 13, holding, in absence of express provision, failure to furnish proofs of loss within specified time does not invalidate policy; Partridge v. Milwaukee Mechanics' Ins. Co. 13 App. Div. 528, 43 N. Y. Supp. 632, holding immediate written notice of loss unnecessary where local agent notified company.

Power of insurance agent to bind company.

Cited in Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Myers, 62 Ohio St. 541, 49 L. R. A. 764, 57 N. E. 458, denying local soliciting agent's authority to waive written notice of accident contrary to stipulation in policy; Cyrenius v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 18 App. Div. 605, 46 N. Y. Supp. 549, holding that agent receiving application and premium and delivering policy cannot waive condition requiring cash payment; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. New Mexico Lumber Co. 10 Colo. App. 235, 51 Pac. 174, denying local agent's authority to compromise claim repudiated by company.

Cited in footnote to Hall v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 51 L. R. A. 288, which holds admissions by insurance agent after death of insured, that all premiums paid, binding on company.

Not followed in Nickell v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 144 Mo. 425, 46 S. W. 166, sustaining authority of local agent's signing policies and collecting premiums to waive proof of loss.

Waiver of proof of loss.

Cited in Hart v. Fraternal Alliance, 108 Wis. 496, 84 N. W. 851, holding insurer's denial of liability after expiration of time to furnish proofs of death not waiver of defects in proofs.

30 L. R. A. 351, HOADLEY v. PURIFOY, 107 Ala. 276, 18 So. 220.

Restrictions on business of foreign insurance companies.

Cited in footnotes to People ex rel. Traders' F. Ins. Co. v. Van Cleave, 47 L. R. A. 795, which sustains right of foreign insurance company to license when it has complied with statutory requirements regardless of similarity of name to that of domestic corporation; Bankers' L. Ins. Co. v. Howland, 57 L. R. A. 374, which denies insurance commissioners' power to question foreign company's mode of computing reserve set forth in statement for license.

30 L. R. A. 354, BUCKNER v. LYNIP, 22 Nev. 426, 41 Pac. 762.

Appeals in contested election cases.

Cited in Sweeney v. Karsky, 25 Nev. 201, 58 Pac. 813, holding undertaking on appeal in contested election cases regulated by civil practice act.

Marks distinguishing ballots.

Cited in Dennis v. Caughlin, 22 Nev. 457, 29 L. R. A. 733, 58 Am. St. Rep. 761, 41 Pac. 768, holding erasure or inadvertent mark does not invalidate ballot; Slaymaker v. Phillips, 5 Wyo. 491, 47 L. R. A. 855, 42 Pac. 1049 (dissenting opinion), majority holding ballot not officially stamped nor bearing judge's initials, void.

Cited in footnotes to Jennings v. Brown, 34 L. R. A. 45, which holds legality of ballot not destroyed by addition of party name after candidate's name; Parker v. Orr, 30 L. R. A. 227, which holds provision as to marking ballot with a cross not mandatory.

Limited in Sweeney v. Hjul, 23 Nev. 428, 48 Pac. 1036, holding ballots with stub and number attached illegal.

30 L. R. A. 360, GRIGGS v. DOCTER, 89 Wis. 161, 46 Am. St. Rep. 824, 61 N. W. 761.

Injunctions against judgments.

Cited in notes (31 L. R. A. 758) on injunction against judgments for defenses existing prior to their rendition; (32 L. R. A. 323, 324) on general equitable jurisdiction in regard to injunctions against judgments.

Garnishment.

Cited in Leeman v. McGrath, 116 Wis. 52, 92 N. W. 425, holding actionable abuse of process not shown by unsuccessful attempt at garnishment made in another state in order to evade exemption laws.

30 L. R. A. 364, REIMERS v. SEATCO MFG. CO. 17 C. C. A. 228, 37 U. S. App. 426, 70 Fed. Rep. 573.

Protection of nonresident creditor against garnishment.

Cited in Ashley v. Quintard, 90 Fed. 92, holding nonresident's stock not garnishable in state where foreign corporation does business; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 487, 41 L. R. A. 333, footnote p. 331, 72 Am. St. Rep. 181, 23 So. 825, holding garnishment of debt due nonresident not personally served in state, invalid.

Cited in footnotes to Hawley v. Hurd, 52 L. R. A. 195, which sustains discrimination between banks in and out of state as to attachment of negotiable paper; Ward v. Boyce, 36 L. R. A. 549, which holds trustee process in other state to reach note held by nonresident not personally served, ineffectual; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Rogers, 62 L. R. A. 178, which holds nonresident summoned as garnishee while temporarily within state not subject to further proceedings unless he has property within state.

Situs of debt for purpose of garnishment.

Cited in Swedish-American Nat. Bank v. Bleecker, 72 Minn. 390, 42 L. R. A. 287, 71 Am. St. Rep. 492, 75 N. W. 740, and Morawetz v. Sun Ins. Office, 96 Wis. 180, 65 Am. St. Rep. 43, 71 N. W. 109, holding loss occurring in another state, payable by foreign insurance company to nonresident, not garnishable; Strause Bros. v. Aetna F. Ins. Co. 126 N. C. 229, 48 L. R. A. 454, footnote p. 452, 35 S. E. 471, holding debt of insurance company of one state for loss in other state without situs for garnishment purposes in third state where company has agent; Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L. R. A. 124, footnote p. 120, 46 C. C. A. 136, 107 Fed. 43, holding right to garnish debtor not limited to situs of chose in action.

Cited in footnote to Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 36 L. R. A. 640, which authorizes garnishment of foreign corporation for debt due nonresident.

Distinguished in Mooney v. Buford & G. Mfg. Co. 18 C. C. A. 429, 34 U. S. App. 581, 72 Fed. 40, authorizing garnishment of foreign insurance company for debt due nonresident.

30 L. R. A. 368, SMITH v. GERMAN INS. CO. 107 Mich. 270, 65 N. W. 236.

Disqualification of juror for interest.

Cited in footnote to Reed v. Peacock, 49 L. R. A. 423, which holds Odd Fellow not disqualified as juror in action by Odd Fellow of other lodge.

Forfeiture of policy by employment of mechanics.

Cited in footnote to German Ins. Co. v. Hearne, 59 L. R. A. 492, which holds rubbing and polishing woodwork, etc., within provisions avoiding policy if mechanics engaged in repairing.

Waiver of cause of forfeiture.

Cited in Power v. Monitor Ins. Co. 121 Mich. 368, 80 N. W. 111, holding forfeiture for double insurance waived by declining to pay loss on other grounds; Hilt v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 110 Mich. 523, 68 N. W. 300, holding provision that policy not binding unless insured sound at date thereof waived by collecting premiums after discovering insured's sickness.

Keeping prohibited articles on insured premises.

Cited in Adair v. Southern Mut. Ins. Co. 107 Ga. 301, 45 L. R. A. 206, 73 Am. St. Rep. 122, 33 S. E. 78, holding that stipulation in policy against change in use of insured premises does not apply to temporary use.

Cited in footnotes to Heron v. Phoenix Mut. F. Ins. Co. 36 L. R. A. 517, which holds policy avoided by taking fireworks into residence for use in celebrating on following evening; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Wade, 58 L. R. A. 714, which holds policy not avoided by bringing gallon of gasoline on premises for temporary use though causing their destruction.

Distinguished in Boyer v. Grand Rapids F. Ins. Co. 124 Mich. 459, 83 Am. St. Rep. 338, 83 N. W. 124, holding insurance avoided by storing on premises small quantity of gasoline for stove.

30 L. R. A. 379, HAND v. OSGOOD, 107 Mich. 55, 61 Am. St. Rep. 312, 64 N. W. 867.

30 L. R. A. 380, LEVY BROS. v. CHICAGO NAT. BANK, 158 Ill. 88, 42 N. E. 129.

Followed without discussion in Levy v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 158 Ill. 258, 42 N. E. 134.

Computation of dividends on secured claims.

Cited in State Sav. Loan & T. Co. v. Stewart, 65 Ill. App. 399, holding secured creditor entitled to have dividends computed on amount unpaid at time of filing claim; Wheeler v. Walton & W. Co. 72 Fed. 968, holding creditor not required to exhaust remedy upon collateral before receiving dividend; Friedlander v. Fenton, 180 Ill. 317, 72 Am. St. Rep. 207, 54 N. E. 329, holding creditor secured by real-estate mortgage may levy on goods without first foreclosing; Whitbeck v. Ramsay, 74 Ill. App. 544, holding collaterals collected after claim filed against estate need not be deducted prior to judgment.

Cited in footnote to Sacramento Bank v. Pacific Bank, 45 L. R. A. 863, which holds creditor of insolvent bank receiving part of claim from dividends and also by enforcing stockholder's liability entitled to have subsequent dividends computed on original claim.

Distinguished in effect in Merrill v. National Bank, 173 U. S. 137, 43 L. ed. 642, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360, holding secured creditor entitled to dividends on claim as of time of declaration of insolvency without crediting collaterals; Ramsay v. Ramsay, 196 Ill. 186, 63 N. E. 618, Affirming 97 Ill. App. 275, denying preference to foreign creditors as to decedent's assets in state where they reside.

Rights of creditors of insolvent.

Cited in Taylor v. Seiter, 100 Ill. App. 666, holding rights of creditors in insolvent estate become vested on proving claims; Weir v. Mowe, 182 Ill. 450, 55 N. E. 530, Affirming 81 Ill. App. 300, holding general creditors proving claims not bound by decree awarding preference when not made parties; Higinbotham v. Chicago Title & T. Co. 182 Ill. 74, 54 N. E. 1012, holding that court cannot discontinue assignment proceedings before expiration of time for filing claims.

Pledgee's right to sell collateral.

Cited in Powell v. Ong, 92 Ill. App. 97, holding that pledgee cannot sell commercial paper in absence of special authority.

Appeals in insolvency cases.

Cited in McCune v. American Screw Co. 170 Ill. 623, 49 N. E. 209, Affirming 70 Ill. App. 633, holding that appeal lies from county to appellate court in voluntary assignment case; Brown-Chapin Lumber Co. v. Union Nat. Bank, 159 Ill. 462, 42 N. E. 967, holding that appeal lies from county to appellate court in suit to declare insolvent's transfers general assignment.

30 L. R. A. 384, McGUIRE v. BROWN, 106 Cal. 660, 39 Pac. 1060.

Diversion of water on homestead claim.

Distinguished in Senior v. Anderson, 138 Cal. 722, 72 Pac. 349, holding appropriation not invalidated by diversion on homestead land by mistake as to boundary.

Change of channel of water appropriated.

Cited in Wood v. Etiwanda Water Co. 122 Cal. 161, 54 Pac. 726, raising, without deciding, right to reconstruct abandoned flume upon enjoining use of pipe line.

Prior appropriation of water.

Cited in Salt Lake City v. Salt Lake City Water & Electrical Power Co. 24 Utah, 266, 61 L. R. A. 654, 67 Pac. 672, sustaining right of power company to use water previously appropriated, returning it to canal.

Cited in footnote to Hague v. Nephi Irrigation Co. 41 L. R. A. 311, which holds appropriation of more water than needed ineffectual to prevent subsequent appropriation of excess.

Cited in notes (30 L. R. A. 678) on right of prior appropriation of water; (30 L. R. A. 266) on abandonment or loss of rights of prior appropriators of water.

30 L. R. A. 390, HARGRAVE v. COOK, 108 Cal. 72, 41 Pac. 18.

Right of prior appropriation of water.

Cited in Bathgate v. Irvine, 126 Cal. 140, 77 Am. St. Rep. 158, 58 Pac. 442, and Crawford Co. v. Hall (Neb.) 60 L. R. A. 909, 93 N. W. 781, holding that prescriptive right to appropriate waters of stream cannot be acquired as against upper riparian owner; Cave v. Tyler, 133 Cal. 568, 65 Pac. 1089, holding that nonriparian appropriators acquire no rights in stream by prescription as against upper riparian owner; California Pastoral & Agricultural Co. v. Enterprise Canal & Land Co. 127 Fed. 742, holding that lower riparian proprietor may not divert water from above upper proprietor for use on his lands; Cardelli v. Comstock Tunnel Co. 26 Nev. 297, 66 Pac. 950, holding waters of artificial and temporary stream not subject to appropriation.

Cited in footnote to Salt Lake City v. Salt Lake City Water & Electrical Power Co. 61 L. R. A. 649, which holds appropriator's right to use water not forfeited by not putting to actual use from opposition of prior appropriators.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 678) on right of prior appropriation of water.

Distinguished in effect in Copper King v. Wabash Min. Co. 114 Fed. 992, holding mining company liable for cutting off subterranean waters flowing into creek previously appropriated.

30 L. R. A. 393, WILKES BARRE v. ROCKAFELLOW, 171 Pa. 177, 50 Am. St. Rep. 795, 33 Atl. 269.

Liability based on invalid contract.

Cited in Phoenix Silk Mfg. Co. v. Reilly, 43 W. N. C. 139, holding that no liability can be based on unlawful contract.

Deposit of public money as loan.

Cited in footnotes to Bartley v. Meserve, 36 L. R. A. 746, which holds deposit of public money by state treasurer in legally constituted depository a loan of such money; Allibone v. Ames, 33 L. R. A. 585, which holds deposit of public money by county treasurer in bank designated as depository not unlawful loan.

Liability on official bond for money lost by bank failure.

Cited in Sioux City Independent School Dist. v. Hubbard, 110 Iowa, 68, 80 Am. St. Rep. 271, 81 N. W. 241, holding school treasurer liable for money lost by bank failure.

Cited in footnote to Bush v. Johnson County, 32 L. R. A. 223, which holds county treasurer liable on bond for public money stolen or lost by bank failure.

Liability for interest collected on deposit of public funds.

Cited in footnote to Maloy v. Bernalillo County, 52 L. R. A. 126, which denies defaulting county treasurer's liability to county for interest paid to him by bank, wherein public money is deposited, after he has settled in full with county.

Validity of contract to influence election.

Cited in footnote to Livingston v. Page, 59 L. R. A. 336, which holds void, contract by publisher of newspaper to use it in influencing choice of delegates and action of convention.

30 L. R. A. 396, COM. v. PAUL, 170 Pa. 284, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 506, 33 Atl. 82.

Followed without discussion in Com. v. Schollenberger, 170 Pa. 296, 33 Atl. 85; Com. v. Paul, 170 Pa. 297, 33 Atl. 85.

Order affirming judgment of court below in accordance with judgment of reversal of United States Supreme Court, in 189 Pa. 559, 42 Atl. 1117.

What constitutes original package.

Reversed in Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 20, 43 L. ed. 56, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757, sustaining validity of sale to consumer of oleomargarine in original 10 pound package.

Cited in Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 357, 45 L. ed. 232, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, holding paper packages of cigarettes, transported in open baskets, not original packages; McGregor v. Cone, 104 Iowa, 473, 39 L. R. A. 487, footnote p. 484, 65 Am. St. Rep. 522, 73 N. W. 1041, holding pine box in which sealed packages of cigarettes are packed for shipment, original package.

Disapproved in Guckenheimer v. Sellers, 81 Fed. 1000, defining original package as package delivered by importer to carrier at initial point of shipment.

Regulation of sale of food.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Myers, 35 L. R. A. 844, which sustains statute requiring oleomargarine and artificial butter to be colored pink; State ex rel. Monnett v. Capital City Dairy Co. 57 L. R. A. 181, which sustains statute forbidding sale of unmarked oleomargarine; State v. Hanson, 54 L. R. A. 468, which holds sale of unlabeled cottolene forbidden by statute against selling unlabeled imitation of lard; Frost v. Chicago, 49 L. R. A. 657, which holds void, ordinance prohibiting colored netting over package of fruit, etc.; State v. Layton, 62 L. R. A. 164, which sustains statutory prohibition against manufacture or sale of baking powder containing alum.

30 L. R. A. 400, LYON v. CLEVELAND, 170 Pa. 611, 50 Am. St. Rep. 782. 33 Atl. 143.

Revival of judgment.

Cited in Hayes v. Lentz, 15 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 41, 6 Northampton Co. Rep. 383, 8 Pa. Dist. R. 629, holding that general judgment of revival does not continue waiver clause in original judgment; Sloan v. McMullen, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 433, holding execution upon unrevived judgment after five years, void.

Cited in note (53 L. R. A. 703, 705) on effect on existing judgment lien of proceedings to renew, revive, or extend judgment.

Distinguished in Sherrard v. Johnston, 193 Pa. 174, 44 W. N. C. 519, 74 Am. St. Rep. 680, 44 Atl. 252, holding execution on judgment more than five years old without revival not void, but irregular.

— As to terretenants.

Cited in Lyon v. Cleveland, 170 Pa. 623, 33 Atl. 145, holding proceedings to revive judgment as to terretenant after learning of secret deed erroneous; Suter v. Findley, 5 Super. Ct. 167, 40 W. N. C. 553, Affirming 13 Montg. Co. L. Rep. 76. 27 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 352, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 13, 6 Pa. Dist. R. 255, holding subsequent proceedings ineffectual to revive judgment against grantee under recorded deed, not party to original revival; Smith v. Eline, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 562, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 93. 2 Lack. Legal News, 20, holding remote grantee of debtor bound by revival of judgment without notice where intervening deeds unrecorded; Uhler v. Moses, 200 Pa. 502, 50 Atl. 231, Reversing 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 195, holding act of 1849 defining lien of revived judgments against terretenants not repealed by act of 1887 prescribing proceedings to continue lien.

30 L. R. A. 403, PEOPLE v. HECKER, 109 Cal. 451, 42 Pac. 307.

What declarations part of res gestæ.

Cited in footnote to Sample v. Consol. Light & R. Co. 57 L. R. A. 186, which holds admissible, declaration of motorman as to cause of accident while car still on body of injured child.

Homicide in self-defense.

Cited in State v. Rolla, 21 Mont. 586, 55 Pac. 523, holding instruction that person assaulted must "exhaust all other reasonable means within his power consistent with safety to prevent homicide" erroneous; People v. Farley, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 571, holding instruction that apprehension of danger no defense to one provoking quarrel, erroneous.

Cited in note (45 L. R. A. 688, 692, 695, 704, 707, 710) on self-defense set up by accused who began conflict.

Duty to decline combat.

Cited in People v. Scott, 123 Cal. 436, 56 Pac. 102, holding instruction as to declining struggle, failing to recognize that declination must be made known, erroneous; People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 92, 60 Pac. 670, holding trespasser not justifified in killing person whose room he entered armed and making threats without first retreating.

30 L. R. A. 400, BUCK v. EUREKA, 109 Cal. 504, 42 Pac. 243.

Estoppel to assert invalidity of act.

Cited in New York v. Gorman, 26 App. Div. 195, 49 N. Y. Supp. 1026, holding executrix of sheriff receiving statutory salary estopped to claim act fixing compensation unconstitutional; Collier v. Montgomery County, 103 Tenn. 715, 54 S. W. 989, holding sheriff contracting to care for workhouse convicts for certain sum cannot set up illegality of authorizing act.

Recovery upon implied contract where express contract void.

Reaffirmed on later appeal in 124 Cal. 64, 56 Pac. 612, sustaining recovery on quantum meruit for services rendered as city attorney under void contract.

Cited in Bassett v. Fairchild, 132 Cal. 647, 52 L. R. A. 617, 64 Pac. 1082, holding person acting as manager of corporation under invalid resolution may recover reasonable value of services; Whyte v. Rosencrantz, 123 Cal. 638, 69 Am. St. Rep. 90, 56 Pac. 436, holding that action for money had lies against one to whom money was loaned during minority under agreement to give security at majority.

Effect of reference in charter to Code sections.

Cited in Ex parte Lemon, 143 Cal. 561, 65 L. R. A. 948, 77 Pac. 455, holding that reference by charter to sections of Political Code incorporates them therein.

30 L. R. A. 415, STATE ex rel. TOI v. FRENCH, 17 Mont. 54, 41 Pac. 1078.

License taxes.

Cited in State v. Camp Sing, 18 Mont. 137, 32 L. R. A. 637, 56 Am. St. Rep. 551, 44 Pac. 516, sustaining license tax law giving part of proceeds to county, as not violating provision prohibiting legislature from levying taxes for municipal purposes; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Lewis & Clarke County, 28 Mont. 490, 98 Am. St. Rep. 572, 72 Pac. 982, sustaining tax in nature of license, upon insurance companies doing business within state.

Cited in footnotes to Price v. People, 55 L. R. A. 588, which sustains license fee on employment agencies; Com. v. Fowler, 33 L. R. A. 839, which sustains restraint of sales of liquor by druggists for medicinal purpose except on physician's prescription.

Cited in note (32 L. R. A. 116) on police power as exercised by municipalities over business of pawn brokers, junk dealers, and dealers in second-hand clothing.

Limitation of amount of license fees.

Cited in Burlington v. Unterkircher, 99 Iowa, 406, 68 N. W. 795, sustaining municipal license tax on conveyances for hire not shown to be unreasonable, and referring with approval to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 415; State v. Harrington, 68 Vt. 630, 34 L. R. A. 102, footnote p. 100, 35 Atl. 515, sustaining state license of $25 on itinerant venders and deposit of $500 as security, and referring with approval to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 415.

Cited in footnotes to Fleetwood v. Read, 47 L. R. A. 205, which sustains ordinance for license fee of $100 for use of trading stamps by merchants; Stull v. De Mattos, 51 L. R. A. 892, which sustains license tax of $25 per day on sales of merchandise at auction; Carrollton v. Bazzette, 31 L. R. A. 522, which holds ordinance imposing license fee of $10 per day on itinerant merchant regardless of amount of business invalid; People ex rel. Valentine v. Coolidge, 50 L. R. A. 493, which holds void, act requiring large bond from merchants selling farm produce; Morton v. Macon, 50 L. R. A. 485, which denies power to subject to prohibitory license tax business of loaning money on household furniture.

Uniformity in license taxes.

Cited in Hammond v. Muskegon School Board, 109 Mich. 678, 67 N. W. 973, sustaining annual license tax on teachers.

Cited in footnotes to Banta v. Chicago, 40 L. R. A. 611, which requires uniformity of license taxes on occupations, only as to class on which it operates; Re Haskell, 32 L. R. A. 527, which sustains license for specified amount for retailer having fixed place of business in city though heavier than that charged regular dealers at fixed places; Knisely v. Cotterel, 50 L. R. A. 87, which sustains statute fixing different rates of license for retailers, wholesalers, and sellers on board of trade; Com. use of Titusville v. Clark, 57 L. R. A. 348, which holds void, exemption from license tax of contractors and real-estate dealers, but not others, whose business less than $1,000; Harrodsburg v. Renfro, 51 L. R. A. 897, which holds void, ordinance imposing greater license fee for sale of liquors on main street of town than elsewhere.

Discrimination in license taxes.

Cited in Hill v. Abbeville, 59 S. C. 417, 38 S. E. 11, sustaining ordinance imposing licenses upon specified occupations in so far as it taxed, without discrimination, all occupations of same class.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Conlon, 31 L. R. A. 55, which holds invalid act giving municipal authorities discretion in licensing transient merchants; State v. Garbroski, 56 L. R. A. 570, which holds void, statute exempting veterans from requirement for license to peddle.

30 L. R. A. 429, STATE v. WHEELOCK, 95 Iowa, 577, 58 Am. St. Rep. 442, 64 N. W. 620.

Police power to regulate sales.

Cited in Easterly v. Irwin, 99 Iowa, 698, 68 N. W. 919, holding ordinance prohibiting sales by unlicensed peddlers valid exercise of police power; McGregor v. Cone, 104 Iowa, 475, 39 L. R. A. 488, 65 Am. St. Rep. 522, 73 N. W. 1041, sustaining state's right to prohibit sale of imported cigarettes not in original packages.

Cited in footnote to Rosenbloom v. State, 57 L. R. A. 923, which sustains license tax on peddlers, though venders of own products exempt.

Cited in note (32 L. R. A. 116) on police power as exercised by municipalities over business of pawnbrokers, junk dealers, and dealers in second-hand clothing.

Right to take orders in interstate business.

Cited in footnotes to State v. Coop, 41 L. R. A. 501, which holds purchase of frame for portrait in accordance with option included in order for making portrait in other state not within statute against peddling; Brownback v. North Wales, 49 L. R. A. 446, which holds valid as to residents, ordinance requiring license for sale of goods on street or by soliciting orders from house to house; Re Wilson, 48 L. R. A. 417, which holds void as applied to sale of original packages territorial statute requiring license for sale of coal oil.

Limitation of license fees.

Annotation in 30 L. R. A. 429, referred to with approval in State v. Harrington, 68 Vt. 630, 34 L. R. A. 102, 35 Atl. 515, sustaining state license of $25 on itinerant venders and deposit of $500 security.

Distinction between tax and license.

Cited in footnote to State ex rel. Auburn School Dist. v. Boyd, 58 L. R. A. 108, which holds ordinance imposing license tax for revenue only, tax ordinance, though right to engage in business depends on having license.

30 L. R. A. 441, BAUM v. LYNN, 72 Miss. 932, 18 So. 428.

Parol evidence of consideration.

Cited in Thompson v. Bryant, 75 Miss. 16, 21 So. 655, holding assumption of debts by purchaser of co-partner's interest not provable by parol where bill of sale states consideration as cash and note; Milich v. Armour Packing Co. 60 Kan. 238, 56 Pac. 1, holding parol evidence inadmissible, of agreement to employ, as part consideration of release of liability.

Cited in footnote to Johnson v. Elmen, 52 L. R. A. 162, which holds admissible, oral evidence of promise to assume payment of certain liens by grantee in deed with covenant against encumbrances.

Effect on original of filing additional bond.

Cited in Rush v. State, 19 Ind. App. 530, 49 N. E. 839, holding guardian's bond not discharged by filing of additional bond on augmentation of estate.

30 L. R. A. 444, SHINGLEUR v. WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. 72 Miss. 1030, 48 Am. St. Rep. 604, 18 So. 425.

Liability for mistake in transmitting telegram.

Cited in Postal Teleg. & Cable Co. v. Wells, 82 Miss. 741, 35 So. 190, sustaining recovery against telegraph company for negligent error in transmission of cipher message received by it in another state; Shaw v. Postal Teleg. & Cable Co. 79 Miss. 695, 56 L. R. A. 493, footnote p. 487, 89 Am. St. Rep. 666, 31 So. 222 (dissenting opinion), majority denying power to enforce in other state liability for mistakes in transmitting cipher telegram without payment of additional fee required to insure against mistake.

Cited in footnotes to Reed v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 34 L. R. A. 492, which holds void, stipulation limiting liability for mistakes in transmitting unrepeatd telegrams; German Fruit Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 59 L. R. A. 575, which denies liability for loss by performing contract closed at price incorrectly quoted in telegram to sendee's knowledge.

Cited in note (50 L. R. A. 252) on telegrams as writings to make contract within statute of frauds.

Who may sue telegraph company for default.

Cited in Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Ford, 117 Ala. 674, 23 So. 684, holding sendee suing ex contractu for failure to deliver telegram must show himself party or privy to contract for transmission.

Cited in footnote to McCormick v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 38 L. R. A. 684, which denies telegraph company's liability to banker cashing draft on faith of incorrectly transmitted telegram from drawee purporting to authorize drawer to make draft.

30 L. R. A. 447, AMERICAN WATERWORKS CO. v. STATE, 46 Neb. 194, 50 Am. St. Rep. 610, 64 N. W. 711.

Demurrer, as admission of conclusions of law.

Cited in Bellevue Improv. Co. v. Kayser, 1 Herdman (Neb.) 66, 95 N. W. 499, holding that general demurrer to petition does not admit mere conclusion of pleader, not naturally following from facts alleged.

Compulsory service by corporations affected by public use.

Cited in Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. State, 55 Neb. 635, 45 L. R. A. 117, 76 N. W. 171, holding it duty of telephone company occupying streets to furnish service at reasonable and uniform rates; State ex rel. Payne v. Kinloch Teleph. Co. 93 Mo. App. 358, 67 S. W. 684, holding telephone company bound to furnish service to persons complying with reasonable requirements; State ex rel. Wool v. Consumers Gas Trust Co. 157 Ind. 352, 55 L. R. A. 248, 61 N. E. 674, requiring service by gas company occupying streets, although supply insufficient; Indiana Natural & Illuminating Gas Co. v. State, 158 Ind. 519, 57 L. R. A. 762, footnote p. 761, 63 N. E. 220, denying right of natural gas company to discriminate against single consumer by enforcing meter rate instead of flat rate against him; Crumley v. Watauga Water Co. 99 Tenn. 425, 41 S. W. 1058; Watauga Water Co. v. Wolfe, 99 Tenn. 431, 63 Am. St. Rep. 841, 41 S. W. 1060, holding water company bound to supply water to all applicants tendering usual rates.

Cited in footnotes to Ladd v. Boston, 40 L. R. A. 171, which upholds removal of water meter though fixtures so arranged as to cost consumer after removal twenty times as much as others pay; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 33 L. R. A. 59, which authorizes injunction against water company shutting off supply of water for public purposes; Kelsey v. Fire & Water Comrs. 37 L. R. A. 675, which denies owner's right to require supply of water to each tenant as separate consumer; State ex rel. Milsted v. Butte City Water Co. 32 L. R. A. 697, which denies right of water company to refuse to supply water to tenant.

Cited in note (61 L. R. A. 99, 105, 106) on establishment and regulation of municipal water supply.

— Refusing service for noncompliance with rules.

Cited in Watauga Water Co. v. Wolfe, 99 Tenn. 431, 63 Am. St. Rep. 841, 41 S. W. 1060, sustaining water company's power to deny water to applicant refusing to comply with rule requiring hydrants to be kept closed; Mackin v. Portland Gas Co. 38 Or. 125, 49 L. R. A. 598, 61 Pac. 134, sustaining rule of gas company permitting discontinuance of service until payment for gas furnished at previous residence.

— What rules unreasonable.

Cited in Turner v. Revere Water Co. 171 Mass. 336, 40 L. R. A. 660, 68 Am. St. Rep. 432, 50 N. E. 634, denying right of water company to refuse to supply lessee of house unless landlord's arrearage paid; Crumley v. Watauga Water Co. 99 Tenn. 427, 41 S. W. 1058, denying water company's right to refuse to supply water to one failing to pay previous indebtedness.

30 L. R. A. 450, McGINN v. STATE, 46 Neb. 427, 50 Am. St. Rep. 617, 65 N. W. 46.

Computation of time.

Cited in Daly v. Concordia F. Ins. Co. 16 Colo. App. 352, 65 Pac. 416, holding month beginning on certain day expires on corresponding day of next month; Perkins v. Jennings, 27 Wash. 151, 67 Pac. 590, holding statute of limitations begins to run on note from day following date of last partial payment; McKinney v. State, 43 Tex. Crim. Rep. 389, 69 S. W. 769, holding that term "month" as used in criminal statute means solar month of thirty days.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 199, 244) on rule as to first and last days in computation of time.

When enactments take effect.

Cited in State ex rel. City Water Co. v. Kearney, 49 Neb. 332, 68 N. W. 533; and State ex rel. Franklin County v. Vincent, 46 Neb. 409, 65 N. W. 50, holding act, in absence of special provision, takes effect on day following expiration of three calendar months from legislature's adjournment.

Retrial of person convicted.

Cited in State v. Reddington, 8 S. D. 319, 66 N. W. 464, holding conviction set aside on defendant's motion for errors in court's charge no bar to second trial.

30 L. R. A. 456, ST. LOUIS TRUST CO. v. RILEY, 16 C. C. A. 610, 36 U. S. App. 100, 70 Fed. 32.

What claims preferred to corporation mortgage.

Cited in Veatch v. American Loan & T. Co. 25 C. C. A. 42, 49 U. S. App. 191, 79 Fed. 474; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 24 C. C. A. 512, 48 U. S. App. 324, 79 Fed. 227; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 74 Fed. 339; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 74 Fed. 435,—holding judgment for negligence prior to receivership not entitled to preference over prior mortgage of railroad; Atlantic Trust Co. v. Dana, 62 C. C. A. 664, 128 Fed. 216, holding judgment for injuries obtained prior to receivership not preferential to mortgage debts; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 73 Fed. 57, giving preference to payment out of receiver's earnings to connecting lines of share of earnings from interchanged business; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 74 Fed. 345, holding taxes and operating expenses of railroad first charge on receiver's earnings; New York Guaranty & Indemnity Co. v. Tacoma R. & Motor Co. 27 C. C. A. 555, 48 U. S. App. 668, 83 Fed. 370, holding claim for cable furnished cable-car company preferred to prior mortgage; Central Trust Co. v. Clark, 26 C. C. A. 400, 49 U. S. App. 453, 81 Fed. 271, holding claim for gear wheel furnished cable railroad entitled to preference over prior mortgage; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Doud, 52 L. R. A. 489, 44 C. C. A. 402, 105 Fed. 136, holding loan for construction of substantial addition to mortgaged property inferior to lien of prior mortgage; State Trust Co. v. Kansas City, P. & G. R. Co. 120 Fed. 402, holding claims for unliquidated damages not preferential demands; Atlantic Trust Co. v. Woodbridge Canal & Irrig. Co. 79 Fed. 40, giving preference over mortgage to labor and supply claims on repairs to irrigation works; Veatch v. American Loan & T. Co. 28 C. C. A. 387, 55 U. S. App. 191, 84 Fed. 277, raising, without deciding, right of judgment creditor to payment out of earnings of stockholder's receiver; Central Trust Co. v. Warren, 58 C. C. A. 292, 121 Fed. 326, holding statute making judgment for injury against railway corporation superior to lien of mortgage, inapplicable to street railroads.

Cited in footnotes to Whitely v. Central Trust Co. 34 L. R. A. 303, which holds preference to railroad mortgages not gained by paying judgment for damages against company by surety on supersedeas bond; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Doud, 52 L. R. A. 481, which holds claim for money loaned to pay interest on mortgage debt inferior to lien of prior mortgage.

Disapproved in Green v. Coast Line R. Co. 97 Ga. 37, 33 L. R. A. 814, footnote p. 806, 54 Am. St. Rep. 379, 24 S. E. 814, holding judgment for personal injuries prior to mortgage on railroad.

30 L. R. A. 460, Re WALKER, 110 Cal. 387, 42 Pac. 815.

Proof of execution of will.

Cited in McCarn v. Rundall, 111 Iowa, 408, 82 N. W. 924, holding will subscribed by one witness, others being present, invalid.

Distinguished in Re Tyler, 121 Cal. 413, 53 Pac. 928, holding will sufficiently proved where only living witness, not named in attestation clause, testifies to signing in presence of testatrix and other witness.

30 L. R. A. 464, PEOPLE v. GAY, 107 Mich. 422, 65 N. W. 292.

Restrictions on business of foreign insurance companies.

Cited in footnote to Cook v. Howland, 59 L. R. A. 338, which sustains confinement to residents of right to act as agents for foreign insurance companies.

30 L. R. A. 465, WEARE COMMISSION CO. v. DRULEY, 156 Ill. 25, 41 N. E. 48.

What intent to defraud sustains attachment.

Cited in Wadsworth v. Laurie, 164 Ill. 48, 45 N. E. 435, Affirming 63 Ill. App. 514; Hanford v. Richart, 66 Ill. App. 444; Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Belt, 74 Ill. App. 585; First Nat. Bank v. McMillan, 9 S. D. 229, 68 N. W. 537; Nelson v. Leiter, 190 Ill. 418, 83 Am. St. Rep. 142, 60 N. E. 851, Affirming 93 Ill. App. 180,—holding that fraudulent conveyance to be ground for attachment, must be with actual fraudulent intent; McNeil & H. Co. v. Plows & Co. 83 Ill. App. 190, holding conveyance kept secret sustains attachment; Curran v. Rothschild, 14 Colo. App. 500, 60 Pac. 1111, holding attachment justified by transfer of property with intent to delay creditors, though without dishonest intent.

Cited in footnotes to Queen City Mfg. Co. v. Blalack, 31 L. R. A. 222, which holds shipment by insolvents of manufactured products out of state, removal of property authorizing attachment; Penoyar v. Kelsey, 34 L. R. A. 248, which holds false written statement as to financial ability not known at time credit given, not basis for attachment.

30 L. R. A. 491, VOGEL v. PEKOC, 157 Ill. 339, 42 N. E. 386.

Followed without discussion in Vogel v. Febertz, 158 Ill. 395, 43 N. E. 367; Vogel v. Dunn, 158 Ill. 504, 43 N. E. 361; and Vogel v. Conrad, 157 Ill. 368, 42 N. E. 389.

Contracts signed by one party.

Cited in American Pub. & Engraving Co. v. Walker, 87 Mo. App. 508, holding written proposal, assented to by nonsigning party, valid contract; Raphael v. Hartman, 87 Ill. App. 636, holding written contract under which nonsigning party worked, valid; Sellers v. Greer, 172 Ill. 552, 40 L. R. A. 591, 50 N. E.

246, holding assent to and retention of contract by nonsigning party equivalent to execution.

Contracts without mutuality.

Cited in Woolsey v. Ryan, 59 Kan. 605, 54 Pac. 664, holding agreement for services, not mutually binding, no basis for action for damages by nonperformance; Allen v. Rouse, 78 Ill. App. 73, holding contract to act as agent, imposing no obligation on one party, void; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Bagley, 60 Kan. 431, 56 Pac. 759, holding railroad's undertaking to transport corn, not obligating shipper to ship, void; Allen B. Wrisley Co. v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 107 Ill. App. 382, holding that memorandum which did not bind purchaser to order at all, nor any certain quantity, void as contract, for want of mutuality; El Paso Gas, Electric Light & P. Co. v. El Paso, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 313, 54 S. W. 798, holding contract to furnish as many lights as city may designate void for want of mutuality; Eclipse Oil Co. v. South Penn Oil Co. 47 W. Va. 89, 34 S. E. 923, holding lease not binding on lessee not enforceable in equity; Harding v. Olson, 76 Ill. App. 480, holding land contract binding one party to make payments binds other to deliver deed.

Distinguished in Prudential Ins. Co. v. Hite, 69 Ill. App. 417, sustaining contract of employment stipulating for ten days' notice of claim before action.

Special legislation.

Distinguished in Lippman v. People, 175 Ill. 109, 51 N. E. 872, holding act to protect manufacturers and dealers in certain beverages from loss of packages, special legislation.

— Provision for recovery of attorney's fee.

Followed in Opaque Cloth Shade Co. v. Veight, 161 Ill. 338, 43 N. E. 1075, sustaining recovery of attorney's fee in action for wages.

Cited in Duckwall v. Jones, 156 Ind. 686, 58 N. E. 1056, sustaining statute permitting recovery of attorney's fee on foreclosure of mechanic's lien; Sanitary District v. Ray, 199 Ill. 65, 93 Am. St. Rep. 102, 64 N. E. 1048, sustaining statute permitting plaintiff to recover attorney's fees in action against sanitary district for overflowing land; Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Bush, 60 Neb. 124, 82 N. W. 313, and Farmers & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 62 Neb. 222, 97 Am. St. Rep. 624, 86 N. W. 1070, sustaining statute permitting recovery of attorney's fee in action on real insurance policy; Liquidating Comrs. v. Marrero, 106 La. 135, 30 So. 305, sustaining statute permitting recovery of attorney's fee from unsuccessful register of taxes; Gano v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 114 Iowa, 716, 55 L. R. A. 265, footnote p. 263, 89 Am. St. Rep. 393, 87 N. W. 714, sustaining requirement for payment of attorney's fee on successful appeal by landowner from award in eminent domain; Dell v. Marvin, 41 Fla. 227, 45 L. R. A. 203, footnote p. 201, 79 Am. St. Rep. 171, 26 So. 188, sustaining statute allowing attorney's fees to successful plaintiff, but not to defendant, in mechanics' lien case; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 672, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255 (dissenting opinion), majority holding statute permitting recovery of attorney's fees by plaintiff in certain actions against railroad companies, unconstitutional.

Cited in footnotes to Cameron v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 31 L. R. A. 553, which holds valid, act allowing attorneys' fees in actions against railroad companies for taking land without making compensation; Turner v. Boger, 49 L. R. A. 590, which holds provision for attorneys' fees in trust deed, void; Atkinson v.

Woodmansee, 64 L. R. A. 325, which holds void, statute allowing reasonable attorneys' fees to successful plaintiff in action to enforce mechanic's lien.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 322) on constitutional equality in the United States in relation to corporate taxation.

Interpretation of unambiguous contracts or statutes.

Cited in Cold Blast Transp. Co. v. Kansas City Bolt & Nut Co. 57 L. R. A. 699, 52 C. C. A. 29, 114 Fed. 81, holding that courts will not construe unambiguous contract to conform with supposed intention; Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 54 C. C. A. 511, 117 Fed. 462; and Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Champlin, 54 C. C. A. 210, 116 Fed. 860, holding that courts will not import supposed intention into unambiguous law; Chauncey v. Dyke Bros. 55 C. C. A. 591, 119 Fed. 13, by Sanborn, J., dissenting, who holds secret intention cannot be read into unambiguous statute.

30 L. R. A. 495, JARNAGIN v. STRATTON, 95 Tenn. 619, 32 S. W. 625.

Liability of joint makers or indorsers of notes.

Cited in Sully v. Campbell, 99 Tenn. 438, 43 L. R. A. 165, 42 S. W. 15, holding several suits maintainable against makers of joint note.

Cited in footnote to Hutchison v. Crutcher, 37 L. R. A. 89, which requires presentation of note payable at insolvent bank to bank receiver administering at other place in same city.

Cited in note (36 L. R. A. 703) on presentment to joint makers to hold indorsers of note.

Distinguished in Northrup v. Chambers, 90 Mo. App. 66, holding failure to give notice of protest to one releases all joint indorsers of note.

30 L. R. A. 497, ALLEN v. ALLEN, 19 R. I. 114, 61 Am. St. Rep. 738, 32 Atl. 166.

Rights in shore below high-water mark.

Cited in Walsh v. Hopkins, 22 R. I. 420, 48 Atl. 390, holding no prescriptive right acquirable in tide-flowed lands; Carr v. Carpenter, 22 R. I. 535, 53 L. R. A. 336, footnote p. 333, 48 Atl. 805, sustaining upland owner's right to take seaweed stranded on beach.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 516) on right to fish.

30 L. R. A. 498, HANOVER F. INS. CO. v. SHRADER, 89 Tex. 35, 59 Am. St. Rep. 25, 32 S. W. 872, 33 S. W. 112.

Inclusion of Sundays and holidays in computing time.

Cited in American Tobacco Co. v. Strickling, 88 Md. 509, 41 Atl. 1083, holding Sundays included in computing thirty days allowed for signing bills of exception after verdict rendered.

Cited in footnotes to Merritt v. Gate City Nat. Bank, 38 L. R. A. 749, which holds Sunday before term of court beginning on Monday not excluded in fixing time for filing action before term; Morris v. Union Nat. Bank, 50 L. R. A. 182, which denies bank's liability for failure to protest in due season note falling due on holiday under honest mistake as to proper time.

Distinguished in Bond v. Rintleman, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 299, 59 S. W. 48, holding motion will not be considered as overruled on last day to act, falling on Sunday.

Filing judicial papers on Sunday.

Cited in Havens v. Stiles, 8 Idaho, 252, 56 L. R. A. 737, footnote p. 736, 67 Pac. 919, authorizing filing complaint and issuing summons on Sunday; Stephens v. Porter, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 559, 69 S. W. 423, holding valid, application to purchase state school land filed Sunday in General Land Office.

Cited in footnote to Pepin v. Societe St. Jean Baptiste, 60 L. R. A. 626, which authorizes hearing and determination on Sunday of charges against member of benefit society resulting in expulsion.

What constitutes filing of papers.

Cited in footnote to Meridian Nat. Bank v. Hoyt & Bros. Co. 36 L. R. A. 796, which holds creditor's bill not filed by taking to clerk's office and having it indorsed and record entered in docket.

30 L. R. A. 500, STATE v. AUSTIN CLUB, 89 Tex. 20, 33 S. W. 113.

Sale of liquors by clubs.

Cited in footnotes to People v. Adelphi Club, 31 L. R. A. 510, which holds distribution of liquor by social club to members not illegal sale; State ex rel. Stevenson v. Law & Order Club, 62 L. R. A. 885, which denies right of social club, without license, to dispense liquors to members in exchange for checks given them on payment of special assessments.

Distinguished in Krnavek v. State, 38 Tex. Crim. Rep. 48, 41 S. W. 612, holding sale of liquor by steward to member of social club violation of local option law.

30 L. R. A. 504, SMITH v. MILWAUKEE BUILDERS' & T. EXCHANGE, 91 Wis. 360, 51 Am. St. Rep. 912, 64 N. W. 1041.

Ordinances regulating building operations.

Cited in footnote to Bostock v. Sams, 59 L. R. A. 282, which holds unauthorized, ordinance permitting refusal of permits for erecting buildings not conforming in size, appearance, etc., to existing buildings.

Distinguished in Koch v. Fox, 71 App. Div. 293, 75 N. Y. Supp. 913, construing ordinance requiring owner or contractor to build covered way over sidewalk as imposing duty on one doing work.

Liability for acts of independent contractor.

Cited in Carlson v. Stocking, 91 Wis. 435, 65 N. W. 58, holding employer not liable for acts of independent contractor unless damage necessarily results from ordinary mode of doing work; Vosbeck v. Kellogg, 78 Minn. 181, 80 N. W. 957; and Pioneer Fireproof Constr. Co. v. Hansen, 176 Ill. 110, 52 N. E. 17, holding reservation of right of inspection does not render one liable for negligence of contractor's servants.

Cited in footnotes to Wertheimer v. Saunders, 37 L. R. A. 146, which holds landlord liable for independent contractor's negligence in putting new roof on building; Peerless Mfg. Co. v. Bagley, 53 L. R. A. 285, which holds landlord liable for independent contractor's negligence in putting in automatic fire extinguisher; Boomer v. Wilbur, 53 L. R. A. 172, which denies owner's liability for injury by fall of bricks through negligence of independent contractor repairing chimney; Sanford v. Pawtucket Street R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 564, which denies liability of street railway company for negligence of contractor building road; Thompson v. Lowell,

I. & H. Street R. Co. 40 L. R. A. 345, which holds street railway company liable for injury to spectator at free exhibition of marksmanship given by independent contractor on company's grounds; Hoff v. Shockley, 64 L. R. A. 538, which holds property owner not liable for injuries to traveler by obstructions placed in street, without danger signals, by independent contractor constructing building.

Violation of statute or ordinance as negligence.

Cited in Klatt v. N. C. Foster Lumber Co. 97 Wis. 646, 73 N. W. 563, holding failure to comply with statute requiring guards on dangerous gearing negligence per se; Decker v. McSorley, 111 Wis. 96, 86 N. W. 554, holding violation of ordinance against letting horses run at large in streets, negligence per se; Brown v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 109 Wis. 390, 85 N. W. 271, holding failure to comply with statutory regulations as to speed of trains negligence per se; Young v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 100 Iowa, 360, 69 N. W. 682, holding violation of statute prohibiting boarding moving train negligence per se; Burns v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 104 Wis. 654, 80 N. W. 927, holding railroad's failure to comply with statute requiring unloading stock for rest, actionable negligence.

Distinguished in Stafford v. Chippewa Valley Electric R. Co. 110 Wis. 352, 85 N. W. 1036, holding failure to comply with ordinance requiring continuous ringing of bell on street cars, not promoting safety, not actionable negligence; Toutloff v. Green Bay, 91 Wis. 494, 65 N. W. 168, holding lot owner not liable to passerby under charter provision requiring abutter to keep sidewalk in repair.

Recovery for future suffering.

Cited in Boelter v. Ross Lumber Co. 103 Wis. 330, 79 N. W. 243, holding that future disability must be reasonably certain to justify damages; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Davidson, 22 C. C. A. 313, 46 U. S. App. 300, 76 Fed. 524, holding instruction that jury may consider suffering which person "may" have endured or "is likely" to endure, harmless; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. De Clow, 61 C. C. A. 36, 124 Fed. 144, sustaining charge allowing recovery for future pain and suffering, in case of finding of reasonable certainty of future suffering.

Distinguished in Bailey v. Centerville, 108 Iowa, 27, 78 N. W. 831, sustaining instruction permitting recovery for "probably" continuing disability.

Weight of negative testimony.

Cited in Hildman v. Phillips, 106 Wis. 617, 82 N. W. 566, holding it court's duty to instruct jury that negative is entitled to little weight as against positive credible testimony.

30 L. R. A. 508, CINCINNATI STREET R. CO. v. MURRAY, 53 Ohio St. 570, 42 N. E. 596.

Running street car over crossing.

Cited in footnotes to State, Cape May, D. B. & S. P. R. Co., Prosecutor, v. Cape May. 36 L. R. A. 657, which sustains ordinance requiring electric street car to stop before crossing intersecting street; New York & G. Lake R. Co. v. New Jersey Electric R. Co. 38 L. R. A. 516, which requires same care from those operating electric car to prevent collision with steam car as is required from other persons.

Violation of statute or ordinance as negligence.

Cited in footnotes to Fielders v. North Jersey Street R. Co. 59 L. R. A. 455, which denies liability of street railway company for injury by defect in pavement between tracks; Holwerson v. St. Louis & Suburban R. Co. 50 L. R. A. 850, which denies effect on street railway company's liability towards person injured by car, of general city ordinance unconnected with grant of franchise; Marino v. Lehmaier, 61 L. R. A. 812, which holds violation of penal statute against employing children of certain age in factory, negligence.

When question of negligence for court.

Cited in Bohl v. Dell Rapids, 15 S. D. 624, 91 N. W. 315, holding that question whether jury would be warranted in finding negligence is for court when facts undisputed.

30 L. R. A. 513, HUDSON FURNITURE CO. v. HARDING, 17 C. C. A. 203, 34 U. S. App. 148, 70 Fed. 468.

When Federal courts not bound by state decisions.

Cited in Manship v. New South Bldg. & L. Asso. 110 Fed. 858, holding state decisions as to law governing contract between loan association and borrower residing in another state not binding on Federal courts.

What law governs contracts.

Cited in Western Springs v. Collins, 40 C. C. A. 35, 98 Fed. 935, holding liability on covenants of wife joining in husband's deed governed by law of state where land situated.

Cited in note (61 L. R. A. 194, 200, 217) on conflict of laws as to negotiable paper.

Power of insolvent corporation to create preference.

Cited in Atlas Tack Co. v. Exchange Bank, 111 Ga. 708, 36 S. E. 939, denying validity of mortgage to secure creditor of insolvent corporation holding note indorsed by directors.

What reviewable on appeal from general finding.

Cited in Fourth Nat. Bank v. Belleville, 27 C. C. A. 675, 53 U. S. App. 628, 83 Fed. 675, and Burrows v. Niblack, 28 C. C. A. 131, 53 U. S. App. 712, 84 Fed. 113, holding that appellate court cannot review trial court's alleged error in making general finding; Randle v. Barnard, 26 C. C. A. 570, 53 U. S. App. 377, 81 Fed. 684, holding that appellate court will only consider whether judgment was correctly rendered upon special finding of facts.

30 L. R. A. 521, MORGAN v. KENNEDY, 62 Minn. 348, 54 Am. St. Rep. 847, 64 N. W. 912.

Effect of married women's acts on husband's common-law liability.

Cited in Kies v. Young, 64 Ark. 388, 62 Am. St. Rep. 198, 42 S. W. 669, holding husband's common-law liability for wife's antenuptial debts not abrogated by enabling acts.

Cited in footnotes to Lane v. Bryant, 36 L. R. A. 709, which denies husband's liability for slander by wife; Henley v. Wilson, 58 L. R. A. 941, which sustains husband's common-law liability for wife's torts.

Distinguished in Blake v. Smith, 19 R. I. 478, 34 Atl. 995, holding that wife cannot be made defendant in action for slanderous words spoken by husband.

Wife as witness against husband.

Cited in footnotes to Frankenthal v. Solomonson, 44 L. R. A. 311, which authorizes wife's examination on supplementary proceedings against husband without his consent; State v. Kodat, 51 L. R. A. 509, which holds that divorce does not make wife competent witness against husband as to crime previously committed.

What charges defamatory.

Cited in footnote to Hollenbeck v. Hall, 39 L. R. A. 734, which holds publication that trader is dishonest, in pleading statute of limitations, not libelous.

30 L. R. A. 532, STATE ex rel. STANFORD v. ELLINGTON, 117 N. C. 158, 53 Am. St. Rep. 580, 23 S. E. 250.

Presumption as to quorum.

Cited in State ex rel. Cherry v. Burns, 124 N. C. 766, 33 S. E. 136, holding quorum of legislature presumed present at election of officer.

What constitutes quorum.

Cited in Re Schuylkill Haven Nominations, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 420, holding that majority of political borough executive committee constitutes quorum.

Cited in footnote to Wampler v. State, 38 L. R. A. 829, which authorizes mandamus to compel township trustee to meet with others in order to obtain quorum.

Validity of election by less than quorum.

Cited in State Prison v. Day, 124 N. C. 383, 46 L. R. A. 302, 32 S. E. 748 (dissenting opinion), as to invalidity of election of officers by legislature when no quorum is present.

Right to recover office.

Cited in State ex rel. Cherry v. Burns, 124 N. C. 766, 33 S. E. 136, holding that claimant of office can succeed only when legally elected.

30 L. R. A. 534, GURNEY v. MINNEAPOLIS UNION ELEVATOR CO. 63 Minn. 70, 65 N. W. 136.

Effect of order authorizing condemnation of fee.

Cited in Fletcher v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 67 Minn. 344, 69 N. W. 1085, holding that order in railroad condemnation proceedings providing for acquisition of fee authorizes taking of easement only.

Railroad's right to lease lands.

Cited in Michigan C. R. Co. v. Bullard, 120 Mich. 418, 79 N. W. 635, upholding validity of lease of portion of right of way to facilitate handling lessee's freight; Abraham v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 37 Or. 502, 64 L. R. A. 395, 82 Am. St. Rep. 779, 60 Pac. 899, upholding railroad's right to lease lands for hotel.

What is a public use.

Cited in Stewart v. Great Northern R. Co. 65 Minn. 518, 33 L. R. A. 429, 68 N. W. 208, sustaining statute authorizing acquisition of land for public grain elevators by condemnation.

30 L. R. A. 537, WHITE v. SOLOMON, 164 Mass. 516, 42 N. E. 104.

When vendor may recover purchase price.

Cited in Mitchell v. Le Clair, 165 Mass. 311, 43 N. E. 117, holding that setting apart goods on receipt of acceptance of offer entitles vendor to recover price; Smith v. Aldrich, 180 Mass. 369, 62 N. E. 381, sustaining right of conditional vendor to recover unpaid instalments; Perkins v. Grobben, 116 Mich. 178, 39 L. R.

A. 818, 72 Am. St. Rep. 512, 74 N. W. 469, holding that retaking property conditionally sold precludes recovery of unpaid purchase price; Rastetter v. Reynolds, 160 Ind. 139, 66 N. E. 612, sustaining recovery for elm strips cut according to order, delivered to purchaser, but rejected on account of shrinkage, when usage existed of ordering them over size to allow for shrinkage.

Cited in note (32 L. R. A. 458) on rights and liabilities of vendor and purchaser by conditional sale on default of payment.

Evidence of handwriting.

Cited in note (63 L. R. A. 980) on competency of witness to handwriting.

30 L. R. A. 540, JACKSONVILLE ELECTRIC LIGHT CO. v. JACKSONVILLE, 36 Fla. 229, 51 Am. St. Rep. 24, 18 So. 677.

Extent of municipal powers.

Cited in Florida, C. & P. R. Co. v. Ocala Street & Suburban R. Co. 39 Fla. 322, 22 So. 692, denying city's power to give street railroad exclusive right to construct tracks in street for stated period; Mayo v. Washington, 122 N. C. 25, 40 L. R. A. 169, footnote p. 163, 29 S. E. 343 (dissenting opinion), majority denying right of municipality to purchase electric light plant and create debt for same; Mealey v. Hagerstown, 92 Md. 754, 48 Atl. 746, favoring, but not deciding, question as to authority of municipal corporation, owning its own plant, to furnish electric light to citizens.

Cited in footnotes to Mitchell v. Negaunee, 38 L. R. A. 157, which sustains right of city to own electric light plant to furnish light to citizens; Edgerton v. Goldsboro Water Co. 48 L. R. A. 444, which holds cost of providing water for city authorized by charter not a "necessary expense;" Fawcett v. Mt. Airy, 63 L. R. A. 870, which sustains municipality's power to incur expense of owning and operating water and electric light plants without submitting proposition to voters.

Distinguished in effect in Mernaugh v. Orlando, 41 Fla. 437, 27 So. 34, holding that power in city to regulate, does not authorize ordinance prohibiting, sale of liquor; Wadsworth v. Concord, 133 N. C. 598, 45 S. E. 948, holding that town commissioners cannot make binding contract for electric lighting extending beyond their term.

30 L. R. A. 546, MORRISON v. ST. PAUL & N. P. R. CO. 63 Minn. 75, 65 N. W. 141.

Long-term railroad leases.

Cited in Traverse County v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 73 Minn. 426, 76 N. W. 217, holding lease of railroad to another company assuming debts, which proceeds of land sales also go to pay, no sale.

Cited in footnote to St. Bernarde v. Kemper, 45 L. R. A. 662, which sustains right of lessee in possession under lease for ninety-nine years, renewable forever, to petition for street improvement.

30 L. R. A. 549, THAYER v. HUMPHREY, 91 Wis. 276, 51 Am. St. Rep. 887, 64 N. W. 1007.

Relative priorities of individual and firm creditors.

Cited in Re Gilbert, 94 Wis. 115, 68 N. W. 863, holding firm debts of partnership provable against partnership which is individual member thereof subject to rights of latter's separate creditors; Weil v. Jaeger, 73 Ill. App. 277, holding that creditor of old firm may prove claim against estate of new firm treated as valid in assignment; Rollins v. Humphrey, 98 Wis. 72, 73 N. W. 331, holding partnership postponed to individual creditors in distributing estate of insolvent partner; Re Wilcox, 94 Fed. 102, holding individual creditors of bankrupt preferred to firm creditors, though no partnership assets exist.

Cited in footnote to Clark v. Stanwood, 34 L. R. A. 378, which authorizes proof of debts of solvent firm against single insolvent partner.

Liability of ostensible partner.

Cited in Evens & H. Fire Brick Co. v. Hadfield, 93 Wis. 669, 68 N. W. 468, holding continued use of person's name renders him liable as partner in fact; Garlick v. Karger, 97 Wis. 159, 72 N. W. 223, holding retired partner's claim for capital subordinate to claims of firm creditors.

Effect of transfer of assets on firm creditors' priorities.

Cited in Densmore Commission Co. v. Shong, 98 Wis. 384, 74 N. W. 114, holding that firm creditors have no equity in assets transferred in good faith to succeeding corporation without provision for payment of debts; Franklin Sugar Ref. Co. v. Henderson, 86 Md. 461, 63 Am. St. Rep. 524, 38 Atl. 991, holding that transfer to copartners by retiring member of insolvent firm does not divest priority of partnership creditors; Pfister v. Graton & K. Mfg. Co. 97 Wis. 211, 72 N. W. 883, holding noncollusive judgment against partnership not impeachable by creditors as based on partner's individual debt; Excelsior Mill Co. v. Hanover, 102 Wis. 313, 73 N. W. 737, by Marshall, J., in separate opinion, holding conveyance of firm assets by members of insolvent firm to pay individual debt valid as to partnership creditors.

30 L. R. A. 560, LITTLE ROCK & FT. S. R. CO. v. WELLS, 61 Ark. 354, 54 Am. St. Rep. 216, 54 Am. St. Rep. 260, 33 S. W. 208.

Injunctions against judgments.

Cited in Eppinger v. Scott, 130 Cal. 277, 62 Pac. 460, enjoining proceedings on judgment pending appeal from denial of motion to recall execution, and referring particularly to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 560; Thomas v. Jones, 98 Va. 329, 36 S. E. 382, granting equitable relief against tax deed obtained by fraud and surprise; George v. Nowlan, 38 Or. 541, 64 Pac. 1, refusing to enjoin decree rendered by default for greater amount than authorized by pleadings.

Cited in notes (31 L. R. A. 66) on enjoining judgments against or in favor of sureties; (31 L. R. A. 36, 39) on negligence as cause for, and bar to, injunctions against judgments; (30 L. R. A. 800) on injunction against judgments obtained by fraud, accident, mistake, surprise, and duress; (30 L. R. A. 707) on injunctions against judgments for errors and irregularities.

What interest disqualifies juror.

Cited in footnote to Reed v. Peacock, 49 L. R. A. 423, which holds Odd Fellow not disqualified as juror in action by Odd Fellow of other lodge.

30 L. R. A. 574, PARSHLEY v. THIRD M. E. CHURCH, 147 N. Y. 583, 70 N. Y. S. R. 346, 42 N. E. 15.

Admissions of liability.

Cited in Johnson v. Buffalo Homeopathic Hospital, 53 App. Div. 515, 65 N. Y.

Supp. 1087, holding third person's statement at informal meeting where trustees and others are present, incompetent as admission of trustees.

Implied agreement to pay for benefits.

Cited in footnote to Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Johnson City, 49 L. R. A. 123, which denies bona fide purchaser's right to maintain action for money had and received on railroad aid bonds issued by city without authority.

30 L. R. A. 576, FORSYTH v. HAMMOND, 142 Ind. 505, 40 N. E. 267, 41 N. E. 950.

Appeal by some of several coparties.

Cited in Pritchett v. McGaughey, 151 Ind. 639, 52 N. E. 397, holding filing of declination to join in appeal, and waiver of notice, authorizes court to entertain jurisdiction.

Annexation to municipality.

Cited in Vigo County v. Terre Haute, 147 Ind. 135, 46 N. E. 350, referring to annexation proceedings as being in accordance with statute.

Cited in footnotes to Taggart v. Claypole, 32 L. R. A. 586, which holds annexation to city not taking of property; State ex rel. Childs v. Crow Wing County, 35 L. R. A. 745, which authorizes quo warranto to oust county from adjoining territory illegally annexed.

Effect of plat of farm lands.

Cited in Woodruff Place v. Raschig, 147 Ind. 525, 46 N. E. 990, and Strunk v. Pritchett, 27 Ind. App. 585, 61 N. E. 973, holding that absence of state authorizing platting of farm lands does not nullify dedication of streets where purchasers relied thereon.

Powers of courts to review action of town or county boards.

Cited in Paul v. Walkerton, 150 Ind. 572, 50 N. E. 725, sustaining court's jurisdiction to try annexation cases de novo on appeal; Forsyth v. Hammond, 18 C. C. A. 182, 34 U. S. App. 552, 71 Fed. 450, Reversing 68 Fed. 776, holding provisions for appeal to courts from determination of county commissioners in annexation cases unconstitutional; Monroe County v. Conner, 155 Ind. 496, 58 N. E. 828, holding that appeal lies from action of county commissioners authorized by election to construct gravel road.

Cited in footnote to Re North Milwaukee, 33 L. R. A. 638, which holds void, act requiring court to determine whether or not territory should be incorporated as village.

Distinguished in Woolverton v. Albany, 152 Ind. 79, 52 N. E. 455, denying court's jurisdiction to review town board of trustees' refusal to act upon petition for disannexation.

30 L. R. A. 584, ASHTON v. STOY, 96 Iowa, 197, 64 N. W. 804.

Appeal to district court from action of public board.

Cited in Ross v. Campbell, 98 Iowa, 5, 66 N. W. 1064, holding that charge of fraud in list of subscribers cannot be first made on appeal from supervisor's selection of county newspaper; Frost v. Oskaloosa Bd. of Review, 114 Iowa, 106, 86 N. W. 213, holding that district court cannot try appeal from board of review of assessments where no record filed.

30 L. R. A. 586, FIDELITY & C. CO. v. EICKHOFF, 63 Minn. 170, 56 Am. St. Rep. 464, 65 N. W. 351.

Action for malicious prosecution against guaranty company in 74 Minn. 139, 76 N. W. 1030.

Guaranty insurance.

Cited in footnotes to Shakman v. United States Credit System Co. 32 L. R. A. 383, which holds contract to indemnify merchant against loss by insolvency of customers, contract of insurance; Fidelity & C. Co. v. Gate City Nat. Bank. 33 L. R. A. 821, which holds guarantor of honesty of bank teller liable for dishonesty of assistant cashier; People ex rel. Kasson v. Rose, 44 L. R. A. 124, which holds guaranteeing fidelity of officers and performance of contracts, insurance; Trenton Pass. R. Co. v. Guarantors' Liability Indemnity Co. 44 L. R. A. 213, which sustains contract to indemnify carrier against loss from injuries to passenger.

Stipulations as to evidence of liability.

Followed in Fidelity & C. Co. v. Crays, 76 Minn. 455, 79 N. W. 531, holding stipulation making voucher for payment by surety to employer conclusive as to fact and extent of liability, void.

Cited in Easton v. Scofield, 66 Minn. 430, 69 N. W. 326, holding purchaser at tax sale not entitled to refundment when acting in bad faith in action declaring sale void.

Sufficiency of complaint on fidelity bond.

Followed in Fidelity & C. Co. v. Lawler, 64 Minn. 148, 66 N. W. 143, holding default in condition of bond sufficiently alleged.

30 L. R. A. 590, GOULD v. GREAT NORTHERN R. CO. 63 Minn. 37, 56 Am. St. Rep. 453, 65 N. W. 125.

Right to connect fences.

Cited in footnote to Agne v. Seitsinger, 36 L. R. A. 701, which sustains right to cattle pass under bridge over ravine under reservation in grant for highway.

30 L. R. A. 593, HUBBARD v. TURNER, 93 Ga. 752, 20 S. E. 640.

Who are "heirs" or "legal representatives."

Cited in footnotes to Hindry v. Holt, 39 L. R. A. 351, which holds right of action for death limited to lineal descendants by words "heir or heirs" in statute; Noble v. Seattle, 40 L. R. A. 822, which denies parents' right of action as "heirs" for death of person killed in duel; Voss v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 44 L. R. A. 689, which holds interest of children to whom policy on father's life payable if mother previously dies descends to next of kin of one dying before insured.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 611) on who are "legal representatives" within meaning of life insurance policies.

Proceeds of life insurance.

Cited in People use of Brooks v. Petrie, 191 Ill. 507, 85 Am. St. Rep. 268, 61 N. E. 499, Affirming 94 Ill. App. 658, holding proceeds of benefit certificate payable to devisees, devised to executor in trust for heirs, not part of estate.

Cited in footnotes to Sternberg v. Levy, 53 L. R. A. 438, which sustains right as against creditors to procure, with exempt wages, insurance for sister and her children constituting family; Williams v. Donough, 56 L. R. A. 766, which holds void, statute exempting proceeds of fraternal benefit certificate from liability for debts.

30 L. R. A. 598, TOLEDO v. SHEILL, 53 Ohio St. 447, 42 N. E. 323.

Followed without discussion in Toledo v. Just, 53 Ohio St. 677, 44 N. E. 1133; Studer v. Columbus, 53 Ohio St. 677, 44 N. E. 1148, and Shattuck v. Cincinnati, 53 Ohio St. 678, 44 N. E. 1147.

Frontage assessment of corner lots.

Cited in Metcalf v. Carter, 19 Ohio C. C. 199, holding corner lot not assessable for improving side street as having side street frontage merely because basement of building has entrances therefrom.

Distinguished in effect in Emery v. Cincinnati, 4 Ohio N. P. 222, sustaining statute providing for assessment of corner lots for street improvement according to abutting feet.

Assessment for street improvements.

Cited in Nevin v. Dayton, 4 Ohio N. P. 206, holding petitioner agreeing to pay expense of street improvement estopped to deny legality of assessment.

30 L. R. A. 604, STANDISH v. BABCOCK, 53 N. J. Eq. 376, 51 Am. St. Rep. 633, 33 Atl. 385.

Relative rights of individual and partnership creditors.

Cited in footnotes to Re Baldwin, 58 L. R. A. 122, which sustains individual liability of member of banking firm, signing name to certificate of deposit, enforceable against estate in preference to claims against firm; Kincaid v. National Wall Paper Co. 54 L. R. A. 412, which sustains right of partners to appropriate with other partners' consent interest in firm to pay individual in preference to firm debts.

Distinguished in Hoaglin v. Henderson, 119 Iowa, 729, 61 L. R. A. 760, 97 Am. St. Rep. 335, 94 N. W. 247, holding that claim against one of partners cannot be set off in action on partnership claim.

Following trust funds.

Distinguished in Ellicott v. Kuhl, 60 N. J. Eq. 337, 46 Atl. 945, holding claim of cestui que trust against trustee's estate not preferred, trust funds not being traceable.

30 L. R. A. 607, BRISCOE v. ALFREY, 61 Ark. 196, 54 Am. St. Rep. 203, 32 S. W. 505.

Liability for trespass by animals.

Cited in footnote to May v. Poindexter, 47 L. R. A. 588, which holds owner liable for trespass of animals turned by him on unfenced lands.

30 L. R. A. 609, ROSE v. WORTHAM, 95 Tenn. 505, 32 S. W. 458.

Creditor's rights in proceeds of life insurance.

Cited in footnotes to Sternberg v. Levy, 53 L. R. A. 438, which sustains right, as against creditors, to procure with exempt wages, insurance for sister of insured and her children constituting his family; Morris v. Georgia Loan, Sav. &

Bkg. Co. 46 L. R. A. 506, which holds creditor taking assignment of policy entitled to retain from proceeds sufficient to pay debt and advances only.

Distinguished in Wright v. Wright, 100 Tenn. 315, 45 S. W. 672, holding proceeds of unmarried man's insurance payable to himself "executors, administrators or assigns" part of estate.

Who are "heirs."

Cited in footnote to Voss v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 44 L. R. A. 689, which holds interest of children to whom policy on father's life payable if mother previously dies descends to next of kin of one dying before insured.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 595) on who are "heirs" within meaning of life insurance policies.

Statutory construction to effect legislature's purpose.

Cited in Lewis v. Mynatt, 105 Tenn. 514, 58 S. W. 857, construing "relatives" in statute of distribution as including relations by affinity and consanguinity, where legislature's intent so appears.

30 L. R. A. 612, KIRBY v. WESTERN U. TELEG CO. 4 S. D. 105, 439, 55 N. W. 759, 57 N. W. 199, 7 S. D. 623, 65 N. W. 37.

Compulsory obligation to serve public.

Cited in footnotes to Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 48 L. R. A. 563, which denies right of news collecting corporation operating telegraph lines to discriminate between publishers in sale of news; Conn. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 57 L. R. A. 614, which holds delivery of telegrams containing necessary information at place used for pool selling, not a common nuisance; Memphis News Pub. Co. v. Southern R. Co. 63 L. R. A. 150, which holds train run by carrier at solicitation of newspaper publisher guaranteeing daily revenue of specified amount, not a chartered train justifying carrier's exclusion of other publishers from its use.

Carrier's right to limit liability.

Cited in Meuer v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 5 S. D. 575, 25 L. R. A. 84, 49 Am. St. Rep. 848, 59 N. W. 945, holding that common carrier may limit liability by express contract, except as against gross negligence, fraud, or wilful wrong.

Cited in footnotes to Birkett v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 33 L. R. A. 404, which holds valid, condition against liability beyond amount paid for sending unrepeatd message; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Eubank, 36 L. R. A. 711, which denies right to limit recovery for unrepeatd messages to amount paid for sending or to require presenting of claim within sixty days; Ullman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 246, which sustains carrier's right to secure entire exemption from liability as insurer for loss not due to negligence or misfeasance; Mears v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 884, which authorizes carrier to stipulate for exemption from liability for injury by wet; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 53 L. R. A. 720, which holds negligent carrier liable for true value, notwithstanding arbitrary pre-adjustment in bill of lading assented to by shipper; Tecumseh Mills v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 49 L. R. A. 558, which holds prohibition against carriers limiting liability inapplicable to contract by domestic corporation in other state for transportation entirely outside of state.

Contracts for telegrams not on blanks.

Cited in note (56 L. R. A. 745) on contracts for telegrams not written on company's blanks.

30 L. R. A. 626, VAIL v. BROADWAY R. CO. 147 N. Y. 377, 70 N. Y. S. R. 33, 42 N. E. 4.

Riding on outside of street car as negligence.

Cited in Seelig v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 18 Misc. 385, 41 N. Y. Supp. 656, holding riding on front platform of street car not negligence per se; Wood v. Brooklyn City R. R. Co. 5 App. Div. 493, 38 N. Y. Supp. 1077, holding contributory negligence of plaintiff riding on running board of street car question for jury; Watson v. Portland & C. E. R. Co. 91 Me. 591, 44 L. R. A. 159, footnote p. 157, 64 Am. St. Rep. 268, 40 Atl. 699, holding riding on front platform of electric car not negligence per se; Sias v. Rochester R. Co. 169 N. Y. 127, 56 L. R. A. 854, 62 N. E. 132, distinguished in court below, 71 N. Y. S. R. 152, 36 N. Y. Supp. 378, by O'Brien, J., dissenting, who holds contributory negligence of passenger putting head beyond edge of platform to see fire question for jury.

Cited in footnotes to North Chicago Street R. Co. v. Baur, 45 L. R. A. 108, which holds standing on street-car platform with back against dash-board not necessarily negligent; Fisher v. West Virginia & P. R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 69, which holds riding on car platform and refusing to go inside at request, negligence; Third Ave. R. Co. v. Barton, 52 L. R. A. 471, which denies right of passenger on running board of street car to recover for injuries by contact with pillar near track while passing around conductor; Sweetland v. Lynn & B. R. Co. 51 L. R. A. 783, which sustains rule forbidding passenger's riding on front platform of electric car.

Strict construction of penal statutes.

Cited in Stewart v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 20 Misc. 608, 46 N. Y. Supp. 414, holding statutory penalty for excessive fare not recoverable by passenger requested to pay second time on taking following car.

30 L. R. A. 628, NATIONAL TELEPH. MFG. CO. v. DU BOIS, 165 Mass. 117, 52 Am. St. Rep. 503, 42 N. E. 510.

Right to sue in another state.

Cited in Eingartner v. Illinois Steel Co. 94 Wis. 84, 34 L. R. A. 508, 59 Am. St. Rep. 859, 68 N. W. 664 (dissenting opinion), majority denying court's discretionary power to dismiss action on cause arising in and between citizens of another state.

Validity of personal judgment against nonresident constructively served.

Cited in footnotes to Kemper-Thomas Paper Co. v. Shyer, 58 L. R. A. 173, which denies right to execution against other property in state for unpaid part of judgment against nonresident served by attachment and publication; Cabanne v. Graf, 59 L. R. A. 735, which holds void, act authorizing service, in personal action against nonresident, on agent in charge of business in state without seizure of property.

30 L. R. A. 630, STATE ex rel. CHILDS v. SUTTON, 63 Minn. 147, 56 Am. St. Rep. 459, 65 N. W. 262.

Eligibility for public office.

Cited in Opinion of the Justices, 95 Me. 589, 51 Atl. 224 (by minority), holding that resignation does not remove member of legislature's disqualification to hold office during term for which elected; State ex rel. Dowdall v. Dahl, 69 Minn. 111, 72 N. W. 53, raising, without deciding, question whether member of legislature may hold position of district court stenographer.

Cited in footnote to State ex rel. Goodell v. McGeary, 44 L. R. A. 446, which holds building and furnishing new house with intention of living in same not make owner elector of ward while renting elsewhere.

Constitutional interpretation.

Cited in Davis v. Hugo, 81 Minn. 223, 83 N. W. 984, construing constitutional provision that municipal charter shall take effect thirty days after ratification according to apparent meaning.

30 L. R. A. 633, AGRICULTURAL INS. CO. v. HAMILTON, 82 Md. 88, 51 Am. St. Rep. 457, 33 Atl. 429.

Condition in insurance policy against vacancy.

Cited in Home Ins. Co. v. Boyd, 19 Ind. App. 187, 49 N. E. 285, holding that ceasing to use house for living purposes violates anti-vacancy clause.

Cited in footnotes to Home Ins. Co. v. Hancock, 52 L. R. A. 665, which holds house not vacant because custodian has access to only one room; German Ins. Co. v. Russell, 58 L. R. A. 234, which holds policy absolutely forfeited by allowing premises to remain vacant time specified in policy; Henderson Trust Co. v. Stuart, 48 L. R. A. 49, which holds executor liable for loss of insurance from failure to apply for extension of vacancy permit.

Severability of insurance.

Cited in Dumas v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. 12 App. D. C. 265, 40 L. R. A. 364, footnote p. 358, holding entirely void, policy for certain amount on furniture as a whole for breach of condition as to part; Germania F. Ins. Co. v. Schild, 69 Ohio St. 141, 100 Am. St. Rep. 663, 68 N. E. 706, holding provision that "this entire policy shall be void," under specified circumstances, makes policy not severable risk.

Cited in footnote to Southern F. Ins. Co. v. Knight, 52 L. R. A. 70, which holds policy on different classes of property for premium payable in gross sum, indivisible.

Distinguished in Taylor v. Anchor Mut. F. Ins. Co. 116 Iowa, 631, 57 L. R. A. 331, 93 Am. St. Rep. 261, 88 N. W. 807, holding insurance severable on dwelling and live stock separately valued for entire premium.

Effect of insured's forfeiture upon mortgagee's interest.

Cited in footnote to Oakland Home Ins. Co. v. Bank of Commerce, 36 L. R. A. 673, which holds policy not avoided as to mortgagee's interest by insured's violation of provision against transfer of property without consent.

30 L. R. A. 636, JACKSON v. BRITISH AMERICA ASSUR. CO. 106 Mich. 47, 63 N. W. 899.

Followed without discussion in Jackson v. Orient Ins. Co. 106 Mich. 59, 63 N. W. 968.

Effect of riders or slips attached to insurance policies.

Cited in footnotes to Hardy v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 33 L. R. A. 241, which holds mortgagee's rights unaffected by additional insurance taken by mortgagor; Cutler v. Royal Ins. Co. 41 L. R. A. 159, which holds that standard guaranty to maintain 80 per cent insurance stamped on policy does not supersede clause avoiding policy for additional insurance.

30 L. R. A. 644, STORZ v. FINKELSTEIN, 46 Neb. 577, 65 N. W. 195.

Actions on unlawful contracts.

Followed in P. Schoenhofen Brewing Co. v. Whipple, 2 Herdman (Neb.) 709, 89 N. W. 751, denying recovery for liquors sold by firm without license under license issued to another under pretended relation of principal and agent.

Cited in Storz v. Finklestein, 48 Neb. 33, 66 N. W. 1020, denying vendor's right to recover for beer sold for purpose of unlawful resale; Rocco v. Frapoli, 50 Neb. 667, 70 N. W. 236, refusing to enforce accounting upon contract for unlicensed commission sales of liquor; Short v. Bullion-Beck & C. Min. Co. 20 Utah, 32, 45 L. R. A. 607, 57 S. W. 720, denying employee's right to recover for overtime work in violation of eight-hour law.

30 L. R. A. 648, Re BELTON, 47 La. Ann. 1614, 18 So. 642.

Sole ownership of corporate stock.

Cited in State v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. 106 La. 526, 31 So. 115, holding judgment against sole owner of corporate stock not binding on corporation.

Liquidation of corporations.

Cited in Re New Orleans Sanitary Asso. 105 La. 177, 83 Am. St. Rep. 230, 29 So. 337, sustaining putting private corporation established for public purpose in liquidation.

30 L. R. A. 651, EVANS v. KEYSTONE GAS CO. 148 N. Y. 112, 54 N. Y. S. R. 861, 51 Am. St. Rep. 681, 42 N. E. 513.

Res ipsa loquitur.

Cited in Dwyer v. Buffalo General Electric Co. 20 App. Div. 136, 46 N. Y. Supp. 874, holding evidence that insulation of dangerous electric wire wore off where touching brace on telegraph pole justifies jury's finding of negligence.

Liability for injury by dangerous agencies.

Cited in footnote to Purdy v. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. 51 L. R. A. 881, which holds use of barrels formerly containing explosive substance for shipping iron does not render liable for injury to employee by explosion.

— For escape of gas.

Cited in Wichita Gas, Electric Light & P. Co. v. Wright, 9 Kan. App. 736, 59 Pac. 1085, holding company liable for destruction of shade trees, shrubbery, and grass by gas escaping from street main; Armbruster v. Auburn Gaslight Co. 18 App. Div. 448, 46 N. Y. Supp. 158, and Siebrecht v. East River Gas Co. 21 App. Div. 112, 47 N. Y. Supp. 262, holding company liable for plants in greenhouse destroyed by gas from corroded main.

Cited in footnote to Consolidated Gas Co. v. Crocker, 31 L. R. A. 785, which holds failure of gas company to exercise care to discover and remedy leak, negligence.

Measure of damages for trespass.

Distinguished in Mott v. Lewis, 52 App. Div. 561, 65 N. Y. Supp. 31, holding charge that plaintiff may recover difference in value of land with and without dirt piled on it, error.

30 L. R. A. 653, SCHMEER v. GASLIGHT CO. 147 N. Y. 529, 70 N. Y. S. R. 92, 42 N. E. 202.

Liability for escape of gas.

Cited in German-American Ins. Co. v. Standard Gaslight Co. 34 Misc. 595, 70 N. Y. Supp. 384, holding gas company liable for fire resulting from employee's applying match to pipe; Anderson v. Standard Gaslight Co. 17 Misc. 627, 40 N. Y. Supp. 671, holding gas company liable for fire due to leaky meter improperly inspected; Tiehr v. Consolidated Gas Co. 51 App. Div. 447, 65 N. Y. Supp. 10, holding jury's finding that gas company was liable for explosion in street manhole, sustained by evidence; Siebrecht v. East River Gas Co. 21 App. Div. 112, 47 N. Y. Supp. 262, holding company liable for plants in greenhouse destroyed by gas from corroded main; Schaum v. Equitable Gaslight Co. 15 App. Div. 76, 44 N. Y. Supp. 284, denying gas company's liability for explosion from cause not shown where employee was fixing pipes; Paden v. Van Blarcom, 100 Mo. App. 195, 74 S. W. 124, holding it question for jury whether master should not have examined gas valves before turning on and lighting gas resulting in explosion and injury to domestic.

Cited in footnotes to Pine Bluff Water & Light Co. v. Schneider, 33 L. R. A. 366, which requires gas company with notice of break in pipes to take precautions against injury; Richmond Gas Co. v. Baker, 36 L. R. A. 683, which holds gas company liable for escape of gas from cracked elbow in pipe unsuccessfully attempted to be repaired; Barrickman v. Marion Oil Co. 44 L. R. A. 92, which holds gas company liable for furnishing natural gas at so great a pressure as to set building on fire; McKenna v. Bridgewater Gas Co. 47 L. R. A. 790, which denies gas company's liability for explosion due to blundering act of employee of other company.

When question of contributory negligence for jury.

Cited in People's Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Amphlett, 93 Ill. App. 203, holding negligence in hunting gas leak with lighted match question for jury.

Liability for injury by dangerous objects.

Cited in Kleebauer v. Western Fuse & Explosives Co. 138 Cal. 505, 60 L. R. A. 382, 94 Am. St. Rep. 62, 71 Pac. 617, holding storage of gun powder by fuse manufacturer for business purposes not negligence per se.

Cited in footnotes to Vieth v. Hope Salt & Coal Co. 57 L. R. A. 410, which denies liability for injury to neighbor by explosion of steam boiler operated on own premises with care and skill; Purdy v. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. 51 L. R. A. 881, which holds use of barrels formerly containing explosive substance for shipping iron does not render liable for injury to employee by explosion.

30 L. R. A. 658, HARMON v. OLD COLONY R. CO. 165 Mass. 100, 52 Am. St. Rep. 499, 42 N. E. 505.

Effect of married women's enabling acts on husband's common-law rights.

Followed in Texas P. R. Co. v. Humble, 181 U. S. 64, 45 L. ed. 751, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526, Affirming 38 C. C. A. 507, 97 Fed. 842, and Hamilton v. Great Falls Street R. Co. 17 Mont. 352, 43 Pac. 713, sustaining married woman's right to recover for impairment of capacity to labor.

Cited in Kennelly v. Savage, 18 Mont. 122, 44 Pac. 400, holding husband need not join in wife's lease of separate property; Ago v. Canner, 167 Mass. 392, 45 Atl. 754, sustaining wife's right of action for conversion of personalty sold by husband in her absence; Kelley v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 168 Mass. 311, 38 L. R. A. 633, 60 Am. St. Rep. 397, 46 N. E. 1063, holding husband's right of action for loss of consortium through injury to wife unaffected by married women's statutes; Southern R. Co. v. Crowder, 135 Ala. 426, 33 So. 335, sustaining action by husband to recover for loss of wife's services and companionship caused by injury to her; Bradford v. Worcester, 184 Mass. 561, 69 N. E. 310, holding that married woman may gain settlement in state although husband is, during all that time, absent therefrom.

Distinguished in Cullar v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 84 Mo. App. 351, sustaining husband's right to recover for loss of wife's domestic service by negligent injury.

30 L. R. A. 660, SPRINGFIELD F. & M. INS. CO. v. KEESEVILLE, 148 N. Y. 46, 51 Am. St. Rep. 667, 42 N. E. 405.

Insufficiency of water supply.

Cited in footnote to Du Bois v. Du Bois City Waterworks Co. 34 L. R. A. 92, which holds cancelation of contract by city for water supply not justified for inadequacy of supply.

— Liability for fire loss from insufficiency.

Cited in Miller v. Minneapolis, 75 Minn. 133, 77 N. W. 788, denying city's liability for negligently suffering fire hydrants to become clogged; Planters' Oil Mill v. Monroe Waterworks & Light Co. 52 La. Ann. 1248, 27 So. 684, denying municipal liability for failure of contracting private water company to furnish adequate fire protection; Ukiah City v. Ukiah Water & Improv. Co. 142 Cal. 178, 64 L. R. A. 234, 100 Am. St. Rep. 107, 75 Pac. 773, denying liability of water company to city for loss by negligent failure to furnish sufficient water, in absence of express contract to that effect; Smith v. Great South Bay Water Co. 82 App. Div. 428, 81 N. Y. Supp. 812, denying right of taxpayer to action against water company under contract with municipality, to recover for loss by inadequate force for fire extinguishment.

Cited in footnotes to Gorrell v. Greensboro Water Supply Co. 46 L. R. A. 513, which sustains right of action by citizen for breach of water company's contract to supply sufficient water to prevent loss by fire; Middlesex Water Co. v. Knappmann Whiting Co. 49 L. R. A. 572, which holds water company failing to supply sufficient water for fire purposes liable to consumer for loss of property by fire.

Cited in note (61 L. R. A. 35, 95) on establishment and regulation of municipal water supply.

Disapproved in Lenzen v. New Braunfels, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 361, 35 S. W. 341, holding city liable for negligent failure to supply water to extinguish fires.

Municipal waterworks as nongovernmental enterprise.

Cited in footnote to Newport v. Com. 45 L. R. A. 518, which holds city taxable for waterworks franchise.

Liability for nonfeasance or malfeasance in performing governmental function.

Cited in Lefrois v. Monroe County, 162 N. Y. 567, 50 L. R. A. 206, 57 N. E. 185, denying county's liability for acts of officials creating nuisance by spreading sewage on almshouse farm; Peaty v. New York, 33 Misc. 235, 67 N. Y. Supp. 276, denying city's liability for death of employee caused by breaking of defective fire alarm pole; Doty v. Port Jervis, 23 Misc. 314, 52 N. Y. Supp. 57, denying liability of village for killing of person by incompetent policeman; Reynolds v. Board of Education, 33 App. Div. 93, 53 N. Y. Supp. 75, denying school board's liability for act of "attendance officer" wrongfully arresting scholar killed by train while trying to escape; Nicholson v. Detroit, 129 Mich. 256, 56 L. R. A. 605, 88 N. W. 695, denying city's liability for death of employee contracting smallpox in tearing down pesthouse; Hughes v. Auburn, 161 N. Y. 106, 46 L. R. A. 639, 55 N. E. 389, denying city's liability for disease or death superinduced by negligent construction or maintenance of sewer; Corbett v. St. Vincent's Industrial School, 177 N. Y. 22, 68 N. E. 997, Affirming 79 App. Div. 349, 79 N. Y. Supp. 369, holding charitable corporation acting as one of governmental agencies of state in receiving boy convicted of crime, not liable for negligence toward him; Snouffer v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co. 118 Iowa, 307, 92 N. W. 79, holding power of city over streets, legislative one, vested in it, to which all ordinances and regulations are subject.

Distinguished in effect in Tilford v. New York, 1 App. Div. 201, 37 N. Y. Supp. 185, denying city's liability for ultra vires act of officers imposing quarantine; Workman v. New York City, 179 U. S. 579, 45 L. ed. 327, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212 (dissenting opinion), majority holding city liable for negligent collision of fireboat with another vessel; Esberg Cigar Co. v. Portland, 34 Or. 289, 301, 43 L. R. A. 440, 75 Am. St. Rep. 651, 55 Pac. 961, holding city liable for damages caused by bursting of improperly constructed water main; Fordham v. Gouverneur, 15 App. Div. 624, 44 N. Y. Supp. 1117, by Landon, J., dissenting, who holds village liable for creation of obstruction in highway by water commissioners.

Right of action for municipal negligence.

Cited in Barry v. Port Jervis, 64 App. Div. 278, 72 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding charter requirement of forty-eight-hour notice of personal injuries resulting from negligence as condition precedent to action, unconstitutional.

Water rates.

Cited in footnotes to Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 36 L. R. A. 260, which holds system of water rates yielding only fair profit to owners after paying charges should not be reduced; Detroit v. Board of Water Comrs. 31 L. R. A. 463, which denies right to compel incorporated board of water commissioners to furnish water free to house of correction.

30 L. R. A. 665, ISAACS v. BARBER, 10 Wash. 124, 45 Am. St. Rep. 772, 38 Pac. 871.

Rights of prior appropriator of water.

Followed in Wold v. May, 10 Wash. 158, 38 Pac. 875, sustaining right of prior appropriator of waters of creek, according to prevailing custom, as against riparian owner.

Cited in Benton v. Johncox, 17 Wash. 280, 39 L. R. A. 109, footnote p. 107, 61 Am. St. Rep. 912, 49 Pac. 495, requiring protection of riparian owner against subsequent appropriation; Crawford Co. v. Hall (Neb.) 60 L. R. A. 905, 93 N. W. 781, construing statute as recognition of custom of appropriation of water, and as vesting title in prior appropriators thereof, as against subsequent riparian owners.

Cited in footnotes to Charnock v. Higuerra, 32 L. R. A. 190, which sustains riparian owner's right to raise water by pumps for irrigation; Longmire v. Smith, 58 L. R. A. 308, which holds first appropriator for irrigation not deprived of rights by failure at first to describe definite measurement of what he uses and to furnish clear evidence of amount required; North Point Consol. Irrig. Co. v. Utah & S. L. Canal Co. 40 L. R. A. 851, which holds right to irrigate land, subject to duty to take care not to injure others with seepage or waste water unfit for irrigation; Salt Lake City v. Salt Lake City Water & Electrical Power Co. 61 L. R. A. 648, which denies prior appropriator's right to complain of noninjurious use by upper proprietor; Hague v. Nephi Irrig. Co. 41 L. R. A. 311, which holds appropriation of more water than needed ineffectual to prevent subsequent appropriation of excess; Bruening v. Dorr, 35 L. R. A. 640, which denies right to use water of spring for irrigation as against prior appropriator of stream into which it percolates; Crawford Co. v. Hall, 60 L. R. A. 889, which holds right to use water acquired by appropriation superior to that of subsequent riparian proprietor.

Cited in notes (30 L. R. A. 186) on appropriation of percolating waters on public lands; (41 L. R. A. 743) on correlative rights of upper and lower proprietors as to use and flow of water in stream; (59 L. R. A. 821) on liability for damming back water of stream.

30 L. R. A. 680, BROWN v. SMITH, 19 R. I. 319, 33 Atl. 466.

Divorced father's liability for support of child.

Cited in McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 71, 57 Pac. 677, denying court's power to require reimbursement of stepfather by divorced father for support of children.

Cited in footnotes to Foss v. Hartwell, 37 L. R. A. 589, which denies divorced father's liability to subsequent husband of wife for support of child surreptitiously taken by mother; Re Zilley, 40 L. R. A. 579, which holds father liable to pay mother after divorce for keeping child which father entitled to under decree; Keller v. St. Louis, 47 L. R. A. 391, which denies mother's right of action for injury to child given her by divorce decree without provision as to its support.

Action by mother for loss by child's injury.

Cited in McGarr v. National & P. Worsted Mills, 24 R. I. 449, 60 L. R. A. 124, 96 Am. St. Rep. 749, 53 Atl. 320, sustaining right of mother, supporting family, to recover expense caused by wrongful injury to child.

30 L. R. A. 682, MILLER v. MCCARDELL, 19 R. I. 304, 33 Atl. 445.

Covenant to maintain leased premises.

Cited in Lovejoy v. Townsend, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 386, 61 S. W. 331, holding landlord agreeing to repair and keep in repair, obligated to do so, without regard to condition of roof at date of lease.

Cited in footnote to Marshall v. Rugg, 33 L. R. A. 679, which holds actual termination of tenancy "expiration" of lease within covenant as to restoring property.

30 L. R. A. 684, HOWE v. MINNEAPOLIS, ST. P. & S. STE. M. R. CO. 62 Minn. 71, 54 Am. St. Rep. 616, 64 N. W. 102.

Duty to look and listen at crossing.

Cited in Snider v. New Orleans & C. R. Co. 48 La. Ann. 12, 18 So. 695, holding person before crossing car track should look and listen at time and place where precaution effective.

Cited in footnotes to Western & A. R. Co. v. Ferguson, 54 L. R. A. 803, which holds failure to look within 30 feet of track not prevent recovery; Woehrle v. Minnesota Transfer R. Co. 52 L. R. A. 349, which holds traveler's failure to look and listen when watchman absent not negligence per se; Lorenz v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 753, which holds negligence of one pursuing cow, in not looking and listening before crossing railroad track, for jury.

Imputing driver's negligence to passenger.

Cited in Johnson v. St. Paul City R. Co. 67 Minn. 262, 36 L. R. A. 587, 69 N. W. 900, holding negligence of driver not imputable to person riding in funeral procession; Finley v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 71 Minn. 476, 74 N. W. 174, holding negligence of husband driving not imputable to wife; Cunningham v. Thief River Falls, 84 Minn. 28, 86 N. W. 763, holding negligence of driver not imputable to person invited to ride with friends; Koplitz v. St. Paul, 86 Minn. 375, 58 L. R. A. 75, 90 N. W. 794, holding negligence of member of picnic party driving omnibus not imputable to young lady passenger.

Cited in footnote to Illinois C. R. Co. v. McLeod, 52 L. R. A. 954, which holds hirer of team and driver bound to check latter's attempt to cross track without stopping or listening for train.

When contributory negligence question for jury.

Cited in Wosika v. St. Paul City R. Co. 80 Minn. 368, 83 N. W. 386, holding negligence of passenger by invitation in wagon, without control over team or driver, question for jury.

30 L. R. A. 689, ANOKA LUMBER CO. v. FIDELITY & C. CO. 63 Minn. 286, 65 N. W. 353.

Notice to insurer.

Cited in Grand Rapids Electric Light & P. Co. v. Fidelity & C. Co. 111 Mich. 151, 69 N. W. 249, holding notice need not be given to insurer against employer's liability until accident and claim for damages; Comstock v. Fraternal Acci. Asso. 116 Wis. 390, 93 N. W. 22, holding accident policy not avoided in absence of unequivocal language, by failure of insured to give notice of accident within time specified, because of incapacity.

Cited in footnote to Munz v. Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 62 L. R. A. 485, which holds insurer not released from liability for failure to furnish notice and proofs of death within required time, by beneficiary not learning of death or of policy within such time.

Distinguished in Underwood Veneer Co. v. London Guarantee & Acci. Co. 100 Wis. 382, 75 N. W. 996, construing provision for notice "upon occurrence of accident and also upon receipt of claim," as requiring notice on both occasions.

Liability to assured not paying judgment.

Cited in Pickett v. Fidelity & C. Co. 60 S. C. 491, 38 S. E. 160, holding insurer liable to insolvent assured not paying employee's judgment; Hoven v. Em- employers Liability Assur. Corp. 93 Wis. 208, 32 L. R. A. 390, footnote p. 388, 32 N. W. 388, holding payment of claims for injuries to employee not condition precedent to suit on employer's liability policy; Sanders v. Frankfort M. Acci. & Plate Glass Ins. Co. 72 N. H. 493, 101 Am. St. Rep. 688, 57 Atl. 655, construing employer's liability policy as indemnity against liability.

Right of employee to proceeds of employer's liability insurance.

Cited in Moore v. Los Angeles Iron & Steel Co. 89 Fed. 75, holding insurer and insured may be sued jointly by injured employee under statute making indemnitor and indemnitee jointly liable.

Cited in footnotes to Embler v. Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Ins. Co. 44 L. R. A. 512, which denies right of personal representatives of employee to recover on policy taken out by employer insuring against injury to employees; Boisseau v. Penn, 57 L. R. A. 380, which holds execution not lien on interest of debtor in twenty-year distribution policy on his life which ceases on failure to pay premiums.

Distinguished in Frye v. Bath Gas & Electric Co. 97 Me. 245, 59 L. R. A. 446, 94 Am. St. Rep. 500, 54 Atl. 395, denying right of injured employee to enforce indemnity insurance where employer insolvent; Bain v. Atkins, 181 Mass. 244, 57 L. R. A. 792, footnote p. 791, 92 Am. St. Rep. 411, 63 S. E. 414, denying right of injured person to sue insurer against loss through liability for injuries, after settlement with insured.

Employer's liability insurance.

Cited in Employers Liability Assur. Corp. v. Light, Heat & Power Co. 28 Ind. App. 441, 63 N. E. 54, holding "immediate medical attention" for which insurer liable, as attention during period necessary to notify insurer; Cornell v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 66 App. Div. 563, 73 N. Y. Supp. 341, holding that insured may recover expense of successfully defending suit, where insurance company fails to defend.

Cited in footnotes to Shakman v. United States Credit System Co. 32 L. R. A. 383, which holds contract to indemnify merchant against loss by insolvency of customers, contract of insurance; People ex rel. Kasson v. Rose, 44 L. R. A. 124, which holds guaranteeing fidelity of officers and performance of contracts, insurance.

Assignment of indemnity insurance.

Cited in Fenton v. Fidelity & C. Co. 36 Or. 290, 48 L. R. A. 772, footnote p. 770, 56 Pac. 1096, holding indemnity against liability for injuries to employees assignable though employer insolvent.

Cited in note (44 L. R. A. 180, 183) on assignability of cause of action for personal injuries.

30 L. R. A. 693, STRAUSS v. CAROLINA INTERSTATE BLDG. & L. ASSO.
117 N. C. 308, 53 Am. St. Rep. 585, 23 S. E. 450.

Rights of borrowing member of insolvent loan association.

Cited in Manorita v. Fidelity Trust & Loan Co. 101 Fed. 12, and Williams v. Maxwell, 123 N. C. 593, 31 S. E. 821, holding borrowing stockholder of loan association entitled to credit for all payments, less pro rata share of losses; Meares v. Davis, 121 N. C. 120, 28 S. E. 188, holding borrowing stockholder of insolvent loan association not entitled to surplus on mortgage sale equal to pro rata share of deficiency; Meares v. Duncan, 123 N. C. 205, 31 S. E. 476, holding married woman who is borrowing stockholder of loan association liable for share of losses; Armstrong v. United States Bldg. & L. Asso. 15 App. D. C. 18, holding borrowing member of insolvent loan association chargeable with present money value of unpaid instalments; Hale v. Cairns, 8 N. D. 150, 44 L. R. A. 262, 73 Am. St. Rep. 746, 77 N. W. 1010, denying right of borrowing member of insolvent loan association to apply stock payments on mortgage; Young v. Improvement Loan & Bldg. Asso. 48 W. Va. 524, 38 S. E. 670, holding borrowing member of insolvent association chargeable with debt and interest, crediting all payments except stock dues; Coltrane v. Baltimore Bldg. & L. Asso. 110 Fed. 305, holding borrower upon winding up insolvent association entitled to credit for interest and premiums paid; People's Bldg. & L. Asso. v. McPhilamy, 81 Miss. 82, 59 L. R. A. 745, footnote p. 743, 95 Am. St. Rep. 693, 32 So. 1001, requiring stock payments of borrowing member to share losses and expenses of winding up loan association; Reddick v. United States Bldg. & L. Asso. 106 Ky. 112, 49 S. W. 1075, charging borrowing member with amount of loan and interest, and crediting him with amounts paid in and reasonably certain approximate value of his stock; Meares v. Finlayson, 55 S. C. 117, 32 S. E. 986, raising, without deciding, question of liability of borrowing member assigning stock as security for pro rata share of losses.

Application of payments to loan association.

Cited in Hollowell v. Southern Bldg. & L. Asso. 120 N. C. 287, 26 S. E. 781, holding loan association charges against borrowing member in excess of lawful interest, usurious; Pollock v. Carolina Interstate Bldg. & L. Asso. 51 S. C. 426, 64 Am. St. Rep. 683, 29 S. E. 77, holding borrowing member of loan association entitled to credit on debt for all moneys paid; People's Loan & Sav. Asso. v. Fowble, 17 Utah, 130, 53 Pac. 999, and Hale v. Thomas, 20 Utah, 432, 59 Pac. 241, holding borrower from loan association entitled to have stock dues credited on loan; Western Sav. Co. v. Houston, 38 Or. 381, 65 Pac. 611, and Hale v. Stenger, 22 Wash. 520, 61 Pac. 156, holding that on foreclosure, borrower from loan association entitled to have all payments, under whatever name, credited; Meares v. Butler, 123 N. C. 207, 31 S. E. 477, holding that wife mortgaging land to secure husband's debt to loan association cannot counterclaim usurious interest not paid by her.

Cited in footnote to Roberts v. American Bldg. & L. Asso. 33 L. R. A. 744, which holds amount recoverable on loan association mortgage, amount of interest, dues, and fines and present value of anticipated payments.

Cited in note (35 L. R. A. 222) on fines in building and loan associations.

Power of sale in mortgage.

Cited in Hussey v. Hill, 120 N. C. 316, 58 Am. St. Rep. 789, 26 S. E. 919, holding that assignment of mortgage does not carry with it power of sale therein.

30 L. R. A. 696, SCOTT v. FISHBLATE, 117 N. C. 265, 23 S. E. 436.

Liability of officer for judicial act.

Cited in Calhoun v. Little, 106 Ga. 341, 43 L. R. A. 632, footnote p. 630, 71 Am. St. Rep. 254, 32 S. E. 86, denying personal liability of inferior judicial officer for unofficial sentence imposed under illegal ordinance which judge held valid; Albers v. Merchants' Exchange, 138 Mo. 164, 39 S. W. 473, holding corporate directors not liable for suspending member of merchant's exchange without malice.

Cited in footnotes to Webb v. Fisher, 60 L. R. A. 791, which holds judge not subject to private action for corruptly entering decree disbarring attorney; Tillman v. Beard, 46 L. R. A. 215, which denies liability of village president, procuring arrest for violating void ordinance.

Distinguished in Re Briggs, 135 N. C. 129, 47 S. E. 403, sustaining right of appeal of witness adjudged guilty of contempt for unlawful refusal to answer.

30 L. R. A. 697, MAJOR v. CAYCE, 98 Ky. 357, 33 S. W. 93.

30 L. R. A. 700, GUM-ELASTIC ROOFING CO. v. MEXICO PUB. CO. 140 Ind. 158, 39 N. E. 443.

Exhibit as part of complaint.

Cited in Indiana Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Plank, 152 Ind. 198, 52 N. E. 991, holding exhibit not foundation of pleading cannot be considered in determining sufficiency; Dudley v. Pigg, 149 Ind. 364, 48 N. E. 642, holding in action to revoke widow's election, copy filed as exhibit cannot be considered; Fitch v. Byall, 149 Ind. 557, 49 N. E. 455, holding copy of summons filed as exhibit cannot be considered in aid of complaint to set aside judgment for want of proper service; First Nat. Bank v. Greger, 157 Ind. 480, 62 N. E. 21, holding minutes of board reducing assessment attached as exhibit cannot be considered in determining sufficiency of complaint to enjoin collection of taxes; Marley v. National Bldg. Loan & Sav. Asso. No. 2, 28 Ind. App. 370, 62 N. E. 1023, holding in suit to cancel, bond and mortgage attached as exhibit cannot be considered in aid of complaint; Kelley v. Houts, 30 Ind. App. 477, 66 N. E. 408, denying necessity of making judgment in foreclosure part of complaint in subsequent action to foreclose equities of junior lien holders theretofore omitted.

Pleading legal conclusions.

Cited in Foland v. Frankton, 142 Ind. 550, 41 N. E. 1031, holding allegation in action to restrain execution of lighting contract, that town will not have money to meet indebtedness, legal conclusion; Weir v. State, 161 Ind. 438, 68 N. E. 1023, holding averment that relatrix was entitled to attend public school, mere conclusion, not obviating necessity of averment that she was unmarried.

Irregularity of judgment as basis for collateral attack.

Cited in George v. Nowlan, 38 Or. 541, 64 Pac. 1, denying equitable relief against judgment in excess of amount demanded in complaint; Mott v. State, 145 Ind. 354, 44 N. E. 548, holding judgment including improper items by court having jurisdiction not collaterally assailable, and referring particularly to annotation in 30 L. R. A. 700; Winslow v. Green, 155 Ind. 370, 58 N. E. 259, holding conviction not assailable on habeas corpus for failure to arraign or enter plea; Davis v. Clements, 148 Ind. 607, 62 Am. St. Rep. 539, 47 N. E. 1056, holding judgment of foreclosure not enjoinable for mere irregularities; Fitch v. Byall, 149 Ind. 557, 49 N. E. 455, denying injunction against judgment asked on ground of want of proper service.

Cited in notes (30 L. R. A. 793) on injunction against judgments obtained by fraud, accident, mistake, surprise, and duress; (31 L. R. A. 202, 203, 208) on injunctions against judgments for want of jurisdiction, or which are void.

30 L. R. A. 707, LEVYSTEIN BROS. v. O'BRIEN, 106 Ala. 352, 54 Am. St. Rep. 56, 17 So. 550.

30 L. R. A. 713, HOUSTON DIRECT NAV. CO. v. INSURANCE CO. OF N. A. 89 Tex. 1, 59 Am. St. Rep. 17, 32 S. W. 889.

What constitutes interstate commerce.

Cited in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Payne, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 60, 38 S. W. 366, holding shipment over line within, from point without, state interstate commerce; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Davis, 93 Tex. 380, 54 S. W. 383, in opinion of court of civil appeals, holding shipment from point to point within state, of cattle driven in from another, interstate commerce (reversed by supreme court on other points); State v. International & G. N. R. Co. 31 Tex. Civ. App. 222, 71 S. W. 994, holding shipment, foreign one, when its final destination was outside state, although first shipped to point within state, from which foreign bill of lading was taken.

Cited as overruled in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Walker, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 217, 60 S. W. 796, refusing to sustain assignment of error that shipment from point to point in state is interstate commerce, although final destination is without state.

State laws and interstate commerce.

Cited in Robinson v. New York & T. S. S. Co. 36 Misc. 706, 74 N. Y. Supp. 384, holding contract for transportation to point without state, not governed by state statute; Houston, E. & W. T. R. Co. v. Seale, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 366, 67 S. W. 437, sustaining limitation of liability to its own line, by railroad company engaged in interstate carriage.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 644) on corporate taxation and the commerce clause.

30 L. R. A. 716, TAYLOR v. HART, 73 Miss. 22, 18 So. 546.

Effect of destruction of premises on tenant's liability.

Cited in footnote to Arbenz v. Exley, 61 L. R. A. 957, which holds tenant of land not released by total destruction of building included in lease.

30 L. R. A. 719, WEBSTER v. DWELLING HOUSE INS. CO. 53 Ohio St. 558, 53 Am. St. Rep. 658, 42 N. E. 546.

Provision of policy relative to insured's title to land.

Cited in Mascott v. First Nat. F. Ins. Co. 69 Vt. 120, 37 Atl. 255, sustaining validity of insurance running to husband and wife on building built by both on wife's land; Warren v. Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. 13 Tex. Civ. App. 469, 35 S. W. 810, holding insurance in husband's name on homestead built with community funds on wife's land, valid.

Forfeitures.

Cited in Brush Electric Co. v. Warwick Electric Mfg. Co. 4 Ohio N. P. 280, holding that failure to pay purchase money on day named in land contract does not work forfeiture; Forest City Ins. Co. v. Hardesty, 182 Ill. 45, 74 Am. St. Rep. 161, 55 N. E. 139, holding change of title by death of assured does not work forfeiture of fire insurance.

Construction of insurance contracts.

Cited in Terwilliger v. National Masonic Acci. Asso. 197 Ill. 13, 63 N. E. 1034, holding insured entitled to most favorable construction of insurance contract.

Construction of statute fixing insurer's liability.

Distinguished in Doten v. Aetna Ins. Co. 77 Minn. 477, 80 N. W. 630, holding statute avoiding insurance upon vacancy without permission unaffected by clause fixing insurer's liability in absence of change increasing risk.

30 L. R. A. 722, DE FORD v. PAINTER, 3 Okla. 80, 41 Pac. 96.

Court's power to examine witness.

Cited in note (57 L. R. A. 879) on power of court to call and examine witness.

What included under homestead exemption statute.

Cited in Smith v. Guckenheimer, 42 Fla. 47, 27 So. 900 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that homestead exemption law does not include store rooms inseparably attached to residence of owner.

30 L. R. A. 730, NORTHERN P. R. CO. v. PAUSON, 17 C. C. A. 287, 44 U. S. App. 178, 70 Fed. Rep. 585.

Liability for expulsion of passenger presenting defective ticket.

Cited in Hot Springs R. Co. v. Deloney, 65 Ark. 181, 67 Am. St. Rep. 913, 45 S. W. 351, holding railroad liable for ejection of passenger with ticket improperly made out; Scofield v. Pennsylvania Co. 56 L. R. A. 226, 50 C. C. A. 555, 112 Fed. 858 holding railroad liable for expulsion of passenger whose ticket was wrongfully taken up by another conductor before reaching stop-over; Indianapolis Street R. Co. v. Wilson, 161 Ind. 158, 100 Am. St. Rep. 261, 66 N. E. 950, and O'Rourke v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 103 Tenn. 132, 46 L. R. A. 616, 76 Am. St. Rep. 639, 52 S. W. 872, holding railway liable for ejection of passenger presenting wrongly punched transfer slip; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 55 Ohio St. 384, 60 Am. St. Rep. 706, 45 N. E. 712, holding railroad liable in tort for expulsion of passenger told by station agent to take train not stopping at destination; Pennsylvania Co. v. Lenhart, 56 C. C. A. 469, 120 Fed. 63, holding railroad company liable for ejecting passenger tendering mileage ticket under such circumstances that conductor was bound to receive it.

Cited in footnotes to Atkinson v. Southern R. Co. 55 L. R. A. 223, which holds carrier liable for ejection of passenger because train does not stop at his station as ticket seller had incorrectly told him; Southern R. Co. v. Wood, 55 L. R. A. 536, which holds carrier liable for ejection of passenger whose round-trip ticket is unstamped from inability to find agent; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Harper, 64 L. R. A. 283, which denies right to eject passenger presenting ticket not specifying route to place of destination, because of regulations requiring her to take another route.

Requirement that return coupon be stamped.

Cited in footnote to Watson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 49 L. R. A. 454, which holds condition requiring return coupon of round-trip ticket to be stamped, reasonable.

30 L. R. A. 734, COM. v. MURPHY, 165 Mass. 66, 52 Am. St. Rep. 496, 42 N. E. 504.

Sufficiency of indictment for rape.

Cited in Com. v. Hackett, 170 Mass. 196, 48 N. E. 1087, holding indictment charging defendant with carnally knowing and abusing female under sixteen good.

L. R. A. AU.—VOL. IV.—5.

Cruel and unusual punishments.

Cited in note (35 L. R. A. 562, 565, 576, 579) on cruel and unusual punishments.

Knowledge as element of crime.

Cited in State v. Kelly, 54 Ohio St. 179, 43 N. E. 163, holding ignorance of adulteration no defense in prosecution for violating law against sale of adulterated food; Com. v. Smith, 166 Mass. 376, 44 N. E. 503, holding that complaint for being in gambling place need not allege defendant's knowledge thereof; State ex rel. Milwaukee v. Newman, 96 Wis. 270, 71 N. W. 438, sustaining ordinance authorizing arrest of persons found in gambling house.

30 L. R. A. 736, Ex parte HAWKINS, 61 Ark. 321, 54 Am. St. Rep. 209, 33 S. W. 106.

30 L. R. A. 737, HOULTON v. DUNN, 60 Minn. 26, 51 Am. St. Rep. 493, 61 N. W. 698.

Contracts to procure legislation.

Cited in Owens v. Wilkinson, 20 App. D. C. 71, denying validity of attorney's agreement to procure legislation favorable to claim involving personal solicitation.

Cited in footnotes to Richardson v. Scotts Bluff County, 48 L. R. A. 294, which holds void contract to secure passage of bill by legislature; Crichfield v. Bermudez Asphalt Paving Co. 42 L. R. A. 347, which holds void, employment to promote business of paving company including procuring of passage of ordinance for paving streets and alleys, with commissions contingent on success; William Deering & Co. v. Cunningham, 54 L. R. A. 410, which holds void, contract to withdraw opposition to granting of pardon; Veazey v. Allen, 62 L. R. A. 362, which holds contract to share profits of "short" sale of stock of corporation with one about to bring its affairs before the legislature for investigation, void.

Distinguished in Houlton v. Nichol, 93 Wis. 402, 33 L. R. A. 170, footnote p. 166, 57 Am. St. Rep. 928, 67 N. W. 715, sustaining contract to aid in acquiring title to public lands by services to be rendered.

30 L. R. A. 743, DAVIS v. COM. 164 Mass. 241, 41 N. E. 292.

Contracts to procure legislation.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 739) on validity of contract for services to procure legislation.

Employment of counsel for state.

Cited in Opinion of the Justices, 72 N. H. 604, 54 Atl. 950, sustaining appointment by legislature of attorney to prosecute claims of state for agreed compensation.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 496) on governor's power to employ counsel for state.

Compensation for collecting claim against government.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 51, 52, 53) on what claims constitute valid demand against a state.

Distinguished in Ball v. Halsell, 161 U. S. 83, 40 L. ed. 625, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554, denying attorney's right to enforce agreement to pay half of claim recovered from government; Lynch v. Pollard, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 105, 62 S. W. 945, holding void, agreement allowing attorney larger per cent for collection of Indian depredation claims than is expressly allowed by statute.

30 L. R. A. 747, SMITH v. CORNELIUS, 41 W. Va. 59, 23 S. E. 599.

Acts of directors binding corporation.

Cited in Limer v. Traders Co. 44 W. Va. 181, 28 S. E. 730, holding director's individual assent to contract cannot bind corporation.

Ultra vires acts of corporation.

Cited in Clarksburg Electric Light Co. v. Clarksburg, 47 W. Va. 749, 50 L. R. A. 152, 35 S. E. 994, holding municipality not bound by ultra vires grant of exclusive street railroad franchise.

30 L. R. A. 754, WIGGINS v. WILLIAMS, 36 Fla. 637, 18 So. 859.

Right to jury trial.

Cited in Hughes v. Hannah, 39 Fla. 371, 22 So. 613, sustaining right to trial by jury in action by heirs against persons in possession under tax title.

Injunction against trespass.

Cited in Brown v. Solary, 37 Fla. 110, 19 So. 161, enjoining mining of phosphate rock; Moore v. Halliday, 43 Or. 247, 99 Am. St. Rep. 724, 72 Pac. 801, denying injunction against trespass which does not result in irreparable injury.

30 L. R. A. 761, STATE ex rel. RUSHWORTH v. INFERIOR COURT OF COMMON PLEAS JUDGES, 58 N. J. L. 97, 32 Atl. 743.

Administration of Federal laws in state courts.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 36) on administration of Federal laws in state courts.

30 L. R. A. 765, ORIENTAL HOTEL CO. v. GRIFFITHS, 88 Tex. 574, 53 Am. St. Rep. 790, 33 S. W. 652.

Mechanic's liens.

Cited in Cain v. Texas Bldg. & L. Asso. 21 Tex. Civ. App. 67, 51 S. W. 879, holding that original mechanic's lien attaches to building erected after destruction of first; Texas Builders' Supply Co. v. National Loan & Invest. Co. 22 Tex. Civ. App. 352, 54 S. W. 1059, holding claims of unpaid subcontractors, prior lien on fund assigned to contractor in payment; Kahler v. Carruthers, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 225, 45 S. W. 160, sustaining decree for sale of whole property, prorating proceeds among lien holders on lot and building.

Superiority of mechanic's lien to mortgage.

Cited in Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Taylor, 91 Tex. 80, 40 S. W. 876, holding material man's lien superior to mortgage given while work in progress.

Cited in footnotes to Vilas v. McDonough Mfg. Co. 30 L. R. A. 778, which holds lien for machinery in mill superior to prior mortgages on premises; Fisher v. Wineman, 52 L. R. A. 192, which holds void judgment giving preference to labor debt over pre-existing lien without making lienor party.

Payment in stock or bonds.

Cited in footnote to Johnson v. Dooley, 40 L. R. A. 74, which holds note payable in bonds not payable in money, on failure to tender bonds when due.

"Inception" of mechanic's liens.

Cited in West Virginia Bldg. Co. v. Saucer, 45 W. Va. 485, 72 Am. St. Rep. 822, 31 S. E. 965, sustaining builder's right to file lien before completion of work.

Distinguished in Sullivan v. Texas Briquette & Coal Co. 94 Tex. 545, 63 S. W. 307, holding that recital in mortgage that loan is for purpose of completing plant, does not constitute inception of material men's liens.

Effect of change in language of re-enacted statute.

Cited in Halbert v. San Saba Springs Land & Live Stock Asso. 89 Tex. 232, 49 L. R. A. 198, 34 S. W. 639, holding that change of language of statute prescribing when laws take effect raises presumption of intention to change rule.

30 L. R. A. 778, VILAS v. McDONOUGH MFG. CO. 91 Wis. 607, 51 Am. St. Rep. 925, 65 N. W. 488.

Mechanic's liens.

Cited in Fitzgerald v. Walsh 107 Wis. 97, 81 Am. St. Rep. 824, 82 S. W. 717, holding that commencement of building subsequently abandoned gives architect right to lien.

Distinguished in Rogers-Ruger Co. v. Murray, 115 Wis. 271, 59 L. R. A. 741, 95 Am. St. Rep. 901, 91 N. W. 657, holding statute making purchaser of property on which log lien is claimed liable for full amount, unconstitutional.

Superiority of mechanic's liens over mortgages.

Followed in J. B. Alfree Mfg. Co. v. Henry, 96 Wis. 333, 71 N. W. 370, holding that lien for machinery in mill takes precedence over mortgage executed after commencing construction of mill and making contract.

Cited in Kay v. Towsley, 113 Mich. 283, 71 N. W. 490, giving mechanic's lien priority over mortgage given after commencement of building but before labor performed.

Cited in footnote to Fisher v. Wineman, 52 L. R. A. 192, which holds void, judgment giving preference to labor debt over pre-existing lien without making lienor party.

30 L. R. A. 783, FAUST v. AMERICAN F. INS. CO. 91 Wis. 158, 51 Am. St. Rep. 876, 64 N. W. 883.

Keeping prohibited articles on insured premises.

Cited in Davis v. Pioneer Furniture Co. 102 Wis. 397, 78 N. W. 596, holding policy not avoided by keeping reasonable quantity of benzine in furniture factory; Smith v. German Ins. Co. 107 Mich. 282, 30 L. R. A. 373, 65 N. W. 236, holding that keeping can of gasoline on premises, for burning off paint, does not avoid policy; American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Green, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 538, 41 S. W. 74, holding that use of gasoline cooking stove, customary in vicinity, does not avoid policy; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Flemming, 65 Ark. 58, 39 L. R. A. 791, 67 Am. St. Rep. 900, 44 S. W. 464, holding that keeping benzine, bottled in small quantities, does not avoid policy on stock of drugs and chemicals; Mascott v. First Nat. F. Ins. Co. 69 Vt. 122, 37 Atl. 255, holding insurance on paint-shop not avoided by use of benzine; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Walters, 24 Ind. App. 52, 79 Am. St. Rep. 257, 56 N. E. 257, holding insurance on retail hardware stock not avoided by keeping dynamite.

Cited in footnotes to Yoch v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. 34 L. R. A. 857, which holds policy not avoided by gasoline kept as part of usual stock in country store; Maril v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. 30 L. R. A. 835, which holds policy not avoided by use of inflammable substances necessary and customarily incident to business: Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Wade, 58 L. R. A. 714, which holds policy not avoided by bringing gallon of gasoline on premises for temporary use though causing their destruction; Heron v. Phoenix Mut. F. Ins. Co. 36 L. R. A. 517, which holds policy avoided by taking fireworks into residence for use in celebrating on following evening.

Distinguished in Mitchell v. Potomac Ins. Co. 16 App. D. C. 263, holding that gasoline cannot be regarded as part of insured stock of stove store where special permit to keep obtained.

Waiver of proof of loss.

Cited in footnote to Hoffman v. Michigan Home & Hospital Asso. 54 L. R. A. 746, which holds failure to comply with requirements as to proofs of loss not fatal when liability was denied for other reason.

Distinguished in Matthews v. Capital F. Ins. Co. 115 Wis. 275, 91 N. W. 675, holding that denial by agent of company's liability for loss estops company from insisting upon failure to furnish proofs of loss, as a defense.

30 L. R. A. 786, MERRIMAN v. WALTON, 105 Cal. 403, 45 Am. St. Rep. 50, 38 Pac. 1108.

Injunctions against judgments.

Cited in footnotes to Dowell v. Goodwin, 51 L. R. A. 873, which authorizes injunction against action at law on judgment obtained by sheriff's false return of service; Travelers' Protective Asso. v. Gilbert, 55 L. R. A. 538, which denies right to resort to equity to vacate judgment for fraud when remedy at law adequate; National Surety Co. v. State Bank, 61 L. R. A. 394, which sustains injunction in Federal court against using unconscionable judgment of state court to extort from defendant money not justly due; Peterson v. Atlantic City R. Co. 34 L. R. A. 593, which denies validity of judgment taken while counsel absent in other court.

Cited in notes (31 L. R. A. 34) on negligence as cause for, and as bar to, injunctions against judgments; (31 L. R. A. 205) on injunctions against judgments for want of jurisdiction, or which are void; (32 L. R. A. 328) on general equitable jurisdiction in regard to injunctions against judgments.

Necessary parties.

Cited in McGill v. Sutton, 67 Kan. 236, 72 Pac. 853, holding other codefendants not necessary parties in action by one to enjoin execution upon land owned by him not subject thereto.

30 L. R. A. 803, FITZGERALD v. CLARK, 17 Mont. 100, 52 Am. St. Rep. 665, 42 Pac. 273.

Affirmed in 171 U. S. 92, 43 L. ed. 87, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 941.

Right to follow dip of vein.

Cited in Tyler Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co. 71 Fed. 850; Del Monte Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co. 171 U. S. 91, 43 L. ed. 86, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, sustaining right of locator to follow extralaterally vein whose apex crosses end and side line of claim; Carson City Gold & Silver Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co. 73 Fed. 602, holding right to follow dip of vein terminating in claim confined between vertical end plane and parallel plane at termination; Parrot Silver & Copper Co. v. Heinze, 25 Mont. 144, 53 L. R. A. 497, 87 Am. St. Rep. 386. 64 Pac.

326, denying right to follow dip of vein beyond vertical planes passing downward through and parallel with side lines when apex of vein enters and leaves by crossing side lines; Ajax Gold Min. Co. v. Hilkey, 31 Colo. 139, 62 L. R. A. 558, 72 Pac. 447, sustaining right to follow dip of secondary vein outside side lines although its apex is beyond line drawn parallel with end line at point in side line where discovery vein leaves claim; State ex rel. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. v. District Court, 25 Mont. 514, 65 Pac. 1020, denying right to follow dip of vein beyond vertical plane of end line extended downward and in same direction; Butte & B. Min. Co. v. Societe Anonyme, 23 Mont. 193, 75 Am. St. Rep. 505, 58 Pac. 111, raising, without deciding, question whether rights of purchaser of portion of claim are determined by vertical plane of end line or plane at vein's departure.

Cited in note (53 L. R. A. 496) on right to follow vein or lode on its dip beyond surface lines of location.

Distinguished in St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co. 56 L. R. A. 728, 44 C. C. A. 123, 104 Fed. 668, holding prior locator entitled to follow dip of secondary vein crossing side line at angle apexing partly on each claim.

Locating mining claim.

Cited in footnote to McShane v. Kenkle, 33 L. R. A. 851, which holds expectation of finding paying mineral unnecessary to valid location of mining claim.

30 L. R. A. 814, PROSSER v. MONTANA C. R. CO. 17 Mont. 372, 43 Pac. 81.

Contributory negligence as question for jury.

Cited in Thompson v. Montana C. R. Co. 17 Mont. 432, 43 Pac. 496, upholding jury's finding of contributory negligence of switchman using road-engine without flat car in front; Wastl v. Montana Union R. Co. 24 Mont. 171, 61 Pac. 9, holding contributory negligence of roundhouse helper injured by hostler moving engine, question for jury.

Cited in footnote to Neeley v. Southwestern Cotton Seed Oil Co. 64 L. R. A. 146, which holds contributory negligence of employee in using defective ladder to adjust belt after complaining to manager and being told that it was all right, question for jury.

Objections to hypothetical questions.

Cited in Roark v. Greeno, 61 Kan. 308, 59 Pac. 655, holding objection that hypothetical question assumes facts not proved must state objectionable particulars.

Burden of proof as to contributory negligence.

Cited in Snook v. Anaconda, 26 Mont. 138, 66 Pac. 756, holding contributory negligence matter of defense when complaint alleges that injury occurred without fault or negligence on plaintiff's part.

30 L. R. A. 820, WHOLEY v. CALDWELL, 108 Cal. 95, 49 Am. St. Rep. 64, 41 Pac. 31.

Riparian rights.

Cited in note (41 L. R. A. 744) on correlative rights of upper and lower proprietors as to use and flow of water in stream.

30 L. R. A. 823, SOUTHERN R. CO. v. BOUKNIGHT, 17 C. C. A. 181, 25 U. S. App. 415, 70 Fed. 442.

Followed without special discussion in Central Trust Co. v. Madden, 17 C. C. A. 238, 25 U. S. App. 430, 70 Fed. 453.

Postponement of railroad mortgages to other claims.

Cited in King v. Thompson, 49 C. C. A. 64, 110 Fed. 324, holding mortgages on railroad of foreign corporation postponed by state statute to judgments for personal injuries.

Cited in footnote to Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Doud, 52 L. R. A. 481, which holds claim for money loaned to pay interest on mortgage debt inferior to lien of prior mortgage.

Distinguished in Hampton v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 62 C. C. A. 392, 127 Fed. 666, denying right to priority of payment, out of earnings of road, of judgment for tort against lessee over prior mortgage, executed before lease, to foreclose which, road was placed in receiver's hands.

Corporate liability for predecessor's debts.

Cited in footnotes to Morgan v. Randolph-Clowes Co. 51 L. R. A. 653, which denies right of firm creditor to sue corporation assuming firm debts; Lamkin v. Baldwin & L. Mfg. Co. 44 L. R. A. 786, which holds taxes against partnership not payable from assets from corporation subsequently formed, till corporate debts are paid; Capital Traction Co. v. Offcut, 53 L. R. A. 390, which denies liability of street railway company for debts of other company whose property and franchises it bought.

Liability of lessor of railroad.

Cited in footnote to Lee v. Southern P. R. Co. 38 L. R. A. 71, which holds lessor of railroad liable to employee of lessee for injury due to defects of rails and track.

Cited in note (4 L. R. A. 738) on liability of lessor of railroad for injuries caused by negligence of another company using road under lease, license, or other contract.

30 L. R. A. 829, UNION MORTG. BKG. & T. CO. v. PETERS, 72 Miss. 1058, 18 So. 497.

Subrogation of third party paying debt.

Cited in Merchants & M. Bank v. Tillman, 106 Ga. 58, 31 S. E. 794, and Home Sav. Bank v. Bierstadt, 168 Ill. 625, 61 Am. St. Rep. 146, 48 N. E. 161, Affirming 68 Ill. App. 661, sustaining right of lender of money, with promise of first lien, to be subrogated to mortgage paid by loan; Bank of Ipswich v. Brock, 13 S. D. 417, 83 N. W. 436, holding lender entitled to be subrogated to first mortgage paid where borrower fails to get agreed release of second; Warford v. Hankins, 150 Ind. 494, 50 N. E. 468, sustaining subrogation to vendor's lien of one paying note thereby secured, under agreement with maker to hold note and lien as security; Cumberland Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Sparks, 49 C. C. A. 514, 111 Fed. 652, holding that lender of money to pay encumbrance whose security proves defective, may be subrogated thereto as against purchaser with knowledge; Dorrah v. Hill, 73 Miss. 793, 32 L. R. A. 632, footnote p. 631, 19 So. 961, sustaining right of one loaning money on invalid deed of trust to be subrogated to prior valid deed paid off with money loaned; Irvine v. Kearney County, 75 Fed. 767, sustaining right of purchaser of invalid county bonds to be subrogated to warrants paid with proceeds.

Cited in footnote to United States use of Fidelity Nat. Bank v. Rundle, 52 L. R. A. 505, which holds money furnished to pay labor claims not within bond for paying persons supplying principal with labor or materials for prosecuting work.

What defeats right to subrogation.

Cited in Wilkins v. Gibson, 113 Ga. 50, 84 Am. St. Rep. 204, 38 S. E. 374, holding delay of lender to assert right of subrogation to mortgage paid, prejudicing intervening lienors, defeats such right.

When subrogation barred by limitations.

Cited in Zinkeison v. Lewis, 63 Kan. 594, 66 Pac. 644, holding subrogation to liens discharged not barred where belief in validity of lender's security induced by mortgagors' fraud.

Estoppel to plead statute of limitations.

Cited in Klass v. Detroit, 129 Mich. 40, 95 Am. St. Rep. 407, 88 N. W. 204, holding city not estopped to plead statute of limitations to action for injuries in absence of acts on its part intended to cause plaintiff to expect settlement.

Cited in note (63 L. R. A. 202) on estoppel to plead defense of limitations.

30 L. R. A. 835, MARIL v. CONNECTICUT F. INS. CO. 95 Ga. 604, 51 Am. St. Rep. 102, 23 S. E. 463.

Keeping prohibited articles on insured premises.

Cited in American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Green, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 538, 41 S. W. 74, holding use of gasoline does not avoid policy where gasoline stove was among articles insured; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Walters, 24 Ind. App. 92, 79 Am. St. Rep. 257, 56 N. E. 257, holding insurance on retail hardware stock not avoided by keeping dynamite; Mascott v. First Nat. F. Ins. Co. 69 Vt. 123, 37 Atl. 255, holding insurance on paintshop not avoided by use of benzine.

Cited in footnotes to Yoch v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. 34 L. R. A. 857, which holds policy not avoided by gasoline kept as part of usual stock in country store; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Wade, 58 L. R. A. 714, which holds policy not avoided by bringing gallon of gasoline on premises for temporary use though causing their destruction; Faust v. American F. Ins. Co. 30 L. R. A. 783, which holds policy not forfeited by keeping small quantity of benzine for use in furniture repair shop; Heron v. Phoenix Mut. F. Ins. Co. 36 L. R. A. 517, which holds policy avoided by taking fireworks into residence for use in celebrating on following evening.

Distinguished in Mitchell v. Potomac Ins. Co. 16 App. D. C. 263, holding that gasoline cannot be regarded as part of insured stock where special permission to keep obtained.

Parol evidence as to subject of insurance.

Cited in Yoch v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. 111 Cal. 508, 34 L. R. A. 859, 44 Pac. 189, holding parol evidence admissible to show gasoline included in insurance on "stock usually kept in country stores."

30 L. R. A. 838, SUPREME LODGE, K. OF P. v. LA MALTA, 95 Tenn. 157, 31 S. W. 493.

By-laws of benefit association as part of contract.

Cited in McLendon v. Woodmen of the World, 106 Tenn. 707, 52 L. R. A. 447, 64 S. W. 36, holding application, constitution, and by-laws incorporated into benefit certificate by reference therein.

Cited in footnote to Peterson v. Gibson, 54 L. R. A. 836, which holds provision in benefit certificate for compliance with constitution and by-laws, refers to existing ones only.

Power to change by-laws affecting members' insurance.

Cited in Dornes v. Supreme Lodge K. of P. 75 Miss. 481, 23 So. 191, holding member agreeing to be subject to by-laws thereafter enacted bound by adoption of anti-suicide by-law by supreme lodge; Supreme Tent, K. of M. v. Hammers, 81 Ill. App. 568, holding member agreeing to be subject to future general legislation bound by subsequent anti-suicide by-law; Hughes v. Wisconsin Odd Fellows' Mut. L. Ins. Co. 98 Wis. 298, 73 N. W. 1015, holding member of mutual life insurance company agreeing to conform to by-laws thereafter adopted bound by anti-suicide by-law; Chambers v. Supreme Tent, K. of M. 200 Pa. 245, 86 Am. St. Rep. 716, 49 Atl. 784, holding change of by-law of benefit society enlarging anti-suicide clause binding on member and beneficiary.

Cited in footnotes to Bragaw v. Supreme Lodge K. & L. of H. 54 L. R. A. 602, which denies power of benefit society to change at will contract of insurance made with each member; Thibert v. Supreme Lodge, K. of H. 47 L. R. A. 136, which holds member of beneficial insurance association protected against unreasonable amendments of by-laws; Strauss v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 54 L. R. A. 605, which holds unauthorized, changes in constitution and by-laws destroying value of contract with insured; Parish v. New York Produce Exchange, 56 L. R. A. 149, which denies power to bind dissenting members by amending by-laws so as to distribute among living members, fund accumulated for persons dependent on members at time of death; Shipman v. Protected Home Circle, 63 L. R. A. 347, which holds adoption of by-law relieving benefit society from liability in case of suicide applicable to existing members who agreed to be bound by all rules enacted.

Distinguished and limited in Gaut v. American Legion of Honor, 107 Tenn. 616, 55 L. R. A. 469, footnote p. 465, 64 S. W. 1070, denying power of benefit society to reduce amount of certificate after payment of assessments for years.

Disapproved in Morton v. Supreme Council, R. L. 100 Mo. App. 97, 73 S. W. 259, holding that provision requiring compliance with subsequent by-laws, means only such as relate to duties as member, but not such as impair the contract of insurance.

Power to enact by-laws.

Followed in Toomey v. Supreme Lodge, K. of P. 74 Mo. App. 517, and Supreme Lodge, K. of P. v. Kutscher, 179 Ill. 343, 70 Am. St. Rep. 115, 53 N. E. 620, Reversing on another point 72 Ill. App. 475, holding that supreme lodge of benefit society cannot delegate power to legislate to board of control.

Cited in Supreme Lodge, K. of P. v. Stein, 75 Miss. 117, 37 L. R. A. 777, footnote p. 775, 65 Am. St. Rep. 589, 21 So. 559, holding anti-suicide clause adopted by board of control and inserted in application not binding unless adopted by supreme lodge; Supreme Lodge, K. of P. v. McLennan, 69 Ill. App. 604, raising, without deciding, question whether board of control could enact anti-suicide by-law.

30 L. R. A. 842, W. B. GOODE & CO. v. GEORGIA HOME INS. CO. 92 Va. 392, 53 Am. St. Rep. 817, 23 S. E. 744.

Power of insurance agent's employee to bind company.

Followed in Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Goode, 95 Va. 770, 30 S. E. 366, holding acts of solicitor for insurance agent binding on company to same extent as agent's acts.

Cited in footnotes to Bradford v. Hanover F. Ins. Co. 49 L. R. A. 530, which denies insurance agent's liability for loss on forbidden policy of which clerk forged his name; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Bradford, 55 L. R. A. 408, which holds company liable on policy delivered without knowledge of duty authorized agent, by his subagent; Cole v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 47 L. R. A. 201, which holds credit for part of first premium extended by general agent binding on company; Insurance Co. of N. A. v. Thornton, 55 L. R. A. 547, which holds appointment of subagents within implied authority of insurance agent for territory with radius of 35 miles.

Effect of agent's knowledge of falsity of application.

Second appeal in 95 Va. 752, 30 S. E. 770, holding existence of encumbrance known to soliciting agent no defense to action on policy.

Cited in Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Goode, 95 Va. 771, 30 S. E. 366, holding insurer estopped to set up as defense facts disclosed to soliciting agent.

Cited in footnotes to Home Ins. Co. v. Hancock, 52 L. R. A. 665, which holds statement that life tenant has fee simple title to insured property will not avoid policy where agent knew facts; Sternaman v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 57 L. R. A. 319, which denies insurer's right to rely on warranty by applicant that answers are properly recorded, where medical examiner know otherwise.

30 L. R. A. 845, CANTERBURY v. BANK OF SPARTA, 91 Wis. 53, 51 Am. St. Rep. 870, 64 N. W. 311.

Right to stop payment of check.

Cited in Gregg v. Bi-Metallic Bank, 14 Colo. App. 257, 59 Pac. 852, denying bank's power to recall draft sent in payment of check.

Cited in footnotes to Gage Hotel Co. v. Union Nat. Bank, 39 L. R. A. 479, which denies depositor's right to prevent application of future deposits to payment of check given; State Sav. Bank v. Buhl, 56 L. R. A. 944, which sustains right to stop payment of check given under mistaken belief of theft of property stored.

Payment by mistake.

Cited in National Bank of Commerce v. American Exch. Bank, 151 Mo. 333, 74 Am. St. Rep. 527, 52 S. W. 265, holding collecting bank surrendering draft for worthless check liable to payee of draft.

30 L. R. A. 848, HURON WATERWORKS CO. v. HURON, 7 S. D. 9, 58 Am. St. Rep. 817, 62 N. W. 975, 8 S. D. 169, 65 N. W. 816.

Right to sell or lease municipal property.

Cited in Ogden City v. Bear Lake & River Waterworks & Irrig. Co. 16 Utah, 454, 41 L. R. A. 310, footnote p. 305, 52 Pac. 697, denying city's right to lease or otherwise transfer waterworks; Lake County Water & Light Co. v. Walsh, 160 Ind. 41, 98 Am. St. Rep. 264, 65 N. E. 530, holding waterworks and electric light plant property held in trust for public use, which cannot be disposed of without legislative authority.

Cited in footnote to Baily v. Philadelphia, 39 L. R. A. 837, which sustains right of city to lease its gasworks.

Cited in note (61 L. R. A. 34, 35, 120) on establishment and regulation of municipal water supply.

Right of municipality to purchase or construct waterworks.

Cited in Water Comrs. v. West Chester County Waterworks Co. 176 N. Y. 252, 68 N. E. 348, denying right of city to contract for purchase of waterworks owned by corporation in absence of legislative permission.

Cited in footnotes to Bristol v. Bristol W. Waterworks, 32 L. R. A. 740, which holds enforceable, contract by town to purchase waterworks; Fawcett v. Mt. Airy, 63 L. R. A. 870, which sustains municipality's power to incur expense of owning and operating water and electric light plants without submitting proposition to voters.

Municipal waterworks as private undertaking.

Cited in footnote to Newport v. Com. 45 L. R. A. 518, which holds city taxable on waterworks franchise.

Public trusts.

Cited in Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 107 Tenn. 675, 61 L. R. A. 895, 64 S. W. 1075, upholding power of municipality to fix reasonable charges from time to time to be charged by private water company.

Cited in footnote to St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 34 L. R. A. 184, which denies power of legislature to give any part of levee as permanent site for freight warehouse.

Ultra vires acts of municipality.

Cited in Watson v. Huron, 38 C. C. A. 267, 97 Fed. 452, holding city not liable to purchaser of unlawful warrants, proceeds of which not used for legitimate corporate purpose.

Cited in footnote to Fergus Falls v. Fergus Falls Hotel Co. 50 L. R. A. 170, which holds enforceable by foreclosure ultra vires loan of city's money on mortgage.

30 L. R. A. 860, J. J. DOUGLASS CO. v. MINNESOTA TRANSFER R. CO. 62 Minn. 288, 64 N. W. 899.

Carrier's right to limit liability.

Cited in Adams Exp. Co. v. Carnahan, 29 Ind. App. 612, 94 Am. St. Rep. 279, 63 N. E. 245, sustaining express company's right to limit liability to agreed sum, in consideration of lower rate; Calderon v. Atals S. S. Co. 170 U. S. 279, 42 L. ed. 1035, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 588, sustaining carrier's right to limit liability to agreed valuation, with proportionate freight rates; Ullman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 112 Wis. 157, 56 L. R. A. 249, footnote p. 246, 88 Am. St. Rep. 949, 88 N. W. 41, sustaining carrier's right to secure entire exemption from liability as insurer for loss not due to negligence or misfeasance.

Cited in footnotes to Mears v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 884, which authorizes carrier to stipulate for exemption from liability for wet. Tecumseh Mills v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 49 L. R. A. 558, which holds prohibition against carriers limiting liability inapplicable to contract by domestic corporation in other state for transportation entirely outside of state; Rosen v. Weir, 57 L. R. A. 527, which holds failure to comply with agreement for stoppage in transitu not within contract limiting liability to specified amount; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 53 L. R. A. 720, which holds negligent carrier liable for true value, notwithstanding arbitrary preadjustment in bill of lading assented to by shipper; United States Exp. Co. v. Koerner, 33 L. R. A. 600, which denies right of express company to additional compensation because value of package carried exceeded amount represented; Parker v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 63 L. R. A. 827, which holds requirement that perishable freight must be carried at owner's risk, void where no other terms offered by carrier.

Distinguished in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Beals, 56 Neb. 418, 71 Am. St. Rep. 682, 76 N. W. 903, holding telegraph company liable for damages resulting from incorrect message, notwithstanding contrary agreement on blank.

Contract stipulation as to amount payable on breach.

Cited in footnotes to Kilbourne v. Burt & B. Lumber Co. 55 L. R. A. 275, which holds provision for retaining 15 cents per 100 feet for logs not delivered by specified date, one for liquidated damages; Salem v. Anson, 56 L. R. A. 169, which holds stipulated amount to be paid to city for failure to complete electric light plant within specified time, liquidated damages; Chicago House-Wrecking Co. v. United States, 53 L. R. A. 122, which holds stipulation for certain sum as damages for failure to remove building by certain time, penalty, when actual damages easily assessable.

3 6105 063 244 011

